v. 45—68. Like the intervals of thunder, when one loud roar is paſt, after a moment's pauſe a louder burſt ſucceeds: ſo are the judgments of God upon an impenitent people. Far from being exhauſted, they are redoubled, and greater ſtill in ſtore. The former curſes ſeem to point chiefly at thoſe viſitations which God ſent upon them, till their return from the Babyloniſh captivity; theſe laſt ſeem particularly applicable to their preſent diſperſion. An event ſo ſingular, amazing, and altogether miraculous, that it ſtands a ſtriking proof of the fulfilment of this prophecy, and an inconteſtible evidence of the divine authority of the ſcriptures. The threatnings of God here denounced are many and dreadful, and we now ſee them literally accompliſhed. 1. They are doomed to ſtand as monuments of divine vengeance, and as a wonder to themſelves and others. Such they are this day, ſcattered among all nations, yet diſtinct as ever, and every where evidently lying under ſome of the curſes here pronounced upon them. 2. Becauſe they refuſed to ſerve God with chearfulneſs, when he poured down his multiplied mercies upon them, they are condemned to ſerve their enemies under an iron yoke, and the moſt diſtreſſing want, which was ſucceſſively fulfilled under the Aſſyrians and Babylonians, till their laſt deſtruction came upon them under the Romans; and now they are in every land without the leaſt power or authority, ſubject to every oppreſſion of their haughty maſters, and in general in abject want and wretchedneſs. 3. This is threatned to be effected in a way moſt tremendous: a fierce nation, unſparing and mercileſs, ſhould fly like an eagle upon them, and after ſpreading deſolation around them, beſiege and deſtroy every defenced city, and lay them in the duſt. The Roman ſeverity is well known; their ſtandards bore the eagle, and theſe they carried with them, drawing their diſtant legions to the ſiege of Jeruſalem, which was at laſt taken and utterly deſtroyed. 4. The miſeries of this ſiege are here pathetically deſcribed: Famine ſo ſevere ſhould enſue, that the neareſt relations ſhall not only grudge each other the leaſt morſel, but look with moſt malignant deſign to ſeize an opportunity of ſlaying each other for meat. Nay, ſuch ſhould be the intolerable hunger, that not only the common people, but the nobleman delicately brought up, ſhould be led to murder the wife of his boſom, or the children ſhe bare him, for food: nay, more ſhocking, that the tender mother, and the delicate lady, ſhall not with-hold their hands from infant gore, nor ſpare the babe at their breaſt, or the fruit of their womb. The literal fulfilment of which Joſephus remarks, when, amidſt innumerable murders, ravages, and ſhocking ſcenes, committed by the neareſt relatives, he mentions a lady of faſhion, who murdered her ſucking child: one half ſhe had devoured, when the houſe being broken up by the famiſhed people in ſearch of meat, and they on pain of death demanded it, ſhe produced the other mangled half, to the horror and confuſion of the beholders. 5. The moſt terrible plagues are denounced: plagues wonderful on them and their poſterity, and ſickneſſes ſore and long continued. And dreadful indeed have been thoſe they have ſuffered, during more than 1700 years, and the Jews themſelves are conſtrained to own it. 6. Few of them ſhould be left, of their vaſt multitudes, the ſword, the famine and the plague ſhould make ſuch havock among them. Accordingly we are informed near three million of them periſhed at once, under the Roman invaſion, by theſe ſore judgments, and very few eſcaped the almoſt univerſal exciſion. 7. The doom of thoſe who eſcape is no leſs terrible; enſlaved by their enemies, and diſperſed into diſtant lands, particularly ſent by ſhips into Egypt, and even there ſo vile that ſcarce a purchaſer could be found for them; conſtrained to the ſervice of gods their fathers never knew, and carrying about with them a trembling heart, in conſtant terror of new judgments, at morning wiſhing for night, at night for morning, and having no reſt, poſſeſſion, or abiding ſettlement in any place; all which were remarkably fulfilled. The number of the ſlaves was ſo great after the taking Jeruſalem, that it is ſaid thirty were ſold for a ſmall piece of ſilver, and vaſt multitudes ſent by Titus to work in the mines of Egypt, and others, after their laſt deſtruction by Adrian, miſerably ſhipwrecked in their paſſage thither. Since that time thouſands, compelled by the inquiſition, have ſubmitted to popiſh idolatry: and in every place where they dwell, they continue without poſſeſſions or fixed abode, expoſed to every inſult, and liable to every oppreſſion from the ſtates under which they live. From whence we may obſerve, (1.) The unavoidable miſery of the ſinner under the wrath of God. (2.) The certainty of the fulfilment of all God's threatnings, by theſe inſtances already accompliſhed. (3.) The warning we ſhould receive from ſuch an awakening ſcene of judgments. (4.) That the only way of ſafety lies in holy fear and humble obedience.

CHAP. XXIX.

This chapter contains, 1. A covenant to be made with Iſrael, ver. 1. 2. A recital of favours done them, ver. 2—8. 3. The perſons taken into covenant, ver. 10, 11, 14, 15. 4. The abſtract of it, ver. 12, 13. 5. The great deſign of it, ver. 16, 17. 6. A ſolemn warning againſt falſe peace, ver. 18—28. 6. The concluſion, ver. 29.

1. THESE are the words of the covenant which the LORD commanded Moſes to make with the children of Iſrael, in the land of Moab, beſides [a] the covenant which he made with them in Horeb. 2. ¶ And Moſes called unto all Iſrael, and ſaid unto them, [b] Ye have ſeen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt, unto Pharaoh, and unto all his ſervants, and unto all his land; 3. [c] The great temptations which thine eyes have ſeen, the ſigns and thoſe great miracles: 4. Yet [d] the LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive; and eyes to ſee, and ears to hear, unto this day. 5. And [e] I have led you forty years in the wilderneſs: [f] your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy ſhoe is not waxen old upon thy foot. 6. Ye have not eaten bread, neither have you drunk wine, or ſtrong drink: that ye might know that I am the LORD your God. 7. And when ye came unto this place, [g] Sihon the king of Heſhbon, and Og the king of Baſhan, came out againſt us unto battle, and we ſmote them. 8. And we took their land, and [h] gave it for an inheritance unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half-tribe of Manaſſeh. 9. [i] Keep therefore the words of this covenant and do them, that ye may proſper in all that ye do.

v. 1—9. The former covenant was made at Sinai. This is a repetition of it: as they were a new generation, it was needful they ſhould themſelves conſent to the gracious terms propoſed to them. 1. To induce them thereunto Moſes puts them in mind of God's aſtoniſhing interpoſition to ſave them from Egypt, his care of them in the wilderneſs, and the poſſeſſions they began to enjoy in Baſhan and Heſhbon. Paſt mercies are an engagement to fidelity, and encouragement ſtill to expect greater. 2. He laments their paſt blindneſs, unbelief and murmurings; repeatedly had they given ſad proof of theſe, and to that day they remained in them, and muſt remain, till God gave the ſeeing eye and hearing ear. Note, (1.) Unbelief is a deep-rooted evil. (2.) 'Till God opens the eyes of our mind, we can neither know him, love him, nor ſerve him. 3. He charges them to attend now to the words of this covenant: and happy! if at laſt there were ſuch a heart in them, firmly to believe the divine promiſes, and chearfully to obey the divine commands; proſperity then could not but attend them.

10 ¶. Ye ſtand this day all of you before the LORD your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Iſrael. 11. Your little ones, your wives, and thy ſtranger that is in thy camp, from [k] the hewer of thy wood, unto the drawer of thy water: 12. That thou ſhouldſt † enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day: 13. That he may eſtabliſh thee to-day for a people unto himſelf, and that he may be unto thee a God, as he hath ſaid unto thee, and as he hath ſworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Iſaac, and to Jacob. 14. Neither with you only do I make this covenant and this oath; 15. But with him that ſtandeth here with us this day before the LORD our God, and [l] alſo with him that is not here with us this day: 16. (For ye know how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt, and how we came through the nations which ye paſſed by. 17. And ye have ſeen their abominations, and their ‡ idols, wood and ſtone, ſilver and gold, which were among them.) 18. Leſt there ſhould be among you man or woman, or family, or tribe, [m] whoſe heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and ſerve the gods of theſe nations: [n] leſt there ſhould be among you a root that beareth || gall and wormwood, 19. And it come to paſs when he heareth the words of this curſe, that he bleſs himſelf in his heart, ſaying, I ſhall have peace, though I walk [o] in the § imagination of mine heart, [p] to add † drunkenneſs to thirſt: 20. [q] The LORD will not ſpare him, but then the anger of the LORD, and his jealouſy ſhall ſmoke againſt that man, and all the curſes that are written in this book ſhall lie upon him, and [r] the LORD ſhall blot out his name from under heaven. 21. And [s] the LORD ſhall ſeparate him unto evil, out of all the tribes of Iſrael, according to all the curſes of the covenant, that ‡ are written in this book of the law: 22. So that the generation to come of your children that ſhall riſe up after you, and the ſtranger that ſhall come from a far land, ſhall ſay, when they ſee the plagues of that land, and the ſickneſſes || which the LORD hath laid upon it; 23. And that the whole land thereof is brimſtone, [t] and ſalt, and burning, that it is not ſown, nor beareth, nor any graſs groweth therein, [u] like the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger and in his wrath: 24. Even all nations ſhall ſay, [x] Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this land? What meaneth the heat of this great anger? 25. Then men ſhall ſay, Becauſe they have forſaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt. 26. For they went and ſerved other gods, and worſhipped them, gods whom they knew not, and § whom he had not † given unto them. 27. And the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt this land, to bring upon it all the curſes that are written in this book. 28. And the LORD rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and caſt them into another land, as it is this day. 29. The ſecret things belong unto the LORD our God: but thoſe things which are revealed belong unto us, and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

v. 10—29. We have here the covenant laid before them, and warmly recommended to them. 1. The parties of the covenant. God, as their God, engaging to bleſs them with every mercy, and confirming with an oath the immutability of his counſel; and they ſolemnly binding themſelves, in return, to be his people, one and all. The captains and officers muſt ſubſcribe to it: when great men are good men, their examples are greatly influential. Their wives and children are admitted to it. Believers children are ſharers in their covenant mercies; and not only native Iſraelites, but the ſtranger, even to the meaneſt follower of the camp, is invited to come. Note, None are beneath God's regard; to his covenant the poor have as welcome acceſs as the great. And all are called to conſent thereto: though ſickneſs or buſineſs of neceſſity prevented perſonal attendance, all muſt come under the bonds of the covenant, and, according to their fidelity or diſobedience, ſhare the bleſſing or curſes therein contained. 2. The great article of the covenant on God's part, is his being their God; this comprehending all imaginable bliſs and happineſs: on their part he expects (and well he might) that they ſhould be his people, dependent on his promiſes, loving him unfeignedly, and chearfully obſervant of all his commands and ordinances. Nothing ſo reaſonable as this. Note, The promiſes of grace muſt engage us to the duties of obedience. 3. As idolatry was the rock which threatned the moſt danger, they are eſpecially warned to beware of it. Their abode in Egypt had probably infected them, and the idols of the nations they had paſſed by had enſnared them; they had need therefore to watch againſt ſo beſetting, and withal ſo provoking a ſin, leſt ruin inevitable and dreadful came upon them for their idolatry, whether on individuals or the whole nation. 1. On individuals. None can eſcape God's eye, none are above his arm, or beneath his notice. We have this apoſtacy from God ſet in very ſtriking colours: (1.) It begins in the departure of the heart from God, to ſome creature-love and idol-ſervice. (2.) The fruit from this root is gall or hemlock and wormwood, deteſtable principles, malignant and poiſonous, and a converſation corrupt and abominable, adding drunkenneſs to thirſt. (3.) Withal, the ſinner, ſecure and confident, promiſes himſelf peace, though walking in theſe vile imaginations of his heart. But (4.) His fearful end approaches, and the ſmoking wrath of God will ſeize him in the midſt of his fatal ſecurity. Learn hence, 1. That many are bleſſing themſelves, over whom the curſe of God hangs terrible. 2. That inſenſibility is one of the moſt fatal ſymptoms of a deſperate ſoul. 3. Nothing more effectually ſerves to ſtupify the conſcience than a habit of drunkenneſs. 4. They who now glory in their ſhame are like thoſe who got drunk in honour of their idols, and ſin with greater aggravation. 5. Let the preſumptuous ſinner tremble; the wrath of God abideth on him; his ſmoaking jealouſy, like a fiery furnace, ſhall burn, and none ſhall quench it, deep as hell, abiding as the days of eternity; under it the periſhing wretch muſt lie down without pity, without reprieve, and, worſe than all, without hope of abatement of his torment, or end of his miſery. O that ſinners were wiſe, that they underſtood theſe things, that they would conſider their latter end. 2. On the whole nation the ſame ſins would bring the ſame puniſhment. Their land would become as the ſulphureous plains of Sodom; and to this day that once fruitful ſpot of Judea bears the marks of this divine curſe, being now almoſt deſolate of inhabitants, and barren as the rocky wilderneſs. A ſcene ſo ſtrange could not but excite the neighbouring nations to enquire into the cauſe; and the anſwer is fully ſatisfactory, Becauſe they forſook the God of their fathers, tranſgreſſed his covenant, and turned unto idols, therefore are theſe curſes come upon them, and their deſolations accompliſhed. Note, (1.) The judgments of God ſhould awaken our enquiries into the cauſe of them, that we may take warning. (2.) They who have abuſed the greateſt national privileges, may expect the heavieſt national viſitations. (3.) They who forſake their father's God deſerve to loſe their father's inheritance. Laſtly, He concludes with ſilencing every objection which might be raiſed againſt God's judgments, and an admonition to follow the plain and clear revelation of God's will. Note, (1.) There are a thouſand queſtions which curious pride would aſk, that God forbids to anſwer. (2.) All that is needful for us to know, we may, if we conſult God's revealed will; where he ſets bounds, 'tis our wiſdom to be content to be ignorant. (3.) The revelation God hath made is deſigned not to communicate ſpeculative and uſeleſs knowledge, but to engage us to holy practice and dutiful obedience. (4.) In this we cannot be too careful to walk ourſelves, and inſtruct our children, as the ſureſt means of averting all thoſe plagues that are ready to deſcend upon the ungodly.

1. AND [a] it ſhall come to paſs when [b] all theſe things are come upon thee, the bleſſing and the curſe, which I have ſet before thee, and thou ſhalt call them to mind among all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee, 2. And ſhalt return unto the LORD thy God, and ſhalt obey his voice, according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy ſoul: 3. [c] That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compaſſion upon thee, and will return and [d] gather thee from all the nations whither the LORD thy God hath ſcattered thee. 4. [e] If any of thine be driven out unto the outmoſt parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee. 5. And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers poſſeſſed, and thou ſhalt poſſeſs it: and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers. 6. And [f] the LORD thy God will circumciſe thine heart, and the heart of thy ſeed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy ſoul, that thou mayſt live. 7. And the LORD thy God, will put all theſe curſes upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which perſecuted thee. 8. And thou ſhalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day. 9. [g] And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for [h] the LORD will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers. 10. If thou ſhalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God to keep his commandments, and his ſtatutes, which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart and with all thy ſoul.

v. 1—10. There is with God grace abounding to the chief of ſinners; none that return to him ſhall be, in any wiſe, caſt out. We have here, 1. The penitent return of Iſrael, and therein alſo of every ſinner. 1. It begins with ſerious reflection on the fulfilment of God's word, begetting humbling conviction on the heart. Note, The firſt ſtep towards return to God, is always conviction of our ſin and ingratitude, and a ſenſe of the juſt deſert of both. 2. Faith in a reconciled God muſt be exerciſed. We muſt, like the prodigal, call him our God and father in Jeſus Chriſt, though we acknowledge ourſelves utterly unworthy to be called his children. 3. Converſion will follow from a conſtraining ſenſe of God's tranſcendent compaſſions; theſe will engage the heart, and we ſhall deſire, without reſerve, to yield up ourſelves to him, from a principle of love, and with univerſal devotedneſs of body and ſoul to his ſervice. 4. Fervent and importunate prayer will expreſs the earneſt breathings of the heart after God. Behold he prayeth, is the ſign of every returning ſinner. Hereupon God promiſes, 2. To hear and anſwer them, not upbraiding them with their ſins, nor rejecting them, becauſe out of trouble they cry to him, but according to their neceſſities he will ſupply them: his bowels of compaſſion will yearn over them. Such are God's tender mercies to the vileſt, that bow with contrite hearts before him; he will from the diſtant lands reſtore them; however far gone in ſin, they ſhall be recovered: their captivity ſhall be loſed, the bonds of ſin ſhall no longer enſlave them; God will do them good, temporal good, in reſtoring them to plenty and affluence in their long-loſt heritages. Note, Return to God is often attended with great bleſſings in our worldly affairs. Spiritual good is better ſtill. He will circumciſe their hearts, will cut off their vile affections, and ſhed abroad his holy love within their ſouls; hereby enabling them for the obedience he requires, and ſecuring them from future departures from him: their enemies ſhall now fall before them, and feel the power of victorious grace; thus ſin ſhall have no more dominion over the returning penitent. Finally, by ten ſeveral repetitions God engages to regard them as their covenant God, to their great and endleſs comfort.—Happy the ſinner that thus returns to God, and finds God thus return to his poor ſoul!

k Rom. x. 6, &c.

11. ¶ For this commandment which I command thee this day, [i] it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. 12. [k] It is not in heaven, that thou ſhouldeſt ſay, Who ſhall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it and do it? 13. Neither is it beyond the ſea, that thou ſhouldſt ſay, Who ſhall go over the ſea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? 14. But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayeſt do it.

v. 11—14. The plainneſs of the precept is a ſtrong plea for obedience to it; the knowledge of God's will was not hidden from them in dark ſpeeches, or hieroglyphical figures; nor far from them, that they need travel in queſt of it; nor above them, that it exceeded their comprehenſion; or ſo deep, that it was obſcure or unintelligible; but near to them, written plain on tables, and daily inculcated by the prieſts and Levites, in a language they could not fail of underſtanding, and which ought to ſink deep into their hearts. The apoſtle, Rom. x. 6. with beautiful propriety, applies this to the goſpel; and it is by many thought that Moſes intended it. The doctrine of grace in a Redeemer is clearly revealed, and eaſily comprehended by the enlightened mind, brought nigh to us by the miniſtry of the word: we need not climb the ſkies to enquire, Jeſus incarnate is come down to teach us; nor need we go down to the deep in ſearch for him, who is ariſen from the dead, and hath accompliſhed the work of redemption: ſo that, if with our mouth we confeſs him as our only hope, and in our heart cleave to him as our only Lord, we ſhall infallibly be ſaved.

15. ¶ See [l] I have ſet before thee this day life and good, and death and evil: 16. In that I command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his ſtatutes, and his judgments, that thou mayſt live and multiply: and the LORD thy God ſhall bleſs thee in the land whither thou goeſt to poſſeſs it. 17. But if thine heart turn away, ſo that thou wilt not hear, but ſhalt be drawn away, and worſhip other gods, and ſerve them: 18. I denounce unto you this day, that ye ſhall ſurely periſh, and that ye ſhall not prolong your days upon the land whither thou paſſeſt over Jordan, to go to poſſeſs it. 19. [m] I call heaven and earth to record this day againſt you, that [n] I have ſet before you life and death, bleſſing and curſing: therefore chooſe life, that both thou and thy ſeed may live: 20. That thou mayſt love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayſt obey his voice, and that thou mayſt cleave unto him (for he is thy life, and the length of thy days) that thou mayſt dwell in the land which the LORD ſware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Iſaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

v. 15—20. Warm and urgent when ſuch important concerns were at ſtake, he ſeeks to fix ſome abiding impreſſions on their heart, or at leaſt to leave them inexcuſable. 1. The caſe was plain, and on their choice it depended to be happy or miſerable; they had every argument preſſed upon them to avoid death, every motive urged to engage them to ſeek the life God promiſed. The love of God, and obedience to his will, would infallibly procure the one, diſobedience and idolatry inevitably expoſe them to the other. But if under the law, where the promiſes and threatnings were chiefly temporal, theſe arguments were ſo ſtrong, how much more are they to us, before whom death and life eternal are ſet, according as we believe and obey, or by our diſobedience and unbelief reject the goſpel of Jeſus? 2. He appeals to heaven and earth for his faithfulneſs, and urges them to chuſe the way of duty, as the path of life. They who periſh will have only themſelves to blame; they would not receive the knowledge of the truth, that they might be ſaved: whilſt they who hear and chuſe it will own it to be not of themſelves, but the gift of God. He that is ſaved owes it to God's grace; every man that is damned has only himſelf to blame. 3. He again returns to exhort them to love, ſerve, and cleave to God, as the author of their life, and all the comforts of it; and that they may dwell in the land which he ſware to give their fathers, and by their fidelity maintain a long and uninterrupted enjoyment of it. Thus cloſing with a rememberance, how much in intereſt, as well as duty, they are bound to obedience.

And the LORD ſhall do unto them, [d] as he did to Sihon, and to Og, kings of the Amorites, and unto the land of them, whom he deſtroyed. 5. And [e] the LORD ſhall give them up before your face, that ye may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you. 6. Be ſtrong and of a good courage, fear not nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, he it is that doth go with thee, [f] he will not fail thee, nor forſake thee. 7. ¶ And Moſes called unto Joſhua, and ſaid unto him in the ſight of all Iſrael, Be ſtrong and of a good courage: for thou muſt go with this people unto the land which the LORD hath ſworn unto their fathers to give them: and thou ſhalt cauſe them to inherit it. 8. And [g] the LORD, he it is that doth go before thee, he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forſake thee: [h] fear not neither be diſmayed.

v. 1—8. One parting word more before his lips are ſhut in death. They were going to a war in which they needed encouragement; he, the leader in whom they had confidence, could not go before them, his age was very great, and though his natural force was not abated by it, yet God had put a bar in his way, and determined his death on this ſide Jordan. Note, The day of our death is fixed by divine decree; before, we are ſafe in the midſt of danger; then, nothing can ſecure us. Therefore, 1. Moſes animates the people with the aſſurance of God's conſtant preſence with them, and his never-failing providence over them. God's ſpiritual Iſrael may be aſſured he will never leave nor forſake them: as he might not go himſelf he appoints them Joſhua for their leader, of whoſe courage they had full experience, and whoſe regard for them they could not doubt, after what had paſſed. Thus as one faithful miniſter is removed another ſucceeds him. They need not fear ſucceſs when God was their captain; what they had ſeen might be ſufficient to confirm their confidence, and as it was God's determined decree to root out the Canaanites, and to make them his inſtruments, they might reſt aſſured it would be done. Note, (1.) Paſt experience ſhould be remembered for our preſent encouragement. (2.) What God ſends us to do he will enable us to accompliſh, however difficult it may appear. 2. He encourages Joſhua, not that he wanted courage, but that every promiſe from God might inſpire freſh confidence of victory; he gives him the ſame aſſurances of the divine preſence and never-failing care, and charges him to act as a valiant leader. Every believer is a Joſhua, ſtrong to fight the Lord's battles, undiſmayed with danger, and exerciſing faith in the divine promiſes for final and complete victory over ſin, and death, and hell.

9. ¶ And Moſes wrote this law, and [i] delivered it unto the prieſts the ſons of Levi, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and unto all the elders of Iſrael. 10. And Moſes commanded them, ſaying, At the end of every ſeven years, in the ſolemnity of [k] the year of releaſe, in the feaſt of tabernacles, 11. When all Iſrael is come to appear before the LORD thy God, in the place which he ſhall chooſe, [l] thou ſhalt read this law before all Iſrael in their hearing. 12. Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy ſtranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and obſerve to do all the words of this law: 13. And that their children which have not known any thing, may hear and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to poſſeſs it.

v. 9—13. 1. Moſes, to perpetuate the memory of theſe laws, commits them to writing; either the whole Pentateuch, or this book of Deuteronomy, the reſt being written before. The bleſſing of having theſe records thus preſerved is unſpeakable; the law and goſpel both, through mercy, are not committed to uncertain tradition, but recorded ſafe in the book of God, that our faith may not ſtand on the word of man, but on the power of God. 2. The care and cuſtody of it is committed to the prieſts and elders, that themſelves might be careful to conform to its precepts, and that the copies taken from it might be perfectly correſponding to the original. Miniſters muſt ſpeak as the oracles of God, magiſtrates act according to the rule of God's word, then God's bleſſing and ſucceſs will attend their labours. 3. A public reading of the whole, once in ſeven years, is appointed; every ſabbath a portion was read, and no doubt in their families daily the good men failed not to occupy themſelves in God's word; but that none may plead ignorance, and alſo by the ſolemnity to awaken deeper attention, at the feaſt of tabernacles in the year of releaſe, the whole was read through by the king or chief magiſtrate, ſome ſay; others, by the high-prieſt; others, by a perſon appointed for this buſineſs. The whole congregation of Iſrael then aſſembled, not only the males but the women and children, and the ſtranger alſo, as it imported them all to attend, that the riſing generation might learn their duty, and be quickned in the way of obedience. Note, (1.) When we are moſt happy in the goſpel liberty, preached by Jeſus Chriſt, we ſhall delight to hear and obey him in every call of duty. (2.) The word of God being our only rule, ſhould be read and known of all; how cruel the attempt, and how contrary to the divine will, to keep it locked up from the people in an unknown tongue, and to eſtabliſh ignorance by law? (3.) Nothing ſhould engage us more ſollicitouſly, than the early inſtruction of our children in the knowledge of the holy ſcriptures, which alone can make them wiſe unto ſalvation.

14. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Moſes, Behold, thy days approach that thou muſt die: call Joſhua, and preſent yourſelves in the tabernacle of the congregation, that [m] I may give him a charge. And Moſes and Joſhua went, and preſented themſelves in the tabernacle of the congregation. 15. And [n] the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud ſtood over the door of the tabernacle 16. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Moſes, Behold, thou ſhalt † ſleep with thy fathers, and this people will riſe up, and go a whoring after the gods of the ſtrangers of the land whither they go to be amongſt them, and will forſake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them. 17. Then my anger ſhall be kindled againſt them in that day, and I will forſake them, and [o] I will hide my face from them, and they ſhall be devoured, and many evils and troubles ſhall ‡ befal them, ſo that they will ſay in that day, [p] Are not theſe evils come upon us, becauſe our God is not amongſt us? 18. And I will ſurely hide my face in that day, for all the evils which they ſhall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods. 19. Now therefore write ye this ſong for you, and teach it the children of Iſrael; put it in their mouths, that this ſong may be a witneſs for me againſt the children of Iſrael. 20. For when I ſhall have brought them into the land which I ſware unto their fathers that floweth with milk and honey; and they ſhall have eaten and filled themſelves, and [q] waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and ſerve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant. 21. And it ſhall come to paſs, when many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this ſong ſhall teſtify ‖ againſt them as a witneſs: for it ſhall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their ſeed: for I know their imagination [r] which they § go about, even now before I have brought them into the land which I ſware.

v. 14—21. Moſes is again warned of his approaching end. The beſt of men need be admoniſhed to put their houſe in order. Hereupon, 1. Moſes is ſummoned to the tabernacle, with Joſhua ſolemnly delegated to be his ſucceſſor, there to receive his charge. 2. God hereupon appears to them in the Shechinah, and foretels, [1.] The departure of Iſrael from him, and their adultery with idols, tranſgreſſing, as a wife, the covenant of marriage, in which they had been joined to the Lord; and this, in conſequence of their abuſe of proſperity, and the carnality of their wicked hearts. Note, (1.) All love of ſin is ſpiritual adultery. (2.) They who pamper the body to inflame their luſts, will quickly ſeek unlawful gratifications for them. [2.] God's anger is threatned againſt them; ſince they forſake him he will forſake them, and woe unto them, when his wiſdom no longer guides, nor his power protects them; innumerable evils cannot then but compaſs them about, ſuch as would extort their confeſſions, that they had brought their miſeries on themſelves by ſin, and God, in the day of their calamity, threatens to hide his face from them. Note, The greateſt bitterneſs of every affliction is to have God's face turned away from us in anger. [3.] Moſes, by divine inſpiration, is commanded to deliver and write a ſacred ſong, as a warning to them and for a witneſs againſt them. God knew the imaginations of their evil hearts before they were put in poſſeſſion of the land; and he gives them this ſong, the metre of which would make it more eaſily remembered, that when their evils overtook them, they might be led by it to repentance. Note, (1.) God knoweth the ſecrets of the heart, and can put a word in the mouth of his ſervants, piercing as a ſword. (2.) Though God's elect people may be unfaithful, before their fall the means are provided for their recovery.

22. ¶ Moſes therefore wrote this ſong the ſame day, and taught it the children of Iſrael. 23. And he gave Joſhua the ſon of Nun a charge, and ſaid, [s] Be ſtrong and of a good courage: for thou ſhalt bring the children of Iſrael into the land which I ſware unto them: and I will be with thee. 24. ¶ And it came to paſs when Moſes had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finiſhed; 25. That Moſes commanded the Levites which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, ſaying, 26. Take this book of the law, and [t] put it in the ſide of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there for a witneſs againſt thee. 27. [u] For I know thy rebellion, and thy ſtiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious againſt the LORD; and how much more after my death? 28. Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may ſpeak theſe words in their ears, and [x] call heaven and earth to record againſt them. 29. [y] For I know that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourſelves, and turn aſide from the way which I have commanded you: and evil [z] will befall you in the latter days, becauſe ye will do evil in the ſight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands. 30. And Moſes ſpake in the ears of all the congregation of Iſrael the words of this ſong, until they were ended.

v. 22—30. We have here, 1. The charge Moſes gave to Joſhua, repeated to him by the Lord himſelf. God promiſes to be with him, notwithſtanding the perverſeneſs of the people, which he foreſaw, and to give them the land he had promiſed. 2. Moſes writes the ſong God gave him, and taught it the people, that it might be remembered by them; calling heaven and earth to witneſs againſt them, as moſt inexcuſable, if they proved diſobedient. Note, Religious inſtruction is often more eaſily and more abidingly communicated in poetry than in proſe. 3. A copy of the law is laid up by the ſide of the ark, as a ſacred depoſit at all times to be referred to, and to ſtand for a witneſs before the Lord, either for or againſt them. Note, By the word of God every living ſoul muſt be ſhortly juſtified or condemned for eternity. 4. He gives them a ſharp rebuke, from paſt experience of their rebellions, and declares his juſt apprehenſions of their apoſtacy after his death. 5. He diſcharges his truſt, by a faithful report of the whole revelation God had made to them, and leaves it with them, at their peril, to attend to it. Note, All that miniſters can do is to give the faithful warning, and then, though Iſrael be not gathered, they ſhall be glorious in the eyes of the Lord; if they are not happy in the ſucceſs of their labours, they ſhall not, however, be without their reward.

v. 1—3. Moſes opens his important ſong, 1. With a ſolemn appeal to heaven and earth, for the truth of his word, and the juſtice of the divine procedure, or as if more attentive than this ſtupid people, they would ſooner hear and obey him. His doctrine is deſcribed as dropping as the rain, whether in wrath, as the deluge, or in mercy, as the gentle ſhowers to refreſh the parched ground: and the influence of it like the ſmall rain on the tender graſs, deſcending ſoftly, and ſweetly inſinuating into the affections. Such is the goſpel of Jeſus, cooling the parched conſcience, burnt up with the wrath of God, cauſing the heart to yield its fruit, and wherever received making the inward man to flouriſh as a green field; whilſt like the ground which, after rain produceth only briars and thorns, is nigh unto curſing, whoſe end is to be burned; ſo an unprofitable hearing and rejection of this word expoſes to greater damnation, and makes it a ſavour of death unto death. 2. The reaſon is given for the audience and attention he demands, becauſe of the greatneſs and glory of that God, whoſe name he was about to proclaim. Note, The higher thoughts we entertain of God, the more ſhall we be afraid to ſin, and the readier to ſubmit to every providence, and to own the juſtice of every afflictive diſpenſation.

4. He is [c] the rock, [d] his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment: [e] a God of truth, and without iniquity, juſt and right is he. 5. † [f] They have corrupted themſelves, ‡ their ſpot is not the ſpot of his children; they are a perverſe and crooked generation. 6. Do ye ye thus requite the LORD, O fooliſh people and unwiſe? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee, and eſtabliſhed thee?

v. 4—6. The greatneſs of God is here enlarged upon, and ſeveral particulars of his glorious character opened to awaken our reverence, fear, and love.

1. He is a rock, ſtrong to ſupport the hopes of all that truſt in him; an everlaſting foundation that cannot be moved. Such is Jeſus to the ſinner that flies to him. His work is perfect, whether of creation or providence, and eſpecially his work of redemption. Nothing is wanting for the compleat and eternal ſalvation of his people. All his ways are judgment, planned with infinite wiſdom, and executed in ſuch a manner as to make the moſt glorious diſplays of his righteouſneſs. He is a God of truth, faithful to all his promiſes, who neither hath nor can fail thoſe who truſt him. Without iniquity, whom none can complain of as deceiving, or injuring them. Juſt and right is he, in his rewards and puniſhments, giving to every man according as his work is. A glorious character, moſt deſerving our regard, and demanding our devotion and ſervice.

2. The character of Iſrael is ſadly the reverſe. They have corrupted themſelves, in oppoſition to all God's warnings and mercies; he is juſt, but they are altogether become abominable, and can blame none for their ruin but themſelves. Their ſpot is not the ſpot of children; it was wilful deliberate ſin, which they choſe, delighted in, and did not repent of. Note, God's children, like the ſun, have their ſpots, but they are condemned, bewailed, oppoſed, and prayed againſt, and ſo ſhall not be their deſtruction. They are a perverſe and crooked generation, diſpoſed to evil, and impatient of reſtraint, that will neither be influenced by love, nor deterred by fear. Note, When any people becomes incorrigible in wickedneſs their end is near.

3. Moſes expoſtulates with them on their folly and wickedneſs. What obligations were they not under? How had God regarded them as the tendereſt father, and bought them at the price of Egypt's plagues; how ungrateful then to forget and forſake ſuch a God, yea, how unwiſe to provoke him whoſe judgments are as awful as his mercies are great. Note, (1.) Sin is the baſeſt ingratitude to our father, as well as inſolent diſobedience to our Lord and maſter. (2.) None will appear ſuch egregious fools at a judgment day, as they who have forſaken God for the ſake of diverſe luſts and pleaſures. (3.) Shall Jewiſh ingratitude for temporal mercies deſerve ſuch rebuke? of how much ſorer condemnation then ſhall he be thought worthy who rejects redeeming love, and baſely ſins againſt that Saviour who bought us with his blood?

7. ¶ Remember the days of old, conſider the years of † many generations: aſk thy father, and he will ſhew thee, thy elders, and they will tell thee. 8. When [g] the moſt High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he ſeparated the ſons of Adam, he ſet the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Iſrael. 9. For [h] the LORD's portion is his people: Jacob is the ‡ lot of his inheritance. 10. [i] He found him in a deſert land, and in the waſte howling wilderneſs: he ‖ led him about, he inſtructed him, [k] he kept him as the apple of his eye. 11. [l] As an eagle ſtirreth up her neſt, fluttereth over her young, ſpreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; 12. So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no ſtrange god with him. 13. [m] He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increaſe of the fields, and he made him to [n] ſuck honey out of the rock, and oyl out of the flinty rock. 14. Butter of kine, and milk of ſheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Baſhan, and goats, [o] with the fat of kidneys of wheat, and thou didſt drink the pure blood of the grape.

v. 7—14. Moſes, to engage them to fidelity, by a review of God's gracious dealings with them, produces a variety of inſtances wherein God had manifeſted towards them peculiar favour. 1. He reminds them of the days of old, the extraordinary kindneſſes ſhown to their forefathers, and thoſe of later date, of which their fathers and elders could inform them, who had ſeen his wondrous works and miracles ſo often repeated for their ſafety and comfort. Note, (1.) We ſhould, from records of former ages, draw directions for preſent uſe. (2.) Fathers ſhould make it their buſineſs and delight to communicate their experience of God's goodneſs to their children, and to encourage them to truſt in the ſame mercy. 2. He particularly inſtances God's care for them, before they had a being, when, ſhortly after the flood, he ſelected the land of Canaan for them, and gave it, in the diviſion of the nations, to be occupied by the deſcendants of Noah's ungodly ſon, to prepare and keep poſſeſſion for them until they were able to occupy it; when they ſhould root out that accurſed race, which were only ſpared until then for Iſrael's ſake. Note, (1.) Every diſpoſition of men's abode and circumſtances, and even the affairs of the nations of the world, have ſpecial regard to God's church and choſen people. (2.) There is not a circumſtance which happens, but according to the divine decree, and God's elect may be aſſured that every thing is deſigned to work for their good. (3.) For their ſakes the veſſels of wrath appointed to deſtruction are long ſpared, and enjoy many bleſſings. 3. The reaſon is given for ſuch a proviſion made for Iſrael; they are God's portion, peculiarly ſeparated for him from all the nations of the earth; and a type of his ſpiritual people, whom, by diſtinguiſhing and ſovereign grace, he hath choſen from all eternity to be to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, meaſured out as by lot or line, that they may be diſtinguiſhed from all others, and dwell alone for God. 4. He deſcribes the manner of his collecting them, and his dealings with them before he brought them to their reſt. God's people who are predeſtinated for the heavenly inheritance muſt be trained up for it. (1.) He found them in a deſert land, in the wilderneſs, deſolate and forlorn, ignorant and perverſe, but he inſtructed them and led them, and bowed their ſtubborn neck to his yoke. Note, God's ſpiritual Iſrael are all found by him thus in the deſert of ſin, and the wretchedneſs of a fallen nature; unſought of them, he ſeeks them by his grace, calls them by his ſpirit, inſtructs them by his word and providence, inclines their hearts to follow him, and leads them in his ways, when, after exerciſing their faith and patience through much tribulation, he gives them at laſt an entrance into his everlaſting kingdom. (2.) He kept them as the apple of his eye; ſo dear were they to him, and ſo careful was he that none ſhould touch them to hurt them. God's people ſhare his tendereſt love, and he that meddleth with them, meddleth to his own hurt. (3.) As the eagle teaches her young fledged brood to fly, flutters over them to bring them from the neſt, ſpreads her wings to direct them, takes them on her back, and carries them in their firſt weak eſſays; ſuch were the compaſſions of God to Iſrael, in bringing them from their neſt in Egypt, and carrying them through the wilderneſs. Such are they ſtill to all his redeemed people, raiſing them from their weak and low eſtate, ſupporting them in his arms, teaching them to ſoar aloft by faith and hope, leaving far behind them all idolatrous attachment to the creature, and enabling them to reach after their manſion in the ſkies. 5. When they were ready for their poſſeſſions he brought them in; mighty kings had already fallen before him, and they who were ſlaves in Egypt begin to reign in Baſhan, whilſt the kingdoms of Canaan alſo are ſhortly to fall before them. Part of their inheritance they enjoy, a greater part remains to be beſtowed; where plenty crowns the year, honey and oil flow as copiouſly as the ſtreams from the rock in the wilderneſs, the fineſt wheat ſhall ſupply them with food, the choiceſt cattle afford them meat, and wine and milk run down like a river. Well might God expect a return for ſuch mercies from them. Note, Such are the conqueſts, ſuch the poſſeſſions of every ſpiritual Iſraelite. The powers of ſin fall before victorious grace; he ſits upon the rock which is very high, even the rock of ages; his heart is filled with divine conſolations, he is nouriſhed by the words of truth and righteouſneſs, and fed with that meat, and drinks of that blood, which enſures to him life and immortality, to be enjoyed in the preſence of the ever-bleſſed God.

15. ¶ But [p] Jeſhurun waxed fat, and kicked: [q] thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatneſs; then he forſook God which made him, and lightly eſteemed the rock of his ſalvation. 16. They provoked him to jealouſy with ſtrange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger. 17. [r] They ſacrificed unto devils, † not to God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not. 18. v. 15—18. Moſes ſpeaks of what he foreſaw, as already come to paſs, becauſe of the certainty of the event. 1. He mentions their ſenſuality, ſtupidity and obſtinacy. They waxed fat, abuſed their proſperity by luxury; and nothing more dangerous to any ſoul, than to be fed to the full. They kicked, rejected the warnings of God's prophets, and would have none of their reproofs. The ſinner is in enraged at thoſe who would interrupt his vile purſuits, with ungrateful notices of his danger. They grew thick; after reſiſting the calls of God, blindneſs and hardneſs of heart came upon them; this is the uſual proceſs of ſin, when calls of conſcience are reſiſted; every moment they grow weaker, till the heart is ſeared and inſenſible. They forſook God, and lightly eſteemed the rock of their ſalvation; this was the neceſſary conſequence of ſuch a conduct. God and ſin can never be reconciled; we muſt deſpiſe the one in proportion as we delight in the other; and every ſtep we take in the purſuit of our luſts, leads us neceſſarily at a greater diſtance from God.

2. Their idolatry was eſpecially vile and abominable. They ſet up ſtrange gods, other than the true God, and new idols, ſuch as even the worſt of their idolatrous fathers neither knew nor feared, and thus grew worſe and worſe. Nay, they ſacrificed to devils, ſo ſhockingly beſotted and infatuated is the blind idolater, and more ſollicitous to placate a malignant ſpirit, than to ſecure the favour of that God, before whom the devils tremble. Note, There is nothing ſo ſhocking and abſurd of which a fallen ſpirit left to itſelf is not capable. 3. Their ingratitude was moſt baſe and provoking: they forgat the God who formed them, made them a people ſo diſtinguiſhed, and were unmindful of their rock who begat them. No wonder therefore, his jealouſy burnt like fire, and fierce wrath awoke againſt theſe tranſgreſſors. Note, (1.) God is a jealous God, he cannot bear a rival in the affections of his people, much leſs a ſuperior. (2.) They who forget God, will not be forgotten of him, his wrath abideth on them.

19. And [s] when the LORD ſaw it, he † abhorred them, [t] becauſe of the provoking of his ſons, and of his daughters. 20. And he ſaid, [u] I will hide my face from them, I will ſee what their end ſhall be: for they are a very froward generation, [x] children in whom is no faith. 21. v. 19—25. It is the folly of ſinners that they often ſay, Tuſh, God ſhall not ſee: but his eyes run to and fro in the earth, and there is no darkneſs, nor ſhadow of death, where any of the workers of iniquity can hide themſelves. We hear therefore, the wrath of God denounced upon them, 1. In his abhorrence of them. They had once born the character of children in profeſſion at leaſt; now that they act ſo undutifully, it is juſtice to diſinherit them. Note, Sin makes us odious in the ſight of divine purity, and no ſin ſo offenſive as theirs, who made profeſſion of religion. 2. In his hiding his face from them: not that he ceaſed to minute their iniquities, but he withdrew every token of his favour from them, to try them if they would ſeek after him; but they continued perverſe and obſtinate, and faithleſs to all their vows and engagements. Note, Their ſin is greatly aggravated, who not only tranſgreſs the law they are under, but violate the covenant they once entered into. 3. As they had treated God with ſuch contempt, he will puniſh them in kind, making them a prey to blind and idolatrous nations, and obliging them to ſerve thoſe whom they regarded as vile and deſpicable. Such were the Babylonians and Romans, who ſubdued them, and ſuch were all thoſe Gentiles, who, on their rejection of Chriſt and his goſpel, were admitted into covenant with God, from which by their wickedneſs they were excluded. 4. Their terrible end is foretold. The fire of God ſhall burn up their pleaſant land and goodly cities, God's bow ſhall be bent, and his quiver emptied with repeated ſtrokes of judgment, the famine ſhall devour, the peſtilence conſume them, the beaſts of the field and poiſonous ſerpents ſhall fix their invenomed fangs upon them, whilſt the ſword of the enemy, mercileſs and drenched in blood, ſhall ſpare neither young nor old, till they are deſtroyed. Note, God's plagues will overtake the ſinner ſooner or later; at leaſt, if not before, in the everlaſting burnings of hell.

26. I ſaid, I would ſcatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to ceaſe from among men: 27. Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, [f] leſt their adverſaries ſhould behave themſelves ſtrangely, and leſt they ſhould ſay, † Our hand is high, and the LORD hath not done all this. 28. For they are a nation void of counſel, neither is there any underſtanding in them. 29. [g] O that they were wiſe, that they underſtood this, [h] that they would conſider their latter end! 30. How ſhould [i] one chaſe a thouſand, and two put ten thouſand to flight, except their rock [k] had ſold them, and the LORD had ſhut them up? 31. For their rock is not as our rock, [l] even our enemies themſelves being judges. 32. For their vine ‡ is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their cluſters are bitter. 33. Their wine is the poiſon of dragons, and the cruel venom of aſps. 34. [m] Is not this laid up in ſtore with me, and ſealed up among my treaſures? 35. To me belongeth [n] vengeance and recompence, their foot ſhall ſlide in due time, for [o] the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that ſhall come upon them make haſte. 36. For [p] the LORD ſhall judge his people, and [q] repent himſelf for his ſervants; when he ſeeth that their ‖ power is gone, and [r] there is none ſhut up, or left. 37. And he ſhall ſay, [s] Where are their gods, their rock in whom they truſted. 38. Which did eat the fat of their ſacrifices, and drank of the wine of their drink-offerings? let them riſe up and help you, and be § your protection.

v. 26—38. Juſt had it been with God utterly to have conſumed them; but for his great name's ſake he ſtays his arm. 1. He conſults his own glory. He might have cut them down as ripe, for vengeance, nor left ſo much as a handful in the corner of the field ſtanding; but he knew their enemies, a people void of underſtanding, would aſcribe it to their own power, and to the honour of their pretended deities: therefore he interpoſes to ſpare a remnant, fearing the wrath of the enemy, (not really, but ſpeaking according to the manner of men) leaſt they ſhould triumph in making an end of them. 2. Moſes expreſſes his ardent deſire, that Iſrael might make a good uſe of God's corrections and mercies, and in the view of their latter end, bethink them before it was too late. Note, (1.) It is an important thing to prepare for death, and ſhould be often and ſolemnly the matter of our conſideration. (2.) The moment of our abode here is ſo ſhort, and eternity ſo awful which depends upon it, that they are fools indeed, who for things temporal loſe the things eternal. (3.) It ſhould be the deſire and prayer of every faithful miniſter, to awaken the ſouls of ſinners to the conſideration of theſe things. 3. The victory of the enemy over Iſrael, is aſcribed to the true cauſe, their ſins; not effected by human arm, or heathen idol's power, but becauſe ſold into the hands of their foes, and forſaken of God their rock, under whoſe bleſſing in times paſt, their remarkable ſucceſs had extorted from thoſe they ſubdued, a confeſſion of the ſuperiority of Iſrael's God. 4. The ſin of Iſrael's enemies ſhall come up in remembrance before God, and their puniſhment lingreth not. Their ſins are great as Sodom, and their iniquity like Gomorrah; the meaſure of their iniquity is filling: God keeps a record of it laid up in ſtore before him, and ſealed againſt the day of vengeance. Note, Tho' proſperous ſinners flouriſh long, and be ſuffered to trample down God's Iſrael, a book of their pride is kept, and the day is coming when they who treaſured up wrath againſt the day of wrath, ſhall be overtaken by it. The hour is fixed, and it is near, even at the door, when death ſhall cut down the ſinner, and his damnation no longer ſlumber. 5. God will remember his people in their diſtreſſes, and repent, i. e. change, not his mind towards them, for that is unchangeable, but his manner of dealing with them, compaſſionating their deſolations, beholding their cities without inhabitants, and their country deſerted. Thus under the judges, and eſpecially after the Babyloniſh captivity, they experienced his mercy towards them in their deep affliction. Note, In the times of his people's greateſt calamities, he is near to reſtore them, on their humble return to him, and to pluck them as brands from the burning. 6. God expreſſes his contempt and ſcorn of the idol deities; either thoſe in which Iſrael had truſted, none of which could help them in diſtreſs, or rather the gods of their enemies, to whom they had ſo liberally ſacrificed on their former victories; let them now protect their votaries. But how ſhall they ſave others, when themſelves are bowed down and upon the weary beaſts, carrying among other ſpoil into captivity. Note, They who truſt on any thing but Chriſt alone for ſalvation, will find they lean on a broken reed, too weak to ſupport them, which will run into their hand and pierce it.

39. See now that [t] I, even I am he, and [u] there is no god with me: [x] I kill, and I make alive: I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand. 40. [y] For I lift up my hand to heaven, and ſay I live for ever. 41. [z] If I whet my glittering ſword, and mine hand take hold on judgment; I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me. 42. I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, (and my ſword ſhall devour fleſh) and that with the blood of the ſlain, and of the captives, from the beginning of [a] revenges upon the enemy. 43. † [b] Rejoice, O ye nations with his people: for he will avenge the blood of his ſervants, and will render vengeance to his adverſaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

v. 39—43. The ſong concludes, 1. With a proclamation of God's glory and greatneſs as it began. I, even I am he, the ſelf-exiſtent, and the only God. There is none with me equal in glory, none beſide me. I kill, and I make alive; dominion and power are all lodged in my hand, the death of my enemies is determined, the life of my people is ſecured: or if I ſmite them, ſo that they ſeem dead, I, who wounded, can heal them. Neither is there any who can deliver out of my hand; none who dare interpoſe to reſcue my enemies from deſtruction, none to pluck my people, and ſeparate them from my love. Note, All theſe things are expreſsly aſcribed to our Jeſus, and in a more eminent manner have been, and continued to be fulfilled, both reſpecting his ſpiritual Iſrael, and his ſpiritual enemies. 2. With a ſolemn oath of God, who becauſe he can ſwear by no greater, ſwears by himſelf, to ſhew the immutability of his counſels, (1.) In his enemies deſtruction. The glittering ſword is unſheathed; it is whetted with fury; it deſcends upon the necks of his enemies, weilded by the arm of Omnipotence, and therefore the deſolation cannot but be terrible, when God awakes to vengeance, and drenches his arrows in the blood of the ſlain. Note, It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God; and yet unleſs ſinners repent, they muſt infallibly periſh, without mercy or remedy. (2.) For his people's comfort. They ſhall ſee the vengeance executed on their enemies, and rejoice in God's glory therein manifeſted; they ſhall believe the gracious promiſes confirmed by the oath of God, and triumph in their great and ſure ſalvation: they ſhall ſee the vaſt increaſe of his church, when the nations ſhall flow into it, and all his redeemed come at laſt to Zion with ſongs, and everlaſting joy upon their heads. Note, (1.) Whatever trials the faithful may be expoſed to, or whatever ſufferings for their ſins they may undergo, peace and joy ſhall be their everlaſting portion. (2.) The people of God ſhould be always comforted, nor amidſt their days of heavineſs, through manifold temptation, intermit their rejoicing in hope. (3.) Let the enemies of God's church and people know their day is coming, and when the ſmoke of their torment aſcendeth for ever and ever, the ſaints in glory ſhall ſhout Hallelujah.

44. ¶ And Moſes came and ſpake all the words of this ſong in the ears of the people, he and † Hoſhea the ſon of Nun. 45. And Moſes made an end of ſpeaking all theſe words to all Iſrael. 46. And he ſaid unto them, [c] Set your hearts unto all the words which I teſtify among you this day; which ye ſhall command your children to obſerve to do, all the words of this law. 47. For it is not a vain thing for you; [d] becauſe it is your life; and through this thing ye ſhall prolong your days in the land whither ye go over Jordan to poſſeſs it. 48. [e] And the LORD ſpake unto Moſes that ſelf-ſame day, ſaying, 49. [f] Get thee up into this mountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over againſt Jericho; and behold the land of Canaan which I give unto the children of Iſrael for a poſſeſſion. 50. And die in the mount whither thou goeſt up, and be gathered unto thy people; as [g] Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people: 51. Becauſe [h] ye treſpaſſed againſt me among the children of Iſrael, at the waters of ‡ Meribah-kadeſh, in the wilderneſs of Zin; becauſe [i] ye ſanctified me not in the midſt of the children of Iſrael. 52. v. 44—52. Moſes and Joſhua, in different congregations of the people, ſolemnly rehearſe the words of this ſong: as Joſhua is ſhortly to ſupply Moſes' place, they muſt bear the ſame word, and witneſs the ſame truth. Note, There is but one truth in the ſcripture, one faith, one hope, one goſpel. Moſes after delivery of this ſong, 1. Adds his earneſt charge to them, to ſet their hearts to obey all theſe commands of God, and not only themſelves to be exemplary, but ſeek to tranſmit their religion to the ſucceeding generations, by training their children up in the way which they ſhould go; for it is not a vain thing, an inconſiderable matter, their life depended on it, their comfortable life in Canaan, their eternal life in heaven. Note, Religion is our higheſt intereſt, as well as our bounden duty: happy, were we all more deeply convinced thereof! 2. God lets Moſes know he muſt die. The very day his work is done, he is ordered up to mount Nebo. Note, When God hath accompliſhed all his will in us upon earth, he will not fail that ſame hour to take us to himſelf. He reminds him of his ſin that prevented his paſſing over Jordan. Humble reflections upon paſt miſconduct become us even in dying moments. He mentions Aaron's death before him, as a comfortable ſupport againſt his own. Moſes had ſeen him die in peace, and was now to go to him. It is a comfort in dying ſeaſons, to think of thoſe who have gone before, and whom we ſhall ſo ſhortly meet in glory, eſpecially our Divine Redeemer, the High-prieſt of our profeſſion—Yet he may ſee the land, though he may not enter it. God is pleaſed to ſhew him this favour as a token of his reconciliation to him, and in full view of it he may die content. Note, (1.) This ſide the grave, we can only by faith ſee the promiſes afar off; we muſt croſs the ſtream of death, and then we ſhall receive them in all their fulneſs. (2.) Tho' on a dying bed we may have much to lament, it is enough if Jeſus ſtands by to ſay our iniquity is pardoned, and holds out eternal life, as the gift of God to us, through his obedience unto death in our behalf.

CHAP. XXXIII.

This chapter contains Moſes' final benediction: 1. He pronounceth them all bleſſed in what God had done for them already, eſpecially in giving them his law, ver. 2—5. 2. He pronounceth a bleſſing upon each tribe, which is both a prayer for, and a prophecy of, their felicity, ver. 6—25. 3. He pronounceth them all in general bleſſed, upon the account of what God would be to them, and do for them, if they were obedient, ver. 26—29.

1. AND this is the bleſſing wherewith Moſes [a] the man of God bleſſed the children of Iſrael before his death. 2. And he ſaid, [b] The LORD came from Sinai, and roſe up from Seir unto them; he ſhined forth from mount Paran, and he came with [c] ten thouſands of ſaints: from his right hand went † a fiery law for them. 3. Yea, [d] he loved the people; [e] all his ſaints are in thy hand; and they ſat down at thy feet; every one ſhall receive of thy words. 4. Moſes commanded us a law: [f] even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob. 5. And he was [g] king in [h] Jeſhurun, when the heads of the people, and the tribes of Iſrael were gathered together.

v. 1—5. Moſes being now to leave them, in token of his warm affection towards them, notwithſtanding their ingratitude, pronounces over them his parting benediction. As a man of God, a good man, he prays for their felicity; as a prophet, he foretels the bleſſings God had in ſtore for them. 1. He reminds them of the glorious appearance of God on Sinai, whence the brightneſs of his preſence ſhone ſo powerfully, that the diſtant mounts of Seir and Paran were illumined thereby; or perhaps it may refer to the ſeveral glorious appearances which God made to them near each of theſe mountains. Ten thouſand holy angels, an innumerable multitude ſurrounded the King of Glory, when through their ſhining ranks the law went forth from the throne of the Divine Majeſty. 2. He mentions the fiery law which was given them from his right hand: fiery, becauſe not only given from amidſt the fire of Sinai, but alſo becauſe, like the powerful operations of this element, it burns the conſcience, and torments it with a ſenſe of guilt. Note, The ſinner who breaks God's law, will ſtill find it conſuming fire. 3. The regard and love of God towards them. No nation ſo diſtinguiſhed, ſeparated to be a peculiar people, covered and protected by the hand of Omnipotence, drawn to his feet to hear and learn the way to life and happineſs, and ſweetly inclined to receive the words which make wiſe unto ſalvation. Happy art thou, O Iſrael. Note, (1.) God's people are a peculiar and choſen generation. (2.) They are ſafe in the hand of their Lord, and none can pluck them thence. (3.) They are all taught of God, and ſweetly drawn to his feet, to learn his will and to obey it. 4. The people acknowledge their obligation to God and to Moſes. To God, for giving them ſuch a holy law, which was their beſt inheritance, and whilſt they obſerved it, would inſure the land to their poſterity unto the lateſt ages. To Moſes, who had been their mediator in the delivery of the law, and as the chief magiſtrate for God, had ſeen it obſerved by the people. Note, (1.) To have God's law written in our hearts, is our beſt treaſure. (2.) We can never enough be thankful to God, nor the inſtruments whom he makes uſe of in bringing our hearts in ſubjection to his will.

6. ¶ Let Reuben live, and not die: and let not his men be few. 7. ¶ And this is the bleſſing of Judah; and he ſaid, Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people; let his hands be ſufficient for him, and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

v. 6, 7. Reuben was a frontier tribe, and much expoſed; and whilſt a part of this tribe went over Jordan to battle before their brethren, they would be in danger both at home and abroad, but God's protection will keep them from being diminiſhed. Though becauſe of his ſin he may not excell, yet ſhall he not for his ſin be deſtroyed, or his name be extinct. Note, (1.)

Though God viſits for ſin, it will be in meaſure. (2.) They who are now returned to the path of duty, may confidently expect the return of God's bleſſing.

Judah comes next in order. Simeon, whoſe lot lay in the midſt of Judah, is omitted, probably becauſe, as thus united, they would ſhare in the ſame bleſſing. Moſes begs that his prayers might be heard, his warfare proſperous, his labours ſucceſsful, and peace be in his borders. This was fulfilled in David, Aſa, Hezekiah's prayers and victories, and in the abundance of all good things which this tribe enjoyed. Note, (1.) With Judah's prayers we may expect Judah's bleſſing. (2.) Chriſt, the lion of the tribe of Judah, hath prayed and fought, and conquered for us, and having made peace through the blood of his croſs, will keep us ſafe from the fear of evil, in time and in eternity.

Who ſaid unto his father and to his mother, I have not ſeen him, [l] neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children; for [m] they have obſerved thy word, and kept thy covenant. 10. † They ſhall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Iſrael thy law: ‡ they ſhall put incenſe ‖ before thee, and whole-burnt ſacrifice upon thine altar. 11 Bleſs, LORD, his ſubſtance, and accept the work of his hands: ſmite through the loins of them that riſe againſt him, and of them that hate him, that they riſe not again.

v. 8—11, Levi was diſtinguiſhed by the prieſthood. Moſes therefore, 1. prays that the Urim and Thummim, lights and perfections, might be continually with the high-prieſt, as they had been with Aaron, whoſe fidelity God approved of at Meribah, Exod. xvii. 7. The Urim and Thummim continued till the captivity, and were never afterwards reſtored. But Chriſt being come, the true high-prieſt whom Aaron prefigured, in him all fulneſs of light, and all perfection of purity dwell, and his faithful miniſters partake, in a meaſure, of his light and purity in their miniſtrations before him. 2. Their fidelity is commended, whether in the exemplary impartiality they ſhewed in their deciſions, or in the death of their neareſt friends, whom they ſlew when defiled with idolatry, Exod. xxxii. 26. Note, God's miniſters zeal and uprightneſs ſhall be remembred to their everlaſting honour and comfort. 3. The work aſſigned them. To be chief judges in all controverſies, to preach the law of God to the people, and to miniſter in holy things at his altar. Preaching God's word is an honourable work, and his miniſtry a diſtinguiſhed employment: woe to them who count it deſpicable, and much more to thoſe who by their negligence and ill examples make it ſo. 4. He prays for them, that their ſubſtance, which conſiſted chiefly in the tythes and offerings, might be bleſſed, that they might have enough, and the comfortable enjoyment of it; that their miniſtrations might be acceptable to God, and ſucceſsful among the people, and that their enemies might be confounded and deſtroyed. Note, (1.) The greateſt deſire of a faithful miniſter, is, that God would accept and proſper his labours. (2.) They who are moſt active and faithful for God, will find moſt oppoſition from the world and the devil; but God is their helper, and he will diſappoint and over-rule all the deſigns of their enemies.

v. 12—17. The temple lying in the borders of Benjamin, or at leaſt cloſe to it, he fitly follows Levi in order. He is called the beloved of the Lord: as he was his father's darling, he had alſo God's regard towards him: dwelling ſo near God's temple, he was kept in ſafety, and did not apoſtatize from God's worſhip when the other tribes revolted, and joining with Judah, he had the ſame Divine protection and care over him. Note, They who keep cloſe to God's church and worſhip, will have no cauſe ever to repent it. They will ſhare in the felicity of his choſen, and partake of his everlaſting love.

Joſeph's bleſſing includes his two ſons. 1. He had been once ſeparated from his brethren, and ſold as a ſlave into Egypt, but God was with him, and ſeparated him to honour; therefore he hath a double portion among them. 2. Moſes prays for, and prophecies the plenty and glory of Joſeph's ſons, 1. Their plenty; a fruitful land ſhould the lot of Ephraim and Manaſſeh be, watered with the dew of heaven, and with ſtreams that burſt from the bowels of the deep beneath; quickned by the benign influences of the heavenly bodies, the earth would give her plenteous increaſe, and the hills laden with vines and olives fill their houſes with their produce; or diſcloſing their precious ſtores within, enrich them with mines of braſs and iron: but theſe temporal bleſſings are the leaſt part of their happineſs; the good will of God, as their covenant God, who appeared to Moſes in the buſh, is better to them than all the reſt. This he prays for, and promiſes them, and then they could want nothing to complete their felicity. Note, (1.) God has bleſſings in abundance to beſtow on his ſeparated ones, not only of the baſket and the ſtore, but the unſpeakably more valuable ones of the gifts, graces, and conſolations of his bleſſed Spirit. (2.) The true enjoyment of all earthly good things is to have the bleſſing of him who dwelt in the buſh upon them; and even in the want of theſe, this will alone ſatisfy the ſoul abundantly. 2. Their power. Strong and majeſtic as the bulls of Baſhan, irreſiſtible as the unicorn or rhinoceros, puſhing the Canaanites to their utmoſt borders, and filling the land with a numerous and warlike off-ſpring, wherein the youngeſt, according to the prophecy, ſtill hath the pre-eminence: it is ſaid the ten thouſands of Ephraim, and the thouſands of Manaſſeh; Ephraim being moſt numerous, and after the diviſion of the tribes, Samaria in his lot became the metropolis of Iſrael. Note, This is ſtill the caſe with our divine Joſeph and his ſpiritual ſons, before whom all their ſpiritual enemies muſt fall, ſubdued by the horn of his power.

18. ¶ And of Zebulun he ſaid, [u] Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out; and Iſſachar, in thy tents. 19. They ſhall call the people unto the mountain, there [x] they ſhall offer ſacrifices of righteouſneſs: for they ſhall ſuck of the abundance of the ſeas, and of treaſures hid in the ſand.

v. 18—19. The bleſſings of Zebulun and Iſſachar are joined together. Both ſhould have a pleaſant lot, and each ſucceſs in their labours. Zebulun muſt rejoice in his going out in war, or rather his proſperous voyages. This tribe dwelling near the ſea, and Iſſachar in his tent, God giving him plenty from the fruit of his labours in agriculture. Both of them zealous for God, ſhall call the people to the mountain, to the worſhip of God: the gentiles around them, with whom they trafficked, or their brethren, whoſe hearts might be backward. Their offerings ſhould be accepted of God, as ſacrifices of righteouſneſs; and well ſhould they be able to afford them, being enriched by their traffick and merchandize, and with the treaſures hid in the ſand, ſuch as gold-duſt, pearl, coral, or the riches which from ſhipwreck might be caſt on their coaſt. Note, (1.) The ſailor and huſbandman have their ſeveral occupations pointed out to them by the providence of God, and each their difficulties and their advantages. God wills that each ſhould be content with his lot, and rejoice in his labours. (2.) In all our traffick and buſineſs, we ſhould ſeek to make the intereſts of God's kingdom our capital aim, and improve our connections with others, in ſuch a way, as if poſſible, to bring them to the worſhip and ſervice of our God. (3.) They who are bleſſed with greateſt abundance, are eſpecially called upon to honour God with more abundant ſacrifices of good works.

20. ¶ And of Gad he ſaid, Bleſſed be [y] he that enlargeth Gad: he dwelleth as a lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head. 21. And [z] he provided the firſt part for himſelf, becauſe there, in a portion of the law-giver was he † ſeated; and [a] he came with the heads of the people, he executed the juſtice of the LORD, and his judgments with Iſrael.

v. 20, 21. Gad was a warlike tribe, and Moſes prophecies his enlargement. As a lion ſtrong, and when rouſed up furious and devouring, his prudence is remarked in providing the firſt part for himſelf, having his lot on that ſide of Jordan already conquered, appointed by Moſes himſelf the law-giver. Yet zealous for his brethren's ſettlement, he paſſes over before them, to execute the juſtice of the Lord upon the devoted Canaanites. Note, (1.) To do well for ourſelves, and provide for our own houſe, when it can be done without injuring our neighbour, is commendable. (2.) The mercies of God to ourſelves in our enlargements, ſhould make us the readier to aſſiſt our brethren.

22. ¶ And of Dan he ſaid, Dan is a lion's whelp; he ſhall leap from Baſhan. 23. ¶ And of Naphtali he ſaid, O Naphtali, [b] ſatisfied with favour, and full with the bleſſing of the LORD: [c] poſſeſs thou the weſt and the ſouth. 24. ¶ And of Aſher he ſaid, [d] Let Aſher be bleſſed with children; let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him [e] dip his foot in oil. 25. † Thy ſhoes ſhall be iron and braſs; and as thy days, ſo ſhall thy ſtrength be.

v. 22—25. 1. The bleſſing on Dan is, that he ſhould be bold and ſtrong as a lion's whelp, which was fulfilled in Sampſon; and ſhall leap as a lion from Baſhan, when they fell upon the people of Laiſh, and ſeized their country, and dwelt there. 2. The bleſſing of Naphtali is rich indeed! ſatisfied with favour, happy in the regards of his brethren, and more happy ſtill in the love and favour of God, which is the fountain of all bleſſedneſs; full of the bleſſing of the Lord, not only enriched with a temporal proviſion, but bleſſed with the richer mercies of the covenant of grace. Poſſeſſed of the weſt, or rather as the word ſignifies, the ſea of Genneſaret, which was its border, and the ſouth, from the tribe of Dan. The favour of God's people is a ſingular mercy, but the favour of God himſelf is that which can alone fully ſatisfy the ſoul. 3. Aſher is happy in his name, and happy in his inheritance; bleſſed with a numerous poſterity; acceptable to his brethren, by a carriage which conciliates their regard; flowing with ſuch plenty that his very ſteps were bathed in oil; rich in mines of braſs and iron, and his ſtrength as his day, either to old age poſſeſſing the vigour of youth, or in every trial finding ſuitable and ſufficient ſupports. Note, (1.) A kind and humble carriage will engage the affection of our neighbours. (2.) Whatever ſufferings or ſervices God calls us to, he will enable us for. Let us truſt him.

26. ¶ There is none like unto the God of [f] Jeſhurun, [g] who rideth upon the heaven in thy help, and in his excellency on the ſky. 27. The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlaſting arms; and he ſhall thruſt out the enemy from before thee, and ſhall ſay, Deſtroy them. 28. [h] Iſrael then ſhall dwell in ſafety alone: the fountain of Jacob ſhall be upon a land of corn and wine, alſo his heaven ſhall drop down dew. 29. Happy art thou, O Iſrael: who is like unto thee, O people ſaved by the LORD, the ſhield of thy help, and who is the ſword of thy excellency! and [i] thine enemies ſhall be † found liars unto thee, and [k] thou ſhalt tread upon their high places.

v. 26—29. He concludes his ſong with a high character of Iſrael's God, and a glorious account of God's Iſrael. 1. Iſrael's God is glorious above all gods; the heavens are his chariot, ſhewing his majeſty and honour, under his government, and armed to execute his orders. Eternal in his ſelf-exiſtent eſſence, almighty in power and univerſal dominion. Note, We can never ſufficiently exalt and extol the God of Glory; when we have raiſed our conceptions and praiſes to the higheſt pitch, he is ſtill far above all bleſſing and praiſe. 2. The Iſrael of God is glorious too, in the love, care, protection and bleſſing of ſuch a God. He is their refuge or dwelling-place; a refuge to fly to, as the manſlayer did for deliverance from ſin, death, and hell. A manſion, where the ſoul may reſt, comfortable and ſecure, under the ſhadow of a covenant God. And underneath are the everlaſting arms, arms of everlaſting love, to embrace and comfort them, of everlaſting power to protect and preſerve them. Note, Not all the powers of darkneſs can pluck Chriſt's redeemed ones from him; no not the weakeſt believer that hangs upon him. In the ſoreſt trials, and deepeſt diſtreſſes, they cannot fail, whom God upholdeth with his hand: bleſſed and happy they who truſt on him. He ſhall thruſt out the enemy from before thee; ſtrongly entrenched, and powerful as their armies may be, the commiſſion is ſigned for their deſtruction, he ſhall ſay, Deſtroy them. In judgment, the Canaanites muſt periſh, and Iſrael be the executioner of divine vengeance. Note, Chriſt Jeſus hath, by once dying, deſtroyed the devil and his works, and all his redeemed people go forth under his banner, conquering and to conquer. Iſrael then ſhall dwell in ſafety alone, for what can diſturb their repoſe, who have God for their refuge? With his preſence they never can be ſolitary, and whilſt detached from the idolatry around them, are thus ſecure from fear of evil. Note, The more ſeparate we are from the world, uſually the ſafer; little compliances bring on often great and dangerous conſequences. The fountain of Jacob, the people derived from him their ſource, and flowing downward ſtill to future generations, ſhall be upon a land of corn and wine, with which Canaan their happy lot abounded: alſo his heavens ſhall drop down the dew, refreſhing and timely ſhowers ſhall impregnate the earth with fertility: thus Jeſus cauſes the dew of his heavenly influences to deſcend on his people's hearts, which makes them revive as the corn, and grow as the vine. Well may it be ſaid after ſuch an aſſemblage of bleſſings, Happy art thou, O Iſrael, Who is like unto thee? whom no foes can approach, becauſe a people ſaved of the Lord, covered from every aſſault by him, who is the ſhield of thy help, and armed with thoſe offenſive weapons, whoſe piercing edge no tempered armour can reſiſt, even the ſword of his excellency. Note, Every ſpiritual Iſraelite is clad in the divine panoply: the ſhield of faith, the ſword of the ſpirit, and the helmet of ſalvation, ſecure him from danger, enable him to fight and ſubdue every enemy of his ſoul. Thine enemies ſhall be found liars unto thee, their proud vauntings ſhall be confounded, and their threatned rage diſappointed; or they ſhall lie unto thee, as the Gibeonites, through fear of their arms, contriving a lie to ſecure themſelves from deſtruction: and thou ſhalt tread upon their high places, triumphantly reign over them, caſting down their ſtrongeſt-holds, and treading under foot their idols, whoſe groves and temples were uſually on the high places; and thus ſhall God do for his believing people, bruiſing ſatan under their feet, caſting down imaginations, and every high thought which exalteth itſelf within them, and bringing the whole man into the obedience of Chriſt, who ſhall reign in the believer's heart as their king on earth, before they are brought to reign with him, as kings in glory everlaſting.

v. 1—4. Moſes having received the divine command to go up to mount Nebo and die, chearfully addreſſes him to the pleaſing taſk; for to a believer, death is not his loſs, but gain; not his miſery, but his privilege. 1. He goes up to the top of Piſgah, the higheſt ſummit of the mountain; and, it ſhould ſeem, alone without help though ſo aged, and without company, that they may not ſee him die, and ſuperſtitiouſly venerate his bones, or his ſepulchre. 2. God ſhews him from thence, according to his promiſe, all the inheritance of the tribes of Iſrael, both on this ſide Jordan and beyond it. God was then with him, when every other ſupport failed him, and his preſence made up for all the reſt. It was a large extent of country, but his eye was keen, and aſſiſted now by particular power from God. Note, To God's grace we ſtand indebted for every pleaſing proſpect which faith gives us of the glory beyond the grave; and he is often peculiarly kind to his dying ſaints, making their views of his glory moſt ſtrong and ſtriking, to ſupport them in that awful hour. God's faithfulneſs now was evident, and it afforded a ſupport to himſelf, that he had this faithful God to truſt upon, who, though he might not enter the earthly Canaan, had provided for him a better country, that is, an heavenly; and having by faith ſhewed it him afar off, would ſhortly, through the grave and gate of death, bring him thither, to an everlaſting inheritance.

5. ¶ [h] So Moſes the ſervant of the LORD died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the LORD. 6. ¶ And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over againſt Beth-peor: but [i] no man knoweth of his ſepulchre unto this day. 7. ¶ And [k] Moſes was an hundred and twenty years old when he died: [l] his eye was not dim, nor his † natural force ‡ abated. 8. ¶ And the children of Iſrael wept for Moſes in the plains of Moab [m] thirty days, ſo the days of weeping and mourning for Moſes were ended.

v. 5—8. We have here,

1. The death of Moſes the ſervant of the Lord, whom God ſo eminently employed and owned; he died in Moab, according to the word of the Lord, not by diſeaſe or age, but by an immediate diſſolution, without grief or pain, in full health and vigour.

gour. Note, (1.) Death will remove the moſt uſeful and favoured ſervants of God. (2.) When they reſt frem their labours on earth, they will enter into their reſt in heaven. (3.) They have lived long enough, who have finiſhed the work God hath given them to do, and ſhall have their deſires anſwered, to be abſent from the body, and to be preſent with the Lord.

2. Moſes' burial. It is not ſaid who buried him: it ſeems God uſed the miniſtry of angels: See Jude. v. 9. particularly Michael, and buried him ſecretly in a valley over againſt Beth-peor, that his ſepulchre might not be known, and that the people might be kept from that idolatrous veneration they might be led to pay him after his death. Note, (1.) When the ſoul reſts with God, it matters little where the body lies. The duſt will not be the leſs at eaſe, becauſe no ſumptuous monument is raiſed over the grave. (2.) All veneration for the relicks of departed ſaints is abominable; it is like ſiding with the devil, when he diſputed for the body of Moſes.

3. His age. One hundred and twenty years old, not equal to the years of his fathers, yet greatly exceeding his cotemporaries: he had experienced a great viciſſitude of ſtate, reſcued when expoſed to the jaws of death, then brought up as a royal prince in Pharaoh's court, afterwards reduced to the mean employment of a ſhepherd; then at laſt exalted to be King in Jeſhurun. Such a changing world we live in, good and evil are ſet thus over againſt each other, but in that bleſt world to which we go, there is nothing but bliſs and glory without variableneſs, or ſhadow of turning. One remarkable thing is obſerved of him, that his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated; no decay of body, nor infirmity of mind attended him to the laſt. Note, (1.) A healthy old age is a ſingular bleſſing. (2.) The moral law is thus in full vigour, ſharp as ever to diſcern our faults, and ſtrong as ever to avenge diſobedience.

4. The mourning of the people for him. They had a great loſs in ſuch a leader; and thoſe who oppoſed him when alive, probably now more bitterly regretted his departure, Virtutem preſentem odimus, ſublatam quærimus. Beſides that, it brought their ſins againſt him to remembrance, and tears of penitence for themſelves, mingled with tears of ſorrow for him. It is good to make every grief a means of our humiliation: thirty days it laſted; a long mourning, but we may not always weep. Though decent ſorrow is commendable, immoderate grief is ſinful: the days of mourning muſt end; we are ſure they will ſhortly, and never more return, when the day comes that every tear ſhall be wiped from our eyes.

n Num. xxvii. 18,23.

9. ¶ And Joſhua the ſon of Nun was full of the ſpirit of wiſdom: for [n] Moſes had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Iſrael hearkned unto him, and did as the LORD commanded Moſes. 10. ¶ And there aroſe not a prophet ſince in Iſrael like unto Moſes, [o] whom the LORD knew face to face. 11. In all [p] the ſigns and the wonders which the LORD ſent him to do in the land of Egypt, to Pharaoh, and to all his ſervants, and to all his land. 12. And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moſes ſhewed in the ſight of all Iſrael.

v. 9—12. We have here the praiſe of the living governor, and the juſt encomium on the deceaſed. 1. Joſhua was admirably qualified to ſucceed Moſes in his arduous charge, full of the ſpirit of wiſdom, ſkilled alike in the arts of government and war; God had commanded Moſes to lay his hands on him, and whilſt he deſigned him his ſucceſſor, communicated to him abilities for the taſk, and the people acknowledged the appointment, and paid a ready obedience to his orders. Note, (1.) Whom God calls to any charge, he qualifies for the employment. (2.) God will never leave his Iſrael deſtitute, but as one faithful miniſter is taken away, another ſhall be raiſed up in his ſtead. (3.) We muſt not, through prejudice to the living, exalt too much thoſe who went before them, but ſubmit with the ſame chearfulneſs and love to the younger paſtors, as to the more aged ones which are departed. (4.) Joſhua is appointed for what Moſes could not do. Thus the law of Moſes leaves us in the wilderneſs of conviction, Chriſt Jeſus, the true Joſhua, alone can bring us to the true reſt of peace of conſcience on earth, or eternal bliſs in heaven. 2. The encomium of Moſes is great, and moſt deſerved. He was above all other prophets diſtinguiſhed, in the free and frequent communion he enjoyed with God; others heard from him in dreams and viſions, but Moſes ſpake with him face to face, as a man talketh with his friend. None performed the like ſtupendous miracles, nor did any prophet ariſe in Iſrael like him. This teſtimony ſeems to have been written long after his departure, as was this chapter, by ſome of the ſucceeding inſpired penmen. One prophet, however, was predicted to ariſe, and he is ſince ariſen, more ſuperior to Moſes, than he was above his brethren. His goſpel in glory ſurpaſſing the law, which was a miniſtration of condemnation, his miracles more wonderful and numerous, and his covenant eſtabliſhed on better promiſes. Moſes was a ſervant in the houſe, Chriſt a ſon over his own houſe, one lies buried in the plains of Moab, the other living for ever to bleſs his people, ſeated on the throne of eternal glory, and ruling for them, and in them, till all enemies be put under their feet, and death itſelf at laſt be ſwallowed up in victory.

The End of the Five Books of MOSES.

OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of JOSHUA.

The Jews diſtinguiſh the Prophets into former and latter: The former begins with Joſhua, and ends with the book of Kings; and though the contents be purely hiſtorical, yet they are juſtly ſuppoſed to have been written by ſome of the Prophets, from authentic records of the Jewiſh nation. The Book of Joſhua contains the events of about twenty-ſeven years, and preſents us with the conqueſt, diviſion, and government of the land of Canaan, under the command of this divinely-appointed leader, who was herein an eminent type of Jeſus the Captain of our Salvation, who is given of God for a leader and commander to his ſpiritual Iſrael. A Leader, to bring them ſafe through every ſpiritual danger, and to reſcue them from every enemy of their ſouls, till their final reſt in glory. A Commander, to reign over their hearts, and by his ſpirit to guide and rule them, according to his holy will and pleaſure on earth, till he ſhall bring them to his kingdom in heaven, where of his government there ſhall be no end.

The divine authority of this book is ſupported ſufficiently; not only by its univerſal reception in the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Church as canonical, but by the references and quotations made out of it in the New Teſtament, Heb. xi. 30, 31. Chap. xiii. 6. Jam. ii. 25. In it we ſee the fulfilment of the foregoing prophecies and promiſes, and the faithfulneſs of God therein diſplayed; and are encouraged to truſt him in like manner, till all our enemies, like theirs, ſhall be put under our feet.

This book begins with the hiſtory of Joſhua's reign and government, to which, 1. God appoints him, ver. 1—9. 2. He enters upon his charge, ver. 10, 11. and particularly reminds the two tribes and half of their engagements, ver. 12—15. 3. They agree to it, and take an oath of fealty to him, ver. 16—18.

1. NOW after the death of Moſes the ſervant of the LORD, it came to paſs, that the LORD ſpake unto Joſhua the ſon of Nun, Moſes [a] miniſter, ſaying, 2. [b] Moſes my ſervant is dead; now therefore ariſe, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Iſrael. 3. [c] Every place that the ſole of your foot ſhall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I ſaid unto Moſes. 4. [d] From the wilderneſs and this Lebanon, even unto the great river the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great ſea, toward the going down of the ſun, ſhall be your coaſt. 5. There ſhall not any man be able to ſtand before thee all the days of thy life: [e] as I was with Moſes, ſo I will be with thee: [f] I will not fail thee, nor forſake thee. 6. [g] Be ſtrong and of a good courage: for † unto this people ſhalt thou divide for an inheritance the land which I ſware unto their fathers to give them. 7. Only be thou ſtrong and very courageous, that thou mayſt obſerve to do according to all the law [h] which Moſes my ſervant commanded thee: [i] turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayeſt ‡ proſper whitherſoever thou goeſt. 8. [k] This book of the law ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, but [l] thou ſhalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayeſt obſerve to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou ſhalt make thy way proſperous, and then thou ſhalt ‖ have good ſucceſs. 9. [m] Have not I commanded thee? Be ſtrong and of a good courage, be not afraid, neither be thou diſmayed: for the LORD thy God is with thee whitherſoever thou goeſt.

v. 1—9. Moſes being dead, God now ſpeaks to Joſhua about the march of the people into the land of promiſe. He had before been appointed to the office of captain-general: having firſt learnt to obey as Moſes' miniſter, he came to rule as his ſucceſſor. We may obſerve, 1. The command of God, Moſes my ſervant is dead, now therefore ariſe. Moſes had been a faithful ſervant, but death is the common lot of man; the wiſe man dieth as the fool. By removing from them this moſt uſeful miniſter, God will call them off from dependance on, and attachment to men. Joſhua muſt ariſe, and though conſcious of great inferiority of abilities, yet at God's command he may comfortably bly addreſs himſelf to the work; he who ſends will ſtrengthen him. Note, (1.) It is a comfort to the people of God, that though miniſters die, Jeſus their Lord for ever lives to provide for and direct them. (2.) Thoſe whom God calls to ſucceed eminent miniſters, though they feel their own inſufficiency, muſt not be diſcouraged, but truſt upon his grace and ſtrength who gives the miſſion. 2. The work enjoined him, to paſs Jordan, and to poſſeſs the land of Canaan. An arduous taſk! how ſhall he croſs this deep river, without bridge or pontoons, eſpecially now when overflowing its banks? and how poſſeſs a land, where all the inhabitants are mighty? here he muſt truſt upon God: if he commands, he will make the way plain and eaſy. Note, Divine faith overlooks the greateſt difficulties. They can do all things, who have Chriſt ſtrengthening them. 3. The promiſes made to him for his encouragement, [1.] The gift of the land is confirmed to the children of Iſrael. It was their own, as certainly as if they were in poſſeſſion. Note, The heavenly inheritance is as ſure to the heirs of promiſe, as if they were actually entered into it. The bounds are wide and extended, and had they been faithful to God, he had not ſuffered a tittle to have been unfulfilled: if they never occupied the whole, they muſt blame their own unbelief and diſobedience. Note, The glorious inheritance above reſts upon no uncertain conditions to be performed by us, but is ſecured by the perfect obedience of our divine Lord. [2.] God aſſures him, that his never-failing preſence and bleſſing ſhall be with him, as they had been with Moſes; and the conſequence of theſe muſt be victory. He ſhall tread on the necks of his enemies, and divide the land, to be poſſeſſed in peace by the tribes of Iſrael. Note, (1.) They who have God's preſence with them, may chearfully and confidently go forth againſt a hoſt of enemies. (2.) If God promiſes, he will never leave nor forſake us; it becomes us never to diſhonour him by our unbelieving fears. (3.) Victory over all the powers of evil is obtained for us, by our divine Joſhua, and we may triumph already in our glorious head over ſin, and death, and hell, as vanquiſhed enemies. 4. God gives him a repeated charge, (1.) To be obſervant of God's commandments, both by a perſonal obedience to them himſelf, and by diligent care to ſee them obſerved, by the army as their captain, and by the people as their ruler; and herein he might neither turn to the right hand or the left, indulge his own fancy, in explaining away any inſtitutions of God, or add ought to the ſacred rule; and in order hereunto daily, he muſt read in this holy book, make it the ſubject of frequent meditation, and converſe about the great things therein written, for his own and others improvement and edification. Note, No man ſo great as to be above his Bible; the higher our ſtation, the more we need divine direction for our conduct, becauſe our difficulties are greater, our influence more extenſive, and our ſalvation likely to be more glorious, or our damnation more aggravated. God promiſes, that proſperity and obedience ſhall go hand in hand, and ſucceſs crown all his undertakings. Note, They who are faithful to God, will aſſuredly find a bleſſing from him. (2.) He bids him be of good courage, repeats it again and again, and urges it with renewed aſſurances, that he would be with him: and need there was of ſuch encouragement, though his courage had been tried and known, for his difficulties were now greater than ever. His own inſufficiency for ſuch an enterprize, the people's well-known rebellious ſpirit, his enemies power and numbers might ſhake the moſt confirmed conſtancy; but fear is baniſhed, whilſt he who commands, inſpires him with ſtrength and courage irreſiſtible. Note, (1.) They who are ſtrongeſt, have need of daily ſupport and enouragement from God, or their ſtrength would quickly prove but weakneſs. (2.) When we go forth to fight the Lord's battles, as miniſters, we ſhould take with us that encouraging promiſe, Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world. (3.) When God is pleaſed to work, none ſhall lett it: the mountains of difficulty before our divine Zerubbabel ſhall become a plain.

10. ¶ Then Joſhua commanded the officers of the people, ſaying, 11. Paſs through the hoſt, and command the people, ſaying, Prepare you victuals; for [n] within three days ye ſhall paſs over this Jordan, to go in to poſſeſs the land which the LORD your God giveth you to poſſeſs it. 12. ¶ And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manaſſeh, ſpake Joſhua, ſaying, 13. Remember [o] the word which Moſes the ſervant of the LORD commanded you, ſaying, The LORD your God hath given you reſt, and hath given you this land: 14. Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle ſhall remain in the land which Moſes gave you on this ſide Jordan; but ye ſhall paſs before your brethren † armed, all the mighty men of valour, and help them: 15. Until the LORD have given your brethren reſt, as he hath given you, and they alſo have poſſeſſed the land which the LORD your God giveth them: [p] then ye ſhall return unto the land of your poſſeſſion, and enjoy it, which Moſes the LORD's ſervant gave you on this ſide Jordan toward the ſun-riſing.

v. 10—15. No ſooner hath God done commanding, than Joſhua, as a faithful ſervant, begins obeying. 1. He iſſues forth orders to prepare for the march. Manna they had for bread, but as they were now in a land where cattle abounded, they might provide meat for their hoſts, as on the firſt news of invaſion, the enemy would probably remove their cattle to diſtant places. Proclamation is made, that within three days they ſhould paſs over Jordan, and poſſeſs the land which Joſhua ſpeaks of with the fulleſt confidence, and in ſo doing, could not but greatly encourage them. This proclamation ſeems to have been iſſued after the thirty days mourning was ended, and juſt at, or immediately after the return of the ſpies mentioned Chap. II. Note, We ought to ſpeak confidently of the fulfilment of God's promiſes, that by our own faith we may ſtrengthen our brethren. 2. The two tribes and half, though they had their ſettlement on that ſide Jordan, muſt, according to agreement, paſs over before their brethren. They muſt not quit them, till they were comfortably ſettled alſo. Note, The intereſts of God's Iſrael muſt be made our own, and we muſt be ready to ſhare their warfare, and to ſeek their reſt as our own.

16. ¶ And they anſwered Joſhua, ſaying, All that thou commandeſt us, we will do, and whitherſoever thou ſendeſt us, we will go. 17. According as we hearkened unto Moſes in all things, ſo will we hearken unto thee: only the LORD thy God be with thee, as he was with Moſes. 18. Whoſoever he be that doth rebel againſt thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words, in all that thou commandeſt him, he ſhall be put to death: only be ſtrong and of a good courage.

v. 16—18. The heads of theſe tribes readily acknowledge their obligations, and profeſs their willingneſs to go with their brethren, and be obedient to him as they had been to Moſes, to go and do whatſoever he ſhould command them. Note, They who have taken the Lord Jeſus for their maſter, will yield a ready and willing obedience to his word, and ſubmiſſion to his providences. They add alſo, 1. An earneſt prayer for his ſucceſs, and a profeſſion of their truſt, that God would be with him, as he was with Moſes. Note, (1.) Miniſters and magiſtrates ſhould have continually an intereſt in our prayers. Their bleſſing is in effect our own. (2.) The mercy, which faith aſſures us we ſhall obtain, we are not the leſs bound to pray for. 2. They make an act, that rebellion againſt his commands ſhould be death. The man who refuſed to go over Jordan with his brethren, deſerved not to live to enjoy his own poſſeſſions. Accordingly forty thouſand of them, being as many as Joſhua choſe, or were needed, went over to war; the reſt ſtaying at his command, to guard their conqueſts. 3. They encourage him to lead the way, and therein profeſs their chearfulneſs to follow him as to certain victory. Note, It is a great encouragement to miniſters to ſee the people hearty, and ſtrengthening their hands in their work and labours.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter we have an account of the ſpies Joſhua ſent, ver. 1. 2. How Rahab received and protected them, ver. 2—7. 3. The account ſhe gave them of the preſent poſture of Jericho, ver. 8—11. 4. The bargain ſhe made with them for the ſecurity of herſelf and her relations, ver. 12—21. 5. Their ſafe return to Joſhua, and the account they gave him of their expedition, ver. 22—24.

1. AND Joſhua the ſon of Nun † ſent [a] out of Shittim two men, to ſpy ſecretly, ſaying, Go view the land, even Jericho: and they went, and [b] came into an harlot's houſe, named [c] Rahab, and ‡ lodged there. 2. And it was told the king of Jericho, ſaying, Behold there came men in hither to night of the children of Iſrael, to ſearch out the country. 3. And the king of Jericho ſent unto Rahab, ſaying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which are entered into thine houſe: for they be come to ſearch out all the country. 4. And the woman took the two men, and hid them, and ſaid thus, There came men unto me, but I wiſt not whence they were: 5. And it came to paſs about the time of ſhutting of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went, I wot not: purſue after them quickly, for ye ſhall overtake them. 6. But [d] ſhe had brought them up to the roof of the houſe, and hid them with the ſtalks of flax, which ſhe ſhe had laid in order upon the roof. 7. And the men purſued after them the way to Jordan, unto the fords: and as ſoon as they which purſued after them were gone out, they ſhut the gate.

v. 1—7. Joſhua, as a wiſe leader, though aſſured of God's protection, uſes thoſe prudential means which might moſt rationally enſure ſucceſs. 1. He ſends out ſpies to get information concerning the eaſieſt method for his intended attack on Jericho. We muſt not tempt God by a neglect of the means, though we muſt truſt him for the ſucceſs of every enterprize. 2. The ſpies with ready obedience undertake the dangerous ſervice, and as all good ſoldiers ought to do, put their lives in their hands, croſs Jordan, ſecretly enter Jericho by night, and take up their abode at an harlot's houſe, whoſe name was Rahab. A woman whoſe conduct had juſtly deſerved to be ſtigmatized, yet who is more diſtinguiſhed by the choice of ſovereign grace among the eminent veſſels of mercy. Note, (1.) The vileſt need not deſpair; the grace of God knows no difference; it is grace abounding to the chief of ſinners. (2.) The remembrance of what we were, ſhould ſerve to affect our minds more deeply with thankfulneſs to God, for what, through grace, we are. 3. Rahab very kindly entertains and protects them. They had not entered Jericho quite unperceived. Suſpicion of their deſign had raiſed a ſearch after them, and had they not found ſo hoſpitable a friend, they were in the moſt imminent danger. But Rahab having heard and believed the report of God's promiſe to Iſrael, reſolved, at all hazards, to ſecrete them, which ſhe did under the flax, which lay on the flat roof of her houſe; and with a lie, which nothing could excuſe, betrays her country, and deceives the inquiſitors. It was by faith, we are aſſured, ſhe concealed the ſpies: an action which the Holy Ghoſt has marked as highly commendable, though there appears in the means ſhe uſed much to condemn. Learn hence, (1.) There may be true and juſtifying faith where much corruption ſtill works, and ſin in ſome inſtance prevails. (2.) The hazard ſhe herſelf ran in this concealment, ſhewed the firmneſs of her confidence in the divine promiſe to Iſrael. They who truly believe, will riſk all for God, and not count their very lives dear unto them. (3.) We muſt not haſtily caſt out, as reprobates, thoſe whom in ſome actions we cannot but condemn: they may be ſound in faith, though Satan have gained advantage in a trying time againſt them.

8. ¶ And before they were laid down, ſhe came up unto them upon the roof; 9. And ſhe ſaid unto the men, I know that the LORD hath given you the land, and that your [e] terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land † faint becauſe of you. 10. For we have heard how the LORD [f] dried up the water of the red ſea for you, when you came out of Egypt; and what you did unto the two kings of the Amorites that were on the other ſide Jordan, [g] Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly deſtroyed. 11. And as ſoon as we had heard theſe things, [h] our hearts did melt, neither ‡ did there remain any more courage in any man, becauſe of you: for [i] the LORD your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath. 12. Now therefore, I pray you, ſwear unto me by the LORD, ſince I have ſhewed you kindneſs, that ye will alſo ſhew kindneſs unto my [k] father's houſe; and give me a true token: 13. And that ye will ſave alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my ſiſters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death. 14. And the men anſwered her, Our life ‖ for yours, if ye utter not this our buſineſs. And it ſhall be when the LORD hath given us the land, that [l] we will deal kindly and truly with thee. 15. Then ſhe let them down by a cord through the window: for her houſe was upon the town-wall, and ſhe dwelt upon the wall. 16. And ſhe ſaid unto them, Get you to the mountain, leſt the purſuers meet you; and hide yourſelves there three days, until the purſuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way. 17. And the men ſaid unto her, We will be blameleſs of this thine oath which thou haſt made us ſwear. 18. Behold, when we come into the land, thou ſhalt bind this line of ſcarlet thread in the window which thou didſt let us down by: and thou ſhalt § bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's houſhold home unto thee. 19. And it ſhall be, that whoſoever ſhall go out of the doors of thy houſe into the ſtreet, his blood ſhall be upon his head, and we will be guiltleſs: and whoſoever ſhall be with thee in the houſe, [m] his blood ſhall be on our head, if any hand be upon him. 20. And if thou utter this our buſineſs, then we will be quit of thine oath which thou haſt made us to ſwear. 21. And ſhe ſaid, According unto your words, ſo be it. And ſhe ſent them away, and they departed: and ſhe bound the ſcarlet line in the window.

v. 8—21. Having happily ſucceeded in her ſtratagem on the men of Jericho, whilſt they were gone on their purſuit, Rahab comes up to her concealed gueſts; and,

1. Informs them of the dread and terror the people of the land were under, becauſe of them. The fame of God's wonders in Egypt, and in the land of Gilead and Baſhan, had gone before them, and, more than half conquered by their fears, the hearts of the Canaanites already fainted at their approach: and convinced herſelf of God's power and faithfulneſs, to give them the land, ſhe makes profeſſion of her faith, which could not but mightily conduce to ſtrengthen theirs. God had given them the land, and they had nothing more to do, than come up and poſſeſs it. Note, (1.) God can ſend his terrors to the hearts of his enemies, ſo that the boldeſt ſhall tremble with panic fear. (2.) It is a great help to confirm the faith of the weak, to hear the encouraging profeſſions of their believing brethren. (3.) Faith is a diſtinguiſhing gift of God; though all Jericho heard the ſame report, Rahab alone effectually received it. Thus where the goſpel is preached, ſometimes one, and that too perhaps the moſt unlikely perſon in the congregation, hears and believes, whilſt the reſt continue as impenitent and infidel as before.

2. Rahab engages them to afford her protection, on the approaching ruin of her country; ſhe knew the certain deſtruction, and was ſollicitous to provide againſt it. With a tender concern for her relations, ſhe would ſecure them with herſelf, and requeſts them, by an oath, to enſure their lives with her own, as a juſt recompence for her care of them. Note, (1.) Faith which foreſees the ruin of the ungodly, will urge us to ſave ourſelves from among them. (2.) They who have a concern about their own ſouls, cannot but be exceedingly ſollicitous for thoſe of their own houſe. (3.) The lives that are jeoparded for Chriſt's ſervice, ſhall be ſecured by his care.

3. They readily conſent to her requeſt, and confirm it by an oath, to take the ſame care of her life as their own, which indeed they owed to her concealment, to deal kindly with her beyond her requeſts, and to ſee that no violence ſhould be offered to any under her roof; with this proviſo, that ſhe complied with the inſtructions which they gave her, which were to conceal the whole of what had paſſed; to tie the ſcarlet cord by which they were let down, in her window, as a mark upon her houſe; and to ſuffer none within her doors to go out, leaſt they ſhould fall in the promiſcuous ſlaughter. Note, (1.) When we ſwear, it muſt be with caution, inſerting every needful proviſo, leaſt afterwards we ſhould be enſnared by the words of our lips. (2.) The blood of Chriſt upon the believer's heart, is as this ſcarlet cord upon Rahab's houſe, a protection from the ſword of the deſtroyer. (3.) They muſt not mingle with the world which lieth in wickedneſs, who would not be condemned with it.

4. Being let down by the wall, and following the advice ſhe gave them, after hiding themſelves three days in the mountains till their purſuers were returned, the ſpies haſten to the camp, and Rahab binds the cord in the window, that ſhe might be ready for the approaching event. Note, (1.) Prudent means are to be uſed for our ſafety, when we are moſt truly truſting our all with God. (2.) We muſt make no delay to get the blood of ſprinkling on our conſcience, that ſo we may never be ſurprized unawares by death or danger.

22. And they went and came unto the mountain, and abode there three days, until the purſuers were returned. And the purſuers ſought them throughout all the way, but found them not. 23. ¶ So the two men returned, and deſcended from the mountain, and paſſed over, and came to Joſhua the ſon of Nun, and told him all things that befel them; 24. And they ſaid unto Joſhua, Truly the LORD hath delivered into our hands all the land; for even all the inhabitants of the country do † faint becauſe of us.

† Heb. Melt.

v. 22—24. The ſpies being returned in ſafety, make a faithful report of their expedition, the happy incident of Rahab's kindneſs, and the dread and terror of the people, aſſuredly gathering from thence the conqueſt of the land, and encouraging their brethren to go up without delay. Note, (1.) The fears of ſinners are the preſages of their approaching ruin. (2.) They may comfortably and confidently go up againſt their ſpiritual enemies, who have God's promiſes of victory to encourage them.

CHAP. III.

This chapter, 1. opens with the march of Iſrael to the banks of Jordan, ver. 1. 2. After three days reſt, proclamation is made to the

the people, to follow the prieſts bearing the ark, ver. 2—6. 3. God promiſes to magnify Joſhua, ver. 7, 8. 4. The people are informed of what God is about to do for them, ver. 9—13. 5. The event correſponds thereunto, ver. 14—17.

1. AND Joſhua roſe early in the morning, and they removed [a] from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Iſrael, and lodged there before they paſſed over. 2. And it came to paſs [b] after three days, that the officers went through the hoſt; 3. And they commanded the people, ſaying, [c] when ye ſee the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, [d] and the prieſts the Levites bearing it, then ye ſhall remove from your place, and go after it. 4. Yet there ſhall be a ſpace between you and it, about two thouſand cubits by meaſure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye muſt go: for ye have not paſſed this way † heretofore. 5. And Joſhua ſaid unto the people, [e] Sanctify yourſelves: for to-morrow the LORD will do wonders among you. 6. And Joſhua ſpake unto the prieſts, ſaying, [f] Take up the ark of the covenant, and paſs over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

v. 1—6. All things being now ready for their march, they advance to the banks of Jordan. Joſhua very early in the morning, as a diligent commander, ariſes to his work. They who have buſineſs that calls them, muſt not lie ſlumbering on their beds. Proclamation is now made through the hoſts, to obſerve the following orders: To follow the ark as their guide, the cloud having probably departed from them at Moſes' death: the prieſts were to bear it, and lead the way, and they at an humble diſtance muſt go after it; God undertaking to find them a path that had never been paſſed before, and to lead them ſafely through. Note, (1.) They who follow the word of God as their guide, will walk in the right way. (2.) The prieſts who hold forth this word, muſt not only go before the people in their miniſtrations of it, but lead them alſo by their examples. (3.) Though they who bear the ark, are more expoſed than others, they need not fear, their charge ſhall be their protection. (4.) Death is a path untrod, but if God's preſence and promiſes be with us, we ſhall not fear, theſe will guide and guard us ſafely through the dark valley. 2. They are commanded to ſanctify themſelves, to cleanſe themſelves from all ceremonial defilement, and by exerciſes of devotion, and purification of their hearts from moral pollutions, prepare for the mercies God was ready to ſhew them, and the wonders he was about to work on their behalf. Note, They who would paſs the ſtream of death comfortably, muſt have no unrepented ſin upon their conſcience: in order to ſee God, we muſt be pure in heart. 3. Joſhua gives the order to the prieſts to take up the ark of the covenant, and they with readineſs obey him, and march before the people to the brink of the river. Note, They who are ſure they are in the way of duty, will follow God with comfort and confidence, though inſurmountable difficulties in human eſtimation ſeem to obſtruct their paſſage.

7. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the ſight of all Iſrael, that they may know that [g] as I was with Moſes, ſo I will be with thee. 8. And thou ſhalt command the prieſts that bear the ark of the covenant, ſaying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye ſhall ſtand ſtill in Jordan. 9. ¶ And Joſhua ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, Come hither, and hear the words of the LORD your God. 10. And Joſhua ſaid, Hereby ye ſhall know that the living God is among you, and that he will without fail drive out from before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgaſhites, and the Amorites, and the Jebuſites. 11. Behold, the ark of the covenant of [h] the Lord of all the earth, paſſeth over before you into Jordan. 12. Now therefore take ye twelve men out of the tribes of Iſrael, out of every tribe a man. 13. And it ſhall come to paſs, as ſoon as the ſoles of the feet of the prieſts that bear the ark of the LORD, the Lord of all the earth, ſhall reſt in the waters of Jordan, that the waters of Jordan ſhall be cut off from the waters that come down from above: and they [i] ſhall ſtand upon an heap.

v. 7—13. God being now about to bring his people into the land of promiſe, under their new general, He is pleaſed,

1. To put a mark of diſtinguiſhed honour upon him, by ſpeaking to him from the mercy-ſeat, before the ark removed, aſſuring him publickly of his preſence with him at the banks of Jordan, as diſtinguiſhably as it had been with Moſes, at the red ſea; and the prieſts themſelves are to be under his direction, and receive their orders from him. Note, (1.) Thoſe who honour God, he will honour. (2.) It was at Bethabara, the place where Joſhua paſſed, that Jeſus was baptized, and entered upon his miniſtry, of bringing God's Iſrael to their reſt in glory. (3.) It is the duty of magiſtrates to ſtir up miniſters to their work, as it ſhould be their delight to be ready to execute every plan propoſed for the good of immortal ſouls.

2. Joſhua communicates to the people God's deſign of dividing the waters of Jordan, and from ſuch a miraculous inſtance of God's favour to them, infers the certain victory which they ſhould gain over all their enemies. He who went before them down into Jordan, would go up before them utterly to expel the nations of Canaan; and when they had ſeen with their eyes the waters dried up, they might no more doubt their poſſeſſing the land whither they were thus led. Note, The wondrous preſervations, and the repeated mercies every believer is daily receiving from God, ſhould be improved as a comfortable ground of confidence in futurity. He who leads us thro' the dangers of to-day, will preſerve us amidſt the trials of to-morrow; and as we have found him our ſupport in life, we ſhall alſo find him our ſtrength and comfort in death.

3. Twelve men are ſelected from the ſeveral tribes, ready to receive the farther orders which ſhould be iſſued.

14. ¶ And it came to paſs when the people removed from their tents, to paſs over Jordan, and the prieſts bearing [k] the ark of the covenant before the people; 15. And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the prieſts that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water (for [l] Jordan overfloweth all his banks [m] all the time of harveſt.) 16. That the waters which came down from above, ſtood and roſe up upon an heap very far from the city Adam, that is beſide [n] Zaretan: and thoſe that came down [o] toward the ſea of the plain, even [p] the ſalt-ſea, failed, and were cut off: and the people paſſed over right againſt Jericho. 17. And the prieſts that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, ſtood firm on dry ground in the midſt of Jordan, and all the Iſraelites paſſed over on dry ground, until all the people were paſſed clean over Jordan.

v. 14—17. Now was the glorious power of God to be magnified for his Iſrael. Advancing under his orders, though no way appeared, the prieſts reached the river's bank, much wider and deeper than uſual, owing to the melting of the ſnow from mount Lebanon, in the month of Niſan, anſwering to part of March and April, when their barley harveſt began. But no ſooner had their feet touched the waters, than they fled before them; part rolled backward to their fountain, part ran down into the lake of Sodom, and left a ſpace of 16 or 18 miles dry, for the ranſomed of the Lord to paſs over. Note, (1.) The greatneſs of our difficulties ſhall only the more magnify the power of God, in overcoming them for us. (2.) When we have an intereſt in a covenant God, and follow in ſimplicity the ark Chriſt, we ſhall find the paſſage of death as eaſy, as to Iſrael it was to paſs through the bed of the river, when the waters were dried up.—To aſſure the people of the ſafety of the paſſage, God's ark ſtands in the midſt till all are paſſed over: to encourage them to venture through, God's prieſts, as they entered firſt, ſtay till the laſt man has gained the oppoſite ſhore. Note, (1.) God's miniſters muſt be the firſt to brave danger, and the laſt to regard their own ſafety. (2.) Where God's covenant in Chriſt is eſtabliſhed, no ſtreams of wrath can overwhelm the ſoul. The place of their paſſage was oppoſite to Jericho, and not a man was loſt by the way. It could not but ſtrike terror and confuſion into their enemies, to ſee ſuch a miracle; it could not fail to inſpire themſelves with confidence of ſucceſs. What city could ſtand before thoſe, to whom the very elements miniſtered, and whom the omnipotent God led as their captain. Note, Nothing can withſtand the people of God in their paſſage to glory: in vain the world, or ſin, or death, obſtruct the way, God will cleave before them the deep waters, till the laſt believer is paſſed over, and not one ſoul ſhall be loſt of all whom Jeſus hath redeemed with his precious blood.

1. AND it came to paſs when all the people were clean paſſed [a] over Jordan, that the LORD ſpake unto [b] Joſhua, ſaying, 2. Take you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man, 3. And command you them, ſaying, Take you hence, out of the midſt of Jordan, out of the place where the prieſts feet ſtood firm, twelve ſtones, and ye ſhall carry them over with you, and leave them in [c] the lodging-place where you ſhall lodge this night. 4. Then Joſhua called the twelve men, whom he had prepared of the children of Iſrael, out of every tribe a man. 5. And Joſhua ſaid unto them, Paſs over before the ark of the LORD your God into the midſt of Jordan, and take ye up every man of you a ſtone upon his ſhoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Iſrael: 6. That this may be a ſign among you, that when your children aſk their fathers † in time to come, ſaying, What mean you by theſe ſtones? 7. Then ye ſhall anſwer them, That [d] the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, when it paſſed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and theſe ſtones ſhall be for a memorial unto the children of Iſrael for ever. 8. And the children of Iſrael did ſo as Joſhua commanded, and took up twelve ſtones out of the midſt of Jordan, as the LORD ſpake unto Joſhua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Iſrael, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there. 9. And Joſhua ſet up twelve ſtones in the midſt of Jordan, in the place where the feet of the prieſts which bare the ark of the covenant ſtood: and they are there unto this day.

v. 1—9. Joſhua at God's command, after all the people were paſſed over, appoints twelve men, one out of each tribe, to return to the midſt of the river, and from the place where the prieſts feet reſted, to bring up twelve large ſtones, to be erected in the ſtation where they ſhould lodge at night, for a ſtanding memorial to ſucceeding generations, of this ſtupendous tranſaction. Note, (1.) It is good to preſerve the remembrance of extraordinary mercies, that the lateſt poſterity who inherit our bleſſings, may remember and praiſe the great author of them. (2.) As not the feebleſt Iſraelite periſhed in the paſſage, no more ſhall the weakeſt believer be left behind in a reſurrection-day, he ſhall come up with the tribes of the Lord, and enter with them into his everlaſting reſt.

Twelve other ſtones are alſo ſet up by Joſhua in the midſt of Jordan, piled up ſo as to be viſible, and ſtand as a counterpart to the monument, which ſhould be erected in Gilgal, both deſigned for the ſame purpoſe, to awaken the enquiries of the riſing generations, and to preſerve the tradition of this miraculous paſſage.

10. ¶ For the prieſts which bare the ark, ſtood in the midſt of Jordan, until every thing was finiſhed that the LORD commanded Joſhua to ſpeak unto the people, according to all that Moſes commanded Joſhua: and the people haſted and paſſed over. 11. And it came to paſs when all the people were clean paſſed over, that the ark of the LORD paſſed over, and the prieſts in the preſence of the people. 12. And [e] the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half the tribe of Manaſſeh, paſſed over armed before the children of Iſrael, as Moſes ſpake unto them: 13. About forty thouſand ‡ prepared for war, paſſed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho. 14. ¶ On that day the LORD [f] magnified Joſhua in the ſight of all Iſrael, and they feared him, as they feared Moſes, all the days of his life. 15. And the LORD ſpake unto Joſhua, ſaying, 16. Command the prieſts that bear [g] the ark of the teſtimony, that they come up out of Jordan. 17. Joſhua therefore commanded the prieſts, ſaying, Come ye up out of Jordan. 18. And it came to paſs when the prieſts, that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, were come up out of the mids of Jordan, and the ſoles of the prieſts feet were ‖ lift up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, [h] and § flowed over all his banks, as they did before. 19. ¶ And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the firſt month, and encamped in [i] Gilgal, in the eaſt-border of Jericho.

v. 10—19. In eagerneſs to reach the borders of this long looked for Canaan, the people in haſte paſs over. The two tribes and half lead the van; that is to ſay, a ſelect body of 40,000 men, as many as Joſhua choſe, the reſt being left at home, to guard the conquered country: and when all the people were paſſed in ſafety, the prieſts, at Joſhua's command, laſt of all aſcended from the river's bed, with the ark of God; which was no ſooner out of the channel than the waters, no longer reſtrained by the preſence and power of God, returned to their wonted courſe, and overflowed as uſual their banks. Thus was this paſſage accompliſhed, according to the commandment of the Lord, which Joſhua, attentive to Moſes's inſtructions, exactly followed; and herein he gained to himſelf immortal honour, God magnifying him in the ſight of the people, and cauſing them henceforth to reverence and reſpect him as much as they had reſpected Moſes himſelf. Juſt forty years were now elapſed ſince their departure from Egypt, all but five days, during which they halted at Gilgal, to prepare for and keep the paſſover. From hence we may learn, 1. That they who have heaven in their eye, cannot but be eager to enter that happy land. 2. They who are called out to God's work and ſervice, muſt chearfully leave all behind them. 3. Though we may wait long in the midſt of danger, as the prieſts did in Jordan, yet, if we have God's preſence with us, we need not be weary, nor doubt but we ſhall ſafely land at laſt. 4. Though the years of our pilgrimage be many, and full of ſorrow, it is a comfort they have an appointed end; and when we enter heaven the feaſt is prepared, and we ſhall celebrate our paſſover with ſongs of never-ending praiſe.

20. ¶ And thoſe twelve ſtones which they took out of Jordan, did Joſhua pitch in Gilgal. 21 And he ſpake unto the children of Iſrael, ſaying, When your children ſhall aſk their fathers † in time to come, ſaying, What mean theſe ſtones? 22. Then ye ſhall let your children know, ſaying, Iſrael came over this Jordan on dry land. 23. For the LORD your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were paſſed over, as the LORD your God did to the [k] Red-ſea, which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over: 24. That all the people of the earth might know the hand of the LORD, that it is mighty: that ye might [l] fear the LORD your God for ever.

v. 20—24. The twelve ſtones taken out of Jordan are pitched in Gilgal, either erected as a pillar or laid in rows, as a monumental remembrancer of their late aſtoniſhing paſſage. As this would no doubt awaken the enquiries of the riſing generation, Joſhua directs them how and what to anſwer. 1. It was a memorial of their paſſage over Jordan on dry land. 2. They muſt inform their children that this was a ſecond miracle; the like divine power having been exerciſed at the Red-ſea. 3. That the deſign of all theſe miracles and monuments, was to glorify God, and make his almighty power to appear to all the people of the earth. 4. Particularly with regard to them, they were intended to engage their fear and obedience to this glorious God all their days. Note, (1.) It is good for young people to be inquiſitive, where inſtruction may be learnt. (2.) Parents ſhould take delight to teach their children the wondrous mercies of a gracious God. (3.) The deſign of God, in all his works and ways, is to exalt his own greatneſs and glory. (4.) The beſt inſtruction which children can receive is, to fear God for ever; happy they who are thus brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

cauſe why Joſhua did circumciſe: all the people that came out of Egypt, that were males, even all the men of war, [e] died in the wilderneſs by the way, after they came out of Egypt. 5. Now all the people that came out, were circumciſed; but all the people that were [f] born in the wilderneſs by the way, as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumciſed. 6. For the children of Iſrael walked forty years in the wilderneſs, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were conſumed, becauſe they obeyed not the voice of the LORD; unto whom [g] the LORD ſware that he would not ſhew them the land which the LORD ſware unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey. 7. And their children, whom [h] he raiſed up in their ſtead, them Joſhua circumciſed; for they were [i] uncircumciſed, becauſe they had not circumciſed them by the way. 8. And it came to paſs, when they had done circumciſing all the people, that they abode in their places in the camp, till they were whole. 9. And the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, This day have I rolled away [k] the reproach of Egypt [l] from off you: wherefore the name of the place is called ‡ Gilgal unto this day.

v. 1—9. Safely arrived at laſt within the borders of the promiſed land, the divided waters of Jordan cloſe, and nothing remains, but to caſt out the inhabitants, and poſſeſs the country. In order to which we are told, 1. What terror and diſmay ſeized on the neighbouring kings. Who can ſtand before thoſe, from whoſe preſence the ſwellings of affrighted Jordan retire and open a ſafe way for their march? Their hearts melted therefore like wax, and they gave themſelves up for loſt. Note, God often makes his enemies know how vain it is to contend with him; and by his ſecret terrors, even in the midſt of life and health, brings them into the pangs of death. 2. The people halted at their firſt ſtation, and Joſhua, at the divine command, iſſues orders for a general circumciſion of the people. It ſeems, during their march through the wilderneſs, this rite had been neglected, either becauſe of the inconvenience it muſt have been attended with, during their frequent marches, or perhaps forbidden them as a mark of God's diſpleaſure. The ſeal of the covenant being with-held, they might be admoniſhed of their forfeiture of the bleſſings of it, through their unbelief and murmuring. But now, when God's goodneſs has triumphed over their perverſeneſs, on admitting them into the land, he commands them to receive the ſeal of the covenant in token of the fulfilment of the promiſes made to Abraham; and whilſt their enemies were in terrors, they might reſt in ſafety from fear of being attacked, till they were recovered. 3. The people readily conſent; they had ſeen ſo much of God's interpoſition, that they were not afraid of their enemies, and were happy to lay themſelves under the bonds of the covenant, that with God's promiſes thus ſealed to them, they might go forth more confidently to vanquiſh their foes. All therefore who were born in the wilderneſs were circumciſed together, the very day they arrived at their firſt ſtation, or the day following. The operation was performed with ſharp knives, or, as the original imports, knives of ſtones, which were antiently in uſe; and it is called a ſecond circumciſion, not that it was ever repeated to the ſame perſons, but in reference either to the firſt inſtitution of the ordinance, which now, on entring the promiſed land, was ſo ſolemnly repeated; or, as others conjecture, with reſpect to a former general circumciſion, during the three days darkneſs in Egypt; becauſe, in their ſtate of hard ſervitude and perſecution, it had probably been neglected. As any perſon might circumciſe, and all thoſe that came out of Egypt, under twenty years of age, were moſt of them alive, the work divided into ſo many hands was ſoon performed; and the place afterwards retained the name of the tranſaction, it was called the hill of the Foreſkins, becauſe they covered them up with earth in an heap, and Gilgal, becauſe their reproach was now taken away. They were owned of God, as his covenant children, and no longer to be branded as wanderers in a wilderneſs, but now are entered as poſſeſſors into the long-expected inheritance. Note, (1.) The reproaches caſt on God's people ſhall ſhortly be wiped away, and confuſion cover their enemies. (2.) The Iſrael of God muſt circumciſe the foreſkin of their heart, and cut off every corrupt and vile affection. (3.) Nothing can ſo infallibly aſſure us of inheriting the kingdom of glory, as the experience of the mortification of ſin in our ſouls, through the work of our divine Joſhua.

10. ¶ And the children of Iſrael encamped in Gilgal, and kept [m] the paſſover on the fourteenth day of the month, at even, in the plains of Jericho. 11. And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the paſſover unleavened cakes, and parched corn in the ſelf-ſame day. 12. ¶ And [n] the manna ceaſed on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land, neither had the children of Iſrael manna any more, but they did eat of [o] the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.

[n] Rev. vii. 16, 17.

v. 10—12. The people being prepared by circumciſion, might now partake of the other grand ordinance of God; accordingly we find, before they entered upon action, they kept the paſſover as preſcribed, on the fourteenth day of the month, exactly forty years from their departure from Egypt. From that day they began to eat the old corn of the land, which they had ſeized probably in the villages which the people deſerted on their approach; with this they kept the feaſt of unleavened bread, offering the firſt-fruits, which were now ripe, of that part of the adjacent fields of which they had taken poſſeſſion; and now, as they had no more need of the manna, it ceaſed; God herein ſhewing them it was not an ordinary proviſion, but a daily miracle, and no longer to be expected, when they might be ſupplied in an ordinary way. Note, (1.) They who would go forth with courage to fight the Lord's battles, ſhould firſt ſolemnly devote themſelves to him, and act faith upon him in the uſe of his ſacraments. (2.) We muſt not expect to be fed by miracle, when God puts ordinary means into our hand. (3.) Sweet and ſtrengthening as manna are the ordinances of grace now to the militant believer, but when they have anſwered their deſign they will ceaſe; when we come to the preſence of God, and the poſſeſſion of glory, prayer, the word, and ſacraments, will be no longer needful.

13. ¶ And it came to paſs when Joſhua was by Jericho, that he [p] lift up his eyes, and looked, and behold there ſtood [q] a man over againſt him with his ſword drawn in his hand: and Joſhua went unto him, and ſaid unto him, Art thou for us, or for our adverſaries? 14. And he ſaid, Nay, but [r] as † captain of the hoſt of the LORD am I now come. And Joſhua [s] fell on his face to the earth, and did worſhip, and ſaid unto him, [t] What ſaith my LORD unto his ſervant? 15. And the captain of the LORD's hoſt ſaid unto Joſhua, [u] Looſe thy ſhoe from off thy foot, for the place whereon thou ſtandeſt, is ‡ holy: and Joſhua did ſo.

v. 13—15. When Joſhua and the people had been thus waiting upon God, he comes to manifeſt himſelf to them for their encouragement. They who draw near to God, will ever find God near to hear and help them; Joſhua ſeems to have retired, either to reconnoitre the walls, in order to form an attack on Jericho, or to pray for divine direction; and, whilſt in thought involved his eyes were turned to the earth, a majeſtic appearance awakens his notice, and on a ſudden a man with a ſword drawn ſtands before him. This ſeems to be no other than the incarnate word, that in the fulneſs of time ſhould come, who now appeared in an human form, to encourage his people by his preſence and protection. Note, If Jeſus draws the ſword to defend us, not all the powers of ſin, death or hell ſhall be able to hurt us. Joſhua, as a valiant leader, boldly advances, and bids him declare whether he came as friend or foe, ready to hazard his life if needful, and fearleſs of the drawn ſword. Note, We need courage when we are fighting for God, and eſpecially not to fear the faces of men. He does not diſdain to anſwer the queſtion, but quickly reſolves him concerning his character and deſign. As captain of the Lord's hoſts he is come, to guide them with his counſel, and ſtrengthen them with his power. And what can ſtand before thoſe who fight under ſuch a leader? Joſhua now plainly perceived the preſence of the deity: the ſame Jehovah that appeared to Abraham as a traveller, now comes as a man of war, and therefore at his feet he falls, to make ſupplication before him, and receive his orders from him. It is no diſparagement to the greateſt general to be found often on his knees before the God of hoſts, and there is no ſurer way to obtain the necks of his enemies. To impreſs his mind with deeper reverence and awe, and to intimate to him that it was the ſame divine Majeſty which ſpake to Moſes in the buſh, he commands him to looſe his ſhoe, as a mark of reſpect and obedience, which he inſtantly performs, and ſtands attentive to the commands which the Lord ſhould be pleaſed to enjoin him. Note, (1.) Chriſt is the captain of our ſalvation, fully qualified to ſubdue all our ſpiritual enemies, and ever ſtanding ready to help and defend all who fly to him for ſuccour. (2.) If we take him for our Lord, we muſt ſhew ourſelves his ſervants, by a ready obedience to his will and pleaſure.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter we have, 1. The directions and aſſurances which the captain of the Lord's hoſt gave Joſhua concerning Jericho, ver. 1—5. 2. The trial of the people's obedience in walking round the city city ſix days, ver. 6—14. 3. The wonderful delivery of it into their hands the ſeventh day, with a ſolemn charge to them to uſe it as a devoted thing, ver. 15—21. and ver. 24. 4. The preſervation of Rahab and her relations, ver. 22, 23, 25. 5. A curſe pronounced upon the man that ſhould dare to rebuild this city, ver. 26, 27. An abſtract of this ſtory we find among the trophies of faith, Heb. xi. 30. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compaſſed about ſeven days.

1. NOW Jericho † was ſtraitly ſhut up, [a] becauſe of the children of Iſrael: none went out, and none came in. 2. And [b] the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, See, [c] I have given into thine hand Jericho, and [d] the king thereof, and the mighty men of valour. 3. And ye ſhall [e] compaſs the city, all ye men of war, and go round about the city once: thus ſhalt thou do ſix days. 4. And ſeven prieſts ſhall bear before the ark ſeven trumpets of [f] rams horns: and the ſeventh day ye ſhall compaſs the city [g] ſeven times, and the prieſts ſhall [h] blow with the trumpets. 5. And it ſhall come to paſs, that when they make a long blaſt with the rams horn, and when ye hear the ſound of the trumpet, all the people ſhall [i] ſhout with a great ſhout: and the wall of the city ſhall fall down ‡ flat, and the people ſhall aſcend up every man ſtraight before him.

v. 1—5. Jericho was now cloſe beſieged without, and cloſe ſhut up and guarded within, by the ſtrength of the fortifications and the number of the inhabitants; but the captain of the Lord's hoſts aſſures Joſhua the place was his own: and, to try the obedience of the people, as well as to ſpread the terror of ſuch a ſcene wide through the land, he iſſues a ſtrange order. No military attack need be made, no engines drawn to the walls, but only the ark of God be carried in ſolemn proceſſion ſix days round the city, by the prieſts, blowing with rams horns, accompanied by all the people; on the ſeventh day the city muſt be compaſſed ſeven times, when at the ſignal given of a long blaſt of the trumpets, the people muſt ſhout together, and the walls ſhall fall down flat, ſo that every man may go up inſtantly, and ſmite the inhabitants, ſurpriſed and defenceleſs. Note, Though the ſinner's heart be walled and barred as faſt as Jericho, the word of God, ſpoken by his miniſters, hath mighty power to caſt down the ſtrong-holds of Satan; and if the inſtruments ſeem weak as theſe rams horns, that divine power is with them, which nothing can reſiſt.

6. ¶ And Joſhua the ſon of Nun called the prieſts, and ſaid unto them, Take up the ark of the covenant, and let ſeven [k] prieſts bear ſeven trumpets of rams horns before the ark of the LORD. 7. And he ſaid unto the people, Paſs on, and compaſs the city, and let [l] him that is armed paſs on before the ark of the LORD. 8. ¶ And it came to paſs when Joſhua had ſpoken unto the people, that the ſeven prieſts bearing the ſeven trumpets of rams horns, paſſed on [m] before the LORD, and [n] blew with the trumpets: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD followed them. 9. ¶ And the armed men went before the prieſts that blew with the trumpets, and the † rereward came after the ark, the prieſts going on, and blowing with the trumpets. 10. And Joſhua had commanded the people, ſaying, Ye ſhall not ſhout, nor make any noiſe with your voice, neither ſhall any word proceed out of your mouth, until [o] the day I bid you ſhout, then ſhall ye ſhout. 11. So the ark of the LORD compaſſed the city, going about it once: and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp. 12. ¶ And Joſhua [p] roſe early in the morning, and the prieſts took up the ark of the LORD. 13. And [q] ſeven prieſts bearing ſeven trumpets of rams horns before the ark of the LORD, went on [r] continually, and blew with the trumpets: and the armed men went before them, but the rereward came after the ark of the LORD, the prieſts going on, and blowing with the trumpets. 14. And the ſecond day they compaſſed the city once, and returned into the camp: ſo they did ſix days. 15. And it came to paſs on the ſeventh day, that they roſe early about the dawning of the day, and compaſſed the city after the ſame manner ſeven times: only on that day they compaſſed the city ſeven times.

v. 6—15. Joſhua heſitates not at the ſtrange order, but inſtantly haſtens in faith to put it in execution, and all the people readily obey him. The prieſts take up the ark, the armed hoſts go before to prepare the way, the people follow, moving in ſolemn ſilence, whilſt nothing is heard but the blaſts of the trumpet, terrible to their enemies, and inſpiring Iſrael's armies with martial ardor. Six days they repeat the journey, the ſeventh morning dawns, they ariſe and ſeven times ſurround the walls, and by this time perhaps the men of Jericho were lulled into ſecurity, little apprehenſive of any conſequences which could endanger them from ſuch a procedure: but when ſinners are moſt ſecure, then judgment overtakes them, as ſorrow comes upon a woman in travail. Note, (1.) We muſt patiently perſevere in the uſe of the means of grace, though we ſee not their immediate good effect. (2.) As one of theſe days was a ſabbath, perhaps the laſt, it teaches us, that when we are called of God to labour on that day for his glory, it is no breach of the holy reſt. (3.) Wherever the ark goes, and the word of God leads, we muſt follow it. (4.) They who do ſo will ſurely ſpeed at laſt, and ſee the great ſalvation of God.

16. And it came to paſs at the ſeventh time, when the prieſts blew with the trumpets, Joſhua ſaid unto the people, Shout, for the LORD hath given you the city. 17. ¶ And the city ſhall be † accurſed, even it and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot ſhall live, ſhe and all that are with her in the houſe, becauſe [s] ſhe hid the meſſengers that we ſent. 18. And you in any wiſe keep yourſelves from the accurſed thing, leſt ye make yourſelves accurſed when ye take of the accurſed thing, and make the camp of Iſrael a curſe, and [t] trouble it. 19. But all the ſilver and gold, and veſſels of braſs and iron, are conſecrated unto the LORD: they ſhall come into the treaſury of the LORD. 20. So the people ſhouted when the prieſts blew with the trumpets: and it came to paſs when the people heard the ſound of the trumpet, and the people ſhouted with a great ſhout, that the wall fell down [u] flat, ſo that the people went up into the city every man ſtraight before him, and they took the city. 21. And they [x] utterly deſtroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and ſheep, and aſs, with the edge of the ſword. 22. But Joſhua had ſaid unto the two men that had ſpied out the country, Go into the harlot's houſe, and bring out thence the woman, and all that ſhe hath, as [y] ye ſware unto her. 23. And the young men that were ſpies, went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that ſhe had: and they brought out all her kindred, and left them [z] without the camp of Iſrael. 24. And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only the ſilver and the gold, and the veſſels of braſs and of iron, they put into the treaſury of the houſe of the LORD. 25. And [a] Joſhua ſaved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's houſhold, and all that ſhe had: and ſhe [b] dwelleth in Iſrael even unto this day: becauſe ſhe hid the meſſengers which Joſhua ſent to ſpy out Jericho. 26. ¶ And Joſhua adjured them at that time, ſaying, Curſed be the man before the LORD, that riſeth up and buildeth this city Jericho: [c] he ſhall lay the foundation thereof in his firſt-born, and in his youngeſt ſon ſhall he ſet up the gates of it. 27. So the LORD was with Joſhua, and [d] his fame was noiſed throughout all the country.

v. 16—27. Now is the hour of Jericho's deſtruction come. At Joſhua's command the hoſts of Iſrael ſhout aloud; at the ſignal given by the trumpet's long blaſt, and according to their faith, this proud city's walls fall down before them. Such will be the triumphant ſhout of the Iſrael of God, when under the conduct of the divine Joſhua they ſhall, in the laſt hour of their warfare, ſee all their foes laid low before them, and with their expiring breath triumph over death, their laſt enemy, and march through the breaches of the grave to the poſſeſſion of the city of the living God.

Several directions are here given for the people, all which were punctually executed. 1. The city muſt be devoted to utter deſtruction, the palaces conſumed with fire, not a creature ſuffered to live, neither man nor beaſt; they are ſacrifices to divine juſtice, and the ſeverity executed on them ſhall increaſe the terror of their neighbours. Note, (1.) Whatever God doth, terrible as it may appear to us, he will ever be ſeen to be juſt in his judgments. (2.) They who harden their hearts in oppoſition to God, will too late find their ruin inevitable. 2. The gold and ſilver, braſs and iron, are to be reſerved purely for the uſe of the ſanctuary. The firſt-fruits of their ſpoils muſt, in gratitude, be conſecrated to God, whoſe arm alone won for them the city; and to take the leaſt trifle is forbidden, as ſure to bring a curſe upon the camp, and ruin upon the ſacrilegious perſon. Note, (1.) That ſilver and gold is well employed which is devoted to the immediate ſervice of God's ſanctuary. (2.) None ever robbed God's altar and proſpered. 3. Rahab and her family, and all that ſhe hath, are preſerved amidſt the general deſolation; her houſe, if it was upon the town wall, was probably left ſtanding when the reſt of the wall fell, and the two men, whoſe lives were preſerved by her kindneſs, and who were under an oath to her in behalf of the people, are ſent to take care of her, and of all her relations who took refuge with her. For a time they were placed in ſafety without the camp, and provided for; but it is preſumed, on becoming proſelytes, were incorporated with Iſrael, and Rahab herſelf obtained the high honour of becoming the wife of Salmon, a prince of Judah, and filling a remarkable place in the genealogy of the Redeemer. Note, (1.) They who have pious relations often fare the better for their ſake. (2.) God can make thoſe who, in their characters, have been the foremoſt in ſin, as eminent for his gifts and graces, as they were infamous before for their abominations. 4. A curſe is pronounced on the builder of Jericho. It muſt remain a heap of ruins, for a memorial to poſterity, and he that would rear its walls, muſt do it at the ruin of his family: the effect of this adjuration, five hundred years or more afterwards, appeared in Hiel, who attempted to rebuild it, 1 Kings xvi. 34. after it was built it became a flouriſhing city, for many ages, but now, with the reſt of the land, is returned to its former deſolation. 5. Joſhua's fame was ſpread abroad; reſpected by his people and dreaded by his enemies, it was manifeſt God was with him; and he is great indeed, whom the Lord honours with his preſence and bleſſing.

1. BUT [a] the children of Iſrael committed a treſpaſs in the accurſed thing: for † Achan, the ſon of Carmi, the ſon of Zabdi, the ſon of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the accurſed thing: and [b] the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt the children of Iſrael. 2. And Joſhua ſent men from Jericho to Ai, which is beſide Beth-aven, on the eaſt-ſide of Bethel, and ſpake unto them, ſaying, Go up and [c] view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai. 3. And they returned to Joſhua, and ſaid unto him, Let not all the people go up: but let about two or three thouſand men go up and ſmite Ai, and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few. 4. So there went up thither of the people about three thouſand men, and [d] they fled before the men of Ai. 5. And the men of Ai ſmote of them about thirty and ſix men: for they chaſed them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and ſmote them in the going down: wherefore [e] the hearts of the people melted, and became as water.

v. 1—5. The laſt chapter left Iſrael triumphant, and Joſhua's name great and glorious; this begins with a dire But, which ſtops the current of their victories, and caſts them into the deepeſt diſtreſs; the cauſe of which always is ſin. 1. We have an account of the ſin committed, Achan the ſon of Carmi, of the houſe of Judah, had tranſgreſſed the divine command, and ſecretly taken of the devoted things, and hereby had brought the hoſt under the diſpleaſure of God. One ſinner thus deſtroys much good, the community he belonged to are defiled by him, and ſuffer for him. Note, (1.) Covetouſneſs is among the moſt rooted evil tempers of the fallen mind. (2.) We muſt ſeparate ourſelves from ſinners, if we would not ſhare their judgments. 2. The effects of God's diſpleaſure quickly appeared; though the ſin was committed ſo ſecretly that no eye ſaw him, it was not hid from God; and he takes ſuch ways to bring the crime to light, as ſhall ſhew his juſt indignation againſt it. Let not the guilty think of being concealed or excuſed, God will find them out, and viſit them to their confuſion. Confident now of ſucceſs, thoſe who were ſent to view the city of Ai report the conqueſt eaſy, and that the people need not be fatigued by a general march; a detached party of two or three thouſand men being thought ſufficient, theſe are accordingly ſent, but ſeized with a panic at the gate of the city, they fly before their purſuers, and, with the loſs of ſix and thirty men, eſcape to the camp, and fill it with terror and confuſion. God had evidently forſaken them, and though the loſs was ſmall, juſtly were they alarmed at a defeat which portended more dreadful conſequences. Note, (1.) Though the greateſt difficulties vaniſh when God is our helper, the leaſt temptation will prevail the moment he leaves us to ourſelves. (2.) Whenever we provoke God, we may expect to ſuffer for it. (3.) Fear and terror of conſcience are the natural conſequences of guilt, and the preſent wages of ſin.

6. ¶ And Joſhua [f] rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face, [g] before the ark of the LORD, until the even-tide, he and the elders of Iſrael, and [h] put duſt upon their heads. 7. And Joſhua ſaid, Alas, O Lord GOD, [i] wherefore haſt thou at all brought this people over Jordan, [k] to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to deſtroy us? would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other ſide Jordan. 8. O Lord, [l] what ſhall I ſay, when Iſrael turneth their † backs before their enemies! 9. For the Canaanites, and all the inhabitants of the land ſhall hear of it, and ſhall inviron us round, [m] and cut off our name from the earth: and [n] what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

v. 6—9. Joſhua, moſt deeply affected with the calamities of the people, and apprehenſive of more fatal conſequences, 1. In deep humiliation rends his cloaths, and falls proſtrate on the earth; he who was ſo courageous, that he never feared the face of man, trembles before an offended God. The elders of Iſrael join in his ſorrow, and with duſt on their heads, till even-tide, bewail their diſtreſſes; and not doubting but ſin was the cauſe, look up to God for pardon and peace: if God forſake them, all is loſt. Note, It is no diſparagement to the moſt courageous and intrepid, to humble themſelves under the mighty hand of God, and to tremble for fear of his diſpleaſure. 2. Joſhua pours out his complaints in prayer to God, (1.) He regrets that he had paſſed Jordan, and not reſted in the country they had before conquered; he ſpeaks as under the prevalence of unbelief, and as apprehenſive that for deſtruction, not for poſſeſſion, they were entered the land of the Amorites. Note, (1.) The ſtrongeſt believers have their weakneſſes and infirmities. (2.) When we find fault with God, we only diſcover our own folly: the judge of all the earth muſt do right. (2.) He appears aſtoniſhed, and at a loſs what to ſay, under this diſaſtrous event, when Iſrael, inſtead of victory, turn their backs to their enemies. Many a ſaint of God hath thus been perplexed at the myſterious ways of providence, and ready to queſtion all their former experience. (3.) He expreſſes his apprehenſions of their imminent danger; encouraged by this ſucceſs, the Canaanites would attack them, defenceleſs now if God departs, and cut them off from the earth. Note, Our fears are apt to magnify our dangers, and we are too ready, in difficulties, to deſpond. (4.) He pleads the great diſhonour which would be caſt on God hereby, reſerving this as his laſt argument, and what himſelf ſeemed moſt concerned about. Note, A gracious ſoul is ever more ſollicitous about God's glory than his own intereſts; let them ſtand or fall, if God be exalted he aſks no more.

10. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, [o] Get thee up, [p] wherefore lieſt thou thus upon thy face? 11. [q] Iſrael hath ſinned, and they alſo have tranſgreſſed [r] my covenant, which I commanded thee: for they have even taken of the accurſed thing, and [s] have alſo ſtolen, and diſſembled alſo, and [t] they have put it even amongſt their own ſtuff. 12. [u] Therefore the children of Iſrael could not ſtand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, becauſe they were accurſed: neither will I be with you any more, except ye deſtroy the accurſed from amongſt you. 13. Up, [x] ſanctify the people, and ſay, ſanctify yourſelves againſt to-morrow: for thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, There is an accurſed thing in the midſt of thee, O Iſrael: thou canſt not ſtand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accurſed thing from among you. 14. In the morning therefore ye ſhall be brought according to your tribes: and it ſhall be that the tribe [y] which the LORD taketh, ſhall come according to the families thereof; and the family which the LORD ſhall take, ſhall come by houſholds; and the houſhold which the LORD ſhall take, ſhall come man by man. 15. And it ſhall be that [z] he that is taken with the accurſed thing, ſhall be burnt with fire, he and all that he hath: becauſe he hath tranſgreſſed the covenant of the LORD, and becauſe he hath wrought folly [a] in Iſrael.

v. 10—15. Joſhua no ſooner hath done ſpeaking, than God anſwers him from the mercy ſeat, and revives his drooping heart. 1. He commands him to ariſe from the duſt, his prayer is heard, the cauſe of his mourning ſhall be removed. Note, Though God for a time caſt down the ſoul under ſin, yet they who ſow in tears, will ſurely and ſhortly reap in joy. 2. He informs him of the cauſe of his diſpleaſure. Sin was committed; the covenant was broken, by diſobeying the divine command, in ſecreting a part of the devoted ſpoil; and this was robbery of God, as being the firſt fruits of their victories, and claimed by him as his own. Diſſimulation had aggravated the crime; for it ſeems the queſtion had been put, and each tribe and family, and Achan among the reſt, aſſerted his innocence, whilſt he had carefully concealed the accurſed thing among his own goods in his tent. Note, (1.) One ſin brings on another; he that ſteals will lie to conceal it. (2.) God will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs, and, when the ſinner is moſt ſecure, overwhelm him with terrible conviction. 3. He threatens to bring upon them the conſumption they feared, if this matter be not immediately redreſſed; intimating withal, that hereby they would regain their former ſuperiority. Note, If we do not deſtroy ſin, it will deſtroy us. They who will not part from their ſins in time, will be ſeparated from God to eternity. 4. The method is preſcribed for the detection of the offender. He muſt ſanctify the people againſt the morrow, by enjoining them to beware of ceremonial uncleanneſs, and much more of moral defilement, that they may appear before God. By lot the tribe, family, houſe, and perſon ſhould be diſcovered, and immediate execution be done on the offender, who is become, by this daring ſacrilege, no leſs a traitor to his country, than a rebel againſt God. Note, (1.) No event is fortuitous; even the lot falls by divine decree. (2.) They who are conſcious of their own ſimplicity, will have boldneſs to appear before God. (3.) One advantage to be made of others ſins, is to make us more jealous againſt the like offences. (4.) The execution of criminals is highly neceſſary for the preſervation of the ſtate, that others may ſee and fear, and do no more wickedly. (5.) Let thoſe who rob God's altar of its due, remember Achan's end.

16. ¶ So Joſhua [b] roſe up early in the morning, and brought Iſrael by their tribes; and the tribe of Judah was taken: 17. And he brought the family of Judah; and he took the family of the Zarhites: and he brought the family of the Zarhites man by man; and Zabdi was taken: 18. And he brought his houſhold man by man; and Achan the ſon of Carmi, the ſon of Zabdi, the ſon of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was taken. 19. And Joſhua ſaid unto Achan, My [c] ſon, give, I pray thee, [d] glory to the LORD God of Iſrael, [e] and make confeſſion unto him; and tell me now what thou haſt done, hide it not from me. 20. And Achan anſwered Joſhua, and ſaid, Indeed I have ſinned againſt the LORD God of Iſrael, and thus and thus have I done. 21. When [f] I ſaw among the ſpoils a goodly † Babyloniſh garment, and two hundred ſhekels of ſilver, and a wedge of gold of fifty ſhekels weight, [g] then I coveted them, and took them, and behold, they are hid in the earth in the midſt of my tent, and the ſilver under it. 22. ¶ So Joſhua ſent meſſengers, and they ran unto the tent, and behold, [i] it was hid in his tent, and the ſilver under it. 23. And they took them out of the midſt of the tent, and brought them unto Joſhua, and unto all the children of Iſrael, and † laid them out before the LORD. 24. And Joſhua, and all Iſrael with him, took Achan the ſon of Zerah, and the ſilver, and the garment, and the ‡ wedge of gold, and his [k] ſons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his aſſes, and his ſheep, and his tent, [l] and all that he had: and they brought them unto the valley of Achor. 25. And Joſhua ſaid, Why haſt thou [m] troubled us? [n] the LORD ſhall trouble thee this day. And all Iſrael ſtoned him with ſtones, and burned them with fire, after they had ſtoned them with ſtones. 26. And they raiſed over him a great [o] heap of ſtones unto this day: [p] So the LORD turned from the fierceneſs of his anger: wherefore the name of that place was called, The valley of ‖ Achor, unto this day.

v. 16—26. God having directed Joſhua in the method of procedure, he riſes very early in the morning, in haſte to purge the camp from the abominable thing which was hid in it.

1. The tribes are convoked. Judah is taken, the firſt in dignity, yet now expoſed to ſhame, by one bad branch of this noble family. By repeated trials from families to houſes, and from houſes to individuals, the criminal is diſcovered, and Achan, confounded with conſcious guilt, ſtands forth the troubler of Iſrael. Note, When God is contending with us, we need well to examine our ways, and look if there be any way of wickedneſs in us: whilſt Achan's wedge, any allowed ſin remains, the curſe muſt be upon us. 2. The divine lot having diſcovered the offender, Joſhua, as judge, exhorts him to give glory to God by an open and unreſerved confeſſion. He does not fly out into anger or reviling againſt him, but pitying his miſery, beſeeches him to repent of his great ſin, and take to himſelf the deſerved ſhame of ſuch a guilty conduct. Note, (1.) Even the vileſt of criminals deſerve our pity, not reproach. (2.) The only reſtoration we can make to God for our ſins, is by an open acknowledgment. They cannot be true penitents, who ſhrink from the ſhame they have deſerved, and ſeek to excuſe and exculpate themſelves, inſtead of glorifying God by an unreſerved confeſſion. 3. Hopes of concealment had hardened his heart before, but now God hath found him out, he bows under the conviction, acknowledges his great ſin, and opens the particular fact in all the circumſtances of it; that he ſaw firſt and coveted a gorgeous Babyloniſh garment, and took it, then added a purſe of ſilver, of two hundred ſhekels, to the theft, and a wedge or tongue of gold of fifty; and that they were hid under his tent in the earth. Note, (1.) A burthened conſcience can only find eaſe by ſelf-accuſation, and owning his aggravated ſin againſt God. (2.) The more deeply we are affected, the more particular will be our confeſſions, and the more ſharp our ſelf-upbraidings in the review of the proceſs of our ſin. (3.) The advances to ſin are here laid down; concupiſcence is at the root, Satan preſents the bait to the eye, the heart is caught by it, the hand is ſtretched out, and the crime compleated. How ſtrict a guard ſhould we keep upon our eyes! How ſeverely repreſs the firſt motions of evil deſire? (4.) It is the devil's grand deceit, "No eye ſhall ſee thee; thy ſin may be eaſily concealed;" but God can make the ſinner turn ſelf-accuſer, and vomit up the riches he hath ſwallowed, Job xx. 15. 4. He receives his juſt condemnation. The goods are inſtantly fetched, his confeſſion is confirmed by the accurſed ſpoils, and ſentence paſſes upon him. God will have the trouble fall upon his own head, which he had brought on the innocent people. Note, (1.) Sin will bring trouble: the conſcience muſt be humbled under it in time, or be tormented for it to eternity. (2.) What we get by injuſtice, will in the end prove our plague. 5. He is inſtantly executed, dragged from the judgment-ſeat without the camp, and all Iſrael in juſt indignation riſe up to ſtone him. Nor falls he alone; his family periſhes with him, and all that belonged to him and them. They are firſt ſtoned to death, then burnt as an abomination; and thus the accurſed thing being put away, God's anger is pacified, and his favour reſtored to them. Note, (1.) We cannot be in too great haſte to get rid of our ſins. (2.) We ſee nothing is got by ſtealing or ſacrilege: not only the ill-gotten gain periſhes, but the fire of the curſe ſpreads to all our ſubſtance. (3.) Wicked parents are the heavieſt plague to their families, and by their bad examples uſually involve them in ruin. (4.) When ſin is repented of, and waſhed away with the blood of Jeſus, ſhed as a curſe for us, then we may expect God's love and mercy will be reſtored to us. 6. A monument is raiſed on theſe aſhes, as a warning to others, and a name given the place, correſponding to the occaſion, The valley of Achor, or Trouble. Note, (1.) We need to raiſe a memorial over our ſins, and the places where they were committed, that we may continually remember and lament them. (2.) The valley of Achor is a door of hope to true penitents, Hoſea ii. 15. and they who go down thither in ſorrow, ſhall be brought up from thence with joy.

And thou ſhalt do to Ai and her king, [c] as thou didſt unto Jericho and her king: only [d] the ſpoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, ſhall ye take for a prey unto [e] yourſelves: lay thee an ambuſh for the city behind it.

v. 1, 2. The ſin of Achan, and the defeat of the people thereupon, had much diſheartened Joſhua: he needed therefore encouragement from God, to renew the war, nor does he long wait for it; for now the cauſe of their fall being removed, God bids them advance, and ſpoil their enemies. He commands all the people to go up to Ai, and inſtructs Joſhua to lay an ambuſcade behind the city, that by ſurprize, not by a ſlow ſiege, he might immediately enter; and whilſt all the people are devoted to the ſword, the ſpoil of this with the other cities is given to the people. Note, (1.) Sin among profeſſors weakens the hands of miniſters. One hypocrite does the cauſe more hurt, than the ſtrongeſt attacks of avowed enemies. (2.) Achan was in haſte to be rich, and periſhed; whilſt they who before exerciſed ſelf-denial, now find they are no looſers thereby. The way to ſolid comfort and laſting gain, is to ſeek it in God's way, and to wait God's time.

3. ¶ So Joſhua aroſe, and all the people of war, to go up againſt Ai: and Joſhua choſe out thirty thouſand mighty men of valour, and ſent them away [f] by night. 4. And he commanded them, ſaying, Behold, ye ſhall lie † in wait againſt the city, even behind the city: go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready: 5. And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city: and it ſhall come to paſs when they come out againſt us, as at the firſt, that we [g] will flee before them. 6. (For they will come out after us) till we have † drawn them from the city; for [h] they will ſay, They flee before us, as at the firſt: therefore we will flee before them. 7. Then ye ſhall riſe up from the ambuſh, and ſeize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand. 8. And it ſhall be when ye have taken the city, that ye ſhall ſet the city on fire: according to the commandment of the LORD ſhall ye do. See [i] I have commanded you. 9. ¶ Joſhua therefore ſent them forth; and they went to lie in ambuſh, and abode between Beth-el and Ai, on the weſt-ſide of Ai: but Joſhua lodged that night among the people. 10. And Joſhua [k] roſe up early in the morning, and numbred the people, and went up, he and the elders of Iſrael, before the people to Ai. 11. And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north ſide of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai. 12. And he took about five thouſand men, and ſet them to lie in ambuſh between Beth-el and Ai, on the weſt ſide of the city. 13. And when they had ſet the people, even all the hoſt that was on the north of the city, and their † liers in wait on the weſt of the city: Joſhua went that night into the midſt of the valley. 14. ¶ And it came to paſs, when the king of Ai ſaw it, that they haſted and roſe up early, and the men of the city went out againſt Iſrael to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain; [l] but he wiſt not that there were liers in ambuſh againſt him, behind the city. 15. And Joſhua, and all Iſrael made as if they were beaten before them, and fled by the way of the wilderneſs. 16. And all the people that were in Ai, were called together to purſue after them: and they purſued after Joſhua, and [m] were drawn away from the city. 17. And [n] there was not a man left in Ai, or Beth-el, that went not out after Iſrael: and they left the city open, and purſued after Iſrael. 18. And the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, Stretch out the ſpear that is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will give it into thine hand. And Joſhua [o] ſtretched out the ſpear that he had in his hand, toward the city. 19. And the ambuſh aroſe quickly out of their place, and they ran as ſoon as he had ſtretched out his hand: and they entred into the city, and took it, and haſted, and ſet the city on fire. 20. And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they ſaw, and behold [p] the ſmoke of the city aſcended up to heaven, and † they had no power to flee this way or that way: and the people that fled to the wilderneſs, turned back upon the purſuers. 21. And when Joſhua and all Iſrael ſaw that the ambuſh had taken the city, and that the ſmoke of the city aſcended, then they turned again, and ſlew the men of Ai. 22. And the other iſſued out of the city againſt them; ſo they were in the midſt of Iſrael, ſome on this ſide, and ſome on that ſide, and [q] they ſmote them, ſo that they let [r] none of them remain, or eſcape.

v. 3—22. Policy in war is lawful. At God's command Joſhua appoints a double ambuſh: the firſt, of thirty thouſand men, he ſent away by night; the other, of five thouſand, either ſtrengthened the former, or perhaps might be deſigned to take the enemy in flank, whilſt their front and rear were attacked by thoſe who took the city, and the hoſt that rallied after their retreat. The ſtratagem took; the men of the city came out on the approach of the main body, and when they pretended to retire, all the men of war from Beth-el and Ai were called to the purſuit. On this, the ambuſcade ſeized the defenceleſs city, and ſet it on fire: the riſing ſmoke was the ſignal for the retiring army to face about, and in an inſtant the men of Ai are ſurrounded, and cut off to a man, without a poſſibility to eſcape. We may here obſerve, (1.) The conduct and prudence, the courage and caution, of the general. The ambuſh is regulated by his orders; he is by night in the valley, probably to chuſe the proper place for their concealment, perhaps to be alone with God in prayer for ſucceſs. Not diſmayed at the former defeat, he advances with confidence; by retiring ſecures the victory, and when the prey is in the net, lifts up that ſpear that never reſted from ſlaughter whilſt one man remained alive. Note, (1.) A good general muſt ſee every thing with his own eyes, and be himſelf the moſt indefatigable man in the army. (2.) To ſpend part of that night in prayer is highly needful, when the next morning muſt lead us into the field of battle. They who come from their knees will be the braveſt to ſtretch out the ſpear. (3.) The Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by yielding for a moment in his humiliation, triumphed thus more glorioſly, when, on a reſurrection-day, he turned back upon his enemies, and led captivity captive. (4.) They who have drawn the ſword againſt their ſpiritual enemies, muſt caſt away the ſcabbard, and only expect reſt and victory in the grave. 2. The infatuation of Iſrael's enemies. By ſucceſs intoxicated, they kept neither ſcouts to diſcover the ambuſh behind them, nor feared to advance to meet the approaching armies of Iſrael. When ſhouting already for victory, on the feint made to retire, lo, the flames aſcend behind them; their foes halt, face about, attack with fury irreſiſtible; whilſt they, diſmayed, have neither power to fight, nor opportunity to fly. Note, (1.) The proſperity of fools deſtroys them. (2.) The enemies of God's people often promiſe themſelves to glut their fury in their deſtruction, when they are only madly advancing to their own ruin. (3.) Security, and ſelf-confidence in an evil way, are among the direſt ſymptoms of a reprobate mind, and the ſureſt preſages of eternal miſery. (4.) The triumphing of the wicked is but for a moment: in death they ſhall lie down and periſh for ever.

23. [s] And the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joſhua. 24. And it came to paſs when Iſrael had made an end of ſlaying all the inhabitants of Ai, in the field, in the wilderneſs wherein they chaſed them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the ſword, until they were conſumed, that all the Iſraelites returned unto Ai, and ſmote it with the † edge of the ſword. 25. And ſo it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thouſand, even all the men of Ai. 26. For Joſhua [t] drew not his hand back wherewith he ſtretched out the ſpear, until he had utterly deſtroyed all the inhabitants of Ai. 27. Only the cattle and the ſpoil of that city, Iſrael [u] took for a prey unto themſelves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joſhua. 28. And Joſhua burnt Ai, and made it an heap for ever, even a deſolation unto this day. 29. And the king of Ai he [x] hanged on a tree until eventide: and as ſoon as the ſun was down Joſhua commanded that they ſhould take his carcaſe down from the tree, and caſt it at the entring of the gate of the city, and raiſe thereon a great heap of ſtones that remaineth unto this day.

v. 23—29. The king of Ai alone ſurvived the general ſlaughter, and he only ſpared to meet a more ignominious doom. He is hanged in terrorem, that the kings of Canaan might hear and tremble; and on his corpſe a monument is raiſed in the gate of the deſolate city, to warn all beholders of the end of thoſe who fight againſt God. Let wicked kings, who oppreſs God's people, ſtill look to this heap, and remember that the ſame avenging God lives and reigns. The people of the city, to the number of twelve thouſand, are ſacrificed to the divine juſtice, and the ſpoil divided among the hoſt, as an encouragement to them to go on boldly in fighting the Lord's battles. Note, They who endure hardneſs, as good ſoldiers of Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall find to their comfort, that they who do his work, ſhall reap his wages. The ſpear of Joſhua now, like Moſes's arms, is no longer lifted up: if, as ſome ſuppoſe, it had a flag fixed to it, the taking it down might be the ſignal to retire to their tents. Note, In death, the believer ſhall no longer need to lift the banner of war, or to weild the ſword of the ſpirit, but retire, to enjoy the fruit of his victories among the ſaints triumphant in the camp of the Lord of Hoſts.

30. ¶ Then Joſhua [y] built an altar unto the LORD God of Iſrael in mount Ebal. 31. As Moſes the ſervant of the LORD commanded the children of Iſrael, as it is written in the book of the law of Moſes, an altar of [z] whole ſtones, over which no man hath lift up any iron: and and [a] they offered thereon burnt-offerings unto the LORD, and ſacrificed peace-offerings. 32. And he wrote there [b] upon the ſtones [c] a copy of the law of Moſes, which he wrote in the preſence of the children of Iſrael. 33. And all Iſrael, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, ſtood on this ſide the ark, and on that ſide, before the prieſts the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well the ſtranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over-againſt mount [d] Gerizzim, and half of them over-againſt mount [e] Ebal: as Moſes the ſervant of the LORD had commanded before, that they ſhould bleſs the people of Iſrael. 34. And afterward [f] he read all the words of the law, the bleſſings and curſings, according to all that is written in the book of the law. 35. There was not a word of all that Moſes commanded, which Joſhua read not before all the congregation of Iſrael, with [g] the women, and the little ones, and the ſtrangers that were converſant among them.

v. 30—35. The introduction of this ſolemn tranſaction in the midſt of the wars, if, as ſome think, the ſolemnity was now performed, intimates the diligence and zeal of the people to obſerve the divine inſtitutions. Note, When moſt ſurrounded with dangers, we have moſt cauſe to mind the one thing needful, the ſecuring an intereſt in the favour of God. But the diſtance of Ebal from Gilgal, and the country not yet conquered, have induced others to imagine, that what is here recorded, was not performed till a conſiderable time after, when they had farther extended their conqueſts. It was however done, whether now or afterwards, with exact conformity to the divine inſtitution, and with great ſolemnity.

1. They built an altar, and offered ſacrifice thereon, on mount Ebal, where the curſes were pronounced, intimating, 1. Their dependance upon that atonement, without which the curſes that were written in the law muſt quickly overtake them to their ruin. Note, Nothing but the blood of Jeſus can ſave any ſoul from the curſe of the law. 2. Their gratitude for God's mercy to them. They got not the land by their own ſword, and the beaſts they offered were the ſpoil he had given them. Note, (1.) We can only render to God of his own: all we poſſeſs is his. (2.) Yet God accepts the grateful offering; and they who acknowledge him in prayer and praiſe, ſhall find him proſpering their ways with increaſing bleſſings.

2. A ſolemn rehearſal was made of the bleſſings and curſes, in the preſence of all the people, great and ſmall, half on mount Ebal, half on mount Gerizim, with the ark, the prieſts, the Levites, the judges, and officers in the midſt. After each ſentence they expreſſed their aſſent aloud, and their readineſs to embrace that covenant, under which they held poſſeſſion of the land. That no ignorance might be pleaded, on a pillar of ſtone plaiſtered over, the ten commandments are written plain; and all that was contained in the book of the law, whatever Moſes enjoined, is read over in the audience of the people, from the chief princes, to the loweſt ſervant and ſtranger in the congregation. Note, (1.) The word of God is given not to be locked up from the common people, but to be heard and read of all men. (2.) The higheſt and the loweſt are alike intereſted to hear and obey the divine command. In God's ſight, the prince and the beggar are on a level; the ſoul that ſinneth, it ſhall die. (3.) All God's commands, from the leaſt to the greateſt, are enjoined by the ſame authority: no ſin ſo little, as not to be guarded by the awful ſanction of the curſe and wrath of God. (4.) Maſters of families muſt ſee that all under their roof, who are able to underſtand, ſeriouſly attend the houſe of God, and hear his word read and preached. (5.) It is thus we may hope to receive the fulneſs of the promiſe in glory, when by grace, thro' faith, we are obedient to the divine commands on earth.

v. 1, 2. The kings of Canaan begin now to think it high time to beſtir themſelves: the victories of Iſrael over Jericho and Ai are blazed abroad; and perhaps no leſs notorious was the ſolemn rehearſal of the laws by which they were to be governed, which, if now done, intimated their certain confidence of poſſeſſing the land. Hereupon they aſſociate, not to conſult how to make the beſt peace, though this was the only prudent ſtep they could take, but to confederate their armies for an united exertion of their force in war. All ſeparate quarrels are now ſilent, and their one deſign is to oppoſe the common enemy, Iſrael. Note, (1.) Thoſe whom God will deſtroy, are generally infatuated with malice and revenge. (2.) The enemies of God's people, however divided among themſelves, are unanimous to oppoſe the truth: Deiſts, Arians, Socinians, Formaliſts, moral or profane, Conformiſts, or Separatiſts, all unite againſt the ſpiritual ſeed. (3.) When we ſee the world ſo leagued together againſt the truth, ſurely they who are faithful, ſhould overlook their trivial differences in uneſſentials, and laying every cauſe of diſpute aſide, join heart and hand againſt their common enemy.

3. ¶ And [c] when the inhabitants of Gibeon heard what Joſhua had done unto Jericho, and to Ai, 4. They did work [d] wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambaſſadors, and took old ſacks upon their aſſes, and wine-bottles, old, and rent, and bound up, 5. And old ſhoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments upon them, and all the bread of their proviſion was dry and mouldy. 6. And they went to Joſhua unto the camp at Gilgal, and ſaid unto him, and to the men of Iſrael, We be come from a far country: now therefore make ye a league with us. 7. And the men of Iſrael ſaid unto the Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us, and [e] how ſhall we make a league with you? 8. And they ſaid unto Joſhua, [f] We are thy ſervants. And Joſhua ſaid unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye? 9. And they ſaid unto him, From a very far country thy ſervants are come, becauſe of [g] the name of the LORD thy God: for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt, 10. And all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heſhbon, and to Og king of Baſhan, which was at Aſhtaroth. 11. Wherefore our elders, and all the inhabitants of our country, ſpake to us, ſaying, Take victuals with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and ſay unto them, We are your ſervants: therefore now make ye a league with us. 12. [h] This our bread we took hot for our proviſion out of our houſes, on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy: 13. And theſe bottles of wine which we filled, were new, and behold, they be rent: and theſe our garments and our ſhoes are become old, by reaſon of the very long journey. 14. And ‖ the men took of their victuals, [i] and aſked not counſel at the mouth of the LORD. 15. And Joſhua [k] made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes of the congregation ſware unto them.

v. 3—15. The ſame event produces very different effects, according to the different tempers of men. Iſrael's ſucceſs rouſed the other Canaanites to battle, and warned the Gibeonites to make their peace, before the ſword overtook them. As no mention is made of Gibeon's king, and the three confederate cities, it ſeems they were a little republic; and whilſt the proud kings of Canaan refuſed to bow, in their ſenators there was wiſdom. We have here,

1. The method they took to obtain peace from Iſrael. Well acquainted with the late tranſaction, and being not farther than twelve miles diſtant from the camp in Gilgal, and therefore likely to be ſoon expoſed to the arm of Iſrael, and no ſtrangers to the utter extirpation of the Canaanites, which was commanded; they diſguiſed themſelves, as ambaſſadors come from a far country, on the fame of Iſrael's exploits; and, to confirm the cheat, appear before Joſhua, as having undergone a tedious journey: their bread is mouldy with age, their bottles (which were made of ſkins or leather) patched and bound up, their cloaths threadbare, and ſhoes almoſt worn from their feet, as if by long travel, ſerve well to confirm their pretended ſtory, that they came from a far country to ſeek the friendſhip of Iſrael. Note, (1.) They who pretend to do us moſt honour, are moſt likely to impoſe upon us. (2.) Pretences to antiquity have, we ſee, of old deceived God's Iſrael; we muſt beware of being caught with this Gibeonitiſh wile. (3.) Not every beggar who appears in rags is the object of diſtreſs: humble and true poverty hath an artleſs tale; but when Your Honour, or Your

2. The Iſraelites and Joſhua have ſome ſuſpicion, and therefore begin to queſtion who they were, or whence they came. We may not be credulous to every tale, but examine well before we contract intimacy. In our ſpiritual warfare, as much need is there to be aware of the wily ſerpent, as of the roaring lion.

3. The more danger there is of diſcovery, the more need of ſtrong aſſurances and artful pleas, to gain credit to their aſſertions. Though they carefully conceal the mention of the place, they affirm they come from a far country, as if utterly unknown to Iſrael, and that their inducement was a reſpect for Iſrael's God, whoſe wonders in Egypt and the land of Baſhan they had heard, not mentioning Ai or Jericho, though the real motive to their journey. They profeſs to be ſo affected with theſe wonders of God, that on any terms they would make peace with them, and call themſelves their ſervants, as if ready to do them any ſervice which ſhould be deſired. Note, (1.) A Canaanite is never at a loſs for a lie. (2.) One lie ſeldom ſtands alone, but requires the addition of others to ſupport its credibility. (3.) It is very evil to ſeek a right end by wrong means: Perhaps if they had ſpoken honeſtly and openly, God would have interpoſed for them, and they had found better terms than they after obtained.

4. The ſtratagem ſucceeds, and Joſhua and the princes, having inſpected their bread, and found it agreeable to their deſcription, too haſtily concluded the truth of their ſtory; and counting it unneceſſary on ſuch an occaſion to aſk counſel of God, make an agreement with them, and confirm it with an oath, to let them live. Note, (1.) They who are honeſt themſelves, are leaſt ſuſpicious of fraud in others. (2.) When we are haſty in our reſolves, we ſhall often have cauſe to repent of them. (3.) Nothing of importance ſhould be tranſacted by us, without prayer to God for his direction. (4.) It is wiſe in every ſinner to imitate theſe Gibeonites; in rags of humiliation and godly ſorrow, to be found at the feet of Jeſus, ſeeking that peace without which we periſh, and we need not doubt of ſucceſs; for he will ſay unto us, Live, and, for the comfort of our hope, confirm it with an oath.

16. And it came to paſs [l] at the end of three days, after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours, and that they dwelt among them. 17. And the children of Iſrael journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day: now their cities were Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kirjath-jearim. 18. And the children of Iſrael ſmote them not, [m] becauſe the princes of the congregation had ſworn unto them by the LORD God of Iſrael: and all the congregation [n] murmured againſt the princes. 19. But all the princes ſaid unto all the congregation, We have ſworn unto them by the LORD God of Iſrael: [o] now therefore we may not touch them. 20. This we will do to them; we will even let them live, [p] leſt wrath be upon us, becauſe of the oath which we ſware unto them. 21. And the princes ſaid unto them, Let them live, (but let them be [q] hewers of wood, and drawers of water unto all the congregation) as the princes had promiſed them.

v. 16—21. The fraud could not long be concealed: lies will quickly ſhame their maker. In three days time, on the third morning perhaps, by reconnoitring parties, or deſerters, they found they were Canaanites, and in their neighbourhood. Hereupon a detachment was made from the army, the camp ſtill abiding in Gilgal; and they came the ſame evening, the third from the day of the league, to their cities, when the cheat was diſcovered. This excited, 1. A general murmuring in the congregation. They blamed their princes for the oath; more, it is to be feared, out of love for the ſpoil, than zeal for God's glory. Note, Many ſinfully ſpeak evil of dignities, who are ignorant of the motives on which their rulers act. 2. The princes ſeek to pacify the diſcontented, and to give the people ſatiſfaction. 1. The lives of the Gibeonites are and ought to be ſecured to them, becauſe of the oath which they had made, though it was to their loſs, and obtained by deceit. An oath was too ſacred to be violated; and though the command of God enjoined the deſtruction of the impenitent Canaanites, it ſeems not to include thoſe who humbly ſubmitted, and renounced their idolatry, to worſhip the true God; ſince from theſe Iſrael could be in no danger of being infected, and therefore under no neceſſity to extirpate them. Note, (1.) Whenever we have ſworn, nothing muſt reſtrain us from a conſcientious diſcharge of our oath. (2.) It is a curſed doctrine of the church of Rome, that no faith is to be kept with heretics. (3.) The deceit of others towards us, will be no juſt plea for our unfaithfulneſs to them. (4.) Though the ſentence of death is irrevocable againſt the impenitent, yet, when ſuch return to Jeſus from the error of their way, the ſentence will be reverſed; they ſhall live, and not die. 2. They are however condemned to perpetual ſervitude; and this may ſatisfy the people. They have their labour, and that is better than their lives. Their employment was to hew wood, and draw water for the congregation; either for the camp, whilſt they dwelt in tents, or only for the ſanctuary, to be ſervants of the prieſts and Levites, in the more laborious offices about the tabernacle, and afterwards in the temple. Note, How great the mercy ſhewn unto the ſinner, if but his life were given him for a prey; but how much greater, when his lot is aſſigned him in the temple of God, and the perfect freedom of God's ſervice becomes his happy portion.

22. ¶ And Joſhua called for them, and he ſpake unto them, ſaying, Wherefore have ye beguiled us, ſaying, We are very far from you; when ye dwell among us? 23. Now therefore [r] ye are curſed, and † there ſhall none of you be freed from being bondmen, and hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the houſe of my God. 24. And they anſwered Joſhua, and ſaid, Becauſe it was certainly told thy ſervants, how that [s] the LORD thy God commanded his ſervant Moſes to give you all the land, and to deſtroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were ſore afraid of our lives becauſe of you, and have done this thing. 25. And now behold, we are in thine hand: as it ſeemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do. 26. And ſo did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Iſrael, that they ſlew them not. 27. And Joſhua † made them that day hewers of wood, and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day, in the place which he ſhould chooſe.

v. 22—27. The matter being thus determined, Joſhua called for the chief men of theſe cities probably, and let them know their reſolution.

1. Joſhua reproves them for their impoſition. A lie deſerves rebuke: yet he ſpeaks with mildneſs, conſidering their ſituation, and feeling for their diſtreſs. Note, If we conſidered the violence of others temptation, we ſhould be leſs ſevere againſt their ſin, conſidering ourſelves, leſt we alſo ſhould be tempted. 2. They confeſs their fault, and aſſign their reaſon; which, though it will not excuſe their ſin, at leaſt is an alleviation of it. When life is at ſtake, and can only be ſaved by a lie, it requires great grace to dare ſpeak the truth. 3. Joſhua condemns them to perpetual ſervitude. Though the curſe of death was removed, the curſe of bondage was upon them. However, in its iſſue it was to be of ſervice to all parties: To the Gibeonites themſelves, who, being thus employed about the ſanctuary, would be better taught, and have a peculiar privilege of ſpiritual improvement: To the prieſts and Levites, who would be much aſſiſted by the miniſtry of theſe ſtrong men, in the very laborious work of drawing ſo much water as the frequent ablutions required, and cleaving ſo much wood as the frequent ſacrifices would need: To the people, who had a common intereſt in the altar, that it ſhould be well ſerved, and were probably, before this, themſelves aſſiſtants in theſe common ſervices. Note, (1.) God can thus over-rule the iſſue of events, and bring much good out of man's evil. (2.) This was typical of the admiſſion of the Gentiles into the goſpel church. 4. The Gibeonites readily acquieſce in the determination: they feared perhaps much worſe from the incenſed people, and are glad to eſcape with their lives for a prey. They refer themſelves entirely to Joſhua, to be and do as he pleaſed; and he ſaves them, and ſets them to their work. Their cities were given to the people, and their ſervice employed for the public. Note, (1.) The ſoul who refers himſelf wholly to Jeſus Chriſt, need not apprehend he ſhall be caſt away. (2.) If Chriſt receives us, we need not complain of any croſs he is pleaſed to lay upon us. (3.) They who ſerve the Saviour, will ever have reaſon to bleſs the day in which they made the exchange of carnal liberty for ſpiritual ſubjection.

1. NOW it came to paſs, when Adoni-zedek king of Jeruſalem had heard how Joſhua had taken Ai, and had utterly deſtroyed it, (as he had done to Jericho

[a] Jericho and her king, ſo he had done to [b] Ai and her king) and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Iſrael, and were among them; 2. That they [c] feared greatly, becauſe Gibeon was a great city, as one of the † royal cities, and becauſe it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty. 3. Wherefore Adoni-zedek king of Jeruſalem, ſent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of Lachiſh, and unto Debir king of Eglon, ſaying, 4. Come up unto me, and help me, that we may ſmite Gibeon: for [d] it hath made peace with Joſhua, and with the children of Iſrael. 5. Therefore [e] the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jeruſalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachiſh, the king of Eglon, gathered themſelves together, and went up, they and all their hoſts, and [f] encamped before Gibeon, and made war againſt it. 6. ¶ And the men of Gibeon ſent unto Joſhua, to the camp to Gilgal, ſaying, Slack not thy hand from thy ſervants: come up to us quickly, and ſave us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites that dwell in the mountains, are gathered together againſt us.

v. 1—6. Alarmed with the capture of Jericho and Ai, and more irritated with the ſurrender of Gibeon, Adoni-zedek, king of Jeruſalem, (as it was afterwards called) ſummons his neighbour kings to unite their forces againſt Gibeon; to prevent either ſo ſtrong a city, and ſo near him, from being occupied by his enemies, or to make an example of thoſe who were accounted betrayers of their country. Note, They who leave the ways of ſin, muſt expect not to part from the world in peace. Satan and his ſervants will proſecute thoſe as deſerters, who inliſt under the banners of Jeſus.

Alarmed with their approaching danger, they fly to Joſhua for help. Though mighty men, they knew themſelves unable to cope with theſe confederate armies, and therefore plead that league which, though fraudulently obtained, they were aſſured would be religiouſly obſerved. They are importunate, becauſe the danger was imminent, and expect protection, not only for the oath's ſake, but in honour, as allies ſuffering for their attachment to Iſrael; and in intereſt, as ſervants, whoſe deſtruction would be Iſrael's loſs. Note, (1.) When our ſouls are ſore thruſt at by legions of corruptions within, and temptations without, we muſt look up to Jeſus the glorious Captain of our ſalvation, whoſe hand is not ſhortned that it cannot ſave, nor his ear heavy that it cannot hear. (2.) If we are in fidelity cleaving to God as his ſervants, we may reſt aſſured of his protection as our Almighty Lord.

7. So Joſhua aſcended from Gilgal, he and all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour. 8. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, [g] Fear them not; for I have delivered them into thine hand; there ſhall not a man of them ſtand before thee. 9. Joſhua therefore came unto them ſuddenly, and went up from Gilgal [h] all night. 10. And [i] the LORD diſcomfited them before Iſrael, and ſlew them with a great ſlaughter at Gibeon, and chaſed them along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and ſmote them to Azekah, and unto Makkedah. 11. And it came to paſs as they fled from before Iſrael, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that [k] the LORD caſt down great ſtones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died; they were more which died with hail-ſtones, than they whom the children of Iſrael ſlew with the ſword. 12. ¶ [l] Then ſpake Joſhua to the LORD in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Iſrael, and he ſaid in the ſight of Iſrael, [m] Sun, ſtand thou ſtill upon Gibeon, and thou moon, in the valley of Ajalon. 13. And the [n] ſun ſtood ſtill, and the moon ſtayed, until the people had avenged themſelves upon their enemies. Is not this written in the book of † Jaſher? ſo the ſun ſtood ſtill in the midſt of heaven, and haſted not to go down about a whole day. 14. And there was [o] no day like that, before it or after it, that the LORD hearkned unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Iſrael.

v. 7—14. After the taking of Ai, the army ſeems to have reſted a while in Gilgal, and is now rouſed up to action by the attack made on their allies; in which the Canaanites being aggreſſors, the juſtice of their ruin is more evident; whilſt, by their confederacy they were brought together for a readier conſumption by the ſword of Iſrael.

1. Joſhua, animated by divine encouragement, prepares to ſuccour the trembling Gibeonites. They need not fear, who have God with them, and never-failing promiſes for their ſecurity. 2. He marches all night with a ſelect body of valiant men, in order to ſhew his readineſs to help his friends, and unexpectedly to ſurprize his enemies. Note, (1.) In war, a well-judged expeditious march is among the chief proofs of generalſhip. (2.) They who would ſerve the Lord Jeſus, muſt follow him night and day, and ſtick at no toil he may call them to endure. By and by their labours will end, and they ſhall reſt in eternal uninterrupted peace. 3. God's marvellous interpoſition. Though he might have deſtroyed them by the ſword in battle, he chuſes rather immediately to manifeſt his power, that Iſrael may know to whom they are indebted for victory, and their enemies be made ſenſible againſt whom they lift up themſelves. God diſcomfited them, put terror on their ſpirits, and gave them up to ſlaughter as ſheep; and from heaven, in their flight, caſt down hail-ſtones of ſuch a ſize, as ſlew more than fell by the ſword. Note, Upon the ungodly will he ſhortly rain a more terrible hail, Rev. xvi. 21. and judgments worſe than death itſelf ſhall overtake them; under which men ſhall deſire to die, and death ſhall flee from them. 4. Joſhua's prayer. Fearing leſt now the darkneſs ſhould cover the flight of his enemies, and moved, no doubt, by divine impulſe to make this ſtrange requeſt, he begs that God would ſtay the motions of the heavenly bodies, (as to us they appear to move), or rather the revolution of this earthly globe, that by prolonging the light of day, they might avenge themſelves on their enemies; and being under the influence of miraculous faith, in the hearing of Iſrael, he commands the ſun to ſtand ſtill now on Gibeon in the weſt, and the riſing moon to reſt in the valley of Ajalon. 5. God hears and anſwers him: the ſun, arreſted in his ſteep deſcent, haſtes not to go down, nor the riſing moon to advance, during the ſpace of a whole day. Never was ſuch a day before, or ſince: but God fought for Iſrael, therefore he granted the prayer of Iſrael's captain. Reference is here made for this event to the book of Jaſher, which ſeems to have been the public and authentic annals of every memorable event, and might be appealed to, as a corroborating evidence of this fact. Note, (1.) Great is the power of effectual fervent prayer. (2.) When God ſtirs up a ſpirit of ſupplication, it is a ſure ſign of his deſign to grant the requeſts he teaches us to make. (3.) God will appear for his people's comfort, and his enemies confuſion; and, if need be, all nature ſhall engage in their quarrel. (4.) When Iſrael's enemies ſhall receive their final overthrow, at the appearing of our great God and Saviour in the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men, then ſhall our ſun no more go down, nor our moon withdraw itſelf for ever.

15. ¶ And Joſhua returned, and all Iſrael with him, unto the camp to Gilgal. 16. But theſe [p] five kings fled, and [q] hid themſelves in a cave at Makkedah. 17. And it was told Joſhua, ſaying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah. 18. And Joſhua ſaid, [r] Roll great ſtones upon the mouth of the cave, and ſet men by it for to keep them. 19. And ſtay you not, but purſue after your enemies, and † ſmite the hindmoſt of them, ſuffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand. 20. And it came to paſs when Joſhua and the children of Iſrael had made an end of ſlaying them with a very great ſlaughter till they were conſumed, that the reſt which remained of them, entred into fenced cities. 21. And all the people returned to the camp to Joſhua at Makkedah in peace: [s] none moved his tongue againſt any of the children of Iſrael. 22. Then ſaid Joſhua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out thoſe five kings unto me out of the cave. 23. And they did ſo, and brought forth thoſe five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jeruſalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachiſh, and the king of Eglon. 24. And it came to paſs when they brought out thoſe kings unto Joſhua, that Joſhua called for all the men of Iſrael, and ſaid unto the captains of the men of war, which went with him, Come near, [t] put your feet upon the necks of theſe kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them. 25. And Joſhua ſaid unto them, Fear not nor be diſmayed, be ſtrong and of good courage: for [u] thus ſhall the LORD do to all your enemies againſt whom ye fight. 26. And afterwards Joſhua ſmote them, and ſlew them, and [x] hanged them on five trees: and they were hanging upon the trees until the evening. 27. And it came to paſs at the time of the going down of the ſun, that Joſhua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and caſt them into the cave wherein they had been hid, and laid [y] great ſtones in the cave's mouth, which remain unto this very day.

v. 15—27. We have here,

1. News brought to Joſhua of the diſcovery of the five kings, who had fled for concealment into a cave near Makkedah. To ſecure them there, great ſtones are rolled to the mouth of it, and, without ſtaying to execute on them the intended judgment, the people are commanded to continue their purſuit. When our enemies are falling, we muſt purſue the blow: the more compleat the conqueſt, the more glorious the future triumph. 2. The purſuit is continued, and ended; the few who eſcaped the ſword, only eſcaped to ſpread the terror of the defeat into the neighbouring cities, whilſt Iſrael returned to Joſhua at Makkedah, without the loſs of a man, though the victory was ſo compleat, and in a ſtate ſo ſecure, that none moved his tongue againſt them. So eaſily can God turn the fury of the greateſt perſecutors into perfect tranquillity, and, after the ſevereſt ſtorm has threatned, ſay, Peace, be ſtill, and there ſhall be a great calm. 3. Now the kings are brought from their concealment, and undergo the ſevereſt humiliation, and that deſerved death, which their pride idolatry, and tyranny had merited. The captains are commanded to tread on their necks, not haughtily to inſult their miſery, but by way of terror to the kings of Canaan, and as an aſſurance, that thus ſhould all their enemies be laid low before them. They need not fear, or be diſmayed, at the moſt numerous armies or mightieſt kings, when God thus evidently fights for them. When they had ſuffered this bitter mortification, the ſword is unſheathed, they fall victims to divine juſtice, are hanged as accurſed on trees till the evening, and covered with great ſtones in the cave where they ſought their ſafety, which remained a monument long after of Iſrael's victory. Note, (1.) The ſinner who flies from God will find his ſecureſt retreat but a refuge of lies. (2.) Our triumphant Jeſus hath thus deſtroyed the principalities and powers of darkneſs, and will ſhortly bruiſe Satan, and all the other enemies of his people, under their feet.

28. ¶ And that day Joſhua took Makkedah, and ſmote it with the edge of the ſword, and the king thereof he utterly deſtroyed, them, and † all the ſouls that were therein, he let none remain: and he did to the king of Makkedah, as he did unto the king of Jericho. 29. Then Joſhua paſſed from Makkedah, and all Iſrael with him, unto Libnah, and fought againſt Libnah. 30. And the LORD delivered it alſo, and the king thereof, into the hand of Iſrael, and he ſmote it with the edge of the ſword, and all the ſouls that were therein: he let none remain in it, but did unto the king thereof, as he did unto the king of Jericho. 31. ¶ And Joſhua paſſed from Libnah, and all Iſrael with him, unto Lachiſh, and encamped againſt it, and fought againſt it. 32. And the LORD delivered Lachiſh into the hand of Iſrael, which took it on the ſecond day, and ſmote it with the edge of the ſword, and all the ſouls that were therein, according to all that he had done to Libnah. 33. ¶ Then Horam king of Gezer came up to help Lachiſh; and Joſhua ſmote him and his people, until he had left him none remaining. 34. ¶ And from Lachiſh, Joſhua paſſed unto Eglon, and all Iſrael with him, and they encamped againſt it, and fought againſt it. 35. And they took it on that day, and ſmote it with the edge of the ſword, and all the ſouls that were therein he utterly † deſtroyed that day, according to all that he had done to Lachiſh. 36. And Joſhua went up from Eglon, and all Iſrael with him, unto Hebron, and they fought againſt it. 37. And they took it, and ſmote it with the edge of the ſword, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and all the ſouls that were therein: he left none remaining (according to all that he had done to Eglon) but deſtroyed it utterly, and all the ſouls that were therein. 38. ¶ And Joſhua returned, and all Iſrael with him, to Debir, and fought againſt it. 39. And he took it, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and they ſmote them with the edge of the ſword and utterly deſtroyed all the ſouls that were therein, he left none remaining: as he had done to Hebron, ſo he did to Debir, and to the king thereof, as he had done alſo to Libnah and to her king. 40. ¶ So Joſhua ſmote all the country of the hills, and of the ſouth, and of the vale, and of the ſprings, and all their kings: [z] he left none remaining, but utterly deſtroyed † all that breathed, as the LORD God of Iſrael commanded. 41. And Joſhua ſmote them from Kadeſh-barnea, even unto Gaza, and all the country of Goſhen, even unto Gibeon. 42. And [a] all theſe kings, and their land did Joſhua take at one time: becauſe [b] the LORD God of Iſrael fought for Iſrael. 43. And Joſhua returned, and all Iſrael with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

v. 28—43. Joſhua, like a wiſe general, improves the general conſternation which the late defeat had ſpread, and makes an eaſy capture of their defenceleſs cities. Makkedah, Libnah, Lachiſh, Eglon, Hebron, and Debir, are immediately taken by ſtorm, and every living ſoul put to the ſword. Horam, king of Gezer, advancing to the ſuccour of Lachiſh, ſhares in her deſtruction; and thus at one time, in the ſpace of a few days, all the ſouth country is taken, except Jeruſalem and Jarmuth, which afterwards were, though with difficulty, ſubdued, Judg. i. 8. 2 Sam. v. 6. After theſe ſucceſsful attacks, the army retired for refreſhment into their camp at Gilgal. Note, (1.) The ſucceſs of our undertakings depends much on our ſeizing the proper opportunity; much may then be done in a ſhort time. (2.) The judgments of God in this ſevere extirpation of this accurſed race, ſhould lead us to conſider the end of impenitent ſinners. The wicked ſhall be turned into hell, and all the nations who forget God. (3.) When we have compleated our victories over the powers of ſin and Satan, we ſhall return under the conduct of our divine Joſhua, to our eternal reſt in the camp of God.

1. AND it came to paſs, when Jabin king of Hazor had heard thoſe things, that [a] he ſent to Jobab king of Madon, and to the king of Shimron, and to the king of Achſhaph, 2. And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains, ſouth of Cinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders of Dor, on the weſt; 3. And to the Canaanite on the eaſt and on the weſt, and to the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Jebuſite in the mountains, and to the Hivite under Hermon, in the land of Mizpeh. 4. And they went out, they and all their hoſts with them, much people, even [b] as the ſand that is upon the ſea-ſhore in multitude, with horſes and chariots very many. 5. And when all theſe kings were † met together, they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight againſt Iſrael. 6. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Joſhua, Be not afraid becauſe of them: for to morrow about this time will I deliver them up all ſlain before Iſrael: [c] thou ſhalt hough their horſes, and burn their chariots with fire. 7. So Joſhua came, and all the people of war with him, againſt them by the waters of Merom [d] ſuddenly, and they fell upon them. 8. And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Iſrael, who ſmote them, and chaſed them unto great Zidon, and unto ‡ Miſrephoth-maim, and unto the valley of Mizpeh eaſt-ward, and they ſmote them until they left them none remaining. 9. And Joſhua did unto them as the LORD bade him: he houghed their horſes, [e] and burnt their chariots with fire.

v. 1—9. 1. Alarmed with theſe increaſing ſucceſſes of Iſrael, the northern kings of Canaan, with Hazor at their head, and at his inſtigation, collect their forces; thoſe in the eaſt and weſt join them, ſo that the aſſociation becomes general, and with theſe united forces, amounting, ſays Joſephus, to 300,000 foot, 10,000 horſe, and 20,000 chariots, they hope to cruſh theſe cruel invaders. They become hereby the aggreſſors, and as they firſt diſturb the peace of Iſrael's camp, they juſtly fall under the power of Iſrael's arm. Note, The ſtrongeſt confederacy of ſinners, will only make their ruin more notorious.

2. Joſhua hereupon receives encouragement from God. Though a brave man, ſuch an army, and ſo accoutred, ſtrengthened with horſe, and chariots armed with ſcythes, which mowed down ranks of men before them, might beget ſome ſollicitude about the event of the battle. But he is commanded to attack them in their encampment at Merom, and God promiſes to give them up to the ſword, as dead men, unable to make reſiſtance. Note, (1.) Vain are multitudes or ſtrength againſt God.

God. (2.) The greater dangers ſurround us, the greater ſupports from God we may expect. (3.) It is uſually wiſer to meet an approaching enemy, than wait their coming; ſafer to attack, than merely to act on the defenſive.

3. Immediately Joſhua ſummons the people, and having acquainted them, no doubt, with God's promiſe, by a ſudden march they ſurprize their enemies, who are broken on the firſt attack, and fly different ways; ſome weſtward to Zidon, others eaſtward to Mizpeh, leaving their chariots and horſes an eaſy prey to their purſuers, who hewed the one, and burnt the other with fire, according to the command of God, who would not have them truſt in theſe human ſupports, but on himſelf alone for their ſucceſs. Note, The more we are taken off from every dependance, and the more entirely our heart is fixed on God as our ſtrength, the more ſurely ſhall we find our ſpiritual enemies ſubdued before us.

10. ¶ And Joſhua at that time turned back and took Hazor, and ſmote the king thereof with the ſword: for Hazor before time was the head of all thoſe kingdoms. 11. And they ſmote all the ſouls that were therein with the edge of the ſword, utterly deſtroying them: there was not † any left to breathe; and he burnt Hazor with fire. 12. And all the cities of thoſe kings, and all the kings of them did Joſhua take, and ſmote them with the edge of the ſword, and he utterly deſtroyed them, [f] as Moſes the ſervant of the LORD commanded. 13. But as for the cities that ſtood ſtill in their ſtrength, Iſrael burned none of them, ſave Hazor only: that did Joſhua burn. 14. And all [g] the ſpoil of theſe cities, and the cattle, the children of Iſrael took for a prey unto themſelves: but every man they ſmote with the edge of the ſword, until they had deſtroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.

v. 10—14. The improvement of this victory, as the former, iſſued in the ſubjection of the neighbouring cities and country. The king of Hazor eſcaping out of the battle, is taken with his city, and put to death; and as this was the head of the confederacy, it is burnt and ruined; the reſt of the cities are preſerved for their abode, with all the ſpoil found in them; but all the people, young and old, are put to the ſword, according to the Divine command, delivered by Moſes to Joſhua. 1. This was a needful ſeverity, to prevent the people from being infected with the abominations of the Canaanites. 2. It was a juſt ſeverity, the meaſure of their iniquities being now filled. Note, (1.) God is juſt in all his judgments. (2.) It becomes us to give no more quarter to the leaſt of our ſins, than they to the infant Canaanite.

15. ¶ [h] As the LORD commanded Moſes his ſervant, ſo did Moſes command Joſhua, and ſo did Joſhua: he † left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moſes. 16. So Joſhua took all that land, the hills, and all the ſouth-country, and all the land of Goſhen, and the valley, and the plain, and the mountain of Iſrael, and the valley of the ſame: 17. Even from the ‡ mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir, even unto Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon, under mount Hermon: and all their kings he took, and ſmote them, and ſlew them. 18. Joſhua made war ‖ a long time with all thoſe kings. 19. [i] There was not a city that made peace with the children of Iſrael, ſave the Hivites the inhabitants of Gibeon; all other they took in battle. 20. For [k] it was of the LORD to harden their hearts, that they ſhould come againſt Iſrael in battle, that he might deſtroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour, but that he might deſtroy them, as the LORD commanded Moſes. 21. ¶ And at that time came Joſhua, and cut off the Anakims from the mountains, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all [l] the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Iſrael: [m] Joſhua deſtroyed them utterly with their cities. 22. There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Iſrael: only in Gaza, in Gath, and in Aſhdod there remained. 23. So Joſhua took the whole land, according to all that the LORD ſaid unto Moſes, and [n] Joſhua gave it for an inheritance unto Iſrael, according to their diviſions by their tribes. And the land [o] reſted from war.

[o] Pſal. xlvi. 9. 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. Heb. ix. 8, 9.

v. 15—23. The ſtory of this war concludes happily for Iſrael, in the conqueſt of the whole land, north and ſouth. Far from being warned by their neighbours calamities, or deſpairing to obtain peace, no city but Gibeon ſought for it; but hardned as Pharaoh by the Divine judgment, came out to war with Iſrael, and ruſhed upon their own deſtruction. Thus ſtill hardneſs of heart in ſome, and deſpair of mercy in others, drives them furiouſly to purſue thoſe ways of ſin, which muſt end in their eternal perdition. This war continued ſix or ſeven years before their enemies were thoroughly ſubdued; but at laſt the conqueſt is compleated in the deſtruction of the Anakims, who had fled to the faſtneſſes of the mountains: theſe dreaded foes of Iſrael now no longer make them afraid, but are hunted from their lurking places as beaſts of prey, and ſoon fall before the devouring ſword of the conquering Joſhua. Note, (1.) We muſt not be weary of our ſpiritual warfare, nor count the time long; we ſhall finally reap, if we faint not. (2.) Our laſt difficulties in death, may, like theſe ſons of Anak, appear the greateſt, but the victory is ſure, and when we have ſtruck this ſtroke, we ſhall for ever reſt from war.

Before Chriſt 1445.

The people now begin to taſte the ſweets of repoſe, and diſperſe themſelves over the conquered country: for Joſhua, as an obedient ſervant, had faithfully accompliſhed his buſineſs; and God, as a faithful God, had fulfilled to them his promiſes, which he ſpake by his ſervant Moſes. Note, (1.) Obedience to the command, is the way to obtain the fulfilment of the promiſe. (2.) They who go forth with a dependance on God, ſhall find they are not diſappointed of their hopes. (3.) Jeſus hath accompliſhed the work of his people's ſalvation, and they who now are liſted under his banner, muſt ere long enter with him into the poſſeſſion of that glory, where their triumphs will be continued to a glorious eternity.

CHAP. XII.

This chapter is a ſummary of Iſrael's conqueſts, 1. Their conqueſts under Moſes, on the other ſide Jordan, ver. 1—6. 2. Their conqueſts under Joſhua, on this ſide Jordan weſtward. (1.) The country they reduced, ver. 7, 8. (2.) The kings they ſubdued, thirty-one in all, ver. 9—34.

1. NOW theſe are the kings of the land, which the children of Iſrael ſmote, and poſſeſſed their land on the other ſide Jordan, toward the riſing of the ſun: from the river [a] Arnon, unto mount Hermon, and all the plain on the eaſt. 2. [b] Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heſhbon, and ruled from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river, and from half Gilead even unto the river [c] Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon: 3. And from the plain to the ſea of [d] Cinneroth on the eaſt, and unto the ſea of the plain, even the ſalt-ſea on the eaſt, the way to [e] Beth-jeſhimoth: and from the ſouth, under Aſhdoth-piſgah. 4. And the coaſt of Og king of Baſhan, which was of the [f] remnant of the [g] giants, that dwelt at Aſhtaroth, and at Edrei, 5. And reigned in mount Hermon, and in [h] Salcah, and in all Baſhan, unto the border of the [i] Geſhurites, and the [k] Maachathites, and half Gilead, the border of Sihon king of Heſhbon. 6. Them did Moſes the ſervant of the LORD, and the children of Iſrael ſmite, and Moſes the ſervant of the LORD gave it for a poſſeſſion unto the [l] Reubenites, and Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh.

v. 1—6. Former mercies muſt not be forgotten, nor the paſt ſervices of Moſes be eclipſed by the preſent glare of Joſhua's conqueſts; we have here therefore a general review of their whole conqueſts, in order to their diſtribution. The country of Og and Sihon was their firſt conqueſt, and this was divided between Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manaſſeh, in Moſes' life-time. Note, On this ſide Jordan, the people of God have poſſeſſion of ſome bleſſings, as pardon, peace, comfort, &c. but their chief inheritance lies beyond the grave, where the fulneſs of the promiſes ſhall be accompliſhed in the glory that ſhall be revealed.

7. ¶ And theſe are the kings of the country which Joſhua and the children of Iſrael ſmote on this ſide Jordan on the weſt, from Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon, even unto the [m] mount Halak, that goeth up to [n] Seir, which Joſhua gave unto the tribes of Iſrael for a poſſeſſion, according to their diviſions: 8. In the mountains, and in the valleys, and in the plains, and in the ſprings, and in the wilderneſs, and in the ſouth-country: the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebuſites. 9. ¶ The king of [o] Jericho, one: the king of [p] Ai, which is beſide Beth-el, one: 10. The king of [q] Jeruſalem, one: the king of Hebron, one: 11. The king of Jarmuth, one: the king of Lachiſh, one: 12. The king of Eglon, one;

v. 7—24. The conquered countries of Canaan are here deſcribed, and the cities with their kings, no leſs than thirty-one. A proof of the vaſt fertility of the land, that could maintain ſuch a number of populous cities with their villages. But as God's bleſſing made it thus fruitful for his people's ſake, their ſin hath long ſince brought down a curſe of barrenneſs upon it, ſo that there is hardly a town of importance left, and the land ſo deſolate, that it ſcarce maintains the few wretched inhabitants which remain.

CHAP. XIII.

At this chapter begins the account of the dividing of the land of Canaan among the tribes of Iſrael by lot; a narrative not ſo entertaining and inſtructive as that of the conqueſt of it, yet neceſſary for preſerving the ſeveral inheritances to each tribe. And ſince the divine wiſdom hath penned it, we are called upon to hear and read it, and may be aſſured there is profiting to be obtained from it, if God gives the underſtanding heart. In it, 1. God informs Joſhua what parts of the country were intended in the grant to Iſrael, and yet remained unconquered, ver. 1—6. 2. He appoints him to make a diſtribution of what was conquered, ver. 7. 3. To complete this account here is a repetition of the diſtribution Moſes had made of the land on the other ſide Jordan; in general, ver. 8—14. In particular, the lot of Reuben, ver. 15—23. Of Gad, ver. 24—28. Of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, ver. 29—33.

1. NOW Joſhua was old and ſtricken in years; and the LORD ſaid unto him, Thou art old and ſtricken in years, and there [a] remaineth yet very much land to be poſſeſſed. 2. This is the land that yet remaineth: all the border of the [b] Philiſtines, and all [c] Geſhuri. 3. From [d] Sihor, which is before Egypt, even unto the borders of Ekron northward, which is [e] counted to the Canaanite: five lords of the Philiſtines; the Gazathites, and the Aſhdothites, the Eſhkalonites, the Gittites, and the Ekronites; alſo the Avites. 4. From the ſouth, all the land of the Canaanites, and Mearah that is beſide the Sidonians, unto Aphek, to the borders of the Amorites. 5. And the land of the [f] Giblites, and all [g] Lebanon toward the ſun-riſing, from [h] Baal-gad under mount Hermon, unto the entring into [i] Hamath, 6. All the inhabitants of the hill-country from Lebanon unto [k] Miſrephoth-maim, and all the Sidonians, them will I drive out from before the children of Iſrael: only divide thou it by lot unto the Iſraelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded thee.

v. 1—6. Joſhua now was growing old, and the fatigues of war probably haſtened infirmities upon him, God therefore gives him reſt after his toils, and as his finiſhing ſervice, appoints him to make the diviſion of what yet ſhould be conquered, as well as of the country already poſſeſſed. Note, (1.) Old age wants a quiet reſting-place, and after a buſy life, to be recollected againſt the near approach of death. (2.) The ſtrongeſt muſt bow, and the beſt of men pay this tribute to nature; and they who are advancing in years, need be reminded of it, that what yet they have to do, they may do quickly. (3.) The vigour of life was fitteſt for war, but age and experience for dividing the land: thus every ſeaſon of life hath its bleſſing and buſineſs.

The country here deſcribed was very extenſive, yet God promiſes to put them in poſſeſſion of it, if they continued obedient. If the Philiſtines afterwards proved ſuch troubleſome neighbours, they muſt blame their ſins, which prevented their extirpation; and their negligence or cowardice, which reſtrained them from putting in force the liberty given them, by the Divine promiſe. Note, If we ſin againſt our own mercies, we have nobody but ourſelves to blame for our ſufferings.

7. Now therefore, [m] divide this land for an inheritance, unto the nine tribes, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, 8. With whom the Reubenites, and the Gadites have received their inheritance, which Moſes gave them beyond Jordan eaſtward, even as [n] Moſes the ſervant of the LORD gave them: 9. From Aroer that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midſt of the river, and all the plain of [o] Medeba unto [p] Dibon: 10. And all the cities of [q] Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heſhbon, unto the border of the children of Ammon: 11. And [r] Gilead, and the border of the Geſhurites, and [s] Maachathites, and all mount Hermon, and all Baſhan unto Salcah: 12. All the kingdom of Og in Baſhan, which reigned in Aſhtaroth, and in Edrei, who remained of the remnant of the [t] giants: for theſe did Moſes ſmite, and caſt them out. 13. Nevertheleſs, the children of Iſrael [u] expelled not the Geſhurites, nor the Maachathites, but the Geſhurites and the Maachathites dwell among the Iſraelites until this day. 14. Only unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance; the [x] ſacrifices of the LORD God of Iſrael made by fire, are their inheritance, as he ſaid unto them. 15. ¶ And Moſes gave unto the tribe of the children of Reuben, inheritance according to their families: 16. And their coaſt was from [y] Aroer that is on the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midſt of the river, and all the plain by Medeba: 17. [z] Heſhbon and all her cities that are in the plain; Dibon and † Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon, 18. And [a] Jahaza, and Kedemoth, and Mephaath, 19. And Kirjathaim, and Sibmah, and Zarethſhahar, in the mount of the valley, 20. And [b] Beth-peor, and Aſhdoth-piſgah, and [c] Beth-jeſhimoth, 21. And all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heſhbon, whom [d] Moſes ſmote, with the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon, dwelling in the country. 22. ¶ [e] Balaam alſo the ſon of Beor [f] the ſoothſayer did the children of Iſrael ſlay with the ſword, [g] among them that were ſlain by them. 23. And the border of the children of Reuben, was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities, and the villages thereof. 24. And Moſes gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad, according to their families: 25. And their coaſt was [h] Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, and [i] half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer, that is before [k] Rabbah: 26. And from Heſhbon unto [l] Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim: and from [m] Mahanaim unto the border of [n] Debir: 27. And in the valley, [o] Beth-aram, and [p] Beth-nimrah, and Succoth, and Zaphon, the reſt of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heſhbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge of the ſea of Cinnereth, on the other ſide Jordan eaſtward. 28. This is the inheritance of the children of Gad, after their families, the cities and their villages. 29. ¶ And Moſes gave inheritance unto the half-tribe of Manaſſeh: and this was the poſſeſſion of the half-tribe of the children of Manaſſeh, by their families, 30. And their coaſt was from Mahanaim, all Baſhan, all the kingdom of Og king of Baſhan, and all the towns of [q] Jair, which are in Baſhan, threeſcore cities: 31. And half Gilead, and [r] Aſhtaroth, and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Baſhan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the ſon of Manaſſeh, even to [s] the one half of the children of Machir by their families. 32. Theſe are the countries which Moſes did diſtribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab on the other ſide Jordan, by Jericho eaſtward. 33. But unto the [t] tribe of Levi Moſes gave not any inheritance: the LORD God of Iſrael was their inheritance, as he ſaid unto them.

v. 7—33. The diviſion of the land is here committed to Joſhua's care; not that it was referred to his diſcretion, but decided by lots, he preſiding to ſee them fairly drawn, and to enforce compliance, that there might be no murmuring. Every man's portion is called his inheritance; for though won by the ſword, ſword, it was in virtue of the promiſe made unto their fathers. Nine tribes and half only are to inherit in Canaan; the other two tribes and half having received their inheritance, which is here deſcribed, with their cities and boundaries. They muſt know their own, that they may not, on pretence of the promiſe, diſturb the poſſeſſions allotted their neighbours by God's providence. Reuben's lot is firſt, comprehending the chief part of the kingdom of Sihon. The tribe of Gad poſſeſſed Gilead, and Manaſſeh the kingdom of Og king of Baſhan. And in this deſcription of the country, it is obſerved, 1. That the Geſhurites and Maachathites were ſuffered to dwell unmoleſted in their cities. 2. Particular notice is taken of the death of Balaam: a brand is fixed upon his wickedneſs, and we may ſtill ſay, Mark the end of ſuch men. 3. It is repeatedly mentioned that the Levites had no lot among their brethren, but they had a better, the Lord, who was their portion, and by his ſervice they were liberally provided for. Note, They who have a portion in the Lord, need not envy the world the poſſeſſion of the land.

1. AND theſe are the countries which the children of Iſrael inherited in the land of Canaan, which [a] Eleazar the prieſt, and Joſhua the ſon of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Iſrael diſtributed for inheritance unto them. 2. [b] By lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moſes, for the nine tribes, and for the half-tribe. 3. For Moſes had given the inheritance of two tribes, and an half-tribe, on the other ſide Jordan: but [c] unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them. 4. For the children of Joſeph were [d] two tribes, Manaſſeh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, ſave [e] cities to dwell in, with their ſuburbs for their cattle, and for their ſubſtance. 5. As the LORD commanded Moſes, ſo the children of Iſrael did, and they divided the land.

v. 1—5. The land on the other ſide Jordan being already divided, it remained to aſſign each his lot in Canaan, that every man may know his own property, and not interfere with his neighbour. For this purpoſe, the ten princes appointed (Num. xxxiv. 17.) with Joſhua, and Eleazar the high-prieſt, proceed to the diviſion, and this by lot, referring themſelves to God's ſovereignty in the diſpoſal of the land, and chearfully ready to acquieſce in his determination. Notice is taken here of Joſeph's inheriting a double ſhare, and thus the twelve tribes are compleat, though Levi hath no inheritance among his brethren, except the cities allotted him out of each tribe. Note, (1.) They who refer themſelves to God to chuſe for them, will never have cauſe to repent of their lot. (2.) Believers in Jeſus Chriſt are ſaid to obtain by lot their inheritance, Eph. i. 11. as it is in virtue of the Divine choice and ſovereignty, that eternal life is beſtowed on them.

6. ¶ Then the children of [f] Judah came unto Joſhua in [g] Gilgal: and Caleb the ſon of Jephunneh the Kenezite, ſaid unto him, Thou knoweſt the thing that the LORD ſaid unto Moſes [h] the man of God, concerning me and thee, in Kadeſh-barnea. 7. [i] Forty years old was I when Moſes the ſervant of the LORD ſent me from Kadeſh-barnea to eſpy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart. 8. Nevertheleſs my brethren that went up with me, made the heart of the people [k] melt: but I † wholly followed the LORD my God. 9. And Moſes [l] ſware on that day, ſaying, Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden, ſhall be thine inheritance, and thy childrens for ever: becauſe thou haſt wholly followed the LORD my God. 10. And now behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as he ſaid, theſe forty and five years, ever ſince the LORD ſpake this word unto Moſes, while the children of Iſrael wandred in the wilderneſs: and now, lo, I am this day fourſcore and five years old. 11. As yet I am as ſtrong this day, as I was in the day that Moſes ſent me: as my ſtrength was then, even ſo is my ſtrength now, for war, both [m] to go out and to come in. 12. Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the LORD ſpake in that day, (for thou heardſt in that day how the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced) [n] if ſo be the LORD will be with me, then I ſhall be able to drive them out, as the LORD ſaid. 13. And Joſhua [o] bleſſed him, and gave unto Caleb the ſon of Jephunneh, [p] Hebron for an inheritance. 14. Hebron therefore [q] became the inheritance of Caleb the ſon of Jephunneh the Kenezite, unto this day: becauſe that he wholly followed the LORD God of Iſrael. 15. And the name of Hebron before was [r] Kirjath-arba, which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. And the land had [s] reſt from war.

v. 6—15. Caleb in right of former promiſe, when now the land was about to be divided, puts in his claim for a particular poſſeſſion in Hebron, which as being given him of God, ought not to be put into a lot, God's will being determined before by his promiſe. The children of Judah accompany him to ſupport his plea, which he urges with great ſimplicity, deep piety, and noble courage.

1. He mentions his faithful report amongſt the faithleſs ſpies; not by way of proud boaſting, but to the honour of God, whom he followed, ſpeaking the truth from his heart. Note, (1.) It is not pride, but due acknowledgment, to declare what a gracious God hath done for us, and by us. (2.) The more ſingular our fidelity to God hath been, the more commendable. (3.) They who ſerved God in ſimplicity in their youth, will find the comfort and bleſſing of it when they are old.

2. He repeats his long experience of God's care of him, as kept alive for the fulfilment of the promiſe; five and forty years he had been preſerved, when all the men of his own age had long ſince been buried: and he not only lived, but was as ſtrong as ever, as if reſerved at eighty-five more glorioſly to magnify the Divine power in the deſtruction of thoſe ſons of Anak, which had ſo terrified the hoſt of Iſrael in the wilderneſs. Note, (1.) The iſſues of life are in God's hand; nor age, nor ſickneſs, nor the ſword, can hurt thoſe whoſe preſervation he determines. (2.) Every year we are ſpared, is a call for new thankfulneſs to him, who keepeth our ſouls in life. (3.) The death of others around us, ſhould make us more ſenſible of the mercy which preſerves us. (4.) A vigorous old age is an unuſual bleſſing.

3. He pleads the promiſe made him by Moſes, Num. xiv. 24. The mount Hebron, though not there named, was evidently deſigned. The Anakims, who dwelt there, were ſo far from intimidating Caleb, that he deſired no better portion than to win it and wear it; and as a reward of his courage and fidelity, the promiſe was made him. Note, They who have God's promiſe, have good ſecurity.

4. He offers now, aged as he was, to diſpoſſeſs the Anakims, who were, after the taking the city of Hebron, retired to the faſtneſſes of the mountains, and doubts not but by the Divine bleſſing, to which alone he truſted, to be able to ſubdue them. Note, (1.) They who truſt on God, will find themſelves never diſappointed of their hope. (2.) If God be with us, the ſons of Anak, our giant-like corruptions, muſt fall before us.

5. Joſhua admits the claim, and conſents to the offer; commends his courage, and prays for his ſucceſs. Accordingly the country about Hebron, formerly called Kirjath-Arba, the city of Arba, perhaps from ſome great man its builder, became his inheritance, the city itſelf being given to the Levites, and appointed one of the cities of refuge. Thus Caleb received his reward, for having wholly followed the Lord; and they who carefully copy his ſteps, ſhall as ſurely ſhare his bleſſing, in a better country, that is, an heavenly.

v. 1—12. Judah and Joſeph being the moſt diſtinguiſhed, have the firſt lots caſt for them in Gilgal, the one at the northern, the other at the ſouthern border; and afterwards in Shiloh the other tribes had their inheritance by lot between them. Judah had all the ſouth, and each family, as well as each tribe, was ſettled in their particular inheritance, by theſe divinely-appointed commiſſioners, from whoſe deciſion there could be no reaſon to appeal. The boundaries are fixed from the ſouthern point of the ſea of Sodom, to the Mediterranean, on which frontier lay the land of Edom; the eaſtern coaſt extended the whole length of the ſalt-ſea, to the fountains of Jordan: the northern border lay along the lot of Benjamin, including mount Zion and Moriah, which became a part of Jeruſalem, as afterwards enlarged; and in it notice is taken of the ſtone of Bohan, either a ſepulchral monument, or raiſed to perpetuate the remembrance of ſome gallant action performed by this brave Reubenite; and of the valley of Achor, where a rebellious ſon of Judah was ſtoned: the weſtern border ran down to the Mediterranean ſea and its coaſts. It muſt be obſerved, however, that afterwards Simeon had a part of this weſtern coaſt allotted him; and Dan and Benjamin, who were appendant to Judah, poſſeſſed alſo ſome cities included in theſe boundaries. Note, (1.) It is good to have certain limits fixed, to prevent diſputes. (2.) They who have the largeſt portion to poſſeſs, have the largeſt frontiers to defend: when our advantages and diſadvantages are balanced, God's diſtributions will not be found ſo unequal, as at firſt ſight they may appear.

13. ¶ [k] And unto Caleb the ſon of Jephunneh, he gave a part among the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the LORD to Joſhua, even † the city of Arba the father of Anak, which city is Hebron. 14. And Caleb drove thence [l] the three ſons of Anak, [m] Sheſhai, and Ahiman, and Talmai, the children of Anak. 15. And [n] he went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir: and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-ſepher. 16. ¶ And Caleb ſaid, [o] He that ſmiteth Kirjath-ſepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achſah my daughter to wife. 17. And [p] Othniel the ſon of Kenaz, the brother of Caleb took it: and he gave him Achſah his daughter to wife. 18. And it came to paſs, as ſhe came unto him, that ſhe moved him to aſk of her father a field: and [q] ſhe lighted off her aſs; and Caleb ſaid unto her, What wouldſt thou? 19. Who anſwered, Give me a bleſſing; for thou haſt given me a ſouth-land, give me alſo ſprings of water: and he gave her the upper ſprings, and the nether ſprings.

v. 13—19. Caleb's portion, though allowed him according to his claim, falls providentially in the midſt of the lot of his brethren of the tribe of Judah. And as he muſt poſſeſs it by the ſword, we have it for his honour reported, that he conquered it from the ſons of Anak. They ſeem to have fled at his approach, becauſe they felt reſiſtance was vain: the inhabitants of Debir only ſtood on the defenſive; formerly called Kirjath-ſepher, the City of Books, as if it had been famous as a place of literature. Though this city had been taken, chap. x. 39. yet being deſerted, the Canaanites, it ſeems, returned and repaired the fortifications. To animate his troops therefore for the attack, he promiſes his daughter Achſah in marriage to the perſon who ſhould take the city. Othniel, his brother's ſon, ſeizes the glad occaſion; to gain the object of his love, he flies to the attack, and ſignalizes his valour in the capture of the city: an early preſage of his future advancement as judge in Iſrael. Note, They who in age would be reſpected, muſt ſpend their youth in deeds of honour and virtue. Caleb immediately fulfils his promiſe, and Othniel is made happy in his beloved Achſah. Note, Among the firſt of human bleſſings, is the union of their hands in marriage, whoſe hearts were before united in faithful love. With his wife, Othniel received an inheritance in land: Achſah obſerving the ſituation, as a ſouth land, which being expoſed to the ſun, would be parched, moved her huſband to aſk for another field, in which were ſprings of water; but Othniel ſuggeſting probably that ſhe was more likely to obtain it, in token of reſpect to her father, ſhe alighted, and aſked the bleſſing or favour of him, to beſtow upon her the ſprings of water in the upper field: but in this he exceeded her expectations, for he gave her both the upper and nether ſprings. Note, (1.) When parents marry their children, they are in duty bound liberally to ſupply them with what they need, and themſelves can well ſpare. (2.) Huſband and wife have but one intereſt, and ſhould have one purſe as well as one heart. (3.) We may without danger of ſin, deſire the comforts and conveniences of life, and uſe any lawful means to procure them. (4.) If an earthly father is ſo kind, ſhall we not experience greater favours from our father in heaven, when we pray unto him? (5.) They who have the nether ſprings of earthly bleſſings, and the upper ſprings of Divine grace beſtowed on them, have abundant reaſon to be ſatisfied and thankful for their lot.

20. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Judah according to their families. 21. And the uttermoſt cities of the tribe of the children of Judah toward the coaſt of Edom ſouthward, were Kabzeel, and Eder, and Jagur, 22. And Kinah, and Dimonah, and Adadah, 23. v. 20—63. In Judah's lot alone lay an hundred and fourteen cities. The names of ſome of the diviſions are more than the ſum total, probably becauſe the unwalled towns, though above villages, are not reckoned among the cities. No mention is made of Bethlehem; though ſo diſtinguiſhed in after-times; it ſeems not to be yet built, or to be among the villages. Some alſo of theſe cities they never poſſeſſed, ſuch were thoſe belonging to the Philiſtines: and Jeruſalem itſelf yet was in the hands of the Jebuſites: through ſloth, or wearineſs of the war, or doubtful of their ability to take ſo impregnable a fortreſs as it was judged, they ſuffered them to remain among them till the reign of David. Note, Sloth and unbelief are dangerous enemies in our Chriſtian warfare; how much more could we have done for God and our ſouls, had we a heart to truſt him, and zeal to ſerve him.

5. ¶ And the border of the children of Ephraim, according to their families, was thus: even the border of their inheritance on the eaſt-ſide, was Ataroth-addar unto [d] Beth-horon the upper. 6. And the border went out toward the ſea to Michmethah on the north-ſide, and the border went about eaſtward unto Taanath-ſhiloh, and paſſed by it on the eaſt to Janohah: 7. And it went down from Janohah to Ataroth and [e] to Naarath, and came to Jericho, and went out at Jordan. 8. v. 5—10. Ephraim's border reached ſouth to Dan and Benjamin, from eaſt to weſt from Jordan to the ſea, having Manaſſeh on the north. In it lay Samaria, the capital afterwards of the revolted tribes. Mention is here made of ſeparate cities and villages, which lay in the lot of Manaſſeh. Being brethren, they could beſt be intermixed without diſpute, as they would love as brethren. A reproach is here caſt upon them for ſparing the Gezerites, a city in their diviſion: they preferred making them tributary to extirpating them; either ſoftened by their ſubmiſſion, and becoming proſelytes, to pity them, or thro' covetouſneſs inclined to profit themſelves by their ſervice. Note, Though our ſins be not utterly caſt out, reſpecting their being, they muſt be broken reſpecting their power, and be brought into ſubjection by every true Iſraelite.

The half-tribe of Manaſſeh comes next to be provided for; and here we have, 1. The families of that tribe that were to be portioned, ver. 1—6. 2. The country that fell to their lot, ver. 7—13. 3. The joint requeſt of the two tribes that deſcended from Joſeph, for the enlargement of their lot, and Joſhua's anſwer to that requeſt, ver. 14—18.

1. THere was alſo [a] a lot for the tribe of Manaſſeh; (for he was [b] the firſt-born of Joſeph) to wit, for [c] Machir the firſt-born of Manaſſeh, the father of Gilead: becauſe he was [d] a man of war, therefore he had Gilead and Baſhan. 2. There was alſo a lot for [e] the reſt of the children of Manaſſeh by their families; for the children of Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, and for the children of Aſriel, and for the children of Shechem, and for the children of Hepher, and for the children of Shemida: theſe were the male children of Manaſſeh the ſon of Joſeph by their families. 3. ¶ But [f] Zelophehad the ſon of Hepher, the ſon of Gilead, the ſon of Machir, the ſon of Manaſſeh, had no ſons, but daughters: and theſe are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah. 4. The other families had their lots in Canaan, which were divided into ſix ſhares, according to the number of the ſons of Gilead here mentioned. Zelophehad the ſon of Hepher having no male iſſue, his ſhare was ſubdivided between his five daughters. They had claimed it in the wilderneſs before the conqueſt, and God having approved of their plea, they might well plead their right, and aſſuredly ſucceed. Note, If in the wilderneſs of the world we ſecure a title to glory, under the Divine promiſe, we ſhall not fail, when the conqueſt by death is compleated, to poſſeſs our inheritance.

7. ¶ And the coaſt of Manaſſeh was from Aſher to Michmethah, that lieth before Shechem, and the border went along on the right-hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah. 8. Now Manaſſeh had the land of Tappuah: but Tappuah on the border of Manaſſeh belonged to the children of Ephraim. 9. They alſo ſuffered the Canaanites to live among them, negligent to improve the advantage God gave them at firſt, and ſuffering them ſo to ſtrengthen themſelves in judgment afterwards, that they were not able to drive them out; but they became in time tributary, and thus were more ſerviceable than if deſtroyed. Note, (1.) If we loſe the opportunity God puts in our power, when we would afterwards ſucceed, it is too late. (2.) God can bring good to us out of our evil; but that is no excuſe for ſinful negligence. (3.) v. 14—18. The children of Joſeph, whoſe lot lay together, or perhaps Manaſſeh alone, who was now become a very numerous people, bring their complaint to Joſhua.

1. They were a great people, and God had bleſſed them; for to him muſt be ever aſcribed the bleſſing of our increaſe: their lot, they ſay, therefore was too ſmall for their numbers; and the more ſo, as great part of it was in the hand of the Canaanites; and thoſe too the beſt provided for war, having chariots with iron ſcythes, to mow down men as ſtanding corn. Note, Unbelief heightens every difficulty, and makes us fear where no fear is.

2. Joſhua retorts upon them their own acknowledgments: if they were great, they had hands enough to labour or to fight. The wood country might be cleared, and there would be land in plenty. Induſtry will ſoon relieve neceſſity, whilſt idleneſs is uſually the only cauſe of poverty: and if, as they complain, that would not ſuffice them, they need not fear the chariots of Canaan, when God was with them, and had promiſed to drive out the Canaanites before them. Note, Though God ſecures the victory over corruption by his promiſes, we muſt fight the good fight, if we will wear the crown, and win the prize.

2. And there remained among the children of Iſrael ſeven tribes, which had not yet received their inheritance. 3. And Joſhua ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, [c] How long are you ſlack to go to poſſeſs the land which the LORD God of your fathers hath given you? 4. Give out from among you three men for each tribe: and I will ſend them, and they ſhall riſe, and † go thro' the land, and [d] deſcribe it according to the inheritance of them, and they ſhall come again to me. 5. And they ſhall divide it into ſeven parts: [e] Judah ſhall abide in their coaſt on [f] the ſouth, and the houſe of Joſeph ſhall abide in their coaſts on the north. 6. Ye ſhall therefore deſcribe the land into ſeven parts, and bring the deſcription hither to me, that I may caſt lots for you here [g] before the LORD our God. 7. But the Levites have [h] no part among you, for [i] the prieſthood of the LORD is their inheritance: and Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manaſſeh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the eaſt, which Moſes the ſervant of the LORD gave them. 8. ¶ And the men aroſe and went away: and Joſhua charged them that went to deſcribe the land, ſaying, Go, and walk through the land, and deſcribe it, and come again to me, that I may here caſt lots [k] for you before the LORD in Shiloh. 9. And the men went and paſſed through the land, and deſcribed it by cities into ſeven parts in a book, and came again to Joſhua to the hoſt at Shiloh. 10. ¶ And Joſhua [l] caſt lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joſhua divided the land unto the children of Iſrael, according to their diviſions.

v. 2—10. Though ſeven tribes were yet unſettled, there was ſuch plenty from the ſpoil of the Canaanites, and they were ſo taken with the ſtate of peace they enjoyed after the toils of war, that they ſeem not at all ſollicitous to proceed in the diviſion of the land; in doing which they muſt not only be ſeparated from each other, and many a comfortable connection be diſſolved, but muſt renew their warfare, to reſcue the cities in their ſeveral lots, that were in the hands of their enemies. Note, (1.) The ſweets of worldly comforts and connections are very apt to draw off our minds from deſire after our inheritance in heaven. (2.) The difficulties that appear in the way to heaven, are often diſcouragements from labouring thither, though they are uſually the creatures of our unbelief and ſloth. Joſhua obſerving this, 1. Reproves their negligence. Whilſt they were trifling, the Canaanites might recover courage and ſtrength, and they might have all their work to do over again. Note, To do things by halves, is always the way to have double trouble: once well done, is done for ever. 2. He ſets them upon the proper method of proceeding: three men out of each of the ſeven tribes are choſen to ſurvey the remaining country, and divide it nearly into ſeven equal ſhares. Levi having no lot, and the other five tribes being ſettled in their inheritance. This being done, and the cities and country deſcribed in a book, the lots are drawn before the tabernacle, under Joſhua's inſpection, and each tribe receives its diviſion. Note, Some believers enter into their reſt ſooner than others in this world; and in the next, eternal reſt is obtained as the lot of death is caſt, and we are called away in youth or age: but whether ſooner or later, the reſt is ſure to all the ſeed, and the manſions of glory ready prepared for their reception.

11. ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, [m] came up according to their families: and the coaſt of their lot came forth [n] between the children of Judah, and the children of Joſeph. 12. And their border on the north-ſide was from Jordan, and the border went up to the ſide of Jericho, on the north-ſide, and went up through the mountains weſt-ward, and the goings-out thereof were at the wilderneſs of Beth-aven. 13. And the border went over from thence toward Luz, to the ſide of Luz, (which is Beth-el) ſouthward, and the border deſcended to Atarothadar, near the hill that lieth on the ſouth-ſide of [o] the nether Beth-horon. 14. And the ſouth-quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the weſt, and went out to the well of waters of Nephtoah. 16. And the border came down to the end of the mountain that lieth before the valley of [p] the ſon of Hinnom, and which is in the valley of the giants on the north, and deſcended to the valley of Hinnom, to the ſide of Jebuſi on the ſouth, and deſcended to [q] En-rogel, 17. Now the cities of the tribe of the children of Benjamin according to their families, were Jericho, and Beth-hoglah, and the valley of Keziz, 22. And Beth-arabah, and Zemaraim, and Bethel, 23. And Avim, and Parah, and Ophrah, 24. And Chephar-haammonai, and Ophni, and Gaba: twelve cities with their villages. 25. Gibeon, and Rama, and Beeroth, 26. And Mizpeh, and Chephirah, and Mozah, 27. v. 11—28. Benjamin's lot lay between Joſeph and Judah. United to the one by peculiar ties of blood, but cleaving to the other where the temple was, in all the after-revolutions of that country. It had Joſeph on the north, Judah on the ſouth, Jordan on the eaſt, and Dan on the weſt. Of this tribe was the great apoſtle Paul.

Here is, 1. The lot of Simeon, ver. 1—9. 2. Of Zebulun, ver. 10—16. 3. Of Iſſachar, ver. 17—23. 4. Of Aſher, ver. 24—31. 5. Of Naphtali, ver. 32—39. 6. Of Dan, ver. 40—48. Laſtly, The inheritance aſſigned to Joſhua himſelf and his own family, ver. 49, 50, 51.

1. AND the ſecond lot came forth to Simeon, even for the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families: and their inheritance was [a] within the inheritance of the children of Judah. 2. And [b] they had in their inheritance Beer-ſheba, † and Sheba, and Moladah, 3. And Hazar-ſhual, and Balah, and Azem, 4. And Eltolad, and Bethul, and Hormah, 5. And Ziklag, and Beth-markaboth, and Hazarſuſah, 6. And Beth-lebaoth, and Sharuhen: thirteen cities and their villages. 7. Ain, Remmon, and Ether, and Aſhan: four cities and their villages. 8. And all the villages that were round about theſe cities to Baalath-beer, Ramath of the ſouth. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families. 9. Out of the portion of the children of Judah, was the inheritance of the children of Simeon: for the part of the children of Judah was [c] too much for them: therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.

v. 1—9. The lot of Simeon lay entirely within the tribe of Judah; for on a review, it appearing that Judah had more than it could occupy, part of it was aſſigned to Simeon, who was, according to the prophecy, ſcattered in Jacob; but by this means became cloſely connected with Judah: and in the ſeparation of the tribes, chiefly adhered to the kings of Judah and the temple. Note, (1.) It is but juſt if our neighbour wants, and we have more than we need, to communicate to him, out of our abundance. (2.) It is a mercy to be connected with thoſe, who are in communion with God, and cloſely devoted to his worſhip and ſervice.

10. ¶ And the third lot came up for the children of Zebulun, according to their families: and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid. 11. And their border went up [d] toward the ſea, and Maralah, and reached to Dabbaſheth, and reached to the river that is before Jokneam, 12. And turned from Sarid eaſt-ward, toward the ſun-riſing, unto the border of [e] Chiſloth-tabor, and then goeth out to Daberath, and goeth up to Japhia, 13. And from thence paſſeth on along on the eaſt to Gittah-hepher, to Ittah-kazin, and goeth out to Remmon-methoar to Neah. 14. And the border compaſſeth it on the north-ſide to Hannathon: and the out-goings thereof are in the valley of Jiphthah-el. 15. And Kattah, and Nahallal, and Shimron, and Idalah, and Beth-lehem: twelve cities with their villages. 16. 17. ¶ And the fourth lot came out to Iſſachar, for the children of Iſſachar, according to their families. 18. And their border was toward [f] Jezreel, and Cheſulloth, and [g] Shunem, 19. Jezreel, Ahab's royal city Shunem, wherein dwelt the kind hoſteſs of Elijah, Kiſhon famed for Deborah's victory, Gilboa where Saul fell, and the valley of Megiddo where Joſiah was ſlain, lay in this tribe.

24. ¶ And the fifth lot came out for the tribe of the children of Aſher, according to their families. 25. And their border was Helkath, and Hali, and Beten, and Achſhaph, 26. v. 49—51. The coaſt being now equitably diſtributed, it was but reaſon that Joſhua ſhould have a goodly heritage among them; though like a public-ſpirited governor, his own intereſt is his leaſt and laſt concern. He hath therefore his choice given him, each being ready to relinquiſh to him, who had deſerved ſo well of the whole. That the ſlayer that killeth any perſon † unawares, and unwittingly, may flee thither: and they ſhall be your refuge from the avenger of blood. 4. And when he that doth flee unto one of thoſe cities, ſhall [c] ſtand at the entring of the gate of the city, and ſhall declare his cauſe in the ears of the elders of that city; they ſhall ‡ take him into the city unto them, and give him a place that he may dwell among them. 5. v. 1—6. The cities of refuge were a common bleſſing for every Iſraelite, whoſe unhappy lot it might be to need their protection; and therefore it was every man's intereſt to have this proviſion made, as ſoon as they had ſettled the diviſion of the land. Hither the manſlayer might flee, and be in ſafety; and if he out-lived the high-prieſt, might return unto his own city in peace. Note, The goſpel hath provided for ſinners, in Chriſt Jeſus, a ſurer refuge from the avenging wrath of God; the ſoul who flies thither, ſhall not only be freed from fear of death, but be refreſhed with the conſolations of the Divine favour and love.

v. 7—9. The three cities on the other ſide Jordan had been appointed by Moſes, Bezer, Ramoth, and Golan. Theſe on this ſide Jordan, were Kedeſh in Naphtali, Hebron in Judah, and Shechem in Ephraim; and they were ſo ſituated, as to ſtand at the moſt convenient diſtances, that all the tribes might be near one or other of them. Note, Salvation is near, and Jeſus a very preſent help to all who call upon him. Theſe were all Levite cities, where, if the poor baniſhed manſlayer was cut off from his friends and relations, he had the beſt of company, and peculiar opportunities of ſpiritual improvement. Note, It will reconcile us to every providential change of ſituation, to think more of the mercies we enjoy, than of the comforts we loſe. The names of theſe cities are very ſignificative; Kedeſh, holineſs; Shechem, a ſhoulder; Hebron, fellowſhip; Bezer, a fortreſs; Ramoth, high; and Golan, joy. Thus in the perfection of our Redeemer's holineſs, lies the ſecurity of the ſinner's hope; on his ſhoulder the government is laid, ſo that no enemy can hurt us: the ſweeteſt communion is that which can be enjoyed through faith in him; his arms of love are a ſtrong-hold, and his exaltation is the pledge of our own, for he ſhall bring all who have fled to him for refuge, to Zion, with everlaſting joy upon their heads.

They who are backward to ſupport it, not only defraud men, but rob God. (3.) The Levites were laſt provided for: worldly intereſts muſt be among the leaſt and laſt concerns of a godly miniſter.

Their plea was immediately complied with, and each tribe, according to its extent, aſſigned a proportionable number of their cities, to make up the compliment of forty-eight, which was God's appointment. Theſe, with their ſuburbs, and a ſpace of land around them were allotted them, and being thus diſperſed through the tribes, they were a general bleſſing. Theſe cities were divided into four lots. The family of Aaron had their lot caſt in Judah, Simeon, and Benjamin, God ſo ordering it, that as they were the family of prieſts, they might be neareſt that city, where in after-times his temple ſhould be built. The Kohathites had their portion in Dan, Ephraim and Manaſſeh in Canaan; the Gerſhonites in Iſſachar; Aſher, Naphtali, and Manaſſeh in Baſhan; the Merarites, moſt remote, are fixed in Reuben, Gad and Zebulun.

with her ſuburbs, 14. And [o] Jattir with her ſuburbs, and Eſhtemoa with her ſuburbs. 15. And ‖ Holon with her ſuburbs, and Debir with her ſuburbs, 16.
And Ain with her ſuburbs, and Juttah with her ſuburbs, and Beth-ſhemeſh with her ſuburbs: nine cities out of thoſe two tribes. 17. And out of the tribe of Benjamin,
four cities. 19. All the cities of the children of Aaron, the prieſts, were thirteen cities with their ſuburbs.
20. ¶ And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites, which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim. 21. For they gave them [p] Shechem with her ſuburbs, in mount Ephraim, to be a city of refuge for the ſlayer; and Gezer with her ſuburbs, 22.
And Kibzaim with her ſuburbs, and Beth-horon with her ſuburbs: four cities. 23. And out of the tribe of
ſuburbs. 24. Aijalon with her ſuburbs, Gath-rimmon with her ſuburbs: four cities. 25. And out of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, Tanach with her ſuburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her ſuburbs: two cities. 26. All the cities were ten with their ſuburbs, for the families of the children of Kohath that remained. 27. ¶ And unto the children of Gerſhon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half-tribe of Manaſſeh, they gave [q] Golan in Baſhan with her ſuburbs, to be a city of refuge for the ſlayer: and Beeſhterah with her ſuburbs: two cities.
28. And out of the tribe of Iſſachar, Kiſhon with her ſuburbs, Dabareh with her ſuburbs, 29. Jarmuth with her ſuburbs, En-gannim with her ſuburbs: four cities:
30. And out of the tribe of Aſher, Miſhal with her ſuburbs, Abdon with her ſuburbs, 31. Helkath with her ſuburbs, and Rehob with her ſuburbs: four cities.
32. And out of the tribe of Naphtali, [r] Kedeſh in Galilee with her ſuburbs, to be a city of refuge for the ſlayer: and Hammoth-dor with her ſuburbs, and Kartan with her ſuburbs: three cities. 33. All the cities of the Gerſhonites, according to their families, were thirteen cities with their ſuburbs. 34. ¶ And unto the families of the children of Merari the reſt of the Levites, out of the tribe of Zebulun, Jokneam with her ſuburbs, and Kartah with her ſuburbs, 35. Dimnah with her ſuburbs, Nahalal with her ſuburbs: four cities. 36. And out of the tribe of Reuben, [s] Bezer with her ſuburbs, and Jahazah with her ſuburbs. 37. Kedemoth with her ſuburbs, and Mephaath with her ſuburbs: four cities.
38. And out of the tribe of Gad, [t] Ramoth in Gilead with her ſuburbs, to be a city of refuge for the ſlayer: and Mahanaim with her ſuburbs, 39. Heſhbon with her ſuburbs, Jazer with her ſuburbs: four cities in all. 40. So all the cities for the children of Merari by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were by their lot, twelve cities. 41. All the cities of the Levites, [u] within the poſſeſſion of the children of Iſrael, were forty and eight cities with their ſuburbs. 42. Theſe cities were every one with their ſuburbs round about them: thus were all theſe cities.

v. 9—42. A particular account is here given of the cities of the Levites. They were diſperſed, that all the tribes might ſhare the benefit of their inſtructions, and behold the exemplarineſs of their conduct. They were near in every diviſion, that their brethren might ſhew them kindneſs, as commanded, Deut. xii. 19. and to receive that counſel and inſtruction which, as daily more converſant in God's law, they were qualified to adminiſter. Their portion of cities was greater than any tribe enjoyed, except Judah; and theſe too of the beſt, becauſe God will have his ſervants honourably and comfortably lodged and cared for; and though their lands were not proportionable to their cities, yet the tythes and offerings abundantly ſupplied that lack, and left them wholly diſengaged, that they might wait upon God without diſtraction, and utterly inexcuſable if they neglected their miniſtry, for which they were ſo liberally paid, and to which they were wholly dedicated.

43. ¶ And the LORD [x] gave unto Iſrael all the land which he ſware to give unto their fathers: and they poſſeſſed it, and dwelt therein. 44. And the LORD gave them reſt round about according to all that he ſware unto their fathers: and there ſtood not a man of all their enemies before them; [y] the LORD delivered all their enemies into their hand. 45. [z] There failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had ſpoken unto the houſe of Iſrael: all came to paſs.

v. 43—45. The experience of God's Iſrael will ever confirm the faithfulneſs of his promiſes. The land that had been ſo long expected, is now poſſeſſed, their enemies ſubdued, their habitations large and peaceable; no foe remained to interrupt their quiet, or endanger their perſons. Some Canaanites indeed were left, but they only were ſpared to keep poſſeſſion againſt the beaſts of the field, till Iſrael were multiplied to occupy the land; and if they afterwards prevailed, God's people have only to blame their own ſloth, cowardice, unbelief, and ſin, which robbed them of their portion. All the people ſolemnly acknowledge the exact accompliſhment of the Divine promiſes, which is repeated, 1 Kings, viii. 56. and all who are faithful to him, ſhall find, to their everlaſting comfort, that one jot or tittle ſhall never paſs away from his word, until the whole be fulfilled.

CHAP. XXII.

The war being ended, we have, (1.) Joſhua's diſmiſſion of the auxiliary tribes, ver. 1—9. (2.) The altar they built on the borders of Jordan, in token of their communion with the land of Iſrael, ver. 10. (3.) The offence which the reſt of the tribes took at this altar, and the meſſage they ſent them thereupon, ver. 11—20. (4.) The apology which the two tribes and a half made for what they had done, ver. 21—29. (5.) The ſatisfaction which their apology gave to the reſt of the tribes, ver. 30—34.

1. THEN Joſhua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, 2.
And ſaid unto them, Ye have [a] kept all that Moſes the ſervant of the LORD commanded you, and have obeyed my voice in all that I commanded you. 3. [b] Ye have not left your brethren theſe many days unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God. 4. And now the LORD your God [c] hath given reſt unto your brethren, as he promiſed them:
therefore now return ye, and get ye unto [d] your tents, and unto the land of your poſſeſſion, which Moſes the ſervant of the LORD gave you on the other ſide Jordan.
5. But [e] take diligent heed to do the commandment and the law which Moſes the ſervant of the LORD charged you, to [f] love the LORD your God, and to [g] walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to ſerve him with all your heart, and with all your ſoul. 6. So Joſhua [h] bleſſed them, and ſent them away: and they went unto their tents. 7. ¶
Now to the one half of the tribe of Manaſſeh Moſes had given poſſeſſion in Baſhan: but unto the other half thereof gave Joſhua among their brethren on this ſide Jordan weſtward. And when Joſhua ſent them away alſo unto their tents, then he bleſſed them. 8. And he ſpake unto them, ſaying, Return with [i] much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with ſilver, and with gold, and with braſs, and with iron, and with very much raiment: divide the ſpoil of your enemies with your brethren. 9. ¶ And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh returned, and departed from the children of Iſrael out of Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go unto the country of Gilead, to the land of their poſſeſſion, whereof they were poſſeſſed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moſes.

[i] Numb. xxxi. 27. 1 Sam. xxx. 24. 1 Cor. xv. 58. Heb. vi. 10.

v. 1—9. The auxiliary forces, ſupplied by the tribes of Reuben, Gad and Manaſſeh, having fulfilled their engagement, are now diſmiſſed by Joſhua. And this,

1. With an honourable teſtimony to their obedience, patience and piety. They had ſerved him with as much fidelity as they obeyed Moſes, they had waited without offering or deſiring to return, till the whole land was ſubdued, which was ſeven years, and perhaps till the tribes divided to poſſeſs their inheritance, which was near ſeven years more; and they had kept the charge of the commandment of the Lord, not only in this inſtance of patient ſervice, but alſo in their pious conduct in the camp. Note, (1.) The ſoldiers of Jeſus Chriſt muſt object to no ſervice he enjoins them, but chearfully and readily run at his bidding. (2.) Though our warfare be long, we know we ſhall obtain an honourable diſmiſſion at death, to return to our eternal inheritance. (3.) Jeſus, at the day of his appearing, will remember and own, to their eternal honour, the faithful ſervices of his people.

2. He gives them a ſolemn charge (equally applicable to every ſpiritual Iſraelite) to keep up their religion at home, when they were ſeparated by Jordan from the tabernacle in Shiloh. Take diligent heed (for our ſpiritual enemies are ever lying in wait to deceive) to do the commandment and the law of God, this is our conſtant rule of duty, and muſt be conſcientiouſly obeyed; to love the Lord your God, without which no obedience can be acceptable, or indeed practicable; to walk in his ways, ſtrait, holy and ſelf-denying as they are, and to cleave to him, amidſt all the temptations which ſurround us and would turn us aſide; and this with all your heart and ſoul. God's ſervice requires a willing heart, and his work will never be done, unleſs it be our delight.

3. He adds his bleſſing to his advice; prays for their proſperity, and wiſhes them a comfortable and a ſafe journey, and a happy meeting with their families. Where there is a good-will there will be a good wiſh; whom we love we ſhall pray for.

4. He ſent them away laden with ſpoil, which he enjoins them to divide with their brethren, to cement their mutual love, as a return for the care of their families in their abſence, and in obedience to the divine command, that he who ſtayeth with the ſtuff ſhould ſhare as he who went to the war.

5. They return with all diligence; it was a long abſence, and no doubt a happy meeting. Here below buſineſs, war, voyages, ſeparate the deareſt relatives; but they are glad to get home in peace. How much happier for the pilgrim ſoul, when his warfare of life is accompliſhed, to croſs Jordan, and meet his brethren in glory, the family of God!

10. ¶ And when they came to the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh built there an [k] altar by Jordan, a great altar to ſee to. 11. ¶ And the children of Iſrael heard ſay, Behold, the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, have built an altar over-againſt the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at the paſſage of the children of Iſrael. 12. And when the children of Iſrael heard of it, the whole congregation of the children of Iſrael [l] gathered themſelves together at Shiloh, to [m] go up to war againſt them. 13. And the children of Iſrael [n] ſent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manaſſeh into the land of Gilead, [o] Phinehas the ſon of Eleazar the prieſt, 14. And with him ten princes, of each chief houſe a prince, throughout all the tribes of Iſrael, and each one was an head of the houſe of their fathers among the thouſands of Iſrael. 15. And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, unto the land of Gilead, and they ſpake with them, ſaying, 16. Thus ſaith the [p] whole congregation of the LORD, What treſpaſs is this that ye have committed againſt the God of Iſrael, to turn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might [q] rebel this day againſt the LORD? 17. Is the iniquity of [r] Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleanſed until this day, (although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD) 18. But that ye muſt turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, ſeeing ye rebel to-day againſt the LORD, that to-morrow [s] he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Iſrael. 19. Notwithſtanding, if the land of your poſſeſſion be unclean, then paſs ye over unto the land of the poſſeſſion of the LORD, wherein the LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take poſſeſſion among us: but rebel not againſt the LORD, nor rebel againſt us, in building you an altar, beſide the altar of the LORD our God. 20. Did not [t] Achan the ſon of Zerah commit a treſpaſs in the accurſed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Iſrael? and that man periſhed not alone in his iniquity.

[t] Chap. vii. 1. 5. 1 Cor. x. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 6.

v. 10—20. The two tribes and half were now returning to the land of their poſſeſſion, but fearing leaſt Jordan might, in future times, be called the boundary of Iſrael, and they excluded from the worſhip of God,

1. They reſolve to erect an altar, the pattern of that in Shiloh, for a memorial of their intereſt in the worſhip there offered. A commendable inſtance of their zeal for God, and care for their own ſouls, and the ſouls of their poſterity.

2. As they imprudently had neglected to advertiſe their brethren of their deſign, they are rouſed with a holy jealouſy, leſt they intended a defection, to ſet up altar againſt altar; and at firſt view, conſidering the command, Deut. xii. 57. the affair looked very ſuſpicious. Note, (1.) The beſt meant things may afford cauſe of ſuſpicion. (2.) It can do our brethren no injury to be jealous over them, with a godly jealouſy, even where we may be miſtaken in our fears for them. The congregation of Iſrael was preſently ſummoned to Shiloh, and breathed nothing but war againſt their ſuppoſed apoſtate brethren, determined to cruſh their rebellion in the bud, and more ſollicitous to remove ſuch diſhonour from God, than enjoy the reſt they had but ſo lately obtained. Note, (1.) Every thing that looks like idolatry muſt kindle the zeal of a faithful ſoul. (2.) Nothing ſhould be ſo dear to us as God's glory. (3.) Riſing corruptions and dangerous hereſies ſhould be reſiſted as ſoon as broached, leaſt the evil leaven, being permitted to ſpread, ſhould leaven the whole maſs.

3. Before the ſword is drawn they ſend to expoſtulate the matter with their brethren, and to enquire into their deſigns in this altar. It is good to hear before we judge, leaſt we condemn and cenſure others, through a miſtake we ourſelves have made of their meaning: how many diſputes and quarrels would this prevent!

4. The honourable embaſſy of princes, with Phinehas at their head, haſten to diſcharge their truſt, with the zeal and prudence becoming ſuch great and good men: a heavy charge they produce, which jealouſy for God, not deſigned cenſure, dictated; they remind them of the danger of rebellion againſt God: the inſtances of God's anger, in the caſe of Peor, need alarm them; they had ſmarted for it ſeverely then, nor were they without retaining ſomething of the ſame infection to that day, and therefore might well dread a ſecond viſitation: beſides, their guilt might not only involve themſelves in ruin, but, as in Achan's caſe, deſtroy the whole congregation of the Lord. They beg them to conſider therefore, and if their own abode diſpleaſe them, or they count their land as ſeparated from the ſacrifices in Shiloh unclean, let them paſs over into Canaan; and rather than leave them to the temptation of idolatry in Baſhan, they will readily relinquiſh a part of their poſſeſſions to them in Canaan. Note, (1.) Many a heavy charge is ſometimes brought, where there is the pureſt innocence, and this even by thoſe who have zeal for God. (2.) They who have ſmarted for ſin dread the thoughts of renewing their provocations. (3.) If magiſtrates connive at ſins, they are in danger of bringing down God's wrath on the land. (4.) They who deſire to recover their brethren from ſchiſm, muſt ſhew their charity towards them, and readineſs to yield every thing they lawfully may to a tender conſcience, leaſt by unchriſtian violence the rent be made worſe.

21. ¶ Then [u] the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, anſwered, and ſaid unto the heads of the thouſands of Iſrael, 22. The LORD [x] God of gods, the LORD God of gods, [y] he knoweth, and Iſrael he ſhall know, if it be in rebellion, or if in tranſgreſſion againſt the LORD (ſave us not this day) 23. offering, or meat-offering, or if to offer peace-offerings thereon, let the LORD himſelf require it; 24. And if we have not rather done it † for fear of this thing, ſaying, ‡ In time to come your children might ſpeak unto our children, ſaying, What have you to do with the LORD God of Iſrael? 25. For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you: ye children of Reuben, and children of Gad, ye have [z] no part in the LORD: ſo ſhall your children make our children ceaſe from fearing the LORD: 26. Therefore we ſaid, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, [a] not for burnt-offering, nor for ſacrifice: 27. But that it may be [b] a witneſs between us and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the ſervice of the LORD before him with our burnt-offerings, and with our ſacrifices, and with our peace-offerings, that your children may not ſay to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD. 28. Therefore ſaid we, that it ſhall be, when they ſhould ſo ſay to us, or to our generations, in time to come, that we may ſay again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt-offerings, nor for ſacrifices, but it is a witneſs between us and you. 29. God forbid that we ſhould rebel againſt the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt-offerings, for meat-offerings, or for ſacrifices, beſides the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

v. 21—29. Not offended with a warm expoſtulation, which though ariſing from a miſtake, was evidently dictated by charitable zeal, the children of Reuben, Gad, and Manaſſeh, who were ſummoned to attend on the army which had not yet ſeparated, with thoſe ſoft words which turn away wrath, in meekneſs reply to the remonſtrance of their brethren.

1. They make a ſolemn appeal to God for the ſimplicity of their hearts in this matter. The God of gods, Jehovah, the ſearcher of hearts, whoſe name they alone adored, whoſe power they revered, whoſe omniſcience they appealed to, and whoſe juſtice they truſted upon, would witneſs for them; content he ſhould require it of them in heavieſt viſitations, if ever they meant to apoſtatize from him. Note, (1.) In all our appeals to God, the greateſt reverence and ſolemnity becomes us; for God is the God of heaven, and we worms of earth. (2.) The teſtimony of a good conſcience is a ſure ſupport againſt the heavieſt accuſations.

2. They expreſs their utter deteſtation of the crime they are ſuſpected of; nothing farther from their minds than ſuch apoſtacy. Note, We cannot but be warm in expreſſing our abhorrence of that by which we know God would be diſhonoured.

3. They appeal to Iſrael themſelves for their integrity, when they have explained the motives for their conduct. They had been miſunderſtood by Moſes, when they petitioned for this lot, and now by their brethren, when they returned to poſſeſs it; yet in both their integrity appears: for not to offer ſacrifice was this altar erected, but as a copy of the original in Shiloh, to which their poſterity might appeal for their right to come up and ſacrifice there to the Lord, if in future times their brethren in Canaan, being ſeparated by Jordan, ſhould diſclaim their relation to them, and attempt to prevent their religious attendance on the ſanctuary; the conſequence of which could not but end in that apoſtacy from God, which they now ſought to prevent. Note, (1.) We are to be careful not only to act ſimply before God, but to make our integrity appear before men. (2.) The perpetuating the means of grace to our poſterity, is the beſt method we can take to ſecure them in the ways of God. (3.) They who neglect the ordinances of God's worſhip, will ſoon prove apoſtates from his truth.

v. 30—34. Never was there a happier iſſue of religious controverſy! Charity tempered the zeal of the complainants, and meekneſs adorned the integrity of the defendants; thus, when the matter was well explained, both ſides were ſatisfied.

1. The princes ambaſſadors are happy in being undeceived, and conclude that God is ſurely among them, when they diſcover ſuch a zeal for his ſervice and worſhip on both ſides. They do not queſtion their aſſertions, nor blame their raſhneſs in not conſulting them, but are glad to retract their warm expoſtulation. Note, (1.) Charity is eaſily perſuaded, whilſt cenſoriouſneſs refuſes to acquieſce, or be convinced. (2.) They who are ſatisfied in their brethren's ſimplicity, will overlook their little ſlips of inadvertence or want of complaiſance. (3.) It gives real joy to the heart, to find our brethren more faithful than we feared.

2. The people were as readily ſatisfied with their report, and gladly laid down their arms, bleſſing God for the tidings of their brethren's fidelity. Note, They are often ſuſpected to deſign a breach in the unity of the church, who are moſt diligently labouring to heal her diviſions, and to preſerve to poſterity the purity of her doctrines and worſhip; but though miſtaken zeal may cry, Down with them, yet ſhortly every diſpute ſhall ceaſe. In heaven at leaſt we ſhall lay aſide the arms of contention, and learn war no more.

3. The children of Reuben and Gad preſerved their altar, and called it Ed, a witneſs of their adherence to the worſhip of the true God, and a memorial to their poſterity, to follow their ſteps.

1. AND it came to paſs, † long time after that the [a] LORD had given reſt unto Iſrael from all their enemies round about, that Joſhua waxed old, and ſtricken in age. 2. And Joſhua [b] called for all Iſrael, and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and ſaid unto them, I am old, and ſtricken in age: 3. And ye have ſeen [c] all that the LORD your God hath done unto all theſe nations, becauſe of you; for the LORD your God is he that hath fought for you. 4. Behold, I have divided unto you by lot theſe nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the great ſea ‡ weſtward. 5. And the LORD your God, [d] he ſhall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your ſight, and ye ſhall poſſeſs their land, as the LORD your God hath promiſed unto you. 6. Be ye therefore [e] very courageous, to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moſes, that ye turn not aſide therefrom, [f] to the right hand, or to the left. 7. That [g] ye come not among theſe nations, theſe that remain amongſt you, neither [h] make mention of the name of their gods, nor cauſe to [i] ſwear by them, neither ſerve them, nor bow yourſelves unto them: 8. ‖ But [k] cleave unto the LORD your God, as ye have done unto this day. 9. § For the LORD hath driven out from before you [l] great nations and ſtrong: but as for you, no man hath been able to ſtand before you unto this day. 10. [m] One man of you ſhall chaſe a thouſand: for the LORD your God, he it is that fighteth for you, [n] as he hath promiſed you.

v. 1—10. Joſhua was now old, and having but a ſhort time to live, is ſollicitous to improve it to the beſt purpoſes; his laſt words, it is to be preſumed, would be heard with peculiar attention: wherefore he ſummons thoſe, on whoſe carefulneſs and piety the well-being of the ſtate chiefly depended, and whoſe examples muſt be moſt influential over the people, the elders of the great Sanhedrim, the heads or princes of the tribes, the judges in the ſeveral cities, and the officers the executioners of juſtice, and to theſe aſſembled on this occaſion, he addreſſes his diſcourſe.

1. He reminds them of what God had done for them, to awaken a grateful return for ſuch ſurpaſſing mercies. He had thruſt out powerful nations, to make room for them, had given them ſucceſs in every attack; neither city nor army ever was able to ſtand before them; and they were now in quiet poſſeſſion of theſe valuable conqueſts. Note, We can never too frequently remember, or too thankfully acknowledge what great things God hath done for us in our bodies or in our ſouls.

2. He aſſures them the ſame mercy and goodneſs was engaged to attend them in their future attempts; they had enough at preſent, but when they ſhould be increaſed, the remaining Canaanites ſhould fall as eaſy a prey as their neighbours; nor needed they the aſſembled forces of Iſrael; one tribe would be ſufficient for any conqueſt, when one Iſraelite ſhould chaſe a thouſand. Note, It is God who giveth us the victory; though our ſpiritual enemies appear never ſo numerous or ſtrong, God fighteth for us, and then we muſt be more than conquerors.

3. He exhorts them hereupon to courage and faithful obedience. They may confidently go forth under his bleſſing, only let them take care to ſecure his favour; and, in order hereunto, they muſt be, (1.) Obedient to God's commands, careful to obſerve his inſtituted ordinances, and faithful in their adherence to him: they had been ſo, and this was an argument for their perſeverance; they had experienced the comfort of it. (2.) They muſt avoid all connexion with the Canaanites which were among them, muſt have no intercourſe with them, ſo much as to eat. The very names of their idols they may not mention in their lips, much leſs ſwear by them, or ſerve or bow down to them. Idolatry being their beſetting ſin, and the moſt provoking to God, they muſt keep at the greateſt poſſible diſtance from it. Note, They who would keep from evil, muſt avoid temptation, eſpecially in the caſe of their eaſily beſetting ſin.

11. Take good heed therefore unto † yourſelves, that ye love the LORD your God. 12. Elſe, if ye do in any wiſe [o] go back, and cleave unto the remnant of theſe nations, even theſe that remain among you, and ſhall make marriages with them, and go in unto them, and they to you: 13. Know for a certainty, that the LORD your God will no more drive out any of theſe nations from before you; but they ſhall be ‡ ſnares and traps unto you, and ſcourges in your ſides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye periſh from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you. 14. And behold, this day I am [p] going the way of all the earth, and ye know in all your hearts, and in all your ſouls, that [q] not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God ſpake concerning you; all are come to paſs unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof. 15. Therefore it ſhall come to paſs, that as [r] all good things are come upon you, which the LORD your God promiſed you: ſo ſhall the LORD bring upon you [s] all evil things, until he have deſtroyed you from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you. 16. When ye have tranſgreſſed the covenant of the LORD your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and ſerved other gods, and bowed yourſelves to them: then ſhall the anger of the LORD be kindled againſt you, and ye ſhall periſh quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you.

v. 11—16. In order to preſerve them from that ſtate of apoſtacy from God, which, with prophetic foreſight, he juſtly apprehended,

1. Joſhua exhorts them to take heed, and keep themſelves in the love of God; careleſſneſs about his ſervice would quickly bring ruin on their ſouls, and nothing can preſerve them from falling away, but a principle of love engaging their hearts to God. Note, (1.) When we are ſurrounded with Canaanites, temptations on every ſide, we need conſtantly watch and pray. (2.) The love of God is the great preſervative from all evil.

2. He reminds them of God's faithfulneſs, as the moſt powerful motive to engage their love; nothing had failed of all his promiſes, therefore they were inexcuſable if they forſook him. Note, God is faithful, and all who truſt him will find him ſo.

3. He ſpeaks of his own departure as at hand, when his warning voice would no more be heard among them, therefore the more attentively now ſhould it be heard and pondered. He was going the way of all the earth. Death is the journey we all muſt take; the greateſt of God's ſaints muſt tread this beaten road, in their removal from time into eternity. Happy they who, like Joſhua, can ſpeak of it with ſatisfaction, and are ready for their great change.

4. He warns them of the danger they were in, and the ruin which would enſue, if they joined the Canaanites in their abominations. The gradual ſteps of their departure from God he deſcribes, that avoiding the ſnare, they may keep from the danger; intercourſe with the Canaanites would introduce more intimate connexions; profane marriages with theſe idolaters then would follow, and, as the neceſſary conſequence of being yoked with unbelievers, they would ſerve their idols, and thus violate the ſacred covenant eſtabliſhed between God and them. The conſequence of this muſt be, that God, in anger, would leave them to be enſnared in their own perverſeneſs and folly; thoſe neighbours, whom they cheriſhed, would be ſnakes in their boſom, to ſting them to death, firſt leading them into ſin, and then bringing wrath upon them; their tempters would turn their tormentors; and God, in juſt judgment, give them up to their enemies, to the utter ruin of their church and nation, and the good land, where they dwelt ſo happily, ſhould caſt them out. Note, (1.) No ſnare ſo fatal as being unequally yoked with unbelievers. (2.) It is juſt in God to make them inſtruments in our puniſhment, whom we have made inſtruments of our ſin. (3.) The mercy which ſinners have rejected will aggravate their miſery, and the knowledge of the bliſs they have loſt increaſe the torment they feel.

1. AND Joſhua gathered all the tribes of Iſrael to [a] Shechem, and called for the elders of Iſrael, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and they preſented themſelves before God. 2. And Joſhua ſaid unto [b] all the people, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, [c] Your fathers dwelt on the other ſide of the flood in old time, even [d] Terah the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor: and [e] they ſerved other gods. 3. And [f] I took your father Abraham from the other ſide of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and [g] multiplied his ſeed, and [h] gave him Iſaac. 4. And I gave unto Iſaac, [i] Jacob and Eſau: and [k] I gave unto Eſau mount Seir, to poſſeſs it; but [l] Jacob and his children went down into Egypt. 5. [m] I ſent Moſes alſo and Aaron, and I plagued Egypt, according to that which I did amongſt them: and afterward I brought you out. 6. And [n] I brought your fathers out of Egypt: and you came unto the ſea, and the Egyptians purſued after your fathers with chariots and horſemen unto [o] the Red-ſea. 7. And when they cried unto the LORD, [p] he put darkneſs between you and the Egyptians, and brought the ſea upon them, and covered them, and your eyes have ſeen what I have done in Egypt: and ye dwelt in the wilderneſs [q] a long ſeaſon. 8. And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other ſide Jordan; and [r] they fought with you; and I gave them into your hand, that ye might poſſeſs their land, and I deſtroyed them from before you. 9. Then Balak the ſon of Zippor, king of Moab, aroſe, and † warred againſt Iſrael, and [s] ſent, and called Balaam the ſon of Beor to curſe you: 10. But I would not hearken unto Balaam, therefore he bleſſed you ſtill: ſo I delivered you out of his hand. 11. And ye went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and [t] the men of Jericho fought againſt you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgaſhites, and the Hivites, and the Jebuſites, and I delivered them into your hand. 12. And [u] I ſent the hornet before you, which drave them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites: but [x] not with thy ſword, nor with thy bow. 13. And I have given you a land [y] for which ye did not labour, and [z] cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them: of the vineyards and olive-yards which ye planted not, do ye eat. 14. ¶ Now [a] there-

v. 1—14. Joſhua ſeems, at his laſt meeting the congregation, to have expected his diſſolution at hand, but God having ſpared him a little longer, he is glad to make uſe of the laſt moments of his life in one more ſolemn aſſembly of the heads of Iſrael. The place appointed for the convocation is Shechem, and thither the aſſembled elders, princes, judges, and officers of Iſrael haſte, and preſent themſelves before the Lord; the ark being probably, on this ſolemnity, brought from Shiloh to Shechem, that the ſenſible preſence of God might give greater weight to the ſubject of their meeting. Note, (1.) Whilſt God continues our lives, it is a ſign he has ſomething for us yet to do. (2.) They whoſe hearts are faithful to God, will be pleaſed with the returning ſolemnities, when they come to appear before the Lord. (3.) God is ſtill in the midſt of his people, whenever or wherever they aſſemble in his name.

The congregation being collected, Joſhua opens his farewel ſermon, commiſſioned from God to ſpeak, and therefore deſerving the moſt awakened attention: he begins with a recapitulation of the moſt ſignal mercies that, from the beginning until that time, God had ſhewn to their anceſtors, and to them. Their anceſtors who dwelt beyond the Euphrates, were ſunk, as other Gentiles, into groſs idolatry; when God, of ſovereign grace, ſeparated Abraham from them, to be a veſſel of mercy, and brought him out from thence into the land of Canaan, where they now were, multiplied his poſterity in Iſhmael, and gave him the promiſed ſeed in Iſaac. When Rebekah's barrenneſs ſeemed to reſtrain the fulfilment of the promiſe, Jacob and Eſau were born. Jacob, their great progenitor, with his increaſing houſhold, were driven into Egypt by famine; but when his ſeed were there multiplied and oppreſſed, with a mighty arm did God reſcue them from thence, protecting them with his pillar of a cloud, and overwhelming their purſuers in the ſea. Through the dreary wilderneſs he led them ſafely, defeated the plots of their enemies, and turned wicked Balaam's intended curſe into a bleſſing. After this alſo he wrought his wonders in the land of Gilead, at Jordan and Jericho, caſting out their foes before them, not by their ſword or bow, but by his army of hornets, which he ſent before them; and now at laſt he brought them into the poſſeſſion of Canaan, where peace and plenty reigned. In return for which mercies it was not more their bounden duty, than the dictates of gratitude, 1. That they ſhould fear that God whoſe wonders they had ſeen, and with a reverential ſenſe of his majeſty and mercy walk before him. 2. That they ſhould ſerve him in ſincerity and truth; for he is a heart-ſearching God, who cannot be impoſed upon, who hateth hypocriſy, and expects the ſoul in ſimplicity to be devoted to his ſervice. 3. That they ſhould put far from them ſtrange gods: not that they now worſhipped them, but they muſt never think of returning to their father's idols, nor ever entertain a deſire after them, but cleave only and perſeveringly to the Lord. Note (1.) God requires the heart in his worſhip; without this we can do him no acceptable ſervice. (2.) Neglect of God is not only foul diſobedience, but baſe ingratitude. (3.) That is ſtill our idol to which our affections cleave more than to the bleſſed God.

15. And if it ſeem evil unto you to ſerve the LORD, chooſe you this day whom you will ſerve, whether the gods which your fathers ſerved, that were on the other ſide of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whoſe land ye dwell: but [e] as for me and my houſe, we will ſerve the LORD. 16. And the people anſwered and ſaid, God forbid that we ſhould forſake the LORD, to ſerve other gods. 17. For the LORD our God, he it is that brought us up, and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the houſe of bondage, and which did thoſe great ſigns in our ſight, and preſerved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we paſſed. 18. And the LORD drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites, which dwelt in the land: therefore will we alſo ſerve the LORD, for he is our God. 19. And Joſhua ſaid unto the people, [f] Ye cannot ſerve the LORD; for he is an holy God: he is a jealous God, [g] he will not forgive your tranſgreſſions nor your ſins. 20. [h] If ye forſake the LORD, and ſerve ſtrange gods, then he will turn and do you hurt, and conſume you, after that he hath done you good. 21. And the people ſaid unto Joſhua, Nay, but we will ſerve the LORD. 22. And Joſhua ſaid unto the people, [i] Ye are witneſſes againſt yourſelves, that ye have choſen you the LORD to ſerve him. And they ſaid, We are witneſſes. 23. Now therefore [k] put away (ſaid he) the ſtrange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Iſrael. 24. And the people ſaid unto Joſhua, The LORD our God will we ſerve, and his voice will we obey. 25. So Joſhua [l] made a covenant with the people that day, and ſet them a ſtatute, and an ordinance in Shechem. 26. ¶ And Joſhua [m] wrote theſe words in the book of the law of God, and took a great ſtone and [n] ſet it up there under an oak, that was by the ſanctuary of the LORD. 27. And Joſhua ſaid unto all the people, Behold, [o] this ſtone ſhall be a witneſs unto us; for it hath [p] heard all the words of the LORD which he ſpake unto us: it ſhall be therefore a witneſs unto you, leſt you deny your God. 28. So Joſhua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

v. 15—28. To engage them to make that their choice which was ſo evidently their duty,

1. Joſhua propoſes to them the queſtion, and declares his own reſolution, If it ſeemed evil to them to ſerve the Lord, if his ſervice appeared burdenſome, and they had no delight in it, let them ſeek a better maſter, either among the antient gods of their fathers, or the more modern deities of their Amoritiſh neighbours; but for his own part, ſo ſatisfied was he with the bleſſed ſervice, and ſo happy in the choice of God for his portion, that let them determine as they would, his choice was fixed in God, and his houſe at leaſt in Iſrael ſhould be faithful in the worſhip and true to the obligations of the mercies they received from Jehovah. Note, (1.) If the ſervice of God be not our deliberate choice from conviction of its bleſſedneſs, and experience of its comfort, a conſtrained profeſſion will laſt but a ſhort time. (2.) Thoſe who count the denial of their corrupt affections hard, and the reſtraints of religion burdenſome, have already rejected the Lord from being their God. (3.) A good and great example is very influential. (4.) They who reſolve to ſerve God themſelves, cannot but labour that all who are under their care may do ſo too. (5.) They who are faithful to God fear not to be ſingular, though all others are aſhamed of his religion, or live a diſhonour to it; their houſes ſhall be the temples for prayer and praiſe daily, and their ways unconformed to the wicked world around them.

2. A propoſition ſo evident needed no great deliberation; the unanimous voice of Iſrael is to join in their leader's reſolution, with the utmoſt deteſtation of the thought of forſaking God for idols, eſpecially after the mercies which they thankfully remember, and under the conſtrainings of which their ſouls are bound to cleave to God. Note, We can never heſitate whoſe ſervice to prefer, God or the world, Chriſt or Belial, if our minds are freed from the deluſions of Satan, and the bias of corrupt affections.

3. He fixes them in their good purpoſes, by intimating how they might abide in them, and how dangerous it would be to depart from them. They muſt beware of depending on their own ſufficiency, becauſe they cannot of themſelves ſerve the Lord, and muſt be indebted to his grace for the ability to keep their reſolution; and at the beſt, their own ſervices would not be without defect, if they truſted on them for acceptance, ſeeing he was a holy God, with whom they had to do, (the Holy Ones, as the word is, intimating the ſacred trinity of perſons), a jealous God, who cannot admit a rival, and a juſt God, who cannot pardon tranſgreſſion, and therefore they ſhould think well what they reſolved, and with whom they had to do, that humbly truſting, as ſinful, on his pardoning mercy, and as weak, on his ſupporting grace, they might be faithful to their vows; for elſe it were impoſſible for them to ſerve him: whilſt their apoſtacy from him would turn him from a friend to be their enemy, and provoke him, after all his mercies, utterly to conſume them. Note, (1.) The ſcripture uſes every means to work upon our fears and hopes. (2.) The more we deſpair of our own ſufficiency, the better ſhall we be enabled to ſhew our fidelity.

4. The people repeat their ſolemn purpoſe. Nay, no idol-gods will we ever ſerve, but only cleave to the Lord our God, dependant on his grace, and truſting on his mercy, fully purpoſed to obey his voice, and that alone as the rule of our converſation. And when again required to put away the ſtrange gods from among them, either idol-images, which ſome might have ſecreted, or rather idolatrous affections, which hateful leaven lurked in their hearts, they the third time confirm their purpoſe, of ſerving the Lord God only.

5. A ſolemn covenant concludes the aſſembly. Joſhua took them for witneſſes againſt themſelves, for the tranſactions of that day; and that it might never be forgotten, it is written on the book of the law, and laid up with it in the ark before the Lord; whilſt a great ſtone, as a monument of their ſolemn engagements, (and on it perhaps was written all the words of the covenant) is ſet up under an oak in Shechem, to remind their poſterity of their vows, or to reproach their baſeneſs, if they were unfaithful to them. And hereupon the aſſembly is diſ-diſmiſſed, to carry home the deep impreſſion of their engagements that day before the Lord.

29. ¶ And it came to paſs after theſe things, that Joſhua the ſon of Nun, [q] the ſervant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old. 30. And they buried him in the border of his [r] inheritance in Timnath-ſerah, which is in mount Ephraim, on the north-ſide of the hill of Gaaſh. 31. And Iſrael ſerved the LORD all the days of Joſhua, and [s] all the days of the elders that overlived Joſhua, and which had known all the works of the LORD, that he had done for Iſrael. 32. ¶ And [t] the bones of Joſeph, which the children of Iſrael brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground which Jacob bought of the ſons of Hamor the father of [u] Shechem, for an hundred pieces of ſilver; and it became the inheritance of the children of Joſeph. 33. And Eleazar the ſon of Aaron died, and they buried him in a hill that pertained to Phinehas his ſon, which was given him in mount Ephraim.

v. 29—33. We have the account of the death of Joſhua and Eleazar, and the burying of the bones of Joſeph. This is the end of all the glory of man; and the beſt and greateſt of God's ſaints are not exempt from the common lot of mortality.

1. Joſhua's death and burial: ſoon after he had finiſhed his work, he went to receive his everlaſting reward, in a better inheritance than he left at Timnath-ſerah. He was a hundred and ten years old, during which he had approved himſelf a faithful ſervant, of which God bears him honourable teſtimony; his ſepulchre was in Gaaſh, in a field of his own. For then the public places of aſſembly, or the houſe of God, were thought unfit receptacles even of the corpſe of the bleſſed. Pity it is that worſe cuſtoms have ſince obtained.

2. Mention is made of the burial of Joſeph's bones, according to his prophetic and dying requeſt, brought up from Egypt, and interred in the ſepulchre of his fathers; which if done, as is not improbable, at their laſt ſolemn meeting, muſt have given ſtill greater energy to the exhortations of Joſhua.

3. Eleazar quickly followed Joſhua, one loſs ſeldom comes alone, and was buried in a piece of ground which belonged to Phinehas his ſon, in the hill Ephraim, which either was his eſtate by marriage, or by gift of ſome pious Iſraelite, for the convenience of being always near the tabernacle in Shiloh.

4. As long as theſe worthies, and their cotemporaries lived, who had ſeen God's wonders, religion flouriſhed among the people; but their ſad decays will ſhortly appear. So much are good miniſters miſſed, and ſo common is it to ſee the moſt flouriſhing congregations moulder away, when their paſtors are departed. But the reſidue of the ſpirit is with our divine Joſhua; and though one people, or congregation, turn from him, he will revive his work in another, and never want a ſpiritual ſeed and a viſible church upon earth.

OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of JUDGES.

This Book is entitled Judges, as containing the hiſtory of the people of Iſrael under thoſe governors who were extraordinarily and occaſionally called to the chief adminiſtration of affairs. Their office was to deliver them from their oppreſſions, lead their armies to battle, reform them from idolatry, and adminiſter juſtice to the people.

The author of this Book is generally thought to be Samuel, who compiled it from authentic records, written probably by the Judges themſelves. The hiſtory of the Judges in ſucceſſion we have to the end of chap. xvi. the laſt five chapters contain ſome memorable events that happened during their days, though the date of them is not aſcertained. This form of adminiſtration continued, as is generally computed, two hundred and ninety-nine years. Four of theſe, Gideon, Barak, Sampſon and Jephtha, are mentioned among the worthies, Heb. xi. 32. as inſtances of the power of divine faith. The general tenor of the book is the repreſentation of Iſrael's backſlidings, and God's diſpenſations of judgment and mercy towards them; a ſad evidence how prone the heart is to depart from God, and a bleſſed inſtance how wonderful God's patience is to his own poople; who, though he viſits their iniquities with a rod, and their ſin with ſcourges, takes not his loving-kindneſs from them.

CHAP. I.

This chapter informs us what progreſs the ſeveral tribes of Iſrael made in the reducing of Canaan after the death of Joſhua. 1. The united tribes of Judah and Simeon took Bezek, Jeruſalem, Hebron, Debir, Horma, Gaza, and other places, ver. 1—19. Yet where there were chariots of iron their hearts failed them, ver. 19. Mention is made of the Kenites ſettling among them, ver. 16. 2. The other tribes, in compariſon with theſe, did but little. (1.) Benjamin failed, ver. 21. (2.) The houſe of Joſeph took Beth-el, ver. 22—26. but in other places did not improve their advantages, nor Manaſſeh, ver. 27, 28. nor Ephraim, ver. 29. (3.) Zebulun ſpared the Canaanites, ver. 30. (4.) Aſher did not make them even tributary, ver. 31, 32. (5.) Naphtali was kept out of the full poſſeſſion of ſeveral of his cities, ver. 33. (6.) Dan was ſtraitned by the Amorites, ver. 34.

1. NOW [a] after the death of Joſhua, it came to paſs, that the children of [b] Iſrael, aſked the LORD, ſaying, Who ſhall go up for us againſt the Canaanites firſt to fight againſt them? 2. And the LORD ſaid, [c] Judah ſhall go up: behold, I have delivered the land into [d] his hand. 3. And Judah ſaid unto [e] Simeon his brother, Come up with me into [f] my lot, that we may fight againſt the Canaanites, and I likewiſe will go with thee into [g] thy lot. So Simeon went with him. 4. And Judah went up, and the LORD delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand: and they ſlew of them in Bezek ten thouſand men. 5. And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek: and they fought againſt him, and they ſlew the Canaanites, and the Perizzites. 6. But Adoni-bezek fled, and they purſued after him, and caught him, and [h] cut off his thumbs and his great toes. 7. And Adoni-bezek ſaid, [i] Threeſcore and ten kings, having † their thumbs and their great toes cut off, ‡ gathered their meat under my table: [k] as I have done, ſo God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jeruſalem, and there he died. 8. (Now [l] the children of Judah had fought againſt Jeruſalem, and had taken it, and ſmitten it with the edge of the ſword, and ſet the city on fire.)

v. 1—8. After Joſhua's death, the children of Iſrael multiplying, began to think of enlarging their borders, by a farther extirpation of the Canaanites. On which,

1. They conſult the Lord which tribe ſhould go up, and he, by an articulate voice, which was probably the way of anſwering by Urim and Thummim, commands Judah to begin, with aſſurance of ſucceſs. He which was moſt honourable, moſt numerous, and firſt provided for, muſt lead the way for his brethren's encouragement. Note, (1.) They who have the place of honour muſt maintain it, by being firſt to do God's work. (2.) Where God gives the beſt abilities he expects proportionable ſervice. (3.) Confidence of ſucceſs gives courage for the battle. (4.) Though the victory is God's gift, the warfare muſt be ours.

2. Judah hereupon muſters his armies, and as Simeon was his brother by the ſame mother, as well as father, and their lots lay together, he ſollicits his aſſiſtance, and promiſes in return to ſhew him the ſame brotherly kindneſs. Note, (1.) We muſt ſeek to aſſiſt one another, and ſtrengthen the hands of our brethren brethren in their warfare againſt the enemy of ſouls. (2.) God will help thoſe with his grace, who help one another in love.

3. Their ſucceſs is recorded. The Lord delivered their enemies into their hands; the army of the Canaanites was routed, ten thouſand ſlain in Bezek, the field of battle, or a city ſo called, and their king Adonibezek taken priſoner, as he was attempting to eſcape. His barbarity to others returns now on his own head. As he had, during the courſe of his reign, thus ſerved ſeventy other captive kings, his great toes and thumbs are cut off; and the juſtice of this judgment of God upon him he is forced to acknowledge. They brought him to Jeruſalem, where with grief, or of his wounds, he quickly died. Note, (1.) God often repays the wicked in their own coin. (2.) The proudeſt are not too high for God to humble; let kings remember they are in ſlippery places. (3.) When God's judgments awaken the conſcience, we ſhall own his righteouſneſs, and ſtand ſelf-condemned before him.

4. Notice is taken of the conqueſt of Jeruſalem: ſome, as our tranſlators, regard it as a paſt tranſaction; others, as now atchieved. That it was in part in the poſſeſſion of the children of Judah, ſeems pretty evident, from Joſh. xv. 63. Perhaps during their wars it was neglected, and re-inhabited by the Jebuſites, who are now the ſecond time diſpoſſeſſed of the city, though they held the citadel till the time of David. Note, Though the believer's enemies ſtruggle long and hard, yet their end will be, to be rooted out at the laſt.

9. ¶ And [m] afterward the children of Judah went down to fight againſt the Canaanites that dwelt in the mountain, and in the ſouth, and in the † valley. 10. And Judah went againſt the Canaanites that dwelt in Hebron, (now the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba) and they ſlew [n] Sheſhai, and Ahiman, and Talmai. 11. And from thence he went againſt the inhabitants of Debir: (and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-ſepher). 12. And Caleb ſaid, He that ſmiteth Kirjath-ſepher, and taketh it, [o] to him will I give Achſah my daughter to wife. 13. And Othniel the ſon of Kenaz, Caleb's [p] younger brother, took it: and he gave him Achſah his daughter to wife. 14. And it came to paſs, when ſhe came to him, that ſhe moved him to aſk of her father a field: and ſhe lighted from off her aſs; and Caleb ſaid unto her, What wilt thou? 15. And ſhe ſaid unto him, Give me [q] a bleſſing: for thou haſt given me a ſouth-land, give me alſo ſprings of water. And Caleb gave her the upper ſprings, and the nether ſprings. 16. ¶. And the children of [r] the Kenite, Moſes's father-in-law, went up out of the city of palm-trees with the children of Judah, into the wilderneſs of Judah, which lieth in the ſouth of Arad, and they went and dwelt among the people. 17. And Judah went with Simeon his brother, and they ſlew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, and utterly deſtroyed it: (and the name of the city was called Hormah). 18. Alſo Judah took Gaza with the coaſt thereof, and Aſkelon with the coaſt thereof, and Ekron with the coaſt thereof. 19. And [s] the LORD was with Judah, and he † drave out the inhabitants of the mountain, but [t] could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, becauſe they had [u] chariots of iron: 20. And they gave Hebron unto Caleb, as Moſes ſaid: and he expelled thence [x] the three ſons of Anak.

v. 9—20. We have here, 1. A farther account of Judah and Simeon's ſucceſs againſt the Canaanites in the valley, to which they went down from Jeruſalem; and here is inſerted Caleb's conqueſt of Hebron, which was either now firſt made, and mentioned before by anticipation; or rather it was performed by Caleb, with the aſſiſtance of his brethren, and is mentioned here among the exploits of Judah, becauſe Caleb belonged to that tribe. Simeon too, with Judah's aſſiſtance, took Zephath, and deſtroyed it, as alſo three of the Philiſtine cities; but by neglecting to ſlay the inhabitants, they afterwards loſt them, and for many years felt the ſcourge of their diſobedience, in the ſufferings they endured under the Philiſtine yoke. The inhabitants of part of the valley alſo were ſuffered to remain quiet. Their chariots of iron diſcouraged Judah; and, as a puniſhment for ſuch unbelief, God left them for a ſcourge. Note, (1.) They who do the work of the Lord unfaithfully, will ſurely ſmart for it. (2.) The neglect of a favourable opportunity can oft-times never be recovered. (3.) Unbelief of God's promiſes is the cauſe of all our complaints under the prevalence of ſin. 2. The Kenites, the poſterity of Jethro by Hobab, who came up with Iſrael into Canaan, and ſettled at firſt around Jericho, removed now into the lot of Judah; and, as they were permitted to chuſe their abode, they fixed on the wilderneſs of Judah, where was paſture for their cattle, and which alſo beſt ſuited their love of ſolitude. Note, They who willingly ſhare with God's Iſrael in their ſufferings in the wilderneſs, ſhall ſhare alſo with them the inheritance in glory.

21. And the children of Benjamin did not drive out the Jebuſites that [y] inhabited Jeruſalem: but the Jebuſites dwell with the children of Benjamin in Jeruſalem unto this day. 22. ¶ And the houſe of Joſeph, they alſo went up againſt Beth-el: and [z] the LORD was with them. 23. And the houſe of Joſeph ſent to [a] deſcry Beth-el: (now the name of the city before was Luz). 24. And the ſpies ſaw a man come forth out of the city, and they ſaid unto him, Shew us, we pray thee, the entrance into the city, and [b] we will ſhew thee mercy. 25. And when he ſhewed them the entrance into the city, they ſmote the city with the edge of the ſword: but they let go the man and all his family. 26. And the man went into the land of the Hittites, and built a city, and called the name thereof Luz: which is the name thereof unto this day. 27. ¶ Neither did Manaſſeh drive out the inhabitants of Beth-ſhean and her towns, nor Taanach and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Ibleam and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns: but the Canaanites [c] would dwell in that land. 28. And it came to paſs when Iſrael was ſtrong, that they put the Canaanites to [d] tribute, and † did not utterly drive them out. 29. ¶ Neither did Ephraim drive out the Canaanites that dwelt in Gezer: but the Canaanites dwelt in Gezer among them. 30. ¶ Neither did Zebulun drive out the inhabitants of Kitron, nor the inhabitants of Nahalol: but the Canaanites dwelt among them, and became tributaries. 31. ¶ Neither did Aſher drive out the inhabitants of Accho, nor the inhabitants of Zidon, nor of Ahlab, nor Achzib, nor Helbah, nor Aphik, nor of Rehob: 32. But the Aſherites [e] dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land: for they did not drive them out. 33. ¶ Neither did Naphtali drive out the inhabitants of Beth-ſhemeſh, nor the inhabitants of Beth-anath; but he dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land: nevertheleſs, the inhabitants of Beth-ſhemeſh and of Beth-anath became tributaries unto them. 34. And the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the mountain: for they would not ſuffer them to come down to the valley. 35. But the Amorites would dwell in mount Heres in Aijalon, and in Shaalbim: yet the hand of the houſe of Joſeph † prevailed, ſo that they became tributaries. 36. And the coaſt of the Amorites was from the going up to Akrabbim, from the rock, and upward.

v. 21—36. The ſucceſs of the other tribes was not equal to the example ſet them. Benjamin neglected to conquer the part of Jeruſalem, (which ſeems to have been a ſeparate fortreſs from that taken by the men of Judah) which fell to his lot. The houſe of Joſeph did a little, yet nothing great as might have been expected, when it is ſaid the Lord was with them. By the help of one of the inhabitants, who, on promiſe of life and liberty, conducted them into a part of the city which was not guarded, they ſurprized Beth-el, but neglected to improve their ſucceſs. The Canaanites were permitted to dwell in ſeveral cities in the lot of Manaſſeh, though they were made tributary; and, in Ephraim, Gezer ſeems to have maintained its freedom. Zebulun followed their evil examples, and rather choſe to ſubject than deſtroy the inhabitants of Kitron and Nahalol. Aſher ſtill more baſely yielded to dwell among the Canaanites, and left many towns in their poſſeſſion; ſo that they were rather ſubjects than maſters. Naphtali was negligent like the reſt, and contented himſelf with making Beth-ſhemeſh and Beth-anath tributary. Dan fared worſt of all. The Amorites making head againſt him, not only kept their poſſeſſions, but ſtraitened him in that part of the lot which was conquered, till, by the aſſiſtance of his brethren of the houſe of Joſeph, they were at laſt reduced, and became tributary. From the whole we may obſerve, that ſloth and covetouſneſs, unbelief of God's power, and want of deteſtation of idolatry, were ſtill too rooted in this ſtiff-necked people; yet God bore with them; yea, bleſſed them. Note, Though the remainders of evil ſtill war within us, and we ſuffer for them, yet God doth not caſt away his people, but multiplies his pardons and mercies towards them.

1. AND an † angel of the LORD came up from [a] Gilgal to [b] Bochim, and ſaid, I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I [c] ſware unto your fathers; and I ſaid, I will never break my covenant with you. 2. And [d] ye ſhall make no league with the inhabitants of this land, you ſhall [e] throw down their altars: but ye have not obeyed my voice: Why have ye done this? 3. Wherefore I alſo ſaid, [f] I will not drive them out from before you: but they ſhall be as thorns in your [g] ſides, and their [h] gods ſhall be a ſnare unto you. 4. And it came to paſs, when the angel of the LORD ſpake theſe words unto all the children of Iſrael, that the people [i] lift up their voice and wept. 5. And they called the name of that place † Bochim: and they ſacrificed there unto the LORD.

v. 1—5. Such a glaring violation of the divine command, as they had committed in their treatment of the Canaanites, could not fail of a divine rebuke. Accordingly, when they were aſſembled, probably at one of the three ſolemn feaſts at Shiloh, God ſends them a ſolemn meſſage.

1. The perſon who brought it is called an angel of the Lord. The glorious angel of the covenant, the eternal Redeemer, Jeſus the Son of God, who ſpeaks in his own name. He came from Gilgal, in ſome glorious manner probably, that attracted their notice, and as the ſame perſon who had there before appeared to Joſhua as the captain of the Lord's hoſts.

2. His expoſtulation with them is ſharp and pointed. He reminds them of his mercies in bringing them from Egypt; of his gracious covenant that on his part had been, and would have been for ever, if they were faithful, punctually fulfilled. He mentions the reaſonable expectations he had, they ſhould comply with his orders, in eraſing every monument of idolatry, and utterly deſtroying the people. In direct oppoſition to which, they had ſpared the Canaanites, and connived at their worſhip; for all which they were without excuſe. Therefore, as the juſt puniſhment of ſuch neglect and diſobedience, God will ſtay the current of their victories; will make thoſe ſinners they have ſpared their ſcourge, and leave them to follow thoſe gods, whoſe altars they refuſed to deſtroy. Note, (1.) Sinners are without excuſe. (2.) They who expect advantage from friendſhip with the enemies of God, will be utterly deceived. (3.) Thoſe corruptions to which we allow the loweſt meaſure of indulgence, will ſoon gain ſtrength, and quickly prove our conquerors. (4.) They who offend God by one ſin, provoke him to give them up to a greater.

3. Struck with the alarming meſſage, and confounded by the preſence of their Lord, the tears of penitential ſorrow burſt from their eyes. They cried aloud for mercy, that they might avert the judgments which were threatned; offered ſacrifices, that by the blood of atonement they might obtain pardon of their ſin; and called the name of the place Bochim, weepers, to perpetuate the memory of their humiliations. Note, (1.) They who have felt the bitterneſs of ſin, are no ſtrangers to the tears of penitence. (2.) When God's word makes the heart tremble, there is hope; for to this man will God look. (3.) The ſins we lament we muſt reform, elſe our repentance will be hypocriſy. Many melt under the terrors of God's word, that quickly return to their iniquities, as the dog to his vomit. (4.) Not all our tears are available to waſh away our ſins; the blood of the Lamb that was ſlain is alone able to make us pure from our iniquity.

6. ¶ And when Joſhua had [k] let the people go, the children of Iſrael went every man unto his inheritance to poſſeſs the land. 7. And the people ſerved the LORD all the days of Joſhua, and all the days of the elders that † out-lived Joſhua, who had ſeen all the great works of the LORD, that he did for Iſrael. 8. And Joſhua the ſon of Nun, the ſervant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old. 9. And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north ſide of the hill Gaaſh. 10. And alſo all that generation were [l] gathered unto their fathers: and there aroſe another generation after them, which [m] knew not the LORD, nor yet [n] the works which he had done for Iſrael. 11. ¶ And the children of Iſrael did evil in [o] the ſight of the LORD, and ſerved Baalim: 12. And they forſook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed [p] other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and [q] bowed themſelves unto them, and provoked the LORD to anger. 13. And they forſook the LORD, and ſerved Baal and Aſhtaroth. 14. ¶ And the anger of the LORD was hot againſt Iſrael, and he delivered them into the hands of ſpoilers that [r] ſpoiled them, and he [s] ſold them into the hands of their enemies round about, ſo that they could not any longer ſtand before their enemies. 15. [t] Whitherſoever they went out, [u] the hand of the LORD was againſt them for evil, [x] as the LORD had ſaid, and as the LORD had ſworn unto them: and they were greatly diſtreſſed. 16. ¶ Nevertheleſs, the LORD [y] raiſed up judges, which † delivered them out of the hand of thoſe that ſpoiled them. 17. And yet [z] they would not hearken unto their judges, but they [a] went a whoring after other gods, and bowed themſelves unto them: they turned quickly out of the way which their fathers walked in, obeying the commandments of the LORD; but they did not ſo. 18. And when the LORD raiſed them up judges, then [b] the LORD was with the judge, and delivered them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: (for it [c] repented the LORD becauſe of their [d] groanings, by reaſon of them that oppreſſed them, and vexed them). 19. And it came to paſs [e] when the judge was dead, that they returned, and † corrupted themſelves more than their fathers, in following other gods, to ſerve them, and to bow down unto them: they ‡ ceaſed not from their own doings, nor from their || ſtubborn way. 20. ¶ And the anger of the LORD was hot againſt Iſrael; and he ſaid, Becauſe that this people hath tranſgreſſed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkned unto my voice: 21. [f] I alſo will not henceforth drive out any from before them, of the nations which Joſhua [g] left when he died: 22. That through them I may [h] prove Iſrael, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not. 23. Therefore the LORD left thoſe nations, without driving them out haſtily, neither delivered he them into the hand of Joſhua.

v. 6—23. We have here,

1. A recapitulation of what was mentioned before concerning the death and burial of Joſhua, and the piety which was preſerved in Iſrael during his life, and the lives of the elders who ſurvived him, who had ſeen God's mighty works. Note, The life and power of religion ſeldom flouriſhes in one place for more than one generation at a time.

2. The generation which aroſe after the elders were dead, greatly declined from their godly walk and converſation. They forgot the good inſtructions delivered to them, and yielding themſelves up to the indulgence of their appetites in that land of plenty, neglected God's worſhip, and, ſtrange to tell! not only with baſe ingratitude, and moſt impious perfidy, loſt all remembrance of the true God, but with blind ſtupidity went a whoring after dumb idols, and worſhipped Baalim and Aſhtaroth, the male and female deities of their wretched neighbours, the ſun and moon, and the hoſts of heaven. Note, (1.) Forgetfulneſs of God is the door at which every abomination enters. (2.) Nobody knows how brutiſh in ſin he may become, if once given up to his own heart's luſts.

3. The anger of God was juſtly provoked by ſuch abominations, committed by a people ſo favoured. In juſt judgment therefore he gave them up into their enemies hand; every where they were vanquiſhed by thoſe they had before enſlaved, and forced to fly from thoſe, of whom one Iſraelite had chaſed a thouſand. Thus ſpoiled, oppreſſed, and inſulted, by the meaneſt of the ſurrounding nations, they were diſtreſſed beyond meaſure, without power to help, or ſtrength to relieve themſelves. Note, (1.) They who ſell themſelves to work wickedneſs, will find their plague in their ſin. (2.) They who forſake God, have only themſelves to blame for the miſeries that enſue.

4. In their ſtate of helpleſs wretchedneſs God pitied them. Their groaning, though not ſo much the cry of ſorrow for ſin, as of anguiſh for ſuffering, came before him, and he repented him of the evil. Soon he changed his diſpenſations towards them, and though he might juſtly have left them to periſh in their iniquities, yet, as beloved for the father's ſake, and for purpoſes of his own glory, he raiſed them up judges, men extraordinarily qualified to deliver them from their oppreſſors, and recover them from their back-ſlidings. With theſe God vouchſafed his preſence, bleſſing their labours, and giving ſucceſs to their undertakings. Note, (1.) In the church's greateſt diſtreſs and degeneracy, God doth uſually raiſe up ſome eminently qualified, and as eminently zealous for his ſervice and the ſalvation of men's ſouls. (2.) Whom God calls to his work, he will own with his bleſſing.

5. Many, it ſhould ſeem the moſt, under mercies as well as judgments, continued as impenitent as ever: even during the judge's adminiſtration, they were refractory, would not hearken to their reproofs, or be guided by their counſels; and if for a moment they ſeemed to relent, they turned quickly again to their old evil ways. Their reformation vaniſhed as the early cloud, and as the morning dew. At fartheſt, at the judge's death, the nation with a general revolt returned to their former abominations, and grew worſe and worſe, more deeply ſunk in idolatry, which is ſpiritual adultery, and more brutiſh and barbarous in the worſhip of their ſtrange gods. Note, (1.) They who are not converted by the word of God, are hardened under it. (2.) They who apoſtatize from the profeſſion of religion they have made, grow uſually more abandoned than any others.

6. Provoked with ſuch impenitence and determined revolt, God reſolves to let the Canaanites remain to be their ſcourge, to bring them to repentance, and for a conſtant trial of their fidelity in God's worſhip and ſervice; and therefore Joſhua did not compleat the conqueſt of them. Note, (1.) Our indwelling corruptions are ſuffered to remain for the trial of our graces, and to magnify the power of God in our preſervation and ſupport againſt their power and prevalence. (2.) Though a child of God be long ſuffered to bear the yoke of his corruptions, and to groan being burdened, God will not, though caſt down, leave him to deſpair. (3.) After all their ſufferings, the day is coming, when, through their divine Joſhua, the people of God ſhall perfect their conqueſt, and not a Canaanite remain in the land, not an unſubdued ſin be left in their hearts.

CHAP. III.

In this chapter we have, 1. A general account of Iſrael's enemies, ver. 1—7. 2. The brave exploits done by the three firſt judges. 1. Othniel, who ſubdued the king of Meſopotamia, ver. 8—11. 2. Ehud, who reſcued Iſrael out of the hands of the Moabites, ver. 12—30. and 3. Shamgar, who ſignalized himſelf in a rencounter with the Philiſtines, ver. 31.

1. NOW theſe are the nations which the LORD left to [a] prove Iſrael by them, (even as many of Iſrael as had not known all the wars of Canaan; 2. Only that the generations of the children of Iſrael might know to [b] teach them war, at the leaſt ſuch as before [c] knew nothing thereof) 3. Namely, five lords of the Philiſtines, and all the Canaanites, and the Sidonians, and the Hivites that dwelt in mount Lebanon, from mount Baal-hermon, unto the entring in of Hamath. 4. And they were to prove Iſrael by them, [d] to know whether they would hearken unto the commandments of the LORD, which he commanded their fathers by the hand of Moſes. 5. And the children of Iſrael dwelt among the Canaanites, Hittites, and Amorites, and Perizzites, and Hivites, and Jebuſites: 6. And [e] they took their daughters to be their wives, and gave their daughters to their ſons, and [f] ſerved their gods. 7. And the children of Iſrael did evil in the ſight of the LORD, and forgat the LORD their God, and ſerved Baalim and the groves.

v. 1—7. We have the ſad account of Iſrael's apoſtacy from God, by means of the Canaanites, who were left to prove them, whether they would continue faithful, and to keep the riſing generation from that effeminacy which eaſe and affluence might produce. The five lords of the Philiſtines ſtood firm, and again recovered thoſe three cities which had been taken. The northern Canaanites, Zidonians, and Hivites, in mount Lebanon, kept their poſſeſſions, whilſt in every part of the country there continued multitudes of the devoted nations, whom Iſrael, thro' ſloth and covetouſneſs, had ſpared, and ſuffered ſtill to dwell among them. With theſe they ſoon mingled, joined in marriages, and, as the conſequence thereof, followed after their idols, worſhipped Baalim and the groves, the idols which were placed there, and forgat God. Note, (1.) Corruption remains in the regenerate to prove them, and exerciſe their graces. (2.) A wife of the daughters of Canaan is the moſt dangerous ſnare the devil can put in the way of God's Iſrael. (3.) Forgetfulneſs of God is a beſetting ſin; and when He is forgotten, the reins are let looſe upon the neck of every luſt.

And when the children of Iſrael cried unto the LORD, the LORD raiſed up a ‖ deliverer to the children of Iſrael, who delivered them, even Othniel the ſon of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother. 10. And the Spirit of the LORD came upon him, and he judged Iſrael, and went out to war, and the LORD delivered Chuſhan-riſhathaim king of Meſopotamia into his hand: and his hand prevailed againſt Chuſhan-riſhathaim. 11. v. 8—11. Iſrael is ſcarcely ſettled before they forget God, and turn aſide after idols; but their ſufferings follow quick on their ſins. We have here,

1. Their diſtreſs. Becauſe they ſold themſelves to work wickedneſs, God ſold them as captives into the hand of the king of Meſopotamia, and eight years his heavy hand was upon them. Note, If our troubles be long or heavy, they are however leſs than our iniquities deſerve.

2. They who forget God in proſperity, cry to him in their diſtreſs. It is by affliction God uſually brings home to him his back-ſliding Iſrael. No doubt, they cried long and often before the mercy came, God exerciſing their faith and patience by keeping them for eight years waiting for the mercy. Note, We muſt always pray, and not faint. Though we do not always ſpeed at firſt, yet, if we perſevere, we are ſure not to be diſappointed at laſt.

3. God heard and anſwered their prayer. Othniel, Caleb's ſon-in-law, whoſe valour was before recorded, is raiſed up for their deliverer. The Spirit of God moving him to undertake the work, and aſſiſting him in the accompliſhment of the undertaking, he judged Iſrael, reproved them for their iniquities, and brought them back to the worſhip of the true God; and under his hand the power of their oppreſſors was broken, and they had reſt forty years. Note, (1.) There is a Saviour at hand for thoſe who groan under the burden of ſin. (2.) If we would have Chriſt to deliver us from outward troubles, be it our care to put away inward iniquity. (3.) They who have Chriſt for their Saviour, ſhall find a longer reſt than forty years, even to the years of eternity.

12. ¶ And the children of Iſrael did [m] evil again in the ſight of the LORD: and the LORD [n] ſtrengthned Eglon the king of Moab againſt Iſrael, becauſe they had done evil in the ſight of the LORD. 13. And he gathered unto him the children of Ammon and Amalek, and went and ſmote Iſrael, and poſſeſſed the city of palm-trees. 14. So the children of Iſrael ſerved Eglon the king of Moab eighteen years. 15. But when the children of Iſrael [o] cried unto the LORD, the LORD raiſed them up a deliverer, Ehud the ſon of Gera, † a Benjamite, a man ‡ left-handed: and by him the children of Iſrael ſent a preſent unto Eglon the king of Moab. 16. But Ehud made him a dagger (which had two ‖ edges) of a cubit length, and he did gird it under his raiment, upon his right thigh. 17. And he brought the preſent unto Eglon king of Moab: and Eglon was a very fat man. 18. And when he had made an end to offer the preſent, he ſent away the people that bare the preſent. 19. But he himſelf turned again from the † quarries that were by Gilgal, and ſaid, I have a ſecret errand unto thee, O king: who ſaid, Keep ſilence. And all that ſtood by him went out from him. 20. And Ehud came unto him, and he was ſitting in ‡ a ſummer-parlour, which he had for himſelf alone, and Ehud ſaid, I have a meſſage from God unto thee. And he aroſe out of his ſeat. 21. And Ehud put forth his left hand, and took the dagger from his right thigh, and [p] thruſt it into his belly. 22. And the haft alſo went in after the blade: and the fat cloſed upon the blade, ſo that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly, and † the dirt came out. 23. Then Ehud went forth through the

When he was gone out, his ſervants came; and when they ſaw, that behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they ſaid, Surely he ‡ covereth his feet in his ſummer-chamber. 25. And they tarried till they were aſhamed: and behold, he opened not the doors of the parlour: therefore they took a key, and opened them, and behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth. 26. And Ehud eſcaped while they tarried, and paſſed beyond the quarries, and eſcaped unto Seirath. 27. And it came to paſs when he was come, that he [q] blew a trumpet in the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Iſrael went down with him from the mount, and he before them. 28. And he ſaid unto them, Follow after me: for [r] the LORD hath delivered your enemies the Moabites into your hand. And they went down after him, and took the fords of Jordan toward Moab, and ſuffered not a man to paſs over. 29. ¶ And they ſlew of Moab at that time about ten thouſand men, all † luſty, and all men of valour; and there eſcaped not a man. 30. So Moab was ſubdued that day under the hand of Iſrael: and the land had reſt fourſcore years.

v. 12—30. Far from being ſuitably affected with their late deliverance, after Othniel's death, the long enjoyment of eaſe and affluence plunged them again into their old ſins, and provoked God to give them up to new oppreſſors.

1. The king of Moab, who in vain, in former years, attempted to ſtand againſt them, now that God is no longer their defence, ariſes to war, ſtrengthens himſelf by the forces of Ammon and Amalek, and prevails againſt them. The Iſraelites, unable to reſiſt, are every where beaten, their ſtrong-holds taken, and the city of palm-trees, a fort it ſhould ſeem near Jericho, garriſoned to keep them under the yoke. Eighteen years they endured this ſervitude, and paid tribute to their oppreſſors. Note, (1.) When we return to ſin, we may expect God will return to judgment. (2.) If lighter corrections are ineffectual, God will make them longer and heavier. (3.) No inſtrument ſo deſpicable, but whenever God pleaſes, he can make it the rod of his anger.

2. Iſrael had again recourſe to prayer, and though their ſuffering was prolonged, at laſt God pities and delivers them by the hand of Ehud, a Benjamite. The tribe of Benjamin lying neareſt the garriſon of the Philiſtines, might probably be moſt oppreſſed, and, weakened as they were ſome time before by that ſtroke, recorded chap. xx. leſs able to reſiſt; but God can work by the weakeſt means the greateſt deliverances. Ehud, raiſed up under a divine impulſe, embraces the firſt opportunity to accompliſh the ſtroke he meditated for the reſcue of the people. Being ſent with a preſent to Eglon king of Moab, he conceals on his right thigh a ſhort dagger, which, being a left-handed man, was moſt conveniently thus ſituated. Having obtained an audience, and preſented the gifts he brought, he was graciouſly diſmiſſed, and departed with his ſervants on his return. At the quarries of Gilgal, (a place where ſtones were hewn; or, as ſome have ſuggeſted from the word, which ſignifies engravings, or graven images, where the king of Moab had ſet up his idols upon Joſhua's twelve ſtones) he diſmiſſed his ſervants, and turned back again alone, under pretence of a meſſage of importance to the king, which required privacy. His gifts had paved the way for a ready acceſs, and eaſier credibility: Eglon diſmiſſes his ſervants, and now alone with Ehud in his ſummer parlour, waits to know the ſubject of his errand; when, approaching him nearer, and telling him it was a meſſage from God, the king, though very corpulent, reſpectfully aroſe. Ehud immediately plunged the dagger into his bowels, which being ſhort, the fat cloſed over it, and he fell down dead on the ſpot. On this Ehud iſſues forth, locks the door behind him, paſſes through the guards unmoleſted, and haſtens away. Long time his attendants waited, ſuppoſing he ſlept in his ſummer parlour, and cared not to be diſturbed; at laſt, wearied with waiting, they opened the door, and to their aſtoniſhment beheld their king dead on the floor. It was now too late to purſue the fugitive, who was eſcaped to a place of ſafety. Ehud, on his return, inſtantly proclaims his late atchievement, and by ſound of trumpet ſummons the men of mount Ephraim to finiſh the ſtroke he had begun, with aſſurance of ſucceſs. Thick as the cluſtering bees they ſwarm around his ſtandard, and, under his command, one party ſeizes the fords of Jordan, whilſt the reſt attack the diſpirited garriſon, not a man of which was ſuffered to eſcape. Ten thouſand of the moſt valiant Moabites fell that day, and therewith ended the dominion of Moab. The conſequence of this victory was a reſt of eighty years. Note, (1.) This act of Ehud's was by a particular command of God, and is not to be pleaded as a precedent for aſſaſſination. (2.) The greateſt dangers do not intimidate, nor the greateſt difficulties entangle thoſe, whom God arms with holy courage, and ſupplies with the ſpirit of wiſdom. (3.) It is a great mercy to have reſt from our ſpiritual enemies; let us improve it by diligence to grow in grace, that we may be better prepared for their reception, when they ſhall renew their attacks.

v. 1—3. During the life of Ehud their deliverer, the people it ſeems behaved well; but no ſooner is he dead, than, like a broken bow, they ſtart aſide, and return to their former abominations. This provoked a heavier ſcourge than either of the former, under Jabin, king of Canaan, whoſe royal ſeat was Hazor, formerly deſtroyed by Joſhua, but now re-built and reſtored, through the negligence and ſloth of the Iſraelites. His captain, Siſera, alſo dwelt in Haroſheth of the Gentiles, another fortreſs probably, where the fugitives of the ſeveral nations who had fled collected themſelves, and now were become ſo ſtrong, as mightily to oppreſs their former conquerors. The numerous hoſts, and nine hundred chariots of iron, which he maintained, left no hope of redreſs, and in deſpair and anguiſh Iſrael is once more driven unto God. Note, (1.) When leſſer viſitations do not anſwer their purpoſe, we may expect heavier. (2.) They who abuſe proſperity, ſhall know the cries of adverſity. (3.) Whilſt there is a tongue in the ſinner to ſpeak, God hath ſtill an ear to hear.

4. ¶ And Deborah a propheteſs, the wife of Lapidoth, ſhe judged Iſrael at that time. 5. And [c] ſhe dwelt under the palm-tree of Deborah, between Ramah and Beth-el in mount Ephraim, and the children of Iſrael came up to her for judgment. 6. And ſhe ſent and called Barak the ſon of Abinoam, out of Kedeſh-naphtali, and ſaid unto him, Hath not the LORD God of Iſrael commanded, ſaying, Go, and draw towards mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thouſand men of the children of Naphtali, and of the children of Zebulun? 7. And [d] I will draw unto thee, to the river [e] Kiſhon, Siſera the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots, and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand. 8. And Barak ſaid unto her, If thou wilt go with me, then I will go: but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go. 9. And ſhe ſaid, I will ſurely go with thee; notwithſtanding, the journey that thou takeſt ſhall not be for thine honour: for the LORD ſhall ſell Siſera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah aroſe, and went with Barak to Kedeſh.

v. 4—9. Twenty years the iron yoke of Jabin lay heavy upon them, when now at laſt God hears his people's cry, and comes to deliver them.

Deborah, a propheteſs, the wife of Lapidoth, at that time judged Iſrael. She was raiſed up by the Spirit of God, endued with wiſdom, and favoured with prophetic foreſight. All theſe gifts, as her name implies, a bee, ſhe induſtriouſly employed for the public good; ſweet to her friends, but armed with a ſting to ſmite her enemies. To her the people reſorted for judgment in their controverſies, and for direction in their religious concerns. Her abode, or rather her ſeat of juſtice, was under a palm-tree in mount Ephraim, which afterwards became famous, and bore her name. Grieved at the ſufferings of the people, ſhe here, under a divine impulſe, forms the plan for their reſcue; but being, as a woman, unfit to head the armies in the field, ſhe calls Barak to her aſſiſtance. Him ſhe directs what forces to levy, points out the place of encampment, and aſſures him from God, that, ſtrong as the hoſts of Jabin were, yet they and their captain ſhould both fall into his hand. Barak heſitates; yet, if ſhe will go with him, conſents to undertake the expedition; her preſence, as a propheteſs, being more his dependance than the ſword of his ſoldiers: ſhe refuſes not to go, but warns him, that it would rob him of the honour, as the victory would be aſcribed to her, and foretels him, that a woman ſhould gain the glory of Siſera's deſtruction. Note, (1.) When we go to war againſt our ſpiritual enemies, it is a great encouragement to have their advice and prayers, whoſe experience and piety we can depend upon. (2.) When God will deſtroy his enemies, their reſiſtance is vain; and their gathering to battle, is only ruſhing into the ſnare.

10. ¶ And Barak called Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedeſh, and he went up with ten thouſand men at his feet: and Deborah went up with him. 11. Now Heber the Kenite, which was of the children of Hobab the father-in-law of Moſes, had ſevered himſelf from the † Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the plain of Zaanaim, which is by Kedeſh. 12. And they ſhewed Siſera, that Barak the ſon of Abinoam was gone up to mount Tabor. 13. And Siſera ‡ gathered together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron, and all the people that were with him, from Haroſheth of the Gentiles, unto the river of Kiſhon. 14. And Deborah ſaid unto Barak, Up; for this is the day in which the LORD hath delivered Siſera into thine hand: [f] Is not the LORD gone out before thee? So Barak went down from mount Tabor, and ten thouſand men after him. 15. And [g] the LORD diſcomfited Siſera, and all his chariots, and all his hoſt, with the edge of the ſword, before Barak: ſo that Siſera lighted down off his chariot, and fled away on his feet. 16. But Barak purſued after the chariots, and after the hoſt, unto Haroſheth of the Gentiles, and all the hoſt of Siſera fell upon the edge of the ſword, and there was not † a man left.

v. 10—16. Barak, at Deborah's command, having quickly raiſed the ten thouſand men, chiefly out of the tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali, encamped on mount Tabor; and Deborah, according to her promiſe, accompanied him. Siſera is ſoon informed of theſe military preparations, either by the Canaanites or the Kenites, who lately removed into this part of the country out of Judah, and were at peace with Jabin. Immediately he collects his army, eſpecially his nine hundred chariots of iron, in which his chief ſtrength lay, and againſt which ten thouſand footmen were a very unequal match. When the armies were thus encamped, the one at the brook beneath, and the other in the mountain above,

1. Deborah iſſues the order for the battle to begin. Barak and the people might well tremble at the ſight before them, but ſhe aſſures them they need not fear; God is with them, and this very day they ſhould ſee his great ſalvation. The victory is already won, ſince God hath promiſed it. Note, If God be for us, let us never fear who are againſt us.

2. Barak obeys. He truſts not to his encampment on the mountain, nor waits there to be attacked; but, truſting on the divine promiſe, boldly deſcends. Struck with a panic fear, the army of Siſera dares not abide his coming, but, diſcomfited of God, ſeek by flight in vain to ſave themſelves from the ſword of Barak. Note, (1.) They who go forth in faith, muſt return victorious. (2.) When God purſues the ſinner, flight is vain.

3. A total overthrow is given theſe numerous hoſts. They are purſued to the very gates of their city, and not a man ſpared from the ſword: both chariots and horſes are fallen, and Siſera alone eſcapes on foot, only to fall more ignominiouſly in the tent of Jael. Note, (1.) When God begins with his enemies, he will alſo make an end. (2.) We do well to proſecute our ſucceſſes againſt our corruptions, and quicken our diligence the more we prevail againſt them.

17. Howbeit Siſera fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between Jabin the king of Hazor, and the houſe of Heber the Kenite. 18. ¶ And Jael went out to meet Siſera, and ſaid unto him, Turn in, my Lord, turn in to me, fear not: and when he had turned in unto her into the tent, ſhe covered him with a mantle. 19. And he ſaid unto her, Give me, I pray thee, [h] a little water to drink, for I am thirſty: and ſhe opened a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him. 20. Again he ſaid unto her, Stand in the door of the tent, and it ſhall be when any man doth come and enquire of thee, and ſay, Is there any man here? that thou ſhalt ſay, [i] No. 21. Then Jael Heber's wife took [k] a nail of the tent, and took a hammer in her hand, and went ſoftly unto him, and ſmote the nail into his temples, and faſtened it into the ground: (for he was faſt aſleep, and weary) ſo he died. 22. And behold, as Barak purſued Siſera, Jael came out to meet him, and ſaid unto him, Come, and I will ſhew thee the man whom thou ſeekeſt. And when he came into her tent, behold, Siſera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples. 23. So [l] God ſubdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan, before the children of Iſrael. 24. And the hand of the children of Iſrael † proſpered and prevailed againſt Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had [m] deſtroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

v. 17—24. The army being deſtroyed, we have here an account of the death of their general.

1. His flight. His chariot was now no longer his ſafety; and though in this confidence he drew near to battle, he finds by experience how vain a thing this is to ſave a man. Creature-dependances thus uſually fail us. The tents of the Kenites ſeemed to promiſe a ſafe retreat, and as there was peace between Jabin and them, he flees thither for protection.

2. His reception here was ſeemingly as hoſpitable as he could wiſh. Jael, the wife of Heber, ſtood at the tent door, invited him in to repoſe in her apartment, refreſhed him thirſty with his flight, and covered him up as weary, for ſleep as well as for concealment. Having wiſhed her to deny others entrance there, and by a lie to divert his purſuers, he thinks he may now lie down in peace, and take his reſt. How deluſive are appearances! how often is our danger neareſt, when moſt ſecure, and our ruin meditating by thoſe in whom we place the greateſt confidence. Note, They who truſt on man will uſually be diſappointed; they who truſt on God, never.

3. His death. Fatigued with his flight, his ſenſes were ſoon locked up in ſleep, and Jael (on divine warrant, no doubt) meditates and performs the fatal deed. Stealing ſoftly to him, with one of the nails of the tent, and a hammer in her hand, as he lay on his ſide, ſhe ſmote him through both his temples, and faſtened him to the ground: ſo he fell, as was foretold, by the hand of a woman. Note, (1.) God often chuſes the weak things of the world to confound the mighty. (2.) When our fate is determined, flight or reſiſtance are alike in vain.

4. Barak comes, and finds Siſera ſlain. Jael welcomes him to her tent, and ſhews him his enemy fallen, to their common joy. Note, The death of an oppreſſive tyrant is a general mercy.

5. From that day Iſrael purſued the blow, ſubdued Jabin, and deſtroyed his people and cities; and thus, taught by experience, acted more conformably to the divine command and their own advantage, in utterly deſtroying this devoted people. Note, (1.) It is wiſdom to improve under paſt experience. (2.) God's commands and our real intereſts are inſeparable.

CHAP. V.

This chapter contains the triumphant ſong of Deborah and Barak for this ſignal victory. 1. They begin with praiſe to God, ver. 2, 3. 2. Compare his appearances on this occaſion, with his appearances on mount Sinai, ver. 4, 5. 3. Magnify this deliverance from their calamitous condition, ver. 6—8. 4. Call upon thoſe to join in praiſe, that ſhared in the benefits of the ſucceſs, ver. 9—13. 5. Reflect honour upon thoſe that were forward, and diſgrace on thoſe that were backward in the ſervice, ver. 14—19, 23. 6. Take notice how God himſelf fought for them, ver. 20—22. 7. Celebrate Jael, that ſlew Siſera, ver. 24—30. 8. Conclude with a prayer to God, ver. 31.

1. THEN [a] ſang Deborah and Barak the ſon of Abinoam, on that day, ſaying, 2. Praiſe ye the LORD for the [b] avenging of Iſrael, when the people [c] willingly offered themſelves. 3. [d] Hear, O ye kings; give ear, O ye princes; I, even I, will ſing unto the LORD, I will ſing praiſe to the LORD God of Iſrael. 4. LORD, when thou [e] wenteſt out of Seir, when thou marchedſt out of the field of Edom, [f] the earth trembled, ped water. 5. The mountains † melted from before the LORD, even that Sinai from before the LORD God

v. 1—5. The grateful heart of Deborah, big with thankfulneſs, in ſtrains more ſublime, more tender, than Sappho or Homer ever ſung, under the guidance of the true inſpirer, dictates and leads the ſong among the victorious hoſts of Iſrael, on that day, either the very day of battle, or on occaſion of it, in ſome future ſolemnity. Barak and the people with joy united their voices, and praiſed with her the glorious God of hoſts. Note, Praiſe is comely, and as pleaſing to God as comfortable to ourſelves.

1. She opens with exultation, Praiſe ye the Lord; and abundant reaſon is given, in the wondrous interpoſition which appeared when vengeance overtook their enemies. As God, after ſuch a length of deſerved ſervitude, had in mercy again ſtirred up the people's hearts to ſhake off the galling yoke, therefore to Him, the Lord Jehovah, the God of irreſiſtible power, the Lord God of Iſrael, their covenant God, I, ſo bound in duty, ſo filled with gratitude, I, even I, will ſing. Note, God muſt have all the glory of his own work; however he uſes inſtruments, yet the praiſe for the ſucceſs is purely his own.

2. She demands attention from the great ones of the earth, whether the neighbouring kings and princes, who ſhould hear and tremble, or the great men of Iſrael, who ſhould rejoice with her.

3. She deſcribes the glorious appearances of God in time paſt, when at Sinai the mountain trembled, and a mighty tempeſt was ſtirred up round about him; or when invading the country of Sihon, ſuch terror went before them, that the hearts of the people ſhook with fear: their nobles, compared to the heavens, were weak as water, and the kings of Canaan, though high as the mountains, melted before the ark of God. He is ſtill the ſame, wonderful in power, and glorious in majeſty, his people's ſafeguard, his enemies deſtroyer.

6. In the days of Shamgar the ſon of Anath, in the days of Jael, [g] the high-ways were unoccupied, and the travellers walked through by-ways. 7. The inhabitants of [h] the villages ceaſed, they ceaſed in Iſrael, until that I Deborah aroſe, that I aroſe a mother in Iſrael. 8.
They choſe [i] new gods; then was war in the gates:
[k] was there a ſhield or ſpear ſeen among forty thouſand in Iſrael? 9. My heart is toward the governors of Iſ-rael, that offered themſelves willingly among the people: Bleſs ye the LORD. 10. [l] † Speak ye that ride on [m] white aſſes, ye that [n] ſit in judgment, and walk by the way. 11. They that are delivered from the noiſe of [o] archers in the places of drawing water; there ſhall they rehearſe the ‡ righteous acts of the LORD, even the righteous acts towards the inhabitants of his villages in Iſrael: then ſhall the people of the LORD go down to the gates.

v. 6—11. Deborah proceeds, in her triumphant ſong,

1. To deſcribe the wretched ſtate to which Iſrael was reduced, from the days of Shamgar, to the days of Jael, who had lately ſo ſignalized herſelf. During twenty years nothing was ſeen but ravages and deſolation. Infeſted with robbers, the high-ways were unſafe to travel: all trade was ſtagnated, all tillage neglected; the villages were deſerted for fear of theſe plunderers, and incurſions made even to the gates of the city; ſo that going forth to draw water was dangerous: the adminiſtration of juſtice was interrupted, and they, either diſarmed by their oppreſſors, or negligent and cowardly, had not a ſufficient number of ſwords and ſpears left to arm even forty thouſand of the numerous hoſts of Iſrael; or, as it may ſignify, not one in forty thouſand had arms to defend themſelves. Yet, worſe than all this, and what more contributed to their ruin, they forſook God, who alone could help them; and, as if the former idols were not enough, they choſe new ones, to increaſe their abominations. Note, No wonder they who forſake God, are forſaken by him.

2. She mentions with delight the deliverance God had wrought by her means; not out of pride, or vain conceit of her work or agency in it, but to the glory of God, who had enabled her for, and called her to the bleſſed ſervice. Herein ſhe acknowledges the ready aſſiſtance of thoſe governors, who willingly offered themſelves to fight the Lord's battles. Her heart was towards them in love for their fidelity, and drawn out to God in praiſe, for having inclined them to follow her. Note, They juſtly deſerve the regard of man, who boldly ſtand up for the cauſe of God.

3. She enjoins the ſeveral ranks of men to praiſe God for the happy change. The nobles, who were diſtinguiſhed by riding on white aſſes; the judges, that ſat in the gate; the plowman, that now ſecurely broke the ſod; the traveller, that ſafely trod the lately unoccupied path; the drawer of water, that drank before at the peril of his life; all muſt unite their hearts and voices to adore the great Deliverer, and to bleſs the Lord, who had done for them ſuch marvellous things. Note, Every man in his ſtation hath peculiar mercies to be thankful for.

12. [p] Awake, awake, Deborah: awake, awake, utter a ſong: ariſe, Barak, and [q] lead thy captivity captive, thou ſon of Abinoam. 13. Then he made him that remaineth have dominion over the nobles among the people: The LORD made me have [r] dominion over the mighty. 14. Out of Ephraim was there a root of them againſt Amalek; after thee Benjamin, among thy people: out of Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that † handle the pen of the writer. 15.
And the princes of Iſſachar were with Deborah: even Iſſachar, and alſo Barak, he was ſent ‡ on foot into the valley: ‖ for the diviſions of Reuben † there were great thoughts of heart. 16. Why abodeſt thou among the ſheep-folds, to hear the bleatings of the flocks? for the diviſions of Reuben there were great ſearchings of heart.
17. Gilead abode beyond Jordan: and why did Dan remain in ſhips? Aſher continued on the ſea-ſhore, and abode in his breaches. 18. Zebulun and Naphtali were a people that [t] jeoparded their lives unto the death, in the high places of the field. 19. [u] The kings came and fought, then fought the kings of Canaan in Taanach, by the waters of Megiddo, they took no gain of money.
20. [x] They fought from heaven, the ſtars in their courſes fought againſt Siſera. 21. The river of Kiſhon ſwept them away, that ancient river, the river Kiſhon: O my ſoul, thou haſt trodden down ſtrength. 22. Then were [y] the horſe-hoofs broken, by the means of the pran-ſings, the pranſings of their mighty ones. 23. Curſe ye Meroz, (ſaid the angel of the LORD) curſe ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof: becauſe they came not [z] to the help of the LORD, to the help of the LORD againſt the mighty.

v. 12—23. Deborah proceeding in her ſeraphic ſong, kindles as ſhe recites the righteous acts of the Lord, and calls up all the faculties of her ſoul, to ſtretch their utmoſt powers in uttering his praiſe. Let Barak now ariſe, and lead the captive nobles of Canaan bound to his chariot wheels, and let the meaneſt of the Iſraelites, who have ſurvived their oppreſſors, trample on the necks of the mighty: yea, Deborah herſelf, though a woman, ſhall triumph in the dominion God hath given her. With juſt praiſe ſhe mentions the brave warriors who aſſiſted her, with wonder the mighty foes who fell before them, and with juſt indignation ſtamps with infamy the coward tribes that ſat unconcerned ſpectators of the war.

1. She praiſes Ephraim and Benjamin, for thence was the root and foundation of this expedition; and they ſeem to have detached a body to fall upon the Amalekites, who were Jabin's confederates, and advancing to reinforce his army. Machir ſupplied valiant officers: and Zebulun, famed for penmanſhip, laid down the quill to graſp the ſword. Iſſachar too ſent princes, men of courage and diſtinction, to join their brethren, and fought on foot in the midſt of danger: but Zebulun and Naphtali eſpecially diſtinguiſhed themſelves: out of them the chief part of the army was raiſed. They, as they had been neareſt Jabin's kingdom, and had moſt ſeverely felt his yoke, were the moſt determinedly reſolved to aſſert their liberty, or periſh in the attempt. Yet all theſe united forces were the leaſt part of their ſtrength: the ſtars in their courſes fought againſt Siſera. Either the angelic hoſts of heaven appeared, or thunders and lightnings, ſtorm and tempeſt, burſt upon them, as armed inſtruments of divine vengeance. They diſcomfited the army, and frighted their warlike ſteeds, till, entangled in their harneſs, their very hoofs were broken with their prancings. Nor had they where to flee to; the waters of Kiſhon ſwept away thoſe who attempted to ford its rapid ſtream. Thus was the ſtrength of Iſrael's enemies trodden down, and Deborah's ſoul triumphed. Note, (1.) They who are zealous for God, ſhall aſſuredly hear of it ſhortly to their everlaſting honour. (2.) When we go to war againſt the enemies of our ſouls, we need be determined, ſince conqueſt or death eternal muſt be the iſſue. (3.) The whole creation is armed to avenge God's quarrel againſt his own and his people's enemies.

2. The enemies they combated with were warlike, numerous, and inveterate in their hatred againſt Iſrael. Amalek, their ſworn foe, and the kings of Canaan who yet remained, came with hearty readineſs to ſerve under Siſera's banners, and fight againſt their common enemy. They ſerved not for pay, but voluntarily engaged in humbling Iſrael, in hope to be enriched with their ſpoil, but were diſappointed of their expected gain. Note, The world, like theſe confederates, are ever cloſely

3. Deborah juſtly ſtigmatizes thoſe, who refuſed to lend a helping hand in the glorious work.—Reuben ſtands firſt in the tranſgreſſion: torn with inteſtine diviſions, they were wholly occupied at home, or ſeparated from their brethren in affection, as much as by their ſituation they were content to ſit ſtill, to the grief of thoſe who beheld their ungenerous conduct. Their worldly concerns engroſſed their regard; the bleating of their ſheep was better muſic than the trump of war; and as they were diſtant from the ſcene of oppreſſion, they cared too little for their brethren's ſufferings. Note, Selfiſh worldly ſpirits are ſo wrapped up in purſuit of their own little intereſts, that they care not to trouble themſelves about the cauſe of God, or hazard the diſturbance of their own repoſe, however urgently their brethren call for their aſſiſtance.—Dan and Aſher followed Reuben's bad example. Engaged in traffic and merchandize, they refuſed to be engaged in ſuch an expedition, and pleaded, perhaps, their ſea-faring way of life as their excuſe. Note, They who have no mind to engage in God's warfare, are never at a loſs for a pretext. But above all the reſt, Meroz moſt offended, and therefore a bitter curſe deſcends from God upon the inhabitants thereof. This ſeems to have been a city ſituated near the field of battle, whoſe people refuſed their aſſiſtance, and were more afraid of Siſera's army, than affected with God's promiſes. Note, (1.) They who would ſave their lives by their coward fears, ſhall loſe them. (2.) There is no neutrality to be obſerved between God and the world: whoſoever is afraid or aſhamed to join God's people, is a deſerter from the camp of God, and ſhall be treated accordingly.

24. [a] Bleſſed above women ſhall Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite be, bleſſed ſhall ſhe be above women in the tent. 25. He aſked water, and ſhe gave him milk, ſhe brought forth butter in a lordly diſh. 26. She put her hand to the nail, and her right hand to the workmens hammer: and † with the hammer ſhe ſmote Siſera, ſhe ſmote off his head, when ſhe had pierced and ſtricken through his temples. 27. ‡ At her feet he bowed, he fell, he lay down: at her feet he bowed, he fell; where he bowed, there he fell down ‖ dead.

v. 24—27. Jael, the wife of Heber, receives her deſerved encomium for that noble deed againſt the enemy of God and his Iſrael. Lulled into ſecurity by her invitation and treatment, Siſera without ſuſpicion drank of her cup, and lay down to ſleep; when, by a divine impulſe ſtirred up, her manly ſoul approached the devoted victim, and with unrelenting ſteadineſs ſhe ſtruck the deadly blow. Awaking, at her feet he fell; the ſhadows of death hung heavy on his eye-lids, he bowed, he fell; he bowed, he fell down dead, not in the bed of honour, or ſlain by the devouring ſword, but by the hand of a woman, ſurprized without the power of reſiſtance. His head is ſevered from his body; the terror of the mighty now lies low, and pride is humbled to the duſt: thus will it ſhortly be with thoſe that now are ſunk in ſin, and aſleep in ſecurity; ſoon the arrows of the almighty will ſtick faſt in them; they muſt bow under the ſtroke of vengeance, and fall not into the arms of death only, but into the belly of hell.

28. The mother of Siſera looked out at a window, and cried through the lattefs, Why is his chariot ſo long in coming? why tarry the wheels of his chariots? 29. Her wiſe ladies anſwered her, yea, ſhe returned anſwer to herſelf, 30. [b] Have they not ſped? have they not divided the prey, § to every man a damſel or two? to Siſera a prey of divers colours, a prey of divers colours of needle-work, of divers colours of needle-work on both ſides, meet for the necks of them that take the ſpoil? 31. [c] So let all thine enemies periſh, O LORD: but let them that [d] love him, be [e] as the ſun when he goeth forth in his might. And the land had reſt forty years.

v. 28—31. Moſt elegantly Deborah deſcribes the vain confidence, impatience, and vanity of Siſera's mother; eager to ſee her triumphant ſon return, ſhe chides the lingring chariot wheels: her wiſe women would ſuggeſt the reaſon, yea ſhe anſwers her own queſtion, and fooliſhly flatters herſelf that they are now dividing the prey. To the ſcandal of their ſex, theſe Canaanitiſh ladies wantonly pleaſe themſelves with the view of Iſrael's daughters violated by the inhuman ſoldiers, whilſt Siſera's mother vainly revolving in her mind her own expected ſpoil, ſome gaudy robe, wrought with moſt exquiſite beauty of needle-work, ſtruts in this her fancied garb of honour. How bitter then her diſappointment, to find her princely veſtments changed for priſon garments, and this out-ſtretched neck bowed under captive bands. Note, (1.) Among the moſt beſetting ſins of women, is vanity of dreſs. (2.) When our hearts beat higheſt with worldly hopes, and after worldly gratifications, our diſappointments will be proportionably bitter.

Before Chriſt 1274.

The ſong concludes with a fervent prayer for the continuance of Iſrael's ſucceſs. Let thine enemies periſh. Since their enemies are his, and it is for God's glory to puniſh thoſe who continue impenitent, it may ſafely be the matter of our prayer: but let thoſe who love him, his faithful people, ſhine bright as the ſun when it goeth forth in its meridian ſplendor, victorious over all their enemies, and exemplary in all holy converſation and godlineſs. Note, They who have fought the Lord's battles, and in faith and love approved themſelves to him here below, ſhall ſhortly ſhine as the ſun in the firmament of glory above for ever and ever.

The effect of this victory was another forty years reſt. Happy for them had they improved it more wiſely than before, and prevented the return of judgments, which they had already ſo ſeverely felt.

v. 1—6. Nothing but almighty grace can effect an abiding change on the heart. The ſevereſt providences, like the thunder-clap, only ſtartle us for a moment, and are forgotten. The reſt they had enjoyed, opened a door for ſin to enter among them, and far from improving by paſt experience, they ſtarted aſide again from God. The conſequence of this was, a new ſcourge from a deſpicable and vanquiſhed enemy. The eaſtern Midianites bordering on Moab, whom they had ſmitten, Num. xxxi. recovered themſelves, ſo as to make inroads on the country. They came not as a regular army to fight, but as troops of Banditti, to rob and plunder; yet in ſuch multitudes with their camels, and oxen, and ſheep, that they eat up all the land. For fear of them, the Iſraelites, who had loſt their courage when they left their God, fled to the dens in the mountains for ſhelter, ſuffering all the miſeries of famine in a land of plenty, and ſeeing others eat the harveſt they had ſown. At laſt, after ſeven years affliction, they began to remember themſelves, returned with deep humiliation to God, and cried to him in their diſtreſs. Note, (1.) They who abuſe God's gifts in prodigality and luxury, often live as a juſt puniſhment to feel the want of them in hunger and nakedneſs. (2.) A guilty and accuſing conſcience makes men cowards. (3.) In the day of judgment, it will be vain to call to the mountains to cover us, or the rocks to hide us from the face of him that ſitteth on the throne. (4.) The only hope that remains for the ſinner, is to make now ſupplication to God.

7. ¶ And it came to paſs when the children of Iſrael cried unto the LORD, becauſe of the Midianites; 8. That the LORD ſent a † prophet unto the children of Iſrael, which ſaid unto them, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the houſe of bondage, 9. And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppreſſed you, and [f] drave them out from before you, and gave you their land; 10. And I ſaid unto you, I am the LORD your God, [g] fear not the the gods of the Amorites, in whoſe land ye dwell: but ye have not obeyed my voice.

v. 7—10. God heard the prayer of the poor deſtitute, and pitied them; though it was not their ſins but their ſufferings that raiſed their cries. Hereupon,

1. He ſends a prophet to awaken them to a ſenſe of their ſins, and bring them to repentance. Note, (1.) It is a gracious ſymptom of mercy in ſtore for a ſinful people, when God raiſes them up faithful miniſters, to reprove their backſlidings.

2. The meſſage he brought. God expoſtulates with them on their ingratitude and folly in leaving him, who had delivered them ſo wonderfully from Egypt, ſo often ſubdued their enemies before them, reſcued them from their oppreſſors, and given them their land for an inheritance. The returns he aſked for ſuch mercies were highly reaſonable, to cleave to him alone, and never fear or worſhip the idol gods of the Amorites, who had neither power to help or hurt them. Yet they obeyed not his voice; though ſo plain the duty, and ſo vile the ſin, they wilfully as wickedly refuſed to hearken, and left the living God to follow ſtocks and ſtones. Note, (1.) Ingratitude to the God of grace and mercy, is one of the greateſt aggravations of our ſin. (2.) God's ſervice is the moſt reaſonable. The folly of diſobedience is as great as its evil. (3.) Miniſters muſt ſpeak plainly and cloſely to the ſinner's conſcience, and charge home the accuſations of God's violated laws.

11. ¶ And there [h] came an angel of the LORD, and ſat under an oak which was in Ophrah, that pertained unto Joaſh the Abi-ezrite: and his ſon Gideon threſhed wheat by the wine-preſs, † to hide it from the Midianites. 12. And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and ſaid unto him, [i] The LORD is with thee, thou mighty man of valour. 13. And Gideon ſaid unto him, [k] Oh my lord, if the LORD be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and [l] where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, ſaying, Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? but now the LORD hath forſaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites. 14. And [m] the LORD looked upon him, and ſaid, Go in this thy might, and thou ſhalt ſave Iſrael from the hand of the Midianites: [n] have not I ſent thee? 15. And he ſaid unto him, Oh my lord, [o] wherewith ſhall I ſave Iſrael? behold, ‡ my family is poor in Manaſſeh, and I am [p] the leaſt in my father's houſe. 16. And the LORD ſaid unto him, Surely [q] I will be with thee, and thou ſhalt ſmite the Midianites, as one man. 17. And he ſaid unto him, If now I have found grace in thy ſight, then [r] ſhew me a ſign that thou talkeſt with me. 18. Depart not hence, I pray thee, until I come unto thee, and bring forth my ‖ preſent, and ſet it before thee. And he ſaid, I will tarry until thou come again. 19. And Gideon went in, and made ready a kid and unleavened cakes of an ephah of flour: the fleſh he put in a baſket, and he put the broth in a pot, and brought it out unto him under the oak, and preſented it. 20. And the angel of God ſaid unto him, Take the fleſh and the unleavened cakes, and lay them upon this rock, and [s] pour out the broth. And he did ſo. 21. Then the angel of the LORD put forth the end of the ſtaff that was in his hand, and touched the fleſh, and the unleavened cakes: and there roſe up fire out of the rock, and conſumed the fleſh and the unleavened cakes: then the angel of the LORD departed out of his ſight. 22. And when Gideon perceived that he was an angel of the LORD, Gideon ſaid, [t] Alas, O Lord God: for becauſe I have ſeen an angel of the LORD face to face. 23. And the LORD ſaid unto him, [u] Peace be unto thee, fear not, thou ſhalt not die. 24. Then Gideon built an altar there unto the LORD, and called it § Jehovah-ſhalom: unto this day it is yet in Ophrah of the Abi-ezrites.

§ i. e. The Lord ſend peace. Jer. xxxiii. 16.

v. 11—24. Whilſt God is leaving the people to ruminate upon the meſſage he had ſent them, he begins to interpoſe for their deliverance by the hand of Gideon, the ſon of Joaſh, of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh on this ſide Jordan. To him the angel of the everlaſting covenant, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, appeared in a human form, as he was threſhing wheat by the wine-preſs, to hide it from the Midianites; for ſuch was the diſtreſs to which they were reduced, that the very bread they did eat, muſt be ſecreted. Note, When our caſe appears moſt deſperate, then is the time God chuſes to glorify his power in ſaving us. We have here that which paſſed between the angel of the Lord and Gideon.

1. The angel accoſts him with a very comfortable ſalutation, The Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valour. Probably in mournful meditation over Iſrael's griefs, and fervent ejaculations for ſpeedy help, Gideon was lifting up his heart to God, and now he is anſwered: this unexpected viſitant aſſures him of God's preſence with him. Note, However bleſt we may be with natural gifts, unleſs God be with us, we poſſeſs them in vain. Without him the valiant are weak, and the mighty ſoon brought low.

2. Gideon, indulging his melancholy views of the hard oppreſſion his people now ſuffered, doubts the truth of the meſſage, and ſeems to call in queſtion the former miracles which were recorded, becauſe for a time, as the juſt puniſhment of their ſins, God had left them under the power of Midian. Note, (1.) It is ſometimes difficult to reconcile our afflictive experiences with the great and precious promiſes, and not to ſay, If this be true, why am I thus? (2.) The greateſt ſaints have given many a ſad token of the power of unbelief in their hearts. (3.) We are not to queſtion the truth of paſt miracles, becauſe they continue not to be ſtill wrought. (4.) We are not haſtily to conclude that God hath forſaken us, becauſe for our ſins he hath for a ſeaſon hid his face from us.

3. The Lord anſwers his doubts, by giving him orders to work the people's deliverance from the hand of Midian. With a look of complacence, and with a ſolemnity that added weight to his word, He who can enable him for the ſervice, bids him go, and aſſures him of ſucceſs. Jehovah ſpeaks; let Gideon hear and believe. Note, (1.) It is the Lord's work alone to enable us for that which he doth command. (2.) Nothing inſpires the heart with ſuch earneſtneſs to contend againſt our ſpiritual enemies, as the aſſurance that we ſhall at laſt be more than conquerors.

4. Gideon is unprovided either with men or money to ſupport a war againſt Midian; his family reduced, and himſelf inconſiderable, he heſitates at the command, and through diſtruſt of God, or rather modeſt diffidence of himſelf, expreſſes his apprehenſion of his inability for ſuch an undertaking. Note, (1.) Thoſe who are little in their own eyes, God delights to exalt. (2.) When we find our own weakneſs, and ſpread it in prayer before God, then ſhall we, like Gideon, out of weakneſs be made ſtrong.

5. God can give us no greater confirmation than his word of promiſe. Therefore he repeats it for Gideon's ſatisfaction, with a ſolemn aſſeveration, Surely I will be with thee; and then his poverty, or his want of human help, ſhould be no bar to his compleat victory over the hoſts of Midian. Note, If God be for us, no matter who are againſt us, the day is ours.

6. As the commiſſion was extraordinary, for his own and others ſatisfaction, he aſks a ſign, as an aſſurance of the truth of what was ſaid to him; and begs him to ſtay whilſt he fetched him ſome refreſhment, and treated him as a meſſenger from God. The angel conſents to ſtay, the plain repaſt is quickly provided, and Gideon returns from his father's houſe with part of a boiled kid, ſome broth, and unleavened cakes in a baſket. Note, (1.) They who know the comfort of communion with God, or fellowſhip with his ſaints, will contrive to prolong the viſit. (2.) Chriſtians muſt uſe hoſpitality, and break their bread with chearfulneſs to the hungry. (3.) They who give but a cup of cold water with regard to God, ſhall in no wiſe loſe their reward.

7. Inſtead of ſpreading the table for repaſt, this divine ſtranger enjoins him to lay the meat on a rock near them, and pour the broth upon it. Gideon without heſitation obeys: when, lo! the ſign he aſked, appears: the angel, who ſeemed like a traveller, with his ſtaff gently touched the proviſion as it lay, when inſtantly fire burſts forth, and conſumes the offering; and thereupon the Lord diſappears, leaving Gideon the ſtrongeſt evidence of the truth of what he had told him.

8. Gideon, though a man of valour, and from every circumſtance he might conclude the gracious deſign of all he had ſeen and heard, trembles at the thought of having ſeen an angel; and as Jacob before, and Manoah after, fears he ſhall die.

9. The Lord ſilences his fears, by an audible voice probably, though he could not ſee the angel, he could hear him ſay, Thou ſhalt not die, fear not. Note, Though every meſſage from the world of ſpirits juſtly makes man, a ſinner, to tremble; yet when by faith our hearts have reſted on God's promiſes, then have we nothing to fear from thence, but every thing to hope for.

Laſtly, Gideon ſets up an altar on this rock for a memorial, and calls it very properly, Jehovah-Shalom, the Lord is peace; for he had ſpoken peace to him when he was troubled, had brought him a meſſage of peace for his afflicted brethren, and would give them peace from all their enemies round about. Note, They who have God at peace with them, are happy indeed, and bound to erect the grateful altar, and offer him the ſacrifices of never-ending praiſe.

This altar continued till the time of Samuel, when this book is ſuppoſed to be compiled.

25. ¶ And it came to paſs the ſame night, that the LORD ſaid unto him, Take [x] thy fathers young bullock, † even the ſecond bullock of ſeven years old, and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and cut down the grove that is by it: 26. And build an altar unto the LORD thy God, upon the top of this ‡ rock, in the ordered place, and take the ſecond bullock, and offer a burnt ſacrifice with the wood of the grove, which thou ſhalt cut down. 27. Then Gideon took ten men of his ſervants, and [y] did as the LORD had ſaid unto him: And ſo it was, becauſe he feared his father's houſhold, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it [z] by night. 28. ¶ And when the men of the city roſe early in the morning, behold the altar of Baal was caſt down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the ſecond bullock was offered upon the altar that was built. 29. And they ſaid one to another, Who hath done this thing? And when they enquired and aſked, they ſaid, Gideon the ſon of Joaſh hath done this thing. 30. Then the men of the city ſaid unto Joaſh, Bring out thy ſon, [a] that he may die: becauſe he hath caſt down the altar of Baal, and becauſe he hath cut down the grove that was by it. 31. And Joaſh ſaid unto all that ſtood againſt him, Will [b] ye plead for Baal? will ye ſave him? he that will plead for him, let him be put to death whilſt it is yet morning: if he be a god, let him plead for himſelf, becauſe one hath caſt down his altar. 32. Therefore on that day he called him ‖ Jerubbaal, ſaying, Let Baal plead againſt him, becauſe he hath thrown down his altar.

v. 25—32. Before God will advance him as judge in Iſrael, he will prove his piety as well as courage. Therefore,

1. The ſame night after he had appeared to him at the wine-preſs, he ſpeaks to him in a viſion on his bed, and commands him to overthrow the altar of Baal, which his father had erected, and at which the men of the city paid their devotions, to cut down the grove around it, or perhaps the image upon it, then build an altar on the rock, where the Lord had cauſed the fire to break forth, and offer there his father's young bullock, deſigned for Baal, the ſecond in the ſtall; or, and the ſecond, another of ſeven years old, the two beſt of his herd, and this with the wood of the grove, or image, which he had cut down. Note, (1.) God often chuſes unlikely inſtruments, as now raiſing up an eminent reformer, out of a houſe devoted to Idolatry. (2.) When the blood of atonement is ſhed, there is comfortable hopes that the ſin being pardoned, the affliction will end. (3.) Chriſt is both our rock and altar; thoſe will be acceptable ſacrifices that are offered through him. (4.) It is a wiſe improvement of the unrighteous mammon, when like theſe monuments of idolatry, we can make it ſubſervient to the work and ſervice of God.

2. Gideon no ſooner hears than he obeys. The ſame hour probably he aroſe, and as the night beſt favoured his deſigns, and prevented interruption, before the morning, by the help of his faithful ſervants, whom he ſummoned to attend him, Baal's altar was laid in the duſt, and God's new-raiſed altar ſmoaking with the grateful ſacrifice. Note, (1.) In an idolatrous houſe, ſome are often found who bow not the knee to Baal, but, though in ſecret, cleave unto the Lord their God. (2.) He feared not his father's, or the people's diſpleaſure: where the fear of God is, it ſwallows up every other concern. (3.) When we are called to God's work, it becomes us to make haſte and delay not. What thou doeſt, do quickly.

3. The morning ſoon diſcloſed the ſcene. The men of Baal haſting to their devotions, are ſurprized to find their grove and altar ruined. Gideon ſoon bears the ſuſpicion, from his known diſaffection to their god; enraged even to madneſs, nothing will ſatisfy them but his blood. To this end, they call on Joaſh, his father, to deliver him into their hands. Note, (1.) They who will be zealous for God againſt men's ſins, muſt ſtill put their life in their hands. (2.) How early was Baal's altar viſited? Shall not their falſe worſhip riſe up in judgment againſt thoſe, who neither early nor late bow their knees before the true God?

4. Joaſh boldly refuſes to comply with ſo cruel and unreaſonable a requeſt. Whether out of natural affection for his ſon, or more probably informed by Gideon of the motives for his conduct, and convinced of the evil of the abominable idolatry in which he had before lived. He therefore juſtly rebukes them or pleading for Baal, in oppoſition to the Divine command, and inſtead of giving up his ſon, juſtly threatens (for which he might plead the expreſs law of God) the perſon that ſhould dare ſpeak a word for this idol with inſtant death. He alſo contemptuouſly challenges Baal, if he were a God, to plead for himſelf in order to convince them, from his impotence, of their folly as well as ſin, in truſting upon him. Note, (1.) If we have been zealous in a bad cauſe, we ſhould with greater zeal ſeek to amend what we have done amiſs, by our open appearance for the truth. (2.) Nothing muſt prevail on us to give up the innocent, whoever combine to deſtroy them. (3.) Though it may be highly dangerous to reprove a wicked people, we muſt do our duty, and truſt God with the event.

5. Gideon gets hereupon the name of Jerubbaal, let Baal plead: and this could not but be a great encouragement to himſelf and ſoldiers; for having proved victorious over their God, he need the leſs fear the Midianites, his worſhippers.

Before Chriſt 1267.

33. ¶ Then all the Midianites and the Amalekites, and the children of the eaſt were gathered together, and went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel. 34. But the ſpirit of the LORD † came upon Gideon, and he [c] blew a trumpet, and Abiezer was ‡ gathered after him. 35. And he ſent meſſengers throughout all Manaſſeh, who alſo was gathered after him, and he ſent meſſengers unto Aſher, and unto Zebulun, and unto Naphtali, and they came up to meet them. 36. ¶ And Gideon ſaid unto God, [d] If thou wilt ſave Iſrael by mine hand, as thou haſt ſaid, 37. Behold, I will put a fleece of wool in the floor: and if [e] the dew be on [f] the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth beſide, then ſhall I know that thou wilt ſave Iſrael by mine hand, as thou haſt ſaid. 38. And it was ſo: for he roſe up early on the morrow, and thruſt the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water. 39. And Gideon ſaid unto God, [g] Let not thine anger be hot againſt me, and I will ſpeak but this once: Let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece; [h] let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew. 40. And God did ſo that night: for it was dry upon the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground.

v. 33—40. The harveſt being ready for reaping, we have here, as during the preceding years,

1. An inroad made by the confederate hoſts of Midian, Amalek, and the Arabians, who, confident of ſucceſs, were come to collect the ſpoil. Thus emboldened by ſucceſs, the ſinner uſually advances, till God, from the pinnacle of his felicity, hurls him down into the depths of miſery.

2. God ſtirs up Gideon to oppoſe them; the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, or clothed him; a ſpirit of unuſual courage rouſed him with zeal to beſtir himſelf. He blows the trumpet, invites all volunteers to his ſtandard, and thoſe who would have ſtoned him yeſterday, are to-day the firſt to follow his orders. Of Manaſſeh chiefly he compoſed his army, though Aſher, Zebulun and Naphtali alſo generouſly lent their aſſiſtance. Note, (1.) In a common cauſe, we ſhould be ready to ſhare the danger with our brethren. (2.) In the men of Abiezer, we ſee what changes God can work. Thus hath Divine Grace, often at a ſtroke, changed perſecutors into preachers, and the moſt abandoned into converts to truth and holineſs. (3.) When God gives us a ſpirit of grace and courage, however ſtrong our corruptions within, or ſpiritual enemies without, he will ſubdue them under our feet.

3. Gideon hereupon, for the confirmation of his own faith, or rather perhaps for the encouragement of thoſe who were with him, aſks a ſign of God, to aſſure him of victory over the numerous hoſts of Midian. God conſents to it: Gideon lays the fleece on the floor; and on the morrow, according to his own propoſal, the fleece is filled with water, and the ground dry around it. Note, It is a bleſſed token for good in a miniſter's labours, when his own ſoul, like Gideon's fleece, is repleniſhed with the dew of divine grace.—Once more he preſumes to aſk; aſhamed of his own boldneſs, and begging pardon for his requeſt: Let the ſign be inverted; the fleece dry, the floor wet. God conſents, and it is done; thus ſilencing every doubt of the certainty of his ſucceſs. Note, There are ſeaſons, every Chriſtian knows, when his own ſoul, like Gideon's fleece, is dry amidſt the moſt refreſhing dews of divine influence that fall on others around him.

hill of Moreh, in the valley. 2. And the LORD ſaid unto Gideon, The people that are with thee, are [b] too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, left Iſrael vaunt themſelves againſt me, ſaying, [c] Mine own hand hath ſaved me. 3. Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, ſaying, [d] Whoſoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and ‡ depart early from mount Gilead: and there returned of the people twenty and two thouſand, and there remained ten thouſand. 4. And the LORD ſaid unto Gideon, The people are yet too many: bring them down unto the water, and I will ‖ try them for thee there: and it ſhall be, that [e] of whom I ſay unto thee, This ſhall go with thee, the ſame ſhall go with thee; and of whomſoever I ſay unto thee, This ſhall not go with thee, the ſame ſhall not go. 5. So he brought down the people unto the water: and the LORD ſaid unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue as a dog lappeth, him ſhalt thou ſet by himſelf; likewiſe every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink. 6. And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the reſt of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water. 7. And the LORD ſaid unto Gideon, [f] By the three hundred men that lapped will I ſave you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place. 8. So the people took victuals in their hand, and their trumpets: and he ſent all the reſt of Iſrael, every man unto his tent, and retained thoſe three hundred men: and the hoſt of Midian was beneath him in the valley.

v. 1—8. Gideon, now fully convinced of his miſſion, is in haſte to execute it. At early dawn he riſes, his army is drawn out, and his camp fixed near the well of Harod. Diligence in duty muſt follow faith on the promiſe.—The diſproportion was very great indeed between the hoſts of Midian and Iſrael, but inſtead of leſſening, God will have it increaſed, that they may ſee it was not their own arm which ſaved them. For this purpoſe, God commands,

1. Proclamation to be made through the camp, for the fearful and faint-hearted to depart before the next morning. Gideon obeys, and more than two-thirds of this little army ſhamefully turn their backs, and embrace the offer. Probably they had run together in haſte at firſt, but when they ſaw the numerous hoſts of Midian, wiſhed themſelves ſafe at home again. Note, (1.) Many take up with the profeſſion of Chriſt's ſervice, who have never weighed the conſequences, and therefore quickly ſtart aſide like a broken bow. (2.) They who are enſlaved by the fear of man, are better out of God's camp than in it, as their fearfulneſs is apt to be contagious, and diſcourage the faithful.

2. Ten thouſand remained, and theſe were yet too many: they might think their valour made up for want of numbers, and aſcribe the victory to themſelves; therefore another ſeparation is made, by bringing them to the water to drink, and ſelecting thoſe who lapped out of their hands, from thoſe who kneeled down to drink, which reduced their numbers to 300 men, and all the reſt were diſmiſſed. Thus Gideon's faith was eminently diſplayed, and his readineſs to truſt the matter entirely with God appeared. Note, (1.) God's ways are often myſterious, and he reduces his people to the greater ſtraits, that his own glory may the more be magnified in their preſervation. (2.) When faith is in exerciſe, no difficulties will make us ſtagger at the promiſe.

3. The three hundred that remain when their brethren were diſmiſſed, are alſo in no wiſe accoutred as combatants. They are armed with trumpets inſtead of ſwords, and carry their victuals in their hands, as if God had deſigned they ſhould ſpend the day with muſick and feaſting, inſtead of meeting their enemies in a field of battle. Note, (1.) God's work is often accompliſhed by the moſt unlikely means. (2.) When God commands to arms, and appoints our weapons, we may ſafely advance againſt our moſt formidable enemies, though armed only with a trumpet, or five ſmooth ſtones.

9. ¶ And it came to paſs the ſame [g] night, that the LORD ſaid unto him, Ariſe, [h] get thee down unto the hoſt, for I have delivered it into thine hand. 10. But if thou fear to go down, go thou with Phurah thy ſervant down to the hoſt. 11. And thou ſhalt hear what they ſay, and afterwards ſhall [i] thine hands be ſtrengthned to go down unto the hoſt. Then went he down with Phurah his ſervant unto the outſide of the † armed men that were in the hoſt. 12. And the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and all the children of the eaſt, lay along in the valley like graſhoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, [k] as the ſand ‡ by the ſea-ſide for multitude. 13. And when Gideon was come, behold, there was a man that told a dream unto his fellow, and ſaid, Behold, I dreamed a dream, and lo, [l] a cake of barley-bread tumbled into the hoſt of Midian, and came unto a tent, and ſmote it that it fell, and overturned it, that the tent lay along. 14. And his fellow anſwered and ſaid, [m] This is nothing elſe ſave the ſword of Gideon the ſon of Joaſh, a man of Iſrael: for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the hoſt. 15. ¶ And it was ſo when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and the ‖ interpretation thereof, that he worſhipped, and returned into the hoſt of Iſrael, and ſaid, [n] Ariſe; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the hoſt of Midian.

v. 9—15. Whilſt Gideon with his little band is now waiting his orders from God, the ſame night God comes to him, bids him advance, and aſſures him, that his enemies are delivered into his hand. Note, When in God's cauſe we are reduced to the greateſt ſtraits, we ſhall experience the ſtrongeſt ſupports: yet farther to ſtrengthen his faith, he is ordered to go down with his ſervant to the camp of Midian, that any remaining fear might be utterly baniſhed, by what he ſhould there hear. Accordingly,

1. At dead of night, he approaches the out-ſkirts of their tents, where they lay thick as graſhoppers, and liſtening, hears one ſoldier report a dream, which another interprets: a barley-cake ſeemed to roll from the hill above them, into the camp, and ſtruck a tent, which inſtantly fell before it. This his comrade interprets to be the ſword of Gideon, which ſhould deſtroy their hoſt; whence he might well conclude the panic which had gone out among them. There is ſomething very ſtrange in the phenomenon of dreaming, and uſually to diſregard theſe disjointed ideas is beſt; leaſt we be often made needleſsly uneaſy. But ſometimes, no doubt, for wiſe purpoſes there may be more than the rovings of fancy in theſe viſions of the night; and God may thus communicate notices to our ſpirits, which deſerve our moſt ſerious regard.

2. Gideon, affected with the occurrence, and fully perſuaded that the dream was certain, and the interpretation ſure, worſhips God on the ſpot; praiſing him for the encouragement given him, and praying to be enabled to proſecute the blow he meditated. Immediately he returns, ſummons his companions, relates, no doubt, what had happened, and bids them march to certain victory. Note, When God is pleaſed to ſtrengthen or comfort our own ſouls, our buſineſs ſhould be to tell of his goodneſs, for the ſtrength and comfort of our brethren.

16. And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put a trumpet in every man's hand, with empty pitchers, and [o] lamps within the pitchers. 17. And he ſaid unto them, Look on me, and do likewiſe: and behold when I come to the outſide of the camp, it ſhall be that as I do, ſo ſhall ye do. 18. When I blow with a trumpet, I and all that are with me, then blow ye the trumpets alſo on every ſide of all the camp, and ſay, [p] The ſword of the LORD, and of Gideon. 19. ¶ So Gideon, and the three hundred men that were with him, came unto the outſide of the camp, [q] in the beginning of the middle watch; and they had but newly ſet the watch, and they blew the trumpets, and [r] brake the pitchers that were in their hands. 20. And the three companies blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, and held the lamps in their left hands, and the trumpets in their right hands to blow withal: and they cried, The ſword of the LORD, and of Gideon. 21. And [s] they ſtood every man in his place, round about the camp: and [t] all the hoſt ran, and cried, and fled. 22. And the three hundred blew the trumpets, and [u] the LORD ſet every man's ſword againſt his fellow, even throughout all the hoſt: and the hoſt fled to Beth-ſhittah in Zererath, and to the border of Abel-meholah and Tabbath.

v. 16—22. We have here an account,

1. Of the manner in which he made the attack upon the Midianites. His little army is divided into three companies, each of an hundred men, armed not with ſword or bow, but with a trumpet in one hand, and lamps concealed in pitchers, in the other. A little paſt midnight they advanced, juſt as the watch was ſet, to give the ſpeedier alarm, and the order is to follow Gideon's example: when lo! in an inſtant, the trumpets are blown, the pitchers broken, the lights blazing on every ſide, and they ſhout aloud, The ſword of the Lord and of Gideon. Note, (1.) By the trumpet of the everlaſting goſpel, and the light held forth from the earthen veſſels of faithful miniſters, the powers of Satan's kingdom are ſhaken. (2.) Though the work be of men, the excellency of power is of God; if Gideon has the honour to weild the ſword, it is God who tempers its edge, and directs its point. (3.) If theſe pitchers, trumpets, and ſhoutings, thus diſmayed the hoſts of Midian, how much greater terrors will overwhelm the ſleeping ſinner, when, ſtartled with the midnight cry, the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, he ſhall, aſtoniſhed, behold the ſword of juſtice drawn, and ſtand unable to eſcape amidſt the flames of diſſolving elements, before the dread tribunal of an offended God.

2. The Midianites awake affrighted, apprehending, no doubt, the army of Iſrael in their camp, and ſeized with panic fears, they cry out and run they know not whither; but in their haſte to fly, counting every one they met a foe, each man's ſword is ſet againſt his fellow, and Gideon and his army have only to ſtand ſtill, and ſee the great ſalvation of God: the few who eſcape hurry on to a place of ſafety, as if the ſword of Gideon was at their heels. Note, (1.) The wicked fleeth when no man purſueth. (2.) In violent frights the exerciſe of reaſon is, for a time, ſuſpended, and men act in direct oppoſition to their own preſervation. (3.) God often ſets his people's enemies at variance, and puniſhes them by their own hands. (4.) Though now there is hope to eſcape from the ſword of the Lord, if we fly to Jeſus, our true city of refuge, yet if the preſent moment is loſt, in the next it may be too late.

23. And the men of Iſrael [x] gathered themſelves together out of Naphtali, and out of Aſher, and out of all Manaſſeh, and purſued after the Midianites. 24. ¶ And Gideon ſent meſſengers throughout all mount Ephraim, ſaying, Come down againſt the Midianites, and take before them the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan. Then all the men of Ephraim gathered themſelves together, and took the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan. 25. And they took two princes of the Midianites, Oreb and Zeeb; and [y] they ſlew Oreb upon the rock Oreb, and and Zeeb they ſlew [z] at the wine-preſs of Zeeb, and purſued Midian, and brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon on the other ſide Jordan.

v. 23—25. The victory was quickly blazed; the men of Naphtali, Aſher, and Manaſſeh, haſten to the purſuit; probably the laſt body which was diſmiſſed, waited to ſee the event, at no great diſtance; and even the cowards, who departed for fear, now dare to purſue a flying enemy. Mean time Gideon diſpatches particular meſſengers to the Ephraimites, who were neareſt Jordan, to ſeize the fords, that no Midianites might eſcape; they inſtantly arm and obey him, and into their hands two chief commanders of the hoſts of Midian fell, Oreb and Zeeb, whom they ſlew, and brought their heads to Gideon, giving their names to the places where they were put to death, in remembrance of this glorious day. Note, (1.) We ſhould be always ready to lend God's people a helping hand. (2.) 'Tis in vain to fly from the decree of God. (3.) We ſhould ſet up always our grateful memorial, whenever we receive mercies from God, for the confirmation of our faith in future exigences, and to awaken continual returns of thankfulneſs for paſt favours.

1. AND the men of Ephraim ſaid unto him, † Why haſt thou ſerved us thus, that thou calledſt us not when thou wenteſt to fight with the Midianites? and they did chide with him ‡ ſharply. 2. And he ſaid unto them, [a] What have I done now in compariſon of you? Is not the gleaning of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abiezer? 3. [b] God hath delivered into your hands the princes of Midian, Oreb and Zeeb: and what was I able to do in compariſon of you? Then their anger was abated toward him, when he had ſaid that.

v. 1—3. Inſtead of congratulating Gideon, as might be expected, on his courage and conduct, the Ephraimites, envious of his ſucceſs, ſeek to quarrel with him.

1. They pretend it was an high affront that they were not called to the battle againſt Midian; as if their courage was ſuſpected, or as though Gideon meant to exalt his own tribe, Manaſſeh, by carrying away alone the honour of the victory. Note, (1.) Only from pride cometh contention. (2.) In the eye of the envious man every exaltation of his neighbour is conſtrued an injury done himſelf. (3.) When the danger is paſt every coward vaunts his valour.

2. Gideon, by an anſwer ſuited to their preſent temper, ſeeks to ſooth their exaſperated ſpirits. He doth not reproach them with the unreaſonableneſs of their charge, or return chiding with chiding, but magnifies their performance, as if they had done more in the purſuit, in their gleanings, than he in the battle, the vintage of Abiezer; and deſires to give them particularly the honour of having ſlain the generals, and much exceeded him and his little company in their exploits. Note, (1.) True humility will always lead a man to think and ſpeak lowly of his own doings, and to put the honour from himſelf upon his neighbour. (2.) The only way to pacify wrath is by yielding. (3.) All a man's gifts, graces, and attainments appear with double luſtre, when above all he is cloathed with humility.

3. The effect is anſwerable to his wiſhes. The anger of the Ephraimites abated. Note, (1.) We muſt let a man cool before we can hope to convince him of his error. (2.) We muſt not count it ſtrange, if thoſe who are moſt obliged to us, take occaſion from our very ſervices to find fault with us.

4. ¶ And Gideon came to Jordan, and paſſed over, he, and the three hundred men that were with him, [c] faint, yet purſuing them. 5. And he ſaid unto the men of Succoth, [d] Give, I pray you, loaves of bread unto the people that follow me, for they be faint, and I am purſuing after Zebah and Zalmunna, kings of Midian. 6. ¶ And the princes of Succoth ſaid, [e] Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that [f] we ſhould give bread unto thine army? 7. And Gideon ſaid, Therefore when the LORD hath delivered Zebah and Zalmunna into mine hand, then I will tear your fleſh with the thorns of the wilderneſs, and with briers. 8. And he went up thence to Penuel, and ſpake unto them likewiſe: and the men of Penuel anſwered him as the men of Succoth had anſwered him. 9. And he ſpake alſo unto the men of Penuel, ſaying, When I come again in peace, I will break down this tower. 10. ¶ Now Zebah and Zalmunna were in Karkor, and their hoſts with them, about fifteen thouſand men, all that were left of all the hoſts of the children of the eaſt: for there fell an hundred and twenty thouſand men that drew ſword. 11. ¶ And Gideon went up by the way of them that dwelt in tents, on the eaſt of Nobah and Jogbehah, and ſmote the hoſt: for [g] the hoſt was ſecure. 12. And when Zebah and Zalmunna [h] fled, he purſued after them, and took the two kings of Midian, Zebah and Zalmunna, and diſcomfitted all the hoſt. 13. ¶ And Gideon the ſon of Joaſh returned from battle before the ſun was up, 14. And caught a young man of the men of Succoth, and inquired of him, and he deſcribed unto him the princes of Succoth, and the elders thereof, even threeſcore and ſeventeen men. 15. And he came unto the men of Succoth, and ſaid, Behold, Zebah and Zalmunna, with whom ye did upbraid me; ſaying, Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that we ſhould give bread unto thy men that are weary? 16. And he took the elders of the city, and thorns of the wilderneſs, and briers, and with them he † taught the men of Succoth. 17. And he beat down the tower of Penuel, and ſlew the men of the city.

v. 4—17. Though the battle is won, and a vaſt ſlaughter already made of one hundred and twenty thouſand men of war, yet the ſword of Gideon cannot reſt whilſt Zeba and Zalmunna, with fifteen thouſand men, are ſtill alive in Karkor. We have therefore,

1. His hot purſuit of them. With his three hundred men, not one of whom were miſſing, he paſſes Jordan; and ſince God had ſo eminently holpen him, ſeeks no other aſſiſtance: though faint with watching, want of food, and fatigue, he ſlacks not his pace, nor is diſcouraged with the refuſal of refreſhment he met at Succoth or Penuel, but continues his march, and having taken a compaſs out of the ſtrait road, he ſurpriſed the fugitive Midianites, who thought themſelves ſecure, and gone beyond the poſſibility of being overtaken. As before, they ſeek their ſafety in flight, and whilſt moſt of them are ſlain, their two kings remain priſoners with the conquerors. Note, (1.) Though in our ſpiritual warfare our fleſh and heart often ſeem ready to fail, we muſt be ſtill looking up for ſtrength, and purſue. (2.) Thoſe from whom we might expect the moſt cordial aſſiſtance, often, like the men of Succoth and Penuel, ſeek to weaken our hands and diſcourage our hearts. (3.) Patient perſeverance will infallibly be crowned with ſucceſs.

2. His heavy chaſtiſement of his unnatural countrymen, according to his threatning, when they refuſed to aſſiſt him with proviſions in the purſuit; his requeſt was ſmall, he aſked only a few loaves of bread, his neceſſities urgent, and his deſerts at the hand of every Iſraelite ſuch as entitled him to their beſt entertainment; but they, whether afraid of the reſentment of the Midianites, or led from the ſmallneſs of Gideon's forces, to treat his attempt as raſh and deſperate not only ſhut up their bowels of compaſſion from him, as a brother, but ridiculed his vain purſuit, as they conceived it, caſting contempt on his faith in God. Juſtly incenſed at ſuch treatment, where not himſelf was more injured than God diſhonoured; he had threatened to viſit them, and though he could not then interrupt his march to chaſtiſe their inſolence, now that he is returned he will do it more deliberately and ſeverely. Accordingly, having got intelligence of the chief men, by whoſe inſtigation he had been ſo uſed, he ſeizes their cities and perſons: after upbraiding them with their baſeneſs, and ſhewing them the captive kings in chains, as he had threatned he ſcourged thoſe of Succoth with thorns and briers, that by this correction they might know their folly and their ſin, whilſt the men of Penuel are put to the ſword, and their fortreſs demoliſhed. Note, (1.) They who ſin will ſmart for it, either now under the rod of correction, or eternally under the wrath of God. (2.) It is no new thing to have the world ridicule the purſuits of God's people; but they who counted their lives madneſs, will ſhortly ſee the folly was in themſelves. (3.) In the ſevereſt chaſtiſements God means not our deſtruction, but correction: happy they who acknowledge God's hand, and correſpond with the deſigns of his grace.

18. ¶ Then ſaid he unto Zebah and Zalmunna, What manner of men were they whom ye ſlew at Tabor? And they anſwered, [l] As thou art, ſo were they, each one † reſembled the children of a king. 19. And he ſaid, They were my brethren, even the ſons of my mother: as the LORD liveth, if ye had ſaved them alive, I would not ſlay you. 20. And he ſaid unto Jether his firſt-born, Up, and ſlay them: but the youth drew not his ſword:
for he feared, becauſe he was yet a youth. 21. Then Zeba and Zalmunna ſaid, Riſe thou and fall upon us:
for as the man is, ſo is his ſtrength. And Gideon [k] aroſe, and ſlew Zeba and Zalmunna, and took away the ‡ ornaments that were on their camel's necks.

‡ Or, ornaments like the moon.

v. 18—21. After judgment paſſed on his falſe brethren, he proceeds to the condemnation of his avowed enemies the princes of Midian.

1. He tries and convicts them on their own confeſſion; little did they think, in their inroads and ravages, that ever inquiſition would be made for the blood that was ſhed; but God often ſtrangely brings the murderer to juſtice. Gideon, as the avenger of his brethren's blood, who had been ſlain by theſe princes, charges them with the fact; they own it, and this occaſions their death, for though he would otherwiſe have ſpared them as captives, juſtice forbids they ſhould live, as murderers. Note, The day is coming when every ſecret thing will be brought to light, and ſuch conviction flaſh on the offenders, that they ſhall no longer be able to conceal their guilt.

2. The ſentence being paſſed, execution is ordered, and Gideon bids his eldeſt ſon, as the avenger of blood, draw his ſword, and ſlay theſe kings; but the youth is afraid, as unuſed to ſuch bloody work. Zeba and Zalmunna fearing ſo timid an executioner would prolong their ſufferings, beg Gideon himſelf, if it muſt be ſo, to diſpatch them inſtantly. Which done, he ſpoils their camels of their ornaments, either chains of gold about their neck, or round tires like the moon, ſee Iſa. iii. 18. worn in honour of the goddeſs Aſtarte. Note, (1.) Courage doth not always run in a family. (2.) We muſt ever ſuit the burden to the back. (3.) They who fight God's battles ſhall be enriched thereby, and reap the fruits of their victories in glory.

22. ¶ Then the men of Iſrael ſaid unto Gideon, Rule thou over us, both thou and thy ſon, and thy ſon's ſon alſo: for thou haſt delivered us from the hand of Midian.
23. And Gideon ſaid unto them, [l] I will not rule over you, neither ſhall my ſon rule over you: [m] the LORD ſhall rule over you. 24. And Gideon ſaid unto them, I would deſire a requeſt of you, that you would [n] give me every man the ear-rings of his prey: (for they had golden ear-rings, becauſe they were Iſhmaelites.) 25.
And they anſwered, We will willingly give them. And they ſpread a garment, and did caſt therein, every man the ear-rings of his prey. 26. And the weight of the golden ear-rings that he requeſted, was a thouſand and ſeven hundred ſhekels of gold, beſides ornaments and collars, and purple raiment that was on the kings of Midian, and beſide the chains that were about their camels necks.
27. And [o] Gideon made an ephod thereof, and put it in his city, even in Ophrah: and all Iſrael went thither a whoring after it: which thing became a ſnare unto Gideon, and to his houſe. 28. ¶ Thus was Midian ſubdued before the children of Iſrael, ſo that they lifted up their heads no more: and the country was in quietneſs forty years in the days of Gideon.

v. 22—28. Though he met with ſo ill a reception from the men of Penuel and Succoth, he met with a more honourable one from the reſt of Iſrael.

1. They offer him the government, and to make it hereditary in his family. So affected were they with the greatneſs of their deliverance, that they thought no returns adequate to the deſerts of their captain. Note, They who have ſeen the Lord Jeſus appearing for their ſalvation, cannot but with hearty choice ſay unto him, Come and reign over us.

2. Gideon modeſtly and piouſly declines the propoſal: tho' he would ſerve them as a judge, he will not rule over them as a king; this would be to change the eſtabliſhed government, which was a theocracy, and therefore neither his ſons, any more than himſelf, may aſſume ſuch authority. Note, The ambition of exalting a family is a great ſnare; but a true patriot, who means not himſelf, but the public, will decline rather than ſeek thoſe honours, ſatisfied with the conſciouſneſs of his own integrity, and deſiring not to rule but to ſerve his country.

3. Though he declined their offer, he hath a requeſt to make to them. He aſked the golden ear-rings of their ſpoil, to which he added what fell to his own ſhare, of jewels and fine garments, and with theſe he made an ephod, either deſigned for a memorial of his victory to be preſerved in Ophrah, or, conceiving that as God had ordered him to build an altar, and accepted his ſacrifice, he might continue to miniſter before him, and aſk advice and direction from God, though not of the order of Aaron; and perhaps, as Shiloh lay in the tribe of Ephraim, who had diſobliged him, he the rather fell on this method to prevent his going up to the altar of the Lord there. But however honeſtly it was meant, it proved a dangerous ſnare, leading Gideon, and his own houſe, into a breach of God's commands, and proving a temptation to Iſrael, always too prone to idolatry. Note, (1.) In God's worſhip we muſt carefully adhere to God's word, avoiding all ſuperſtition. (2.) What may be indifferent or innocent to one man, may, to a weaker brother, be a dangerous ſnare. (3.) From ſmall beginnings aroſe all the preſent horrid idolatry of the church of Rome.

4. After Gideon's victory the land had again reſt for forty years, during which time he judged them, and kept them, it is to be hoped, in the ways and ſervice of God. Note, It is a great mercy to any people, to have the lives of faithful miniſters long ſpared among them.

29. ¶ And Jerubbaal the ſon of Joaſh [p] went and dwelt in his own houſe. 30. And Gideon had threeſcore and ten ſons † of his body begotten: for he had many wives. 31. And his concubine that was in Shechem, ſhe alſo bare him a ſon, whoſe name he called Abimelech.
32. ¶ And [q] Gideon the ſon of Joaſh died in a good old age, and was buried in the ſepulchre of Joaſh his father, in Ophrah of the Abi-ezrites. 33. And it came to paſs [r] as ſoon as Gideon was dead, that the children of Iſrael turned again, and went a whoring after Baalim, and made Baal-berith their god. 34. And [s] the children of Iſrael remembred not the LORD their God, who had delivered them out of the hand of all their enemies on every ſide:
35. [t] Neither ſhewed they kindneſs to the houſe of Jerubbaal, namely Gideon, according to all the goodneſs which he had ſhewed unto Iſrael.

v. 29—35. We have here,

1. The hiſtory of the remainder of Gideon's life and death. He lived in peace in his own city, had many wives, as was too common in thoſe days, and by them had a numerous family, no leſs than ſeventy ſons, beſides one by a concubine, which proved the ruin of his father's houſe. At laſt old age crept ſilently upon him; and death put a period to his life of uſefulneſs, and carried him to receive that crown in heaven, which on earth he had piouſly refuſed.

2. Iſrael's backſliding. No ſooner is Gideon dead than their idolatrous affections appear, and they go a whoring after new gods; and ungrateful to man, as apoſtates from the Lord, the family of their late deliverer is utterly neglected. Note, (1.) We need not wonder they are ungrateful to us, who ſhew themſelves deſtitute of all gratitude to God. (2.) They who are kept from evil, not by their own choice, but by the reſtraint of others, will, like the ſlackened bow, ſtart aſide the moment the ſtring is looſed.

CHAP. IX.

The apoſtaſy of Iſrael after the death of Gideon is puniſhed by inteſtine broils, occaſioned by Abimelech's cruelty, 1. He, by ſubtilty, uſurps the government of Shechem, and murders all his brethren but one, ver. 1—6. 2. His doom is read in a parable by Jotham, ver. 7—21. 3. What ſtrifes there were between Abimelech and the Shechemites, ver. 22—41. 4. How this ended in the ruin of the Shechemites, ver. 42—49. And of Abimelech himſelf, ver. 50—57. Thus, as was once ſaid of a tyrant, he came in like a fox, ruled like a lion, and died like a dog. For the tranſgreſſion of a land, ſuch are the princes thereof.

1. AND Abimelech the ſon of Jerubbaal went to Shechem, unto [a] his mother's brethren, and [b] communed with them, and with all the family of the houſe of his mother's father, ſaying, 2. Speak, I pray you, in the ears of all the men of Shechem, † Whether is better for you, either that all the ſons of Jerubbaal (which are threeſcore and ten perſons) reign over you, or that one reign over you? remember alſo that I am your bone and your fleſh. 3. And [c] his mother's brethren ſpake of him in the ears of all the men of Shechem all theſe words: and their hearts inclined ‡ to follow Abimelech; for they ſaid, He is our brother. 4. And they gave him threeſcore and ten pieces of ſilver, out of the houſe of Baal-berith: wherewith Abimelech hired [d] vain and light perſons which followed him. 5. And he went unto his father's houſe at Ophrah, and [e] ſlew his brethren the ſons of Jerubbaal, being threeſcore and ten perſons, upon one ſtone: notwithſtanding, yet Jotham the youngeſt ſon of Jerubbaal was left; for he hid himſelf. 6. v. 1—6. Abimelech, (ſo called probably by his mother, out of vanity, my father, a king) reſolves, if poſſible, to ſecure that crown Gideon had refuſed, and though neither called of God, nor choſen of men, by art and inſinuation he thruſts himſelf into the throne.

1. He makes application ſecretly to his mother's friends in Shechem, and they, at his inſtigation, engaged in his intereſt the leading men of the city. The plea he uſed to ſupport his ſollicitation was a lying inſinuation of his brethren, as if they intended to lord it over the land, and their number would make the burden of ſuch a government inſupportable: though it never appears they had the leaſt intention of doing ſo, as it was expreſsly contrary to their father's ſolemn declarations. Note, (1.) They who have a wicked purpoſe to ſerve, ſtick not at a lie to accompliſh it. (2.) They who are conſcious of their own bad deſigns, are ready to ſuſpect each other of the ſame ill intentions.

2. His application was as ſucceſsful as he could wiſh. The men of Shechem were very well pleaſed to have one of their brethren a king and their city a metropolis, expecting, no doubt, their advantage therein; and therefore, to ſupport him in his deſign, they ſupply him with money out of the common treaſury, which was in the temple of their idol Baal-berith, or it may be from the hallowed things they had dedicated to him, imagining there muſt needs be ſucceſs from ſuch a ſupport: with this he raiſes a band of men, profligate as himſelf, to perpetrate the crimes he meditated. Note, (1.) Self is at the bottom of every worldly man's policy. (2.) They who help the wicked often prepare a rod for themſelves.

3. It is often the caſe, that where there is a rage to reign, men muſt wade to a crown through blood. Preſuming his father's ſons would juſtly object to his advancement, he reſolves firſt to diſpatch them, and all but one are ſlain together on one ſtone, by himſelf and his wicked aſſociates. Note, Ambition never heſitates; neither conſcience nor natural affection, fear of God or love of men, can bind thoſe who are under its baleful influence.

4. Far from deteſtation of ſo inhuman a deed, the men of Shechem in counſel aſſembled at Millo, the council-hall, or with a family of diſtinction who bore this title, and without conſent of their brethren, or conſulting them upon it, elect Abimelech their king. From ſuch a proceeding no good can be expected to enſue.

7. ¶ And when they told it to Jotham, he went and ſtood in the top of mount Gerizzim, and lift up his voice, and cried, and ſaid unto them, Hearken unto me, you men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you. 8. [f] The trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them, and they ſaid unto the olive-tree, Reign thou over us. 9. But the olive-tree ſaid unto them, Should I leave my fatneſs, [g] wherewith by me they honour God and man, and † go to be promoted over the trees? 10. And the trees ſaid to the fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us. 11. But the fig-tree ſaid unto them, [h] Should I forſake my ſweetneſs, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees? 12. Then ſaid the trees unto the vine, Come thou, and reign over us. 13. And the vine ſaid unto them, Should I leave my wine, [i] which cheereth God and man, and go to be promoted over the trees? 14. Then ſaid all the trees unto the bramble, Come thou, and reign over us. 15. And the bramble ſaid unto the trees, If in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your truſt in my ſhadow: and if not, [k] let fire come out of the bramble, and devour the cedars of Lebanon. 16. Now therefore, if ye have done truly and ſincerely, in that ye have made Abimelech king, and if ye have dealt well with Jerubbaal and his houſe, and have done unto him according to the deſerving of his hands: 17. (For my father fought for you, and ‡ adventured his life far, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian: 18. And ye are riſen up againſt my father's houſe this day, and have ſlain his ſons, threeſcore and ten perſons, upon one ſtone, and have made Abimelech the ſon of his maid-ſervant, king over the men of Shechem, becauſe he is your brother.) 19. If ye then have dealt truly and ſincerely with Jerubbaal, and with his houſe this day, then rejoice ye in Abimelech, and let him alſo rejoice in you: 20. But if not, [l] let fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem, and the houſe of Millo: and let fire come out from the men of Shechem, and from the houſe of Millo, and devour Abimelech. 21. v. 7—21. Jotham alone, of all the ſons of Gideon, eſcaped; and on a day when the men of Shechem were aſſembled, perhaps the very day Abimelech is elected, in the plain, from the top of mount Gerizim, whence he could be heard, and yet eſcape if they attempted to ſeize him, he gives the Shechemites a reproof for their baſeneſs, and a warning of the conſequences of their folly, and this he couches under an elegant fable, the contrivance of which is as beautiful as the application was apposite.

1. The fable itſelf. The trees are repreſented as chuſing a king; the olive, vine, and fig-tree, to whom the ſovereignty is offered, decline the honour, whilſt the wretched bramble graſps at the dominion, vaunts the protection he would give them, and threatens to fire the cedars that ſhould dare refuſe allegiance and ſubmiſſion. In the one we ſee the modeſty of Gideon's ſons, in the other the vanity of Abimelech, and the ſcourge they might expect from this fiery bramble. Note, (1.) The high office which the proud man covets, the humble and wiſe decline, knowing its weight. (2.) They who are elected to public ſervice, muſt forego all private advantages, as the trees in this fable intimate. (3.) None ſo inſolent and overbearing, as a low perſon raiſed above his ſtation.

2. He makes a pathetic application to the people; reminds them of the ſervices of his father, reproaches them for their ingratitude to their benefactor's family, appeals to their conſciences for the baſeneſs of their proceedings, and to the iſſue of them for a proof of their wickedneſs, imprecating upon them the judgments they deſerved, and therein prophetically warning them of the mutual miſeries and contentions which would enſue from their preſent choice. Note, (1.) Ungrateful man is ſadly apt to forget his generous benefactors. (2.) When we ſee men rejoice in proſperous wickedneſs, mark their end, and we ſhall uſually be convinced, here below, that there is a God that judgeth the earth.

3. Jotham flies hereupon from the reſentment of Abimelech, and finds a ſafe retreat at Beer; where if he hath not Abimelech's greatneſs, he hath better, a good conſcience, and his low eſtate is his ſecurity.

the cruelty done to the threeſcore and ten ſons of Jerubbaal might come, and their blood be laid upon Abimelech their brother which ſlew them, and upon the men of Shechem which aided him in the killing of his brethren. 25. And the men of Shechem ſet liers in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them: and it was told Abimelech. 26. And Gaal the ſon of Ebed came with his brethren, and went over to Shechem: and the men of Shechem put their confidence in him. 27. And they went out into the fields, and gathered their vineyards, and trode the grapes, and [p] made merry, and went into the houſe of their god, and did eat and drink, and curſed Abimelech. 28. And Gaal the ſon of Ebed ſaid, [q] Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we ſhould ſerve him? is not he the ſon of Jerubbaal, and Zebul his officer? ſerve the men of Hamor the father of Shechem? for why ſhould we ſerve him? 29. And [r] would to God this people were under my hand; [s] then would I remove Abimelech. And he ſaid to Abimelech, Increaſe thine army, and come out.

v. 22—29. For a time the wickedneſs of Abimelech ſeemed to proſper, and three years he enjoyed in peace his ill-gotten dignity; but the triumphing of the wicked is ſhort, like ſunſhine before the thunder ſtorm. For,

1. There was a ſpirit of diſſention ſown between him and the Shechemites; God, in juſt judgment for the blood which was ſhed, viſiting their ſins upon them by the hands one of another. They who ſet up Abimelech, now tired of his government, conſpire to ſlay him; ſo tottering is that throne that hath been eſtabliſhed by cruelty and blood-ſhed. Note, (1.) They who have acted a perfidious part once, are ſeldom ever again to be truſted. (2.) Blood will cry for vengeance. (3.) Conſpiracies in iniquity have uſually but feeble bands. (4.) They who promiſe themſelves comfort in ill-gotten rule will be deceived, and find the crown they wear to be lined with thorns.

2. Gaal the ſon of Ebed, who ſeems to have been a Canaanite, hearing of the diſcontent of the men of Shechem, comes in hopes to turn it to his own uſe, and fiſh for himſelf in theſe troubled waters; they entertain him gladly, and he ſeeks to foment the diſſention, and to inflame the minds of the people more againſt their king. At their entertainments, inflamed with wine and feaſting, he boldly broaches the treaſon, ſpeaks contemptuouſly of Abimelech, his family, and his officers, vaunting his own courage if they would make him their captain, and challenging Abimelech to aſſert his title, intimating that it were more eligible to ſerve a Canaanitiſh king than ſuch a one. Note, (1.) An artful leader, with an inflamed populace, can do a world of miſchief. (2.) When men are intoxicated with wine, then they are fit for murders, treaſon, and every evil work. (3.) To ſpeak evil of dignities is highly criminal. (4.) They who are moſt valiant over a bottle, prove often cowards when the ſword muſt decide.

30. ¶ And when Zebul the ruler of the city heard the words of Gaal the ſon of Ebed, his anger was † kindled. 31. And he ſent meſſengers unto Abimelech ‡ privily, ſaying, Behold, Gaal the ſon of Ebed, and his brethren, be come to Shechem; and behold, they fortify the city againſt thee. 32. Now therefore up by night, thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field. 33. And it ſhall be, that in the morning as ſoon as the ſun is up, thou ſhalt riſe early, and ſet upon the city: and behold, when he and the people that is with him come out againſt thee, then mayſt thou do to them ‖ as thou ſhalt find occaſion. 34. ¶ And Abimelech roſe up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait againſt Shechem in four § companies. 35. And Gaal the ſon of Ebed went out, and ſtood in the entring of the gate of the city: and Abimelech roſe up, and the people that were with him from lying in wait. 36. And when Gaal ſaw the people, he ſaid to Zebul, Behold, there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt the ſhadow of the mountains, as if they were men. 37. And Gaal ſpake again, and ſaid, See, there come people down by the † middle of the land, and another company come along by the plain of ‡ Meonenim. 38. Then ſaid Zebul unto him, Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou ſaidſt, Who is Abimelech, that we ſhould ſerve him? is not this the people that thou haſt deſpiſed? go out, I pray now, and fight with them. 39. And Gaal went out before the men of Shechem, and fought with Abimelech. 40. And Abimelech chaſed him, and he fled before him, and many were overthrown, and wounded, even unto the entring of the gate. 41. And Abimelech dwelt at Arumah: and Zebul thruſt out Gaal and his brethren, that they ſhould not dwell in Shechem. 42. And it came to paſs on the morrow, that the people went out into the field, and they told Abimelech. 43. And he took the people, and divided them into three companies, and laid wait in the field, and looked, and behold, the people were come forth out of the city, and he roſe up againſt them and ſmote them. 44. And Abimelech, and the ‖ company that was with him, ruſhed forward, and ſtood in the entring of the gate of the city: and the two other companies ran upon all the people that were in the fields, and ſlew them. 45. And Abimelech fought againſt the city all that day, and he took the city, and ſlew the people that was therein, and beat down the city, and [t] ſowed it with ſalt. 46. ¶ And when all the men of the tower of Shechem heard that, they entred into an hold of the houſe of the god Berith. 47. And it was told Abimelech, that all the men of the tower of Shechem were gathered together. 48. And Abimelech gat him up to mount Zalmon, he and all that people that were with him; and Abimelech took an ax in his hand, and cut down a bough from the trees, and took it, and laid it on his ſhoulder, and ſaid unto the people that were with him, What ye have ſeen § me do, make haſte and do as I have done. 49. And all the people likewiſe cut down every man his bough, and followed Abimelech, and put them to the hold, and ſet the hold on fire upon them; ſo that all the men of [u] the tower of Shechem died alſo, about a thouſand men and women.

v. 30—49. Such proceedings were too public to be concealed, and too dangerous to be neglected.

1. Zebul, Abimelech's governor of Shechem, having got intelligence of their meetings, and incenſed at their contemptuous treatment of himſelf, informs his maſter, adviſes him to come thither without delay, and ſurpriſe the conſpirators before they were ready to oppoſe him. Note, (1.) Much miſchief is prevented by nipping evil deſigns in the bud. (2.) The imprudence and improvidence of rebellious ſpirits is often as great as their wickedneſs; it blaſts their deſigns, and ſinks the projectors of them in ruin.

2. Zebul, by pretending friendſhip to Gaal, betrays him. Abimelech having, according to Zebul's advice, marched all night, in the morning appears with his forces deſcending from the mountain: Gaal, from the gate, deſcrying the hoſt, Zebul, either to lull him into ſecurity, or ridicule his fears, ſuggeſts that what he ſaw was only the ſhadow of the mountains, until a nearer approach removed the poſſibility of deception, when he throws off the maſk, and inſults him for his former bravado. Note, (1.) An inſolent tongue is often put to ſhame by his own vaunting. (2.) They who are rebels themſelves, muſt not expect fidelity from their aſſociates.

3. Gaal now could not refuſe to go out, but he is quickly routed in the field, and Zebul having recovered the ſuperiority in the city, he and his abettors are that night expelled. Thus may every traiterous deſign be blaſted!

4. Abimelech at that time puſhed his victory no farther, and the men of Shechem having expelled the traitor, promiſed themſelves now that his anger was appeaſed, and conclude they may ſecurely gather their harveſt; but treaſon is not ſo lightly paſt over, nor is the wrath of a king, and ſuch a king, ſo ready to ſubſide. Therefore, underſtanding their ſecurity, he marches from Arumah, dividing his forces into three companies, with two he falls on the people in the fields, with the other he ſeized the city; after he had got poſſeſſion of it havock was indeed dreadful, for he utterly deſtroyed the city, and ſowed it with ſalt, in vengeance for their rebellion. Note, The wickedneſs of the wicked returns upon their own head: rebellion uſually ends in the ruin of the traitors.

5. To compleat the deſtruction of the remainder of the Shechemites, Abimelech beſieges the men of the tower of Shechem (a place at no great diſtance probably from the city, perhaps the houſe of Millo) who had fortified themſelves in the temple of the God Baal-berith, either truſting to the ſtrength of the ſituation, or to Abimelech's veneration for that place whence he firſt roſe to the kingdom; but their refuge, like that of other ſinners, proves a refuge of lies unto them. Though he could not carry the place by aſſault, policy prevails more than the ſword; at his command his men follow his example, and ſurrounding it with fuel, they ſet the place on fire, and men, women and children, to the number of about a thouſand, all periſh in the flames. Note, (1.) Civil wars are moſt inhuman, the innocent and the guilty there fall often together. (2.) Vain is every covering to hide from the wrath of God, when his fire ſhall be ſtirred up round about the ſinner, it will burn, and none can quench it.

50. ¶ Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and encamped againſt Thebez, and took it. 51. But there was a ſtrong tower within the city, and thither fled all the men and women, and all they of the city, and ſhut it to them, and gat them up to the top of the tower. 52. And Abimelech came unto the tower, and fought againſt it, and went hard unto the door of the tower to burn it with fire. 53. And [x] a certain woman caſt a piece of a milſtone upon Abimelech's head, and all to break his ſkull. 54. Then he called haſtily unto the young man his armour-bearer, and ſaid unto him, [y] Draw thy ſword and ſlay me, that [z] men ſay not of me, A woman ſlew him. And his young man thruſt him through, and he died. 55. And when the men of Iſrael ſaw that Abimelech was dead, they departed every man unto his place. 56. ¶ [a] Thus God rendred the wickedneſs of Abimelech which he did unto his father, in [b] ſlaying his ſeventy brethren. 57. And all the evil of the men of Shechem, did God render upon their heads: and upon them came the curſe of Jotham the ſon of Jerubbaal.

v. 50—57. Abimelech had not yet glutted his revenge, and no ſooner ſucceeds in the deſtruction of Shechem, than he determines to wreak his vengeance on the men of Thebez, who ſeem to have been confederates with the Shechemites. He ſucceeds in his attack upon the city, and promiſes as eaſily to carry the caſtle, to which the men of the city fled, by fire as before; but as he is eagerly preſſing to the door to burn it, God, who had in judgment permitted him hitherto, ſtops his career; a ſtone thrown by a woman from the walls, breaks that guilty head which wore the bloody crown. Vexed at the thought of ſuch an ignominious death from a woman's hand, the pride that led him to murder others, urges him when dying to ſelf-murder, to cover his ſhame, leaſt they ſhould ſay a woman ſlew him; his armour-bearer therefore diſpatches him, and hereupon his army immediately diſperſed. Thus God's juſtice viſited Abimelech's bloody deeds, and the wickedneſs of his aſſiſtants in Shechem, bringing upon them the curſe of Jotham, the ſon of Jerubbaal. Note, (1.) They who thirſt for blood, God will at laſt give them their own blood to drink. (2.) When the rod of God's indignation hath done his work it is eaſily burnt. (3.) The weak in God's hand can confound the mighty, and thoſe who walk in pride God is able to abaſe. (4.) They who in life conſulted nothing but their pride and ambition, will uſually die as they live, more ſollicitous that their honour ſhould be preſerved on earth, than their ſouls be ſaved from hell. (5.) The methods proud men take to ſecure a great name, only ſerve to perpetuate their infamy. (6.) Though the wicked flouriſh for a ſeaſon like a green bay-tree, yet their end is near, and their deſtruction determined.

v. 1—5. One tumultuous reign we have had, which needed two peaceable ones to repair its deſolations.

1. Tola, of the tribe of Iſſachar, ſucceeded Abimelech, not an uſurping king, but raiſed up of God to be a righteous judge, to reform their abuſes, decide their controverſies, heal their inteſtine diviſions, and protect them from foreign invaſions. For the greater convenience of adminiſtering juſtice, he reſided in mount Ephraim, and judged Iſrael twenty-three years. Note, Though a warlike king looks greater in the annals of hiſtory, a peaceable and mild government is more for the proſperity and comfort of every nation.

2. Jair, of the half tribe of Manaſſeh, beyond Jordan, followed; for God divided now the honour, ſometimes calling men of one tribe, ſometimes of another, to the office of judge and captain. During his adminiſtration the peace of Iſrael was maintained; his thirty ſons, a numerous family, as his aſſiſtants, for the people's convenience, rode their circuits to adminiſter juſtice; each of them poſſeſſed of a noble patrimony, having a lordſhip to themſelves, which bore their names in after times. Twenty-two years this government laſted, when Jair died, and was buried in Camon, a city of Gilead. Note, The impartial adminiſtration of juſtice is, next to the goſpel, the greateſt bleſſing of any land.

6. And [c] the children of Iſrael did evil again in the ſight of the LORD, and ſerved Baalim, and Aſhtaroth, and the gods of Syria, and the gods of Zidon, and the gods of Moab, and the gods of the children of Ammon, and the gods of the Philiſtines, and forſook the LORD, and ſerved not him. 7. ¶ And the anger of the LORD was hot againſt Iſrael, and [d] he ſold them into the hands of the Philiſtines, and into the hands of the children of Ammon. 8. And that year they vexed and oppreſſed the children of Iſrael: eighteen years, all the children of Iſrael that were on the other ſide Jordan, in the land of the Amorites, which is in Gilead. 9. [e] Moreover, the children of Ammon paſſed over Jordan, to fight alſo againſt Judah, and againſt Benjamin, and againſt the houſe of Ephraim; ſo that Iſrael was ſore diſtreſſed.

v. 6—9. No ſooner were theſe good men gone, than the people, as before, returned to their abominations. Their idolatry grew worſe and worſe, their idols were multiplied, God was forgotten, and his ſervice neglected; and as the conſequence, when they leave him he leaves them. The Philiſtines on one ſide, and the Ammonites on another, oppreſſed and cruſhed them, as the corn between the upper and nether mill-ſtone. Eighteen years this ſervitude continued very rigorous, and yet the people returned not unto God; at laſt the Ammonites having thoroughly plundered thoſe on one ſide Jordan, ſeek to increaſe their ſpoil by attacking Ephraim, Judah, and Benjamin, whilſt theſe diſheartned tribes, having loſt God's preſence, loſe all courage, and are unable to make head againſt their invaders. Note, (1.) Reformation without converſion of heart will be of no long continuance. (2.) God never leaves us until we forſake him. (3.) They fall an eaſy prey to Satan, who are left deſtitute of Divine grace and protection.

10. ¶ And [f] the children of Iſrael cried unto the LORD, ſaying, We have ſinned againſt thee, both becauſe we have forſaken our God, and alſo ſerved Baalim. 11. And [g] the LORD ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, Did not I deliver you from the Egyptians, and from the Amorites, from the children of Ammon, and from the Philiſtines? 12. The Zidonians alſo, and the Amalekites, and the Maonites did oppreſs you, and ye cried to me, and I delivered you out of their hand. 13. [h] Yet ye have forſaken me, and ſerved other gods, wherefore [i] I will deliver you no more. 14. [k] Go and cry unto the gods which ye have choſen; let them deliver you in the time of your tribulation. 15. ¶ And the children of Iſrael ſaid unto the LORD, We have ſinned, [l] do thou unto us whatſoever ſeemeth good unto thee, [m] deliver us only, we pray thee, this day. 16. And [n] they put away the ſtrange gods from among them, and ſerved the LORD: and [o] his ſoul was grieved for the miſery of Iſrael. 17. Then the children of Ammon were gathered together, and encamped in Gilead: and the children of Iſrael aſſembled themſelves together, and encamped at Mizpeh. 18. And the people and princes of Gilead ſaid one to another, [p] What man is he that will begin to fight againſt the children of Ammon? he ſhall be head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

v. 10—18. It was long before they bowed the knee of penitence, but better late than never. We have,

1. Their humbling confeſſion. They had committed two great evils, they had forſaken God, the fountain of living water, and had hewn themſelves idols, broken ciſterns which could hold no water; their ſuffering was therefore juſt, and they acknowledge their deſerts. Note, The firſt ſtep of a ſinner's return to God is the diſcovery of his own great guilt, and a ſenſe of his deſerved ruin.

2. God ſends them a ſharp and upbraiding anſwer to their cries. He turns not away his ear from their prayers, nor ſinks them in utter deſpair, but ſpeaks ſo as to awaken their conſciences, and confound them under the ſenſe of their baſeneſs and ingratitude. Many a time they had been delivered, and thoſe very oppreſſors ſubdued under them; yet they had vilely ſinned againſt their own mercies: therefore he refers them to the gods whom they ſerved, for help, to upbraid their folly, and convince them of the weakneſs of theſe lying vanities. He refuſes to deliver them any more, that is, conditionally, as long as their idols were kept among them. Note, (1.) If God frowns upon the returning ſinner, let him not deſpair; it is only his deſert, indeed, if he be utterly rejected: yet with the Lord there is mercy and forgiveneſs. (2.) When we are brought to a real ſenſe of our ſins, we ſhall ſee the vanity and inſufficiency of thoſe things, to make us happy, on which formerly we truſted.

3. The people of Iſrael ſolemnly aſſembled, it ſhould ſeem, when this meſſage by an angel, or prophet, was brought unto them, own their juſt deſerts, ſurrender themſelves up to God; yet humbly intreat that once more he would ſpare them; and, convinced of their vanity, inſtantly put away their abominations. Note, (1.) When we come to God we muſt pretend no excuſe for our ſin, but plead guilty, and reſt ourſelves on the mercy of our judge. (2.) If we would approve our repentance real, we muſt inſtantly renounce the ſins we confeſs. (3.) When ſin is our bitterneſs and burden, though we may ſtand trembling under the black review, there is yet hope.

4. God regards them with tender compaſſion, and, to ſpeak as a man, beholds their miſery with bowels which yearn over them. Note, No prodigal returns to God but his fatherly heart is touched with the feeling of his wretchedneſs, and ready to embrace the moſt miſerable of ſinners.

5. The princes of Gilead hereupon, ſtirred up by the ſecret working of God, during the abſence of their oppreſſors, begin to aſſemble themſelves for war; on hearing this the Ammonites return over Jordan, and encamp in Mizpeh, in order to ſuppreſs this riſing in the bud. The Gileadites reſolve now to make a ſtand for their liberty; but though united in their purpoſe, they want a commander, and ſuch an one, brave and able, is ſought by proclamation throughout the hoſt, who, as the fruit of his victory, would be advanced to be the head of his people. Note, (1.) The ſucceſs of every enterprize depends as much on the prudence and bravery of the general, as on the courage of the people. (2.) They who fight the Lord's battle, are aſſured they ſhall reign with him.

v. 1—3. The people being reduced to ſtraits, and a captain wanted, we have here an account of one whom, though under a brand of diſgrace, God chuſes to be their deliverer. A Gileadite, whoſe name was Jephthah, the ſon of an harlot, or a Gentile; whoſe brethren, on their father's deceaſe, counting him a ſcandal to the family, expelled him the houſe: being brought hereby into great diſtreſs, and a man of valour, he reſolves to live by his ſword; and collecting a band of men, whoſe wants or extravagance made them chuſe ſuch a captain, he maintained them and himſelf either by plunder, or more probably by incurſions on Iſrael's enemies. Note, (1.) They who indulge lawleſs luſt, entail commonly miſery and ſhame upon the unhappy fruit of their guilty amours. (2.) A man ſhould not be reproached with the unhappineſs of his birth, when his ways beſpeak him deſerving a more honourable relation. (3.) They who know the difficulties of adverſity, are beſt prepared for the bleſſings of proſperity.

4. ¶ And it came to paſs † in proceſs of time, that the children of Ammon made war againſt Iſrael. 5. And it was ſo, that when the children of Ammon made war againſt Iſrael, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob: 6. And they ſaid unto Jephthah, Come, and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon. 7. And Jephthah ſaid unto the elders of Gilead, Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's houſe? And why are ye come unto me now, when ye are in diſtreſs? 8. And the elders of Gilead ſaid unto Jephthah, [e] Therefore we turn again to thee now, that thou mayſt go with us, and fight againſt the children of Ammon, and be our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead. 9. And Jephthah ſaid unto the elders of Gilead, If ye bring me home again to fight againſt the children of Ammon, and the LORD deliver them before me, ſhall I be your head? 10. And the elders of Gilead ſaid unto Jephthah, The LORD ‡ be witneſs between us, if we do not ſo according to thy words. 11. Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him head and captain over them: and Jephthah uttered all his words [f] before the LORD in Mizpeh.

v. 4—11. Many days had now paſſed while Jephthah ſuffered an uncomfortable exile; but the fame of his courage being noiſed, in their diſtreſs from the children of Ammon, the men of Gilead bethought them of Jephthah. Hereupon,

1. They ſend him an honourable embaſſage to invite him to take the command of their armies. They were collected, but they wanted a head, and ſuch an one as he had ſhewn himſelf, a man of conduct and courage, and therefore they urge him to give them no denial. Note, The providences which are, to appearance, our greateſt misfortune, are often neceſſary to fit us for the work for which God deſigns us.

2. Jephthah, at firſt, upbraids them with their ill uſage of him; it ſhould ſeem his brethren were in the embaſſy, or that the elders of the city had connived at the violence ſhewn him; and as it muſt appear that it was not reſpect for him, but regard to themſelves, which produced the invitation, he might juſtly refuſe to go. Note, In diſtreſs of ſoul men will have recourſe to thoſe miniſters and people of God, whom before they inſulted.

3. They acknowledge their wrong dealing, and intreat him to forgive and forget it, and come with them to lead their army, and, as the beſt recompence they can make, offer to make him captain-general of their tribe. Note, (1.) The leaſt we can do when we have injured a man, is to beg his pardon. (2.) We ſhould never deſpiſe or trample on any man: we know not how much we may need him before we die.

4. Too generous to retain reſentment, though juſt, he conſents to aſſiſt them in their diſtreſs, but firſt ſolemnly queſtions them concerning their offer; Whether they would really make him their ruler, if the Lord bleſſed him with ſucceſs? they confirm what they had ſaid with the moſt poſitive aſſurances, for the truth of which they appeal to God; on this therefore he accompanies them to Mizpeh. Note, (1.) In all that we take in hand we muſt acknowledge God's bleſſing. (2.) Chriſt, who hath fought for us, muſt rule in and over us. (3.) No injuries ſhould make us implacable; we muſt forgive, as we hope to be forgiven.

5. The whole is ſolemnly recognized in Mizpeh, between Jephthah and the aſſembly. He then ſpreads the matter before the Lord, praying for direction and ſucceſs in the arduous enterprize. Note, (1.) That undertaking is like to end well, that is begun with fervent prayer. (2.) In our agreements it is well to be explicit and ſolemn, that afterwards there may be no room to retract.

12. ¶ And Jephthah [g] ſent meſſengers unto the king of the children of Ammon, ſaying, What haſt thou to do with me, that thou art come againſt me, to fight in my land? 13. And the king of the children of Ammon anſwered unto the meſſengers of Jephthah, Becauſe [h] Iſrael took away my land when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon, even unto Jabbok, and unto Jordan: now therefore reſtore thoſe lands again peaceably. 14. And Jephthah ſent meſſengers [i] again unto the king of the children of Ammon: 15. And ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith Jephthah, [k] Iſrael took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon: 16. But when Iſrael came up from Egypt, and walked through the wilderneſs, unto the Red-ſea, and came to Kadeſh; 17. Then Iſrael ſent meſſengers unto the king of Edom, ſaying, Let me, I pray thee, paſs through thy land: but [l] the king of Edom would not hearken thereto. And in like manner they ſent unto the king of Moab; but he would not conſent: and Iſrael abode in Kadeſh. 18. Then they went along through the wilderneſs, and compaſſed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and came by the eaſt-ſide of the land of Moab, and pitched on the other ſide of Arnon, but [m] came not within the border of Moab: for Arnon was the border of Moab. 19. gers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, the king of Sihon truſted not Iſrael to paſs through his coaſt: but Sihon gathered his people together, and pitched in Jahaz, and fought againſt Iſrael. 21. And the LORD God of Iſrael delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Iſrael, and they ſmote them: ſo Iſrael poſſeſſed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that Amorites, from Arnon even unto Jabbok, and from the

v. 12—28. Jephthah now being conſtituted captain, before he draws the ſword of war, ſeeks a peaceable accommodation.

1. He ſends to enquire the reaſon of this invaſion of the Ammonitiſh king: as they had given him no offence, he wiſhes him quietly to retire, and not oblige him to uſe force againſt force. Note, We muſt follow peace with all men, and never ſeek litigious redreſs till every fair propoſal is rejected.

2. The Ammonite, unwilling to plead the law of arms, trumps up a demand of a former title, that at leaſt he might ſeem to cover his pretenſions with a ſpecious plea of juſtice. Note, (1.) They who are deſtitute of conſcience or honeſty, are not willing to appear ſo. (2.) They who ſeek a pretext for a quarrel will never be at a loſs to find one.

3. Jephthah makes a moſt ſatisfactory reply to the unreaſonable demand. The lands in queſtion between Arnon and Jabbok, were not in poſſeſſion of the Ammonites, but of the Amorites, when Iſrael diſpoſſeſſed them; and though the land might originally belong to the Ammonites, they had ſuffered them peaceably to enjoy it, and quitted to them the title. So far were the people of Iſrael from offering the leaſt violence to the children of Lot or Eſau, that when refuſed a paſſage through their countries, though able, if they had choſen it, to have opened their way by force, they rather underwent the fatigue of a long march to compaſs their territories, than ſet a foot upon them, much leſs ſeize them for their own uſe; nor would they have touched the land of Sihon, if himſelf had not been the aggreſſor, and not only refuſed to let them go through, but alſo came out, unprovoked, to attack them, and thus brought his ruin on his own head. God having delivered Sihon into their hand, his land became theirs by lawful conqueſt, and by the gift of God, nor was there the leaſt reaſon why they ſhould conquer it for the Ammonites: he appeals to him, What would be his own conduct in a like caſe? Would he quit what he thought he had conquered, under the influence of his idol god, or give up his own land to the original inhabitants whom he had diſpoſſeſſed? Why then ſhould he expect it of the Iſraelites? He pleads farther their long uninterrupted enjoyment of this country for near three hundred years, during which time neither Balak nor his ſucceſſors ever pretended to claim it; and the Moabites had an equal if not a better right to it than the Ammonites: ſo that, on all theſe accounts, the war muſt appear moſt unjuſt, and unprovoked, and therefore Jephthah appeals to God for a deciſion of the controverſy, if he perſevered in his demands. Note, (1.) When we have juſtice and truth on our ſide, we may confidently appeal to the God of truth for a deciſion in our favour. (2.) When our own harmleſs and inoffenſive conduct ſpeaks our peaceableneſs, it is at their peril who then make them ready for battle. (3.) If we cannot, by fair means, prevail on thoſe who injure us to deſiſt, we may lawfully make uſe of the ſword of war or of juſtice for our vindication.

4. The king of Ammon pays no regard to Jephthah's arguments, but bent on their ſpoil, reſolves to determine the controverſy by the ſword. Note, They who will not hearken to reaſon will rue for it.

29. ¶ Then the Spirit of the LORD † came upon Jephthah, and he paſſed over Gilead and Manaſſeh, and paſſed over Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh of Gilead he paſſed over unto the children of Ammon. 30.
And Jephthah [s] vowed a vow unto the LORD, and ſaid, If thou ſhalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, 31. Then it ſhall be, That whatſoever cometh forth of the doors of my houſe to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, ſhall ſurely be the LORD's, and ‡ I will offer it up for a burnt-offering. 32. ¶ So Jephthah paſſed over unto the children of Ammon to fight againſt them, and the LORD delivered them into his hands.
33. And he ſmote them from Aroer, even till thou come to Minnith, even twenty cities, and unto the plain of the vineyards, with a very great ſlaughter. Thus the children of Ammon were ſubdued before the children of Iſrael. 34. ¶ And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his houſe, and behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances, and ſhe was his only child: beſide her he had neither ſon nor daughter. 35.
And it came to paſs when he ſaw her, that [t] he rent his clothes, and ſaid, Alas, my daughter, thou haſt brought me very low, and [u] thou art one of them that trouble me: for [x] I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and [y] I cannot go back. 36. And ſhe ſaid unto him, My father, if thou haſt opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; foraſmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon. 37. And ſhe ſaid unto her father, let this thing be done for me: Let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and [z] bewail my virginity, I and my fellows. 38. And he ſaid, Go. And he ſent her away for two months; and ſhe went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains. 39. And it came to paſs at the end of two months, that ſhe returned unto her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and ſhe knew no man. And it was a cuſtom in Iſrael, 40. That the daughters of Iſrael went yearly to † lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

v. 29—40. Peace being deſpaired of, each party prepares for war; and hereupon we have Jephthah's raſh vow and glorious victory.

1. His victory is glorious. Not waiting for the approach of the Ammonites, he immediately carries the war into their own country. The Spirit of the Lord, as a ſpirit of wiſdom, coming upon him to direct, and as a ſpirit of fortitude to ſtrengthen him. The effect of his expedition correſponds with his moſt ſanguine wiſhes; the Ammonites are every where beaten, twenty cities taken, and all the men of war put to the ſword; ſo that the Ammonites could no more lift up their heads to moleſt Iſrael. Note, They who go forth under God's call, dependent on his care, and with zeal for his cauſe, may confidently expect ſucceſs in their undertakings.

2. His vow was raſh, unjuſtifiable in the making, and more ſo in the performance of it. The learned are divided reſpecting the nature of his vow, and the manner in which it was fulfilled. Jephthah, at his going out to war, ſolemnly devotes to God for a burnt-offering whatever ſhould firſt meet him on his return, if he obtained the victory; and this happened to be his only daughter. The firſt opinion concerning this vow is, that it was literally fulfilled; that, through a miſtake of the meaning of Lev. xxvii. 29. he might think it allowable, and, from the obligation of his vow, neceſſary. Perhaps from Abraham's precedent he might conclude it a high pitch of obedience, really to ſacrifice her to the Lord, and that therefore he actually did ſo, after allowing her two months to bewail her virginity, it being counted among the greateſt of misfortunes to die childleſs. Againſt this it is objected, that it is expreſsly againſt the command of God; that parents had no ſuch power over their children's lives; that a devoted child was to be redeemed, and the price ſettled; that neither prieſts nor people would be found to conſent to ſo inhuman an action; that it is never cenſured by any inſpired writer; and that Jephthah is counted among the faithful worthies, Heb. xi. 32. from which ſuch a ſhocking tranſaction muſt have excluded him. The next opinion is, that ſhe was ſeparated from the converſe of men, and lived a virgin given up to God, till the day of her death, and viſited four days in the year by her virgin fellows, to conſole her, or to praiſe her conſtancy. But there are great difficulties here alſo; for there does not appear the leaſt traces of ſuch a voluntary luntary virginity, as a religious act among the Jews; rather the very contrary; nor had any father ſuch a right of compulſion. The father's anguiſh on meeting her beſpeaks a heavier ſtroke; and her preparative on this ſuppoſition by no means appears ſignificant: beſides, the obvious meaning of the words militates againſt this explication. Humanity would make one prefer the latter interpretation, though the former ſeems the beſt to correſpond with the text. However, in either caſe the vow was raſh and unadviſed, and in its conſequences involved both of them in deep diſtreſs. Her conſtancy, ſubmiſſion, and chearfulneſs, diſplay a beautiful character, and, whichever was her lot, make us wiſh her a happier diſpoſal. Learn hence, (1.) The great danger of a raſh vow, that, like a two-edged ſword, whether kept or broken, involves the ſoul in guilt. (2.) Whenever, without diſhonour to God, or injury to our neighbour, we can do it, no private inconvenience muſt ſway us from the fulfilment of our vows. (3.) The dutiful obedience of children to parents raſh or ſevere commands, is highly commendable. (4.) Other's ſorrows ſhould be our own, and by partaking we ſhould ſeek to alleviate them. (5.) Our brighteſt days, like Jephthah's, have ſome dark clouds. It is well there is nothing perfect beneath the ſun; it makes us more deſirous to come to the ſtate of perfection above it. (6.) If there are matters of doubtful diſputation in the ſcripture, they concern not at all the great truths of our ſalvation. (7.) When we meet with a dark paſſage, it is good to be content to be ignorant, where God ſeems to draw the veil.

1. AND the men of Ephraim † gathered themſelves together, and went northward, and ſaid unto Jephthah, Wherefore paſſedſt thou over to fight againſt the children of Ammon, and didſt not call us to go with thee? [a] We will burn thine houſe upon thee with fire. 2. And Jephthah ſaid unto them, I and my people were at great ſtrife with the children of Ammon; and when I called you, ye delivered me not out of their hands. 3. And when I ſaw that ye delivered me not, [b] I put my life in my hands, and paſſed over againſt the children of Ammon, and the LORD delivered them into my hand: Wherefore then are ye come up unto me this day to fight againſt me? 4. [c] Then Jephthah gathered together all the men of Gilead, and fought with Ephraim: and the men of Gilead ſmote Ephraim, becauſe they ſaid, [d] Ye Gileadites are fugitives of Ephraim, among the Ephraimites, and among the Manaſſites. 5. And the Gileadites took the paſſages of Jordan before the Ephraimites: and it was ſo, that when thoſe Ephraimites which were eſcaped, ſaid, Let me go over; that the men of Gilead ſaid unto him, Art thou an Ephraimite? If he ſaid, Nay: 6. Then ſaid they unto him, Say now † Shibboleth: and he ſaid, Sibboleth: for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him and ſlew him at the paſſages of Jordan: and there fell at that time of the Ephraimites [e] forty and two thouſand. 7. And Jephthah judged Iſrael ſix years: then died Jephthah the Gileadite, and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

v. 1—7. No ſooner is Jephthah delivered from foreign enemies, than he is diſturbed with domeſtic feuds.

1. The men of Ephraim, jealous of the honour Manaſſeh had got, ſeek occaſion to quarrel with him, as they had before done with Gideon, under pretence of being ſlighted, becauſe not called to the war againſt Ammon, and threaten with outrageous violence to fire Jephthah's houſe over his head. Note, (1.) Quarrels between brethren are uſually moſt bitter and violent. (2.) They who have done the greateſt ſervices to the cauſe of God, are not ſecure from the greateſt inſults, even ſometimes from the pretended friends of the cauſe. (3.) The moſt ſpotleſs characters are the faireſt mark for the foul fangs of envy to faſten upon.

2. Jephthah remonſtrates againſt their violence and accuſation. Their charge was as falſe as malicious: he had called them, and they had refuſed to come. When therefore the danger was ſo imminent, at the riſk of his life, he went out to battle, and, through the ſtrength of God, prevailed; was this a cauſe for their anger? Ought it not rather to be cauſe of thankfulneſs? Note, (1.) The greateſt bullies are uſually the greateſt cowards. (2.) They who are themſelves moſt in fault, would often ſave themſelves by clamouring againſt the innocent. (3.) They well deſerve the honour, who purchaſe it at the peril of their lives.

Before Chriſt 1180.

3. The ill temper of the Ephraimites will not be pacified, and their ill tongue provokes the Gileadites, who came to interpoſe with them in behalf of their captain. They call them fugitives, a vagabond race, pretending as if they were expelled Canaan from the Ephraimites and Manaſſites, as unworthy their relation. Such inſult is too much for men of war uſually to bear: ſwords are inſtantly drawn, and the Ephraimites juſtly puniſhed for their inſolence. They are routed in the field, and the paſſes of Jordan being ſecured by the men of Gilead, by the pronunciation of the word Shibboleth, which, being accuſtomed ſo to ſpeak, they called Sibboleth, they are all detected, and ſlain, to the number of forty-two thouſand. Note, (1.) A haſty and lying tongue uſually occaſions much miſchief to its owner. (2.) They who inſolently upbraid others, quickly get themſelves into a worſe caſe.

4. Six years ended Jephthah's government; perhaps grief for his daughter might contribute not a little to ſhorten his days. He was buried in Gilead, probably in his own city Mizpeh. Note, Great and good men muſt die, as well as others; but there is one liveth, who will never leave his people to want a friend and protector in time of need.

8. ¶ And after him Ibzan of Beth-lehem judged Iſrael. 9. And he had thirty ſons, and thirty daughters, whom he ſent abroad, and took in thirty daughters from abroad for his ſons. And he judged Iſrael ſeven years. About 1173. 10. Then died Ibzan, and was buried at Beth-lehem. 11. ¶ And after him, Elon a Zebulonite judged Iſrael, and he judged Iſrael ten years. About 1163. 12. And Elon the Zebulonite died, and was buried in Aijalon in the country of Zebulon. 13. ¶ And after him, Abdon the ſon of Hillel a Pirathonite judged Iſrael. 14. And he had forty ſons and thirty nephews, that rode on threeſcore and ten [f] aſs-colts: and he judged Iſrael eight years. 15. And Abdon the ſon of Hillel, the Pirathonite died, and was buried in Pirathon in the land of Ephraim, in the mount of the Amalekites. About 1155.

f Chap. v. 10. & x. 4.

v. 8—15. We have a ſhort account of three ſucceeding judges.

1. Ibzan, of Bethlehem in Judah, judged Iſrael eight years. In his adminiſtration nothing remarkable is recorded; but his family was large, and he took care to ſettle them well in the world before he went out of it. Note, It is among the greateſt bleſſings parents can enjoy, to ſee their children provided for before they die.

2. Elon, a Zebulonite, ſucceeded Ibzan, and miniſtred juſtice, and directed their affairs during ten years in peace, then was gathered to his fathers.

3. Abdon, an Ephraimite, was then raiſed up of God, and he preſided eight years. He lived to a good old age, and ſaw his children's children, forty ſons, and thirty grandchildren, and all men of diſtinction, who rode in ſtate as princes, or in circuit about the country, as judges and officers. Death, the common lot of man, at laſt removed him from all his earthly bleſſings. Note, (1.) Whatever we hear of any man, great or good, we are ſure to hear one thing of him, that he died. Let us read, and learn ſo to number our days, as to apply our hearts unto wiſdom. (2.) If we muſt ſo ſoon bid a final adieu to every thing ſeen and temporal, let us by faith look forward to thoſe things that are not ſeen, and are eternal.

1. AND the children of Iſrael † did evil again in the ſight of the LORD, and the LORD delivered them into the hand of the Philiſtines forty years. 2. ¶ And there was a certain man of Zorah, of the family of the Danites, whoſe name was Manoah, and his wife was [b] barren and bare not. 3. And [a] the angel of the LORD appeared unto the woman, and ſaid, unto her, Behold now, thou art barren, and beareſt not: but [c] thou ſhalt conceive and bear a ſon. 4. Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and [d] drink not wine, nor ſtrong drink, and eat not any unclean thing. 5. For lo, thou ſhalt conceive and bear a ſon, and [e] no razor ſhall come on his head: for the child ſhall be [f] a Nazarite unto God from the womb: and he ſhall begin to deliver Iſrael out of the hand of the Philiſtines. 6. ¶ Then the woman came and told her huſband, ſaying, [g] A man of God came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible: but I aſked him not whence he was, neither told he me his name. 7. But he ſaid unto me, Behold, thou ſhalt conceive and bear a ſon; and now drink no wine, nor ſtrong drink, neither eat any unclean thing: for the child ſhall be a Nazarite to God, from the womb to the day of his death.

v. 1—7. There is no end of Iſrael's evil, or of God's mercy: Where ſin abounds, we ſee his grace much more abound. Once more the heavy hand of the Philiſtines is upon them, and during forty years, more or leſs, they bear the puniſhment of their ſins under theſe oppreſſors, till God, in the perſon of Samſon, raiſes up a deliverer for them.

1. His tribe and parentage: of Dan, which bordered neareſt on the Philiſtines, and of parents who had long been childleſs. Note, (1.) Where there is the greateſt danger, and the leaſt proſpect of relief, there God often chuſes to diſplay his power and glory. (2.) The fruit of the womb is an heritage and gift which cometh of the Lord.

2. An angel appears to Manoah's wife, even the glorious angel of the everlaſting covenant, who now comes in the faſhion of a man, as afterwards really partaking of the ſame nature.

3. The meſſage he brings her is moſt welcome and unexpected, and the charge he delivers ſtrict and ſolemn. He compaſſionately mentions her misfortune of barrenneſs; this ſhall be her grief no longer; ſhe ſhall conceive and bear a ſon, who, being appointed for ſingular ſervice, muſt be a Nazarite, not only from his birth, but alſo from his conception; for which end, during her pregnancy, ſhe muſt not touch any thing that came of the vine, nor eat any unclean thing; nor is a razor ever to come on his head, God intending by him to begin his people's deliverance. Note, (1.) God ſees and compaſſionates our ſecret griefs. (2.) They who would preſerve themſelves in holineſs for God, muſt deny themſelves the indulgence of their appetites. (3.) The offspring uſually partakes of the parent's bodily habit. Temperate parents have healthy children, whilſt the curſe of lewdneſs and luxury deſcends often on the fruit of the womb. (4.) The beginnings of ſalvation are glorious, how much more the completion of it. (5.) Samſon is the type of him who foretold his birth: he was thus holy, undefiled, and ſeparate from ſinners, conceived of the Holy Ghoſt, a Nazarite purer than ſnow, raiſed up not only to begin, but to perfect the ſalvation of his people.

4. With a tranſport of joy ſhe flies to carry her huſband an account of what had paſſed. Struck at the majeſtic and venerable appearance of the meſſenger, ſhe deſcribes his countenance as luminous, like Moſes's face, or bright with divine irradiation as an angel. His words ſhe repeats, but neither dared aſk his name, or whence he came. Note, (1.) We ſhould call thoſe who are near and dear to us to partake in our joys. (2.) True yoke-fellows ſhould communicate their experiences for their mutual comfort and edification.

8. ¶ Then Manoah intreated the LORD, and ſaid, O my Lord, let the man of God which thou didſt ſend, come again unto us, and [h] teach us what we ſhall do unto the child that ſhall be born. 9. And [i] God hearkened to the voice of Manoah; and the angel of God came again unto the woman as ſhe ſat in the field: but Manoah her huſband was not with her. 10. And the woman made haſte, and ran, and [k] ſhewed her huſband, and ſaid unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day. 11. And Manoah aroſe, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and ſaid unto him, Art thou the man that ſpakeſt unto the woman? And he ſaid, I am. 12. And Manoah ſaid, Now let thy words come to paſs: † How ſhall we order the child, and how ſhall we do unto him? 13. And the angel of the LORD ſaid unto Manoah, Of all that I ſaid unto the woman, let her beware. 14. She may not [l] eat of any thing that cometh of the vine, neither let her drink wine or ſtrong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: [m] all that I command her, let her obſerve.

v. 8—14. 1. Manoah rejoices at the news, ſtaggers not at the promiſe, but confidently depending on its fulfilment, prays for direction how to manage this child, when he ſhould be born, agreably to God's will; and for this purpoſe begs God would ſend the ſame meſſenger, to give them farther information. Note, (1.) To improve God's bleſſings to his glory, is the prayer and labour of every gracious ſoul. (2.) When we have met with a refreſhing viſit from God, we cannot but cry, Return, O God of hoſts, return. (3.) They who wiſh a meſſenger from God, a preacher of his word, to be ſent among them, would do well to make it the matter of their fervent prayer.

2. God refuſed not his requeſt. The ſame day, probably, not another day, as our tranſlation ſeems to make it, the angel of the covenant returns the ſecond time to Manoah's wife when alone, either in her buſineſs, or retired for converſe with God. She entreats permiſſion to call her huſband: this granted, ſhe runs to inform him, and he gladly attends her to wait on their celeſtial viſitant, and there ſollicitouſly enquires about the management of the child, which in faith he believed ſhould be given them. Note, (1.) They who ſeek God, will find him to their comfort. (2.) When we are alone with God, he will manifeſt himſelf to us as he doth not unto the world. (3.) They who have experienced the bleſſing of God's preſence and love, would fain call thoſe who are near and dear to them, to taſte and ſee with them how good the Lord is. (4.) When we are called to approach God, our hearts ſhould never be backward to the gracious invitation. (5.) The care of children is a great concern, and parents need beg often of God, to direct them how to manage them ſo, as to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

3. The angel repeats the ſame inſtructions. Note, (1.) It is good to have line on line, and precept on precept. (2.) When our treacherous memories would forget, or treacherous hearts neglect God's commands, it is good to have near us a loving and careful remembrancer. (3.) They who would be holy to the Lord, muſt watch with jealouſy againſt the defilement of ſin.

15. ¶ And Manoah ſaid unto the angel of the LORD, I pray thee, [n] let us detain thee, until we ſhall have made ready a kid for thee. 16. And the angel of the LORD ſaid unto Manoah, Though thou detain me, I will not eat of thy bread: and if thou wilt offer a burnt-offering, [o] thou muſt offer it unto the LORD: for Manoah knew not that he was an angel of the LORD. 17. And Manoah ſaid unto the angel of the LORD, What is thy name, that when thy ſayings come to paſs, [p] we may do thee honour? 18. And the angel of the LORD ſaid unto him, [q] Why aſkeſt thou thus after my name, ſeeing it is † ſecret? 19. So Manoah took a kid, with a meat-offering, and [r] offered it upon a rock unto the LORD: and the angel did [s] wonderouſly, and Manoah and his wife looked on. 20. For it came to paſs, when the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, that the angel of the LORD aſcended in the flame of the altar: and Manoah and his wife looked on it, and [t] fell on their faces to the ground. 21. (But the angel of the LORD did no more appear to Manoah and to his wife.) Then Manoah knew that he was an angel of the LORD. 22. And Manoah ſaid unto his wife, [u] We ſhall ſurely die, becauſe we have ſeen God. 23. But [x] his wife ſaid unto him, If the LORD were pleaſed to kill us, [y] he would not have received a burnt-offering, and a meat-offering at our hands, [z] neither would he have ſhewed us all theſe things, nor would as at this time have told us ſuch things as theſe.

v. 15—23. We have here a continuation of what paſſed at this interview.

1. Manoah intreats him to prolong his ſtay, and take ſome refreſhment with him before he departed. Note, When God ſends his meſſengers with glad tidings to us, the leaſt we can do is to afford them kind entertainment.

2. The angel declines accepting his offer, though he forbids him not to prepare the kid for ſacrifice, which he might offer to the Lord, the only true object of worſhip. Note, The ſervices we do or offer to God's miniſters, are acceptable ſacrifices to God.

3. He refuſes to gratify Manoah's curioſity, enquiring who he was, and where he lived, that he might, after the event, do him honour, either ſpread his fame, or ſend him a preſent on the birth of his ſon. His name is ſecret, not to be known, for who by ſearching can find out God? or wonderful, as Chriſt is called, Iſa. ix. 6. whoſe perſon, incarnation, and office, deſerve this title. Note, (1.) It is highly deſirable to cultivate acquaintance with a good man. (2.) If we aſk in prayer what is not good for us to receive, the beſt anſwer is a denial. (3.) In our enquiries in religion, vain curioſity is dangerous. There are ſecret things which belong only unto God, where it is our higheſt wiſdom to be contentedly ignorant.

4. Manoah having prepared the offering and ſacrifice, and laid it on the rock, the angel did wonderouſly; either, as in Gideon's ſacrifice, he brought forth fire from the rock to conſume it; or, if Manoah kindled the flame, to his aſtoniſhment he ſees him aſcend in the midſt of the fire, and diſappear; hereby evidently intimating his acceptance of the oblation, and diſcovering himſelf to them, who now were convinced that he was more than man who talked with them. Note, (1.) When we bring our hearts to God in prayer, Jeſus will kindle the holy fire, and lift up our ſouls to heaven as the flame aſcends. (2.) The aſcent of the angel betokened the acceptableneſs of the offering. Jeſus our aſcended Lord is thus gone up to heaven, to preſent our ſacrifices to God, as, for his ſake, a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour.

5. For a time in ſilent wonder and dread, Manoah and his wife, after this ſtrange ſight, remained on their faces: when riſing to reflect on this tranſaction, Manoah expreſſes his fearful apprehenſions, leſt (as was then the general opinion) this divine appearance portended his death certain and near. Note, (1.) So weak are we, that we are afraid ſometimes of our very mercies. (2.) In the habitual exerciſe of faith, ſome riſings of unbelief will at times diſtreſs and diſturb us. (3.) A good man may at ſeaſons be afraid to die.

6. His wife appears not only the ſtrongeſt believer, but the wiſeſt reaſoner. She ſuggeſts the groundleſſneſs of his fears from two arguments, ſtrongly evidencing the favour of God towards them; 1. The acceptance of their ſacrifice; and, 2. the promiſe he had made them, for the accompliſhment of which they muſt needs live. Note, (1.) It is a ſingular mercy to have ſuch an help-mate as Manoah's. (2.) When the ſinner is caſt down, he ſhould remember what Chriſt hath done for him by his bloody ſacrifice, a ſure proof that he deſigns not his death. (3.) The faithful, in times of diſcouraging providences or ſore temptations, ſhould remember the paſt experience of God's goodneſs, as a ground of preſent ſupport. He that hath helped us hitherto, means not to deſtroy us at the laſt.

24. ¶ And the woman bare a ſon, and called his name Samſon: and the child grew, and the LORD bleſſed him. 25. And [a] the Spirit of the LORD began to move him at times in the camp of Dan, between Zorah and Eſhtaol.

v. 24, 25. According to the divine promiſe, in due time Samſon is born, and from his infancy began to diſcover ſome extraordinary tokens of the divine bleſſing upon him. At particular times, deep impreſſions were made on his mind from God; or ſome uncommon inſtances of wiſdom, courage, and ſtrength appeared in him, either in the camp of Dan, where the Danites had aſſembled to oppoſe the ravages of the Philiſtines, or in Mehaneh-Dan, which might be the place of his reſidence. Note, (1.) God often in earlieſt infancy is pleaſed to make the moſt gracious impreſſions on the minds of ſome of his choſen people. (2.) They who ſpend their youth under God's bleſſing, promiſe, when in years, to be men of ſingular uſe to their generation.

About 1155. 1. AND Samſon went down to Timnath, and ſaw a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philiſtines. 2. And he came up and told his father and his mother, and ſaid, I have ſeen a woman in Timnath, of the daughters of the Philiſtines: now therefore [a] get her for me to wife. 3. Then his father and his mother ſaid unto him, Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goeſt to take a wife of the [b] uncircumciſed Philiſtines? And Samſon ſaid unto his father, Get her for me, for ſhe pleaſeth me well. 4. But his father and his mother knew not that [c] it was of the LORD, that he ſought an occaſion againſt the Philiſtines: for at that time the Philiſtines had dominion over Iſrael. 5. Then went Samſon down, and his father and his mother, to Timnath, and came to the vineyards of Timnath: and behold, a young lion † roared againſt him. 6. And [d] the Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him, and he rent him as he would have rent a kid, and [e] he had nothing in his hand: but he told not his father or his mother what he had done. 7. And he went down, and talked with the woman, and ſhe pleaſed Samſon well. 8. ¶ And after a time, he returned to take her, and he turned aſide to ſee the carcaſe of the lion: and behold, there was a ſwarm of bees, and honey in the carcaſe of the lion. 9. And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat: but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcaſe of the lion.

v. 1—9. Samſon is no ſooner grown a man, than occaſion offers to fall on the Philiſtines.

1. In his viſits to Timnath, a place in the tribe of Judah, but now under the power of the Philiſtines, he ſaw a woman who pleaſed his fancy, and reſolves, with his father's conſent, to make her his wife. His father juſtly remonſtrates againſt ſo imprudent and unbecoming a match; but ſeeing him much ſet upon it, at laſt conſents. His father could not conceive any good from ſuch an alliance, and perhaps Samſon meant only to pleaſe himſelf, and did not ſee what God deſigned to do in overruling his paſſion for the beginning of his people's deliverance. Note, (1.) It is a dangerous thing in the choice of a wife, to be guided by the eye alone. The face of an angel may conceal the violent ſpirit of a Philiſtine. (2.) Conſulting parents in the diſpoſal of our perſons is not only to conſult our own advantage, but a matter of abſolute duty, by the ſixth commandment. (3.) A godly parent will object to nothing ſo urgently, as to their children's chuſing a profane or irreligious partner. (4.) Nothing ſo likely to corrupt the heart from God, as ſuch unequal marriages. (5.) Though parents do well to diſſuade or reaſon, yet, when they ſee their children's choice is ſtrongly fixed, it were uſually better to comply with an unreaſonable requeſt, than exaſperate them by an unrelenting ſeverity. (6.) God knows how to over-rule even our imprudencies and perverſeneſs, and bring to himſelf glory, and to us good out of the evil.

2. Having conſented to the match, his father and mother go down with him to ſee his intended bride; and as they went the firſt time, Samſon being at a diſtance from them in the vineyards, out of the common path, a roaring lion met him, which, under a powerful impreſſion of God's ſpirit, he ſtrangled as eaſily as a kid, though entirely unarmed and defenceleſs. He ſoon rejoined his parents after this exploit, and modeſtly withholds the mention of his own proweſs. Some time after, on a ſecond viſit with his parents, when the nuptials were to be ſolemnized, he turned aſide to ſee what was become of the lion, when, by this time the fleſh having been conſumed, and the ſkeleton only remaining, a ſwarm of bees, which abounded in that country, had taken up their abode in it, and filled it with combs and honey. Of theſe he took and eat himſelf, and gave unto them, but ſaid nothing where he got it, perhaps meditating now on the riddle, which afterwards he deſigned to propoſe. Note, (1.) Humility is the crown of great exploits. (2) They who wander out of the ſtrait way into the vineyards of worldly enjoyment, will put their ſouls in imminent danger, though they may eſcape deſtruction. (3.) A good child will be happy to ſhare with his parents every worldly comfort. (4.) They who are dead to God themſelves, may poſſeſs gifts which may be uſeful to others; and, though in a lion's carcaſe, the honey is good. (5.) We have here a type of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. The devil is this roaring lion, whom our divine Samſon hath deſtroyed; and from his victory conſolations are brought to the believer's ſoul, ſweeter than honey and the honey-comb.

10. ¶ So his father went down unto the woman, and Samſon made there [f] a feaſt: for ſo uſed the young men to do. 11. And it came to paſs when they ſaw him, that they brought thirty companions to be with him. 12. ¶ And Samſon ſaid unto them, I will now put forth † a riddle unto you: If you can certainly declare it me within [g] the ſeven days of the feaſt, and find it out, then I will give you thirty ‡ ſheets, and thirty change of garments. 13. But if ye cannot declare it me, then ſhall ye give me thirty ſheets, and thirty change of garments. And they ſaid unto him, Put forth thy riddle that we may hear it. 14. And he ſaid unto them, † Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the ſtrong came forth ſweetneſs. And they could not in three days expound the riddle. 15. And it came to paſs on the ſeventh day, that they ſaid unto Samſon's wife, [h] Entice thy huſband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, leſt we burn thee and thy father's houſe with fire: have ye called us to take that we have? is it not ſo? 16. And Samſon's wife wept before him, and ſaid, [i] Thou doſt but hate me, and loveſt me

† Heb. Became to his companion. Chap. xv. 2. wife † was given to his companion, whom he had uſed

v. 10—20. We have here,

1. Samſon keeping his bridal feaſt. He refuſed not to comply with an innocent cuſtom, nor would, on ſuch an occaſion, appear moroſe or ſingular. Note, Unneceſſary ſingularity proceeds more from pride than piety.

2. Thirty young men are brought to do him honour on the occaſion, and to be his companions during theſe feſtal days. Civility and reſpect are amiable, even in Philiſtines.

3. To amuſe them with the innocent paſtime, and to exerciſe their ingenuity, Samſon propoſes a riddle to them, and offers to lay thirty changes of raiment, and as many ſheets, or ſhirts, againſt their diſcovery of the meaning of it. The offer is accepted, and the riddle propoſed. Note, (1.) Many diſpenſations of God for a time, like this riddle, ſeem dark and inexplicable. (2.) The ſweeteſt mercies of God to our ſouls come from the ſevereſt trials, as meat from the eater, and honey from the lion.

4. Three days in vain they puzzled to diſcover the ſecret; the fourth, which was the ſabbath, or ſeventh day, they come to Samſon's wife, and threaten to burn her and her father's houſe with fire, unleſs ſhe extorted it from him, and ſaved them the loſs of their wager, though to her own huſband's ſo great diſadvantage: a requeſt unreaſonable and villainous, and a threatning moſt barbarous and inhuman. Note, (1.) Unreaſonable and wicked men ſtick at nothing, when their worldly intereſts are at ſtake. (2.) Though wagers are always better avoided, yet they are ſure to be ſinful, when their loſs is ſuch, as may injure our circumſtances, or endanger the ruffling our tempers.

5. This falſe and faithleſs woman immediately began to importune him for a diſcovery, upbraiding him with want of love, and plying him with tears, which he could not behold without the tendereſt emotions. In vain he expoſtulates on the unreaſonableneſs of the demand, when he had not told even his parents; ſhe wearies him with ceaſeleſs importunity, till he can no longer reſiſt her crocodile tears, and unkind accuſations; and on the ſeventh day he truſted her with the important ſecret. Note, (1.) The inordinate love of women makes wiſe men fools. (2.) A woman's tears are often her ſtrongeſt argument: he muſt be more than Samſon, who can ſteel his heart againſt them.

6. No ſooner is the ſecret known, than communicated: perhaps the pride of her power operated as ſtrongly as her fears or perfidy, to make her eager to know, and haſty to reveal it. With this explication they come to Samſon before the ſeven days are expired, and claim the wager. He acknowledges it to be theirs, but hints their unfair dealing, in making uſe of his own wife to betray him, which he calls plowing with his heifer, without which they had never unravelled the clue. Note, (1.) When we truſt a ſecret out of our own breaſt, we muſt not expect it will long continue ſuch. (2.) Our corrupt affections are the heifer Satan plows with, and by theſe he prevails.

7. Though the wager is loſt, it ſhall not be at Samſon's coſt; the Philiſtines ſhall rue for it. The Spirit of the Lord coming upon him to authorize and enable him for the work, he deſcends to Aſhkelon, ſeizes thirty Philiſtines, ſlays and ſtrips them, and with theſe garments pays his companions. And now, from experience of their perfidy, heartily ſick of his wife and them, he leaves the country, and retires to his father's houſe. Note, (1.) An ill-judged and raſh marriage ends frequently in an unhappy ſeparation. (2.) It were well if the ill uſage of the world drove us out of it in affection, to ſeek our true reſt at home with our God and Father.

8. No ſooner has he turned his back, than his wife is given to his companion: perhaps, for his ſake ſhe had betrayed her huſband's ſecret, and now heſitates not to defile his bed. Note, (1.) A forſaken wife is in a dangerous ſtate. (2.) The friendſhips of the world are often faithleſs. (3.) If a woman's affections ſtray from her huſband, it is to be feared her perſon will ſoon follow them.

CHAP. XV.

We have here Samſon's farther exploits; ſtrange indeed! but armed with divine power all things are poſſible. 1. For the perfidiouſneſs of his wife and her father, he burns the corn of the Philiſtines, ver. 1—5. 2. He ſmites them with a great ſlaughter, ver. 6—8. 3. In Lehi he kills one thouſand of them with the jawbone of an aſs, ver. 9—17. 4. God gives him water in his thirſt, ver. 18—20.

1. BUT it came to paſs within a while after, in About 1155.

wife into the chamber. But her father would not ſuffer him to go in. 2. And her father ſaid, I verily thought that thou hadſt utterly hated her, therefore I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger ſiſter fairer than ſhe? take her, I pray thee, inſtead of her. 3. And Samſon ſaid concerning them, † Now ſhall I be more † I am at this time blameleſs from the Philiſtines when I do, &c. blameleſs than the Philiſtines, though I do them a diſpleaſure.
4. And Samſon went and caught three hundred foxes, and took fire-brands, and turned tail to tail, and put a fire-brand in the midſt between two tails. 5. And when he had ſet the brands on fire, he let them go into the ſtanding corn of the Philiſtines, and burnt up both the ſhocks, and alſo the ſtanding corn, with the vineyards and olives. 6. ¶ Then the Philiſtines ſaid, Who hath done this? and they anſwered, Samſon the ſon-in-law of the Timnite, becauſe he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. And the Philiſtines came up, and [b] burnt her and her father with fire. 7. b Chap. xiv. 15. 1 Theſ. iv. 6.

a great ſlaughter; and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

v. 1—8. In proceſs of time Samſon's anger began to abate; for though moſt injuriouſly treated, it becomes us not to retain anger for ever, but to forgive and forget. Hereupon,

1. He reſolves to pay a viſit to his wife, and with a kid, to make a ſupper of reconciliation, goes down to her father's houſe. Note, (1.) A wife, though her behaviour were juſtly provoking, is not haſtily to be put away. (2.) The wiſeſt, though offended, will be the firſt to ſeek peace, and the readieſt to paſs by a tranſgreſſion.

2. When he would have entered his wife's apartment, unacquainted with what had paſſed, his father-in-law ſtays him, as having given her to another. To juſtify which, he pretends, that by his anger and abſence he concluded he had hated her, and never meant to return; but if it will be any ſatisfaction to him for the injury, he offers his younger daughter, which was the handſomer, in her ſtead. This Samſon rejects. Note, (1.) Unreaſonable jealouſies often produce the greateſt injuries. (2.) The bad practices of Canaan, however cuſtomary, will not ſuit a true Iſraelite.

3. Samſon hereupon meditates a ſevere correction. As the injury regarded him as an Iſraelite, as much as a private perſon, he reſolves as a public perſon, to make the Philiſtines rue for it: and as he concludes the juſtice of his quarrel from what had paſſed, he, without delay, procures a number of foxes, and tying a fire-brand between two tails, ſends them into the fields of the Philiſtines, and into their vineyards, where, as it was now harveſt, the fire ſoon made dreadful ravages. Some have thought, from the ſtrangeneſs of the contrivance, that the word Shualim ſhould be tranſlated ſheaves, or ſhocks; but it never appears elſewhere in this ſenſe. The word caught is never applied to any thing but taking a thing by force of arms, or by cunning; nor the word tail uſed in ſcripture, but of a living creature; ſo that the literal ſenſe is to be adhered to. Note, (1.) When we have done our duty to prevent a quarrel, we cannot be charged with the conſequences of it. (2.) When we ſtagger at God's word, becauſe our fooliſh reaſon objects to the methods of his proceeding, it is a ſure ſign we deſire to be wiſe above what is written.

4. Provoked at their loſs, the Philiſtines enquire into the cauſe, and wreak their vengeance on the Timnite and his daughter; ſet fire to their houſe, and conſume them in the flames; thus executing upon the woman the ſentence of adultery, and involving her in the very ruin which by her perfidy ſhe endeavoured to avoid. Note, (1.) God often makes uſe of his people's enemies to avenge their quarrel. (2.) They who by ſin ſeek to avoid ſuffering, only bring upon themſelves more ſwift and ſure deſtruction.

5. Though they had avenged his quarrel, and thereby thought to have ingratiated themſelves with him, he had not done with them. Being raiſed up for his people's deliverance, he falls upon them, and, though unarmed, makes vaſt havock, and then retired to the rock Etam, waiting another occaſion to renew his attacks upon them. Note, They who fight the Lord's battles muſt expect but little repoſe, but after one conteſt and temptation prepare for another.

9. Then the Philiſtines went up and pitched in Judah, and ſpread themſelves in † Lehi. 10. And the men of Judah ſaid, Why are ye come up againſt us? And they anſwered, To bind Samſon are we come up, to do to him, as he hath done to us. 11. Then three thouſand men of Judah went to the top of the rock Etam, and ſaid to Samſon, Knoweſt thou not that the Philiſtines are [e] rulers over us? What is this that thou haſt done unto us? And he ſaid unto them, As they did unto me, ſo have I done unto them. 12. And they ſaid unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that [f] we may deliver thee into the hand of the Philiſtines. And Samſon ſaid unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not fall upon me yourſelves. 13. And they ſpake unto him, ſaying, No: but we will bind thee faſt, and deliver thee into their hand: but ſurely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock. 14. ¶ And when he came unto Lehi, the Philiſtines [g] ſhouted againſt him: and the Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him, and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands † looſed from off his hands. 15. And he found a new jaw-bone of an aſs, and put forth his hand and took it, and ſlew a thouſand men therewith. 16. And Samſon ſaid, With the jaw-bone of an aſs, heaps upon heaps, [h] with the jaw-bone of an aſs, have I ſlain a thouſand men. 17. And it came to paſs, when he had made an end of ſpeaking, that he caſt away the jaw-bone out of his hand, and called that place † Ramath-lehi.

v. 9—17. Unable any longer to bear ſuch treatment, the Philiſtines gathered their armies, not to fight with Iſrael, but to oblige them to give up their enemy Samſon, to be put to death for the outrages he had committed. Hereupon,

1. The men of Judah underſtanding the reaſon of their invaſion, inſtead of bravely ſetting Samſon at their head to fight for their liberty, baſely reſolve to make a ſacrifice of him to his enemies, preferring ignominious ſervitude before a generous ſtruggle for their country. Inſtead of honouring him for his courage, they blame him for his raſhneſs, and deſire him peaceably to ſubmit to their bonds. Samſon might well expoſtulate with them, that what he had done was for their good, and a juſt correction for the wrongs he had received; but knowing that this was from God, that he might have a new occaſion to deſtroy them, he peaceably ſubmits to be bound; and having firſt engaged his brethren to do him no harm, conſents to be delivered into the hands of the Philiſtines. Note, We have here in Samſon a lively figure of the Lord Jeſus. A band of armed men ſurround him in the garden; he is betrayed, and forſaken by his own diſciples; though able to deſtroy at a ſtroke thoſe who came to bind him, yet quietly ſubmiſſive, and led as a lamb to the ſlaughter.

2. With joy the Philiſtines behold their captive approaching, and ſhout aloud, as now triumphant over their deſtroyer: but how momentary the triumphing of the wicked! Inſtant a ſudden impulſe of divine power comes upon him; like tow his captive bands are burſt aſunder: no better weapon is at hand than the jaw-bone of an aſs's carcaſe: this he ſeizes, flies on his amazed foes, and turns the ſhouts of joy into ſhrieks of horror; for ſoon with irreſiſtleſs fury he mows down their ranks, and heaps the ſlain on the ſlain. A thouſand fell on the ſpot, and wearineſs of killing and flight only ſaved the remainder. Note, (1.) When God will work, the moſt deſpicable inſtruments in his hand ſhall be effectual. (2.) Though tied and bound with the chains of our ſins, the Spirit of the Lord can looſe theſe captive bonds, and ſet us free. (3.) Unequal as the conteſt is between one poor believer and all the hoſts of hell and earth without, and corruption within, yet Divine Grace can make him more than conqueror. (4.) When his rejoicing enemies were moſt ſecure, and under the ſeal and ſtone had thus bound up the dead body of our crucified Lord, then, like Samſon, he broke the bands of death, awaked as a giant refreſhed with wine, confounded his foes, and led captivity captive.

3. Samſon celebrates his victory, not out of vanity, but to the glory of God, who with ſo unfit a weapon, had enabled him to make ſo great a ſlaughter. The ſame Hebrew word ſignifying an aſs and an heap, makes, in the original, an elegant paronomaſia, not to be expreſſed in a tranſlation. Then, having finiſhed his ſong of praiſes, he caſts away the uſeleſs jaw, and, in memory of this ſignal event, calls the place Ramath-Lehi, The lifting up of the jaw-bone. Note, (1.) God muſt have the glory of his own work. (2.) Songs of praiſe are as honourable to him, as reviving to our own ſouls.

18. ¶ And he was ſore [i] athirſt, and called on the LORD, and ſaid, [k] Thou haſt given this great deliverance into the hand of thy ſervant: And now ſhall I die for thirſt, and fall into the hand of the uncircumciſed? 19. But God clave an hollow place that was in † the jaw, and there came water thereout: and when he had drunk, [l] his ſpirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof ‡ En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day. 20. And he judged Iſrael in the days of the Philiſtines twenty years.

v. 18—20. The with-holding the moſt common neceſſaries of life, little as we are apt to value them, would be more fatal than the ſword. The want of a draught of water brought Samſon nearer to the grave, than all the hoſts of Philiſtia.

1. We ſee him here ready to die with thirſt; no water was near, and he was ſo parched and weak, as to be unable to ſeek farther. In this diſtreſs he calls upon God, who alone could relieve him. In his prayer he pleads God's paſt mercies as an argument for preſent help, and urges the diſhonour which would be caſt on God, if now he ſhould be given into the hands of the uncircumciſed, after ſuch an inſtance of divine interpoſition. Note, (1.) Jeſus on the croſs cried thus, I thirſt. (2.) In time of diſtreſs, prayer is our beſt reſource. (3.) Paſt mercies ſhould encourage us to wait upon God, and no plea ſo prevalent as his own glory.

2. God heard and anſwered him, permitting the diſtreſs only to exerciſe his faith, keep his ſpirit humble, and magnify his own power and grace. Out of the jaw-bone itſelf, or out of a hollow in Lehi, the name Samſon had given the place, a ſtream of freſh water ſprung up, and hereupon his fainting ſpirit revived, and his departing life returned. Note, (1.) Every day we have to praiſe God for a new life given us. (2.) Without the conſtant ſupply of living ſtreams from the fountain of grace, our ſouls muſt quickly faint and die.

3. He gives the place a name correſponding to the mercy, Enhakkore, The fountain of him that was calling, in remembrance of his own diſtreſs, and God's gracious anſwer to his prayer.

4. Twenty years he judged Iſrael, during which the Philiſtines, though not utterly ſubdued, ſeem not to oppreſs them as before, checked by the terror of his arm; ſo that they had reſpite from the yoke, if not perfect freedom. Note, (1.) It is a mercy to have our afflictions alleviated. (2.) If we improve the beginning of our mercies, we may expect they will be continued and perfected.

1. THEN went Samſon to Gaza, and ſaw there † an harlot, and went in unto her. 2. And it was told the Gazites, ſaying, Samſon is come hither. And [a] they compaſſed him in, and laid wait for him [b] all night in the gate of the city, and were quiet all the night, ſaying, In the morning, when it is day, we ſhall kill him. 3. And Samſon lay till midnight, and aroſe at midnight and [c] took the doors of the gate of the city, and the two poſts, and went away with them, bar and all, and put them upon his ſhoulders, and carried them up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron.

v. 1—3. As woman firſt was man's ruin, how often ſince hath ſhe been his ſnare? Other paſſions have ſlain their thouſands, the love of women its ten thouſands.

1. Samſon, who could not be taken in the toils of the Philiſtines, is enſnared with the attire of an harlot: to his ſhame the ſtory is recorded. He went down to Gaza, on what occaſion is not mentioned; but the bad tendency of familiarity with Philiſtines is left for our admonition. He ſaw a woman, who pleaſed his eye, and, paſſion overcoming conſcience, he went in to her. Note, (1.) The ſtrongeſt in grace need deeply cry, Lead us not into temptation. (2.) They who ramble into places of vain company, muſt not wonder if they ſmart for it.

2. Though perhaps he came in diſguiſe, he was not long concealed; and whilſt he is lying in the arms of an harlot, danger and death await him at the gate. Note, (1.) In our moſt ſecret ſins God will find us out. (2.) Men would not ſleep quiet on the bed of lewdneſs, could they ſee the wrath of God which is hanging over them. (3.) The more ſecurely the ſinner ſleeps, the more dangerous his ſtate.

3. Whether the convictions of his conſcience terrified him, or a dream monitory of his danger awakened him, or ſome intelligence was brought him of the Philiſtines deſigns, at midnight he aroſe, and finding the gates of the city barred, and the guards aſleep probably, little expecting ſuch a viſitant; he took up poſts, gates, and bars together on his ſhoulders, and carried them to a diſtant hill, to let his enemies ſee how vain were their attempts againſt him. Thus Chriſt, on his reſurrection day, carried off the gates of death, mocking at the impotent deſigns of his enemies, and opening a paſſage for all his people to follow him to the hill of God.

4. ¶ And it came to paſs afterward, that [d] he loved a woman in the valley of Sorek, whoſe name was † Delilah. 5. And the lords of the Philiſtines came up unto her, and ſaid unto her, [e] Entice him, and ſee wherein his great ſtrength lieth, and by what means we may prevail againſt him, that we may bind him to afflict him: and [f] we will give thee every one of us eleven hundred pieces of ſilver. 6. And Delilah ſaid to Samſon, [g] Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great ſtrength lieth, and wherewith thou mighteſt be bound to afflict thee. 7. And Samſon ſaid unto her, If they bind me with ſeven green withs that were never dried, then [h] ſhall I be weak, and be as another man. 8. Then the lords of the Philiſtines brought up to her ſeven green withs, which had not been dried, and ſhe bound him with them. 9. (Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber) And ſhe ſaid unto him, The Philiſtines be upon thee, Samſon. And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it toucheth the fire: [i] ſo his ſtrength was not known. 10. And Delilah ſaid unto Samſon, Behold, thou haſt mocked me, and told me lies: [k] now tell me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mighteſt be bound. 11. And he ſaid unto her, If they bind me faſt with new ropes † that never were occupied, then ſhall I be weak, and be as another man. 12. Delilah therefore took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and ſaid unto him, The Philiſtines be upon thee, Samſon. (And there were liers in wait abiding in the chamber) And he brake them from off his arms like a thread. 13. And Delilah ſaid unto Samſon, Hitherto thou haſt mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mighteſt be bound. And he ſaid unto her, If thou weaveſt the ſeven locks of my head with the web. 14. And ſhe faſtned it with the pin, and ſaid unto him, The Philiſtines be upon thee, Samſon. And he awaked out of his ſleep, and [l] went away with the pin of the beam, and with the web. 15. ¶ And ſhe ſaid unto him, How canſt thou ſay, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? Thou haſt mocked me theſe three times, and haſt not told me wherein thy great ſtrength lieth. 16. And it came to paſs, when ſhe preſſed him daily with her words, and urged him, ſo that his ſoul was † vexed unto death; 17. That [m] he told her all his heart, and ſaid unto her, There hath not come a razor upon mine head: for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb: [n] If I be ſhaven, then my ſtrength will go from me, and I ſhall become weak, and be like any other man.

v. 4—17. We find here this mighty man ſinking under the power of his beſetting ſin. Once and again he had been brought by it into the moſt imminent danger; yet again relapſes, and, the third time, ſeverely ſuffers. What a warning to every man of God to make a covenant with his eyes, and watch againſt and deny the ſinful luſts of the fleſh, which are as eaſily beſetting, as difficult to be reſiſted.

1. Another harlot caught his eye, and enſnared his heart. In criminal converſation with her he paſſed the day, and him whom armies could not move, a woman enſlaves.

2. The Philiſtines ſeize the opportunity, and hope at laſt to prevail againſt him. Perſuaded that there was ſome charm or ſpell, which gave him ſuch matchleſs ſtrength, which if once diſcovered, they might be able to bind him, they offer Delilah a large bribe, amounting to near ſeven thouſand pounds, to get the ſecret out of him; and, farther to induce her, engage not to kill, but only to diſarm and ſecure him from doing them farther miſchief. Note, (1.) Where the love of money is rooted in the heart, bribe high enough, and you may buy body, ſoul, and all. (2.) By this was the Son of God betrayed; the love of thirty pieces of ſilver prevailed on the traitor Judas.

3. On the firſt opportunity, when careſſes had paved the way for an eaſier entrance into his heart, ſhe wiſhes he would gratify her curioſity with informing her where lay his ſtrength, and how he might be ſo bound, as to be unable to help himſelf. Loth to declare the real ſecret, and hoping to put her off, he heſitates not at a lie; but when, to make the experiment, the oſiers bound him, and an alarm of danger was given, the deceit appeared. Again ſhe tries; again he miſinforms her: the new ropes were as tow on his hands. The third time, upbraiding him with his deceit, ſhe wearies him to tell the truth; but ſtill reluctant, he gives her a falſe information; and when ſhe had wove his locks with her web, and faſtened them to the beam, no ſooner was the cry heard, "The Philiſtines be upon thee," than pin, beam, and all were carried away. Note, (1.) We muſt never expect fidelity from thoſe, who ſhew their utter unfaithfulneſs to God. (2.) When the heart is infatuated with luſt, repeated warnings of danger will be diſregarded. (3.) They who feel themſelves unable to reſiſt the importunity of their tempter, ſhould inſtantly fly from their company.

4. At laſt, wearied out with her ceaſeleſs upbraidings, and enſlaved by his violent paſſion for her, the fatal ſecret is extorted. He could not bear to be ſuſpected as wanting in affection to her, and, rather than not convince her of it, by gratifying her moſt unreaſonable requeſts, his own reputation, life, yea worſe, God's honour, and the people's ſafety, are baſely betrayed into the power of a faithleſs woman. Note, (1.) They who are ſlaves to their luſts, are the worſt of ſlaves, and ſtick at nothing to gratify them. (2.) They who truſt their honour with a vile woman, deſerve to be betrayed.

18. And when Delilah ſaw that he had told her all his heart, ſhe ſent and called for the lords of the Philiſtines, ſaying, Come up this once, for he hath ſhewed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philiſtines came up unto her, and [o] brought money in their hand. 19. And [p] ſhe made him ſleep upon her knees, and ſhe called for a man, and ſhe cauſed him to ſhave off the ſeven locks of his head, and ſhe began to afflict him, and his ſtrength went from him. 20. And ſhe ſaid, The Philiſtines be upon thee, Samſon. And he awoke out of his ſleep, and ſaid, I will go out as at other times before, and ſhake myſelf. And he wiſt not that [q] the LORD was departed from him. 21. ¶ But the Philiſtines took him, and † put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and [r] bound him with fetters of braſs, and he did grind in the priſon-houſe.

v. 18—21. Fully convinced now, from the ſeriouſneſs of his manner, or the name of God which he had uſed, that he had diſcovered to her his whole heart, ſhe ſummons the lords of the Philiſtines once more to attend her, who, by being ſo often diſappointed, had returned home in deſpair; and they, ready to attend her, take the money in their hands, and haſte away. Behold and pity this unhappy victim, deſtined now as a ſheep to the ſlaughter. Note, It is juſt in God to give up thoſe to ſuffer, who give themſelves up to ſin.

1. When her aſſiſtants were ready, this treacherous wretch ſpreads the ſoft lap of love, and, after dalliance ſweet, the mighty Samſon ſinks down to reſt, and cloſes thoſe eyes, that, faſcinated with beauty's charm, can ſee no danger in that pleaſing pillow. But now the fatal razor approaches; his ſeven locks fall off; his ſtrength departs; ſome ſymptoms of it in ſleep perhaps appeared; and now the Philiſtines, at her cry, ruſh in, and, to his utter confuſion, he diſcovers his irreparable ruin. At firſt when he awoke, he thought he might ſhake himſelf as before, and wiſt not his dire miſhap; but God was departed, and therefore reſiſtance is vain. Note, (1.) Indulgence of ſenſual appetite ſtupifies the conſcience, and rocks the ſoul aſleep in ſecurity; but Satan wakes, and inſenſibly leads us into the pit of ruin. (2.) Many a ſinner cloſes his eyes in peace, which the alarm of death or judgment will open, only to diſcover his ſtate of everlaſting deſpair. (3.) When God is provoked to depart, though we may think we can do as at other times, our weakneſs will appear to our confuſion, and we ſhall ſink under our wickedneſs. (4.) Let every one who reads, beware of Samſon's ſin, leſt they bring themſelves, like him, into the depths of miſery.

2. The Philiſtines ſecure him faſt. No longer now the terror of the mighty, they drag him down to Gaza in triumph, and, to diſable him for ever, put out his eyes, and with fetters of braſs chain him to the mill; at once to ſuffer and ſerve them, them, and ſtand the deriſion of every beholder. How art thou fallen, ſon of the morning! how is the glory departed from Iſrael! Note, (1.) His puniſhment correſponds with his ſins; thoſe eyes that enſnared his heart, are now for ever cloſed in darkneſs. The ſinner's portion will be the outer darkneſs, where there is wailing and gnaſhing of teeth. (2.) They who yield their members inſtruments of iniquity, will find Satan's ſervice baſe and bitter, when in chains of ſin they groan, being burdened. (3.) Former manifeſtations of God's mercy to ſinners will but aggravate their torment in hell, as the remembrance of the gates of Gaza made the doors of the priſon more ignominious and afflictive.

v. 22—31. In this ignominious employment, unhappy Samſon had ſeaſon given him for reflection, bitter reflection! where all was dark without, and all as dark within. Yet how preferable his ſituation! Far better grind in Gaza than ſleep in the boſom of Dalilah. Repentance ſeems now to have been vouchſafed him; his hair began to grow, and, as a token that God had not utterly left him, his ſtrength probably returned with it, God ſtill deſigning him for great exploits, and in his death to wipe away the foul ſtains of his paſt ungracious conduct.

1. The Philiſtines aſſemble to celebrate the praiſes of their god Dagon, half man, half fiſh, to whoſe favour they aſcribe their victory over the mighty Samſon. With ſongs of praiſe the lofty roofs reſound, and echo back their idol's victory. To make their joy compleat Samſon is led forth, inſult added to his ſufferings, and he degraded to be the ſport of fools. Note, (1.) If even a Philiſtine could aſcribe his victories only to his dunghill god, how much more are we bound to give our God the glory due unto his name, for all he doth by us, in us, and for us. (2.) They who by their ill-conduct have brought diſhonour upon God, juſtly deſerve to bring contempt upon themſelves. (3.) They who have ſported in ſin to their own deceiving, will find themſelves at laſt expoſed to everlaſting ſhame, when even God himſelf will mock at their calamity.

2. Little thought the lords of the Philiſtines what ruin hung over their heads. In mirth and wine the joyful day was ſpent, and beſides the capital nobility, a vaſt concourſe of men and women crouded the temple within and without, no leſs than three thouſand being on the roof: unhappy Samſon ſtood the ſpectacle of their delight, fallen from his high eſtate, trampled upon by every foot, and led blind along by a little lad, the guide and guard of this once renowned hero. Either wearied with walking round, or grinding at the mill, he wanted to reſt his limbs, or meditating the fatal blow, having informed himſelf of the ſupporters of the roof, he deſires the lad to lead him, that he may lean againſt them; there pauſing for awhile on this great deed, he lifts his heart to God in prayer, for power to avenge, as a public perſon, his own and Iſrael's wrongs, and for his people's ſake chearfully devotes himſelf to death. With arms extended then he graſps the maſſy pillars, and feeling an anſwer to his prayer, in the renewed ſtrength beſtowed on him, he bows himſelf forward, the pillars rock, the building totters, the roof, incumbered with the weight of the ſpectators, ruſhes down, and death, in every tremendous ſhape, appears. Cruſhed under the load, or daſhed to pieces in the fall, thouſands expire; their muſic now is changed to dying groans; and ſhrieks of agonizing pain, inſtead of ſongs of triumph, fill the air. Thus dies the mighty Samſon, glorious in his fall, and more terrible to the Philiſtines in his death, than even during his life. Note, (1.) They who ſport and mock at God's ſervants, fill faſt the meaſure of their iniquities. (2.) When we return unto God in penitent prayer, God will return unto us in mercy, and renew our ſtrength. (3.) To die for our country is great, to die for God is greater ſtill. (4.) Samſon's death is a type of Chriſt's; his arms were thus extended on the croſs; laying down a life that none could elſe take from him; ſaving his people by ſhedding his own blood, and caſting down thereby the throne of Satan, ruining his temple in the hearts of men, and deſtroying the power of ſin, death, and hell, their mortal enemies.

3. His father and friends, during the conſternation, went up and took his dead body from the ruins, the Philiſtines not daring to oppoſe them, or, as having no juſt quarrel with them, permitting it quietly, and buried it in his father's ſepulchre. Twenty years his government laſted, and had the people but followed his example they had no more felt the yoke of Philiſtia. Note, 'Tis our own faults if we live and die the ſervants of ſin, becauſe we neglect to uſe the means of grace God vouchſafes us.

What is related in this, and the reſt of the chapters to the end of this book, was done ſoon after the death of Joſhua, in the days of Phinehas the ſon of Eleazar, chap. xx. 28. But is placed laſt, in order that it might not interrupt the hiſtory of the Judges. Here is, 1. The beginnings of idolatry in the family of Micah, ver. 1—6. 2. His conſecration of a Levite to be his prieſt, ver. 7—13.

v. 1—6. During the government of Joſhua and the elders, the people continued careful of the worſhip of God, but on their death began to apoſtatize to falſe worſhip; the introduction of which is here related.

1. The mother of one Micah, of the tribe of Ephraim, had, by her frugality, hoarded up a large ſum of money; which coming to the knowledge of her ſon, he made no ſcruple to ſteal it, for the uſe of his family: the mother, enraged at the loſs of her ſilver, is in a rage, and denounces grievous imprecations on the thief, in the hearing of the ſon, whom perhaps ſhe ſuſpected. Stung with the ſenſe of the evil of the deed, and fearing the curſe, he confeſſes the theft, brings back the money to his mother; who hereupon recalls her denunciations, and gives him her bleſſing. Note, (1.) Covetouſneſs is the beſetting ſin of old age; they who can ſhorteſt enjoy the world, are uſually moſt anxious to lay up the largeſt proviſion. (2.) Parents by their niggardlineſs put great temptations in their children's way to rob them, or wiſh them dead, that they may poſſeſs their hoard. (3.) He is a wicked ſon that robs his parents. (4.) The loſſes which make one man pray, make others curſe and blaſpheme. (5.) They who are haſty in their imprecations, will ſometimes lay them where they would not wiſh they ſhould light. (6.) The curſe of a parent is a heavy load. (7.) When we have done ill we muſt confeſs and reſtore, if we would regain peace of conſcience. (8.) They who return and repent will find the curſe they have deſerved turned into a bleſſing.

2. Better the money had been loſt for ever, than found for the uſe to which it is applied. Micah's mother, either before it was ſtolen, or as a vow if ſhe recovered it, had dedicated the money to the Lord, but in a way which was moſt abominable in his ſight, to make a graven and a molten image with it; hereunto the ſon too eaſily complies, the ſilver is given to the founder, either the whole nine hundred for the images, and two hundred for the making, or a part only; the love of her money and of her idols dividing her heart, and making her willing to reſerve the beſt ſhare for herſelf of the dedicated ſum. Note, The contending corruptions of a ſinner's heart oftentimes jar with each other, and one can only be indulged on the denial of another.

3. The images being made, Micah ſets them up with an ephod and teraphim, little houſhold gods for divination, in imitation of the urim and thummim; and having ſet apart a room or built a houſe for his gods, conſecrated one of his ſons, probably the eldeſt, as prieſt to miniſter before them. At firſt they ſeem to intend only the worſhip of Jehovah, in and through theſe repreſentations of him; but the breach of one commandment ſoon deſtroyed the other, and ſapped the foundation of all. Note, (1.) Corruptions in the church ariſe from ſmall beginnings; to avoid idolatry we muſt keep from ſuperſtition. (2.) It matters little whether the idol be ſet up in the heart or the houſe; whatever alienates the affections from God leads us into idolatry.

4. The reaſon is given why this met no reproof: there was no judge in Iſrael; and they muſt be bad days indeed when no magiſtrates reſtrain ſin, and miniſters are negligent to reprove it.

7. ¶ And there was a young man out of Beth-lehem-judah, of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and he ſojourned there. 8. And the man departed out of the city from Beth-lehem-judah, to ſojourn [c] where he could find a place: and he came to mount Ephraim, to the houſe of Micah, as he journeyed. 9. And Micah ſaid unto him, Whence comeſt thou? And he ſaid unto him, I am a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, and I go to ſojourn where I may find a place. 10. And Micah ſaid unto him, Dwell with me, and be unto me a [f] father and a prieſt, and I will give thee ten ſhekels of ſilver by the year, and † a ſuit of apparel, and [g] thy victuals. So the Levite went in. 11. And the Levite was content to dwell with the man, and the young man was unto him as one of his ſons. 12. And Micah conſecrated the Levite, and the young man became his prieſt, and was in the houſe of Micah. 13. Then ſaid Micah, [h] Now know I that the LORD will do me good, ſeeing I have a Levite to my prieſt.

v. 7—13. Micah had probably been content with his ſon's ſervice, if an accident had not brought him a more acceptable chaplain in a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, who was, by his mother's ſide, of the tribe of Judah, and had reſided at Beth-lehem; either through the neglect of God's worſhip, which began to take place, he could no longer gain a maintenance from the miniſtry, and was forced to ſeek a livelihood; or perhaps of a rambling genius, unſettled, and uneaſy to be confined at home: it may be alſo hearing of Micah's houſe of gods, and hoping for better preferment in his ſervice, abominable as it was, than at the altar of God. Note, (1.) They muſt be bad times indeed, when God's miniſters want a maintenance. (2.) A roving ſpirit ill becomes a Levite's office. (3.) The prieſt who ſets out with an eye to preferment, is certainly in the high road to hell. (4.) The miniſtry is the beſt calling, but the worſt trade in the world.

Micah having at the door enquired whence he came, and learned his profeſſion, invites him in; offers, if he will officiate for him, to treat him with reſpect as a father; to provide him meat, drink and two ſuits a year, and give him beſide ten ſhekels, about twenty-five ſhillings, as a ſalary. The Levite conſents, the bargain is concluded, and as he found it a good houſe, though the work was ſcandalous, and the wages mean, he thought himſelf well ſettled. Micah hereupon preſumptuouſly conſecrates him for his prieſt, and ſhews him all reſpect and affection; fooliſhly concluding himſelf now happy in a Levite for his prieſt, and vainly promiſing himſelf God's bleſſing, whilſt taking the moſt direct means to bring down his curſe upon him. Note, (1.) They whoſe office and duty it is to rebuke ſin, for the ſake of their belly, and a good table, are often wicked and mean enough to ſit by and countenance it. (2.) They who chuſe their own deluſions, would fain flatter themſelves, that God approves of them. (3.) More, like Micah, derive their hopes from the prieſt and the altar, their worſhip, and external devotions, than from ſpirituality of temper and real purity of heart. (4.) The deeds the ſelf-righteous boaſt of, as moſt commending them to God's favour, are thoſe God moſt abhors, and which moſt effectually ſeal them up under wrath.

CHAP. XVIII.

How great a matter doth a little fire kindle! The idolatry of a family ſoon infects a tribe. We are told, (1.) How the Danite ſpies ſent to view Laiſh got acquainted with Micah's prieſt, ver. 1—6. (2.) The encouraging report theſe ſpies brought back, ver. 7—10. (3.) What forces were ſent to conquer Laiſh, ver. 11—13. (4.) How they by the way plundered Micah of his gods, ver. 14—26. (5.) How eaſily they conquered Laiſh, ver. 27—29. and wickedly ſet up the graven image in it, ver. 30, 31.

1. IN thoſe days there was [a] no king in Iſrael: and in thoſe days the tribe of [b] the Danites ſought them an inheritance to dwell in: for unto that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Iſrael. 2. And the children of Dan ſent of their family five men from their coaſts, men of valour, from Zorah, and from Eſhtaol, to ſpy out the land, and to ſearch it; and they ſaid unto them, Go, ſearch the land: who when they came to mount Ephraim, to the houſe of Micah, they lodged there. 3. When they were by the houſe of Micah, they knew the voice of the young man the Levite: and they turned in thither, and ſaid unto him, Who brought thee hither? and what makeſt thou in this place? and what haſt thou here? 4. And he ſaid unto them, Thus and thus dealeth Micah with me, and hath hired me, and I am his prieſt. 5. And they ſaid unto him, [c] Aſk counſel, we pray thee, of God, that we may know whether our way which we go ſhall be proſperous. 6. And the prieſt ſaid unto them, [d] Go in peace: [e] before the LORD is your way wherein ye go.

v. 1—6. A great part of the inheritance of the Danites remained unconquered, chap. i. 34, 35. and the Amorites ſtraitning them yet more, one family of the tribe bethought them of looking out ſome eaſier conqueſt; and having the city of Laiſh allotted them in the northern border,

1. They ſend out five men as ſpies to ſearch the land, that they might know its condition, and what force would be neceſſary to attack it. Note, With good advice make war.

2. In their way paſſing by Micah's houſe, and ſpending a night there, one of them, by his voice, diſcovers the Levite, whom he had formerly known; this produces enquiry into his buſineſs there, and he informs them of his office, and Micah's agreement with him.

3. Far from being ſhocked at the account, or ready to reprove this idolatry, they beg this unhallowed prieſt to aſk counſel of his teraphim, and think it a lucky accident that they have ſuch an opportunity of enquiring whether their undertaking ſhould proſper. Strange folly! to aſk direction of idols when Shiloh was ſo nigh, and prefer an intruding ſelf-made prieſt, to the anointed of the Lord. Thus ſtill the blind lead the blind, and the people love to have it ſo.

4. The Levite prieſt pretends to give them hereupon an anſwer from God, and aſſures them of the ſucceſs of their enterprize. Their way was under divine direction, and God would guard and proſper them in it. Note, They may comfortably go on their ways, whoſe goings the Lord upholds and guides.

7. ¶ Then the five men departed, and came to † Laiſh, and ſaw the people that were therein, how they dwelt careleſs, after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and ‡ ſecure, and there was no magiſtrate in the land that might [f] put them to ſhame in any thing, and they were far from the Zidonians, and had no buſineſs with any man. 8. And they came unto their brethren to Zorah, and Eſhtaol: and their brethren ſaid unto them, What ſay ye? 9. And they ſaid, Ariſe, that we may go up againſt them: for we have ſeen the land, and behold, it is very good: and are ye ſtill? be not ſlothful to go, and to enter to poſſeſs the land. 10. When ye go, ye ſhall come unto a people ſecure, and to ‖ a large land: for God hath given it into your hands: a place where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth. 11. ¶ And there went from thence of the family of the Danites nites out of Zorah and out of Eſhtaol, ſix hundred men, appointed with weapons of war. 12. And they went up, and pitched in Kirjath-jearim in Judah: wherefore they called that place Mahaneh-dan unto this day: behold, it is behind Kirjath-jearim. 13. And they paſſed thence unto mount Ephraim, and came unto [g] the houſe of Micah.

v. 7—13. The five ſpies proceeded on their journey to Laiſh, of which we have here an account.

1. The people were living in the moſt ſupine ſecurity, without guards to protect, or governors to reſtrain them. Wickedneſs met with no reproof, and knew no ſhame, ſo that they appeared ripe for judgment; and as they entirely neglected their gates, and were at a diſtance from any help, nothing could be an eaſier prey. Note, (1.) If there be no magiſtrate to bear the ſword, or negligence lets it ſleep in the ſcabbard, barefaced iniquity will quickly walk in triumph. (2.) Shame is a great reſtraint on ſin; when that is loſt, men grow utterly abandoned. (3.) The ſecurity of ſinners is their ruin.

2. They carry this report back to their brethren, and earneſtly preſs them to make no delay to go up; the conqueſt is eaſy, the people ſecure, the land excellent, and nothing wanting but to put off their ſloth, and march and poſſeſs it. Note, (1.) Sloth is a great enemy to the ſoul, in its ſpiritual warfare. (2.) We need exhort one another daily, to ariſe and be doing; none knows how much comfort he loſes here, and how much glory hereafter, by his ſinful negligence. (3.) Heaven is a good land, and if we have a heart to travel thither, and bravely enter, we ſhall find every want ſupplied for ever.

3. The family of the Danites, to whom the city was allotted, begin their march; ſix hundred men of war, with their houſholds and ſubſtance, as if to certain victory. Note, They who go out in faith are ſure to prevail.

14. ¶ Then anſwered the five men that went to ſpy out the country of Laiſh, and ſaid unto their brethren, Do ye know that [h] there is in theſe houſes an ephod, and teraphim, and a graven image, and a molten image? Now therefore [i] conſider what ye have to do. 15. And they turned thitherward, and came to the houſe of the young man the Levite, even unto the houſe of Micah, and † ſaluted him. 16. And the ſix hundred men appointed with their weapons of war, which were of the children of Dan, ſtood by the entring of the gate. 17. And the five men that went to ſpy out the land, went up, and came in thither, and took the graven image, and the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image: and the prieſt ſtood in the entring of the gate with the ſix hundred men that were appointed with weapons of war. 18. And theſe went into Micah's houſe, and fetched the carved image, the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image: then ſaid the prieſt unto them, What do ye? 19. And they ſaid unto him, Hold thy peace, [k] lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, and be to us a father and a prieſt: is it better for thee to be a prieſt unto the houſe of one man, or that thou be a prieſt unto a tribe and a family in Iſrael? 20. And [l] the prieſt's heart was glad, and he took the ephod and the teraphim, and the graven image, and went in the midſt of the people. 21. So they turned and departed, and put the little ones, and the cattle, and the carriage before them. 22. ¶ And when they were a good way from the houſe of Micah, the men that were in the houſes near to Micah's houſe, were gathered together, and overtook the children of Dan. 23. And they cried unto the children of Dan: and they turned their faces, and ſaid unto Micah, What aileth thee, that thou comeſt with ſuch a company? 24. And he ſaid, Ye have taken away my gods which I made, and the prieſt, and ye are gone away: and [m] what have I more? and what is this that ye ſay unto me, What aileth thee? 25. And the children of Dan ſaid unto him, Let not thy voice be heard among us, leſt ‡ angry fellows run upon thee, and thou ‖ loſe thy life, with the lives of thy houſhold. 26. And the children of Dan went their way: and when Micah ſaw that they were too ſtrong for him, he turned and went back unto his houſe.

v. 14—26. As their rout lay not far from Micah's houſe, when they came in ſight of it, the five men, who had gone to ſpy out Laiſh, informed their brethren of Micah's houſe of gods, and of the uſe they had made of them, throwing in a hint, whether it might not be worth conſideration, either to conſult them at preſent, or perhaps take them along with them by way of oracle. No ſooner is the hint dropped than the advice is followed.

1. The five men, who knew the avenues to the chapel, are ſent to ſteal the images, ephod, and teraphim, whilſt the prieſt in the gate is held in converſe with the men of war. Strange that they could have dependance upon gods ſo little able to defend themſelves! and ſtranger ſtill, to hope that ſtolen gods ſhould bring a bleſſing with them! How blind and ſtupid is the ſinner!

2. The prieſt, ſurprized at ſeeing them return with his treaſure, expoſtulates with them againſt the theft; but his complaints are eaſily ſilenced; no ſooner do they propoſe to him to go along with them, and ſet in his view better wages and greater preferment, than he very readily conſents to follow his gods, and leave a private cure for a ſee, little concerning himſelf about the charge, or the infamous means of his advancement. Accordingly now the Danites think themſelves furniſhed, and with their prieſt and gods in the midſt of them, march on confidently. Note, (1.) When a prieſt's heart is more glad of his preferment, than concerned about the weight of his office, it is a ſure ſign he ſerves an idol god. (2.) When a man chuſes the miniſtry for the ſalary, not the ſouls, it cannot be but that he muſt ſcandalize his profeſſion.

3. Micah no ſooner found his gods and his prieſt thus ſtolen away, than collecting his neighbours, who reſorted to his idols with him, he purſues the Danites, and in the greateſt anguiſh of heart complains of his irreparable loſs; they, deaf to his cries, give him a ſurly anſwer, and bid him take care of himſelf, leaſt his ill-judged importunity ſhould provoke them to murder him: frightned with the menace, Micah returns; not, it is to be feared, to renounce his idolatry, but to mourn over his idols. Note, (1.) They are ſtill idolaters, who, under afflictive providences, refuſe to be comforted, as if to be deprived of creature-comforts was to loſe their all. (2.) If Micah appeared ſo diſtreſſed for his idols, with how much greater cauſe ſhould the ſoul, from whom God hath withdrawn himſelf, lament and mourn after him. (3.) Where power is with oppreſſors, to complain of injuſtice is only to meddle to our harm. (4.) They who dare commit theft will hardly ſcruple, if needful to ſecure their ill-gotten wealth, to commit murder.

27. And they took the things which Micah had made, and the prieſt which he had, and came unto Laiſh, unto a people that were at quiet, and ſecure; and they ſmote them with the edge of the ſword, and burnt the city with fire. 28. And there was no deliverer, becauſe it was far from Zidon, and they had no buſineſs with any man; and it was in the valley that lieth by Beth-rehob: and they built a city and dwelt therein. 29. And they called the name of the city [n] Dan, after the name of Dan their father, who was born unto Iſrael: howbeit, the name of the city was Laiſh at the firſt. 30. ¶ And the children of Dan † ſet up the graven image: and Jonathan the ſon of Gerſhom, the ſon of Manaſſeh, he and his ſons were prieſts to the tribe of Dan, [o] until the day of the captivity of the land. 31. And they ſet them up Micah's graven image, which he made, [p] all the time that the houſe of God was in Shiloh.

v. 27—31. Proceeding on their expedition they arrive at Laiſh, where, according to the report of the ſpies, the people were in perfect ſecurity; but when ſinners cry, Peace, peace, then cometh the ſword.

1. They ſmote them without any reſiſtance, put the people to the ſword, and burnt the city, which they afterwards rebuilt, and called it Dan, to preſerve their connection with their brethren, leaſt, by their diſtance from them, they might afterwards be diſowned.

2. They ſet up Micah's idols there, probably imputing their ſucceſs to their preſence; and the Levite, whoſe name was Jonathan, the ſon of Gerſhom, the ſon of Manaſſeh, or Moſes, as ſome read it, he and his ſons were prieſts there, until the ark was taken by the Philiſtines, in the time of Eli. And though this idol-worſhip ſeems to be ſuppreſſed during the days of Samuel, David and Solomon, yet enough of the old leaven remained to make Jeroboam's calves welcome. Note, (1.) Proſperity in an evil way encourages the heart to perſevere in it. (2.) If pious parents could look out of their graves upon their degenerate children, it would ſhock and grieve them. (3.) When bad habits are long indulged, it is very hard to eradicate them; and if, for a ſeaſon, they are reſtrained, yet relapſes are greatly to be feared.

CHAP. XIX.

tribe of Benjamin, who eſpouſed their cauſe. We have, (1.) The elopement of a Levite's concubine, ver. 1, 2. (2.) The journey he took to fetch her home, ver. 3. (3.) Her father's kind entertainment of him, ver. 4—9. (4.) The neglect that he met with from the men of Gibeah, ver. 10—15. (5.) His being kindly entertained by an Ephraimite, ver. 16—21. 1. AND it came to paſs in thoſe days, when there was [a] no king in Iſrael, that there was a certain Levite ſojourning on the ſide of mount Ephraim, who took to him † a concubine out of Beth-lehem-judah. 2. And [b] his concubine played the whore againſt him, and went away from him unto her father's houſe to Beth-lehem-judah, and was there four whole months. 3. And her huſband aroſe and went after her to ſpeak ‡ friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his ſervant with him, and a couple of aſſes: and ſhe brought him unto her father's houſe, and when the father of the damſel ſaw him, he rejoiced to meet him. 4. And his father-in-law, the damſel's father, retained him, and he abode with him three days: ſo they did eat and drink, and lodged there. 5. And it came to paſs on the fourth day, when they aroſe early in the morning, that he roſe up to depart: and the damſel's father ſaid unto his ſon-in-law, ‖ Comfort thine heart with a morſel of bread, and afterward go your way. 6. And they ſat down and did eat and drink both of them together: for the damſel's father had ſaid unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart § be merry. 7. And when the man roſe up to depart, his father-in-law urged him: therefore he lodged there again. 8. And he aroſe early in the morning on the fifth day to depart: and the damſel's father ſaid, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried † until afternoon, and they did eat both of them. 9. And when the man roſe up to depart, he and his concubine, and his ſervant; his father-in-law, the damſel's father, ſaid unto him, Behold, now the day draweth towards evening, I pray you tarry all night: behold, the day groweth to an end, lodge here, that thine heart may be merry: and to-morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayſt go home. 10. But the man would not tarry that night, but he aroſe up and departed, and came over-againſt [c] Jebus, (which is Jeruſalem) and there were with him two aſſes ſaddled, his concubine alſo was with him. 11. And when they were by Jebus, the day was far ſpent, and the ſervant ſaid unto his maſter, Come, I pray thee, and let us turn in unto this city of the Jebuſites, and lodge in it. 12. And his maſter ſaid unto him, We will not turn aſide hither into the city of a ſtranger, that is not of the children of Iſrael: we will paſs over to [d] Gibeah. 13. And he ſaid unto his ſervant, Come, and let us draw near to one of theſe places to lodge all night, in Gibeah, or in Ramah. 14. And they paſſed on, and went their way, and the ſun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah, which belongeth to Benjamin. 15. And they turned aſide thither to go in and to lodge in Gibeah: and when he went in, he ſat him down in a ſtreet of the city: for there was no man that ‡ took them into his houſe to lodging.

v. 1—15. The events of the following chapters are proofs how great a miſery it is to any people to be without good government. We have here,

1. The journey of a Levite of mount Ephraim, after his wife or concubine, whom he had taken out of Beth-lehem-judah. She had proved falſe to him, left his houſe, and returned to her father; but ſtill retaining his affection for her, and hearing, it ſeems, of her ſorrow for her ill-conduct, he went to ſpeak comfortably to her, and fetch her home again. Note, (1.) Unfaithfulneſs to marriage vows, makes a breach that, of all others, can moſt difficultly be healed. (2.) Where there is real remorſe in the offender, let not the injured be implacable. (3.) Though parents ſhould be very jealous how they receive thoſe into their houſes who have deſerted their huſbands, yet it is highly dangerous, by ſeverity, to render thoſe deſperate, who, by milder methods may be reclaimed.

2. The reception he met with from the father was very affectionate. The reconciliation was matter of great joy to him, he makes a three days entertainment to welcome his ſon, and, when he was preparing to depart on the fourth, importunes him to dine firſt; and, as it then ſeemed too late to ſet off, prevails with him to ſtay the night. The next day he uſed the ſame importunity, but though he prevailed on his ſon-in-law to dine with him, his uneaſineſs would not permit a longer abſence from home, and in the evening he ſet out on his journey, and took his concubine along with him. Note, (1.) Generous hoſpitality to our friends and relations is very becoming, and a proof of our regard to them. (2.) Though we may yield ſomewhat to the importunity of friends, yet every man hath calls at home, and Levites eſpecially, that will not permit long abſence. (3.) Let kind friends beware of ſelfiſhneſs in their ſollicitations, leaſt their intended kindneſs do us real injury. (4.) They who would have a proſperous journey, ought to take day-light before them.

3. Being reſolved to go, though late, he haſtens onward; but night approaching, his ſervant ſuggeſts to him whether they had not beſt lodge at Jebus, leaſt they ſhould be benighted on the journey; to this his maſter objects, not chuſing to lodge among ſtrangers, when cities of his brethren were near, which they might reach in time. Accordingly they go on for Gibeah, or Ramah; but it growing dark apace, they turn in at Gibeah, as neareſt: and as there was then no public inns, they ſat down in the ſtreet, waiting for ſome invitation, but in that inhoſpitable place, no man was kind enough to offer them a lodging. Note, (1.) It becomes us to be very careful with whom we contract intimacies. (2.) Where we have reaſon to expect the greateſt kindneſs, we ſometimes receive the moſt mortal injuries. (3.) When we lodge at an inn, let us not complain of the accommodation, but thank God we are not compelled to lodge in the ſtreet.

16. ¶ And behold, there came an old man [e] from his work out of the field at even, which was alſo of mount Ephraim; and he ſojourned in Gibeah, but the men of the place were Benjamites. 17. And when he had lift up his eyes, he ſaw a wayfaring man in the ſtreet of the city: and the old man ſaid, Whither goeſt thou? and whence comeſt thou? 18. And he ſaid unto him, We are paſſing from Beth-lehem-judah, toward the ſide of mount Ephraim, from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to the houſe of the LORD, and there is no man that † receiveth me to houſe. 19. Yet there is both ſtraw and provender for our aſſes: and there is bread and wine alſo for me and for thy handmaid, and for the young man which is with thy ſervants: there is no want of any thing. 20. And the old man ſaid, Peace be with thee: howſoever, let all thy wants lie upon me, only lodge not in the ſtreet. 21. So he brought him into his houſe, and [f] gave provender unto the aſſes: and they waſhed their feet, and did eat and drink.

v. 16—21. Though the men of the city were ſo unkind or uncivil, there was one, though a ſojourner, who was of another ſpirit. He was an Ephraimite himſelf, but ſeems to have had ſome poſſeſſions near Gibeah, an old man, who had lived in better days, and conſented not to the wickedneſs of the riſing generation; having ſpent the day induſtriouſly in the field, returning at night he ſees and enquires into this ſtranger's buſineſs, and ready to open his hoſpitable doors, receives him, doubly welcome as a Levite, and his countryman alſo. The Levite wanted nothing but a lodging, having ſufficient proviſion and provender with him; but the good old man, too generous to permit this, entertains him at his table, and takes care of his cattle: this done they, without doubt, began to look upon themſelves as happy in the opportunity of ſpending a comfortable evening together. Note, (1.) A truly charitable heart looks out for, and is happy in an opportunity of doing good. (2.) The company of a miniſter of God is good payment for a hearty welcome. (3.) A good man will not wiſh to be troubleſome to others, when he hath a proviſion of his own. (4.) We are ſometimes rejoicing that our troubles are at an end, when we foreſee not the darker cloud which is gathering.

22. ¶ Now as they were making their hearts merry, behold, the men of the city, certain ſons of † Belial, beſet the houſe round about, and beat at the door, and ſpake to the maſter of the houſe, the old man, ſaying, Bring forth the man that came into thine houſe, that [g] we may know him. 23. And the man, the maſter of the houſe, went out unto them, and ſaid unto them, Nay, my brethren, nay, I pray you, do not ſo wickedly; ſeeing that this man is come into mine houſe, [h] do not this folly. 24. Behold, here is my daughter a maiden, and his concubine, them I will bring out now, and [i] humble ye them, and do with them what ſeemeth good unto you: but unto this man do not ‡ ſo vile a thing.

25. But the men would not hearken to him; ſo the man took his concubine, and brought her forth unto them; and they knew her and abuſed her all the night until the morning: and when the day began to ſpring, they let her go. 26. Then came the woman in the dawning of the day, and ‖ fell down at the door of the man's houſe, where [k] her lord was, till it was light. 27. And her lord roſe up in the morning, and opened the doors of the houſe, and went out to go his way: and behold, the woman his concubine was fallen down at the door of the houſe, and her hands were upon the threſhold. 28. And he ſaid unto her, Up, and let us be going: but none anſwered. Then the man took her up upon an aſs, and the man roſe up, and gat him unto his place. 29. ¶ And when he was come into his houſe, he took a knife, and laid hold on his concubine, and divided her, § together with her bones, into twelve pieces, and ſent her into all the coaſts of Iſrael. 30. And it was ſo, that all that ſaw it ſaid, there was no ſuch deed done nor ſeen, from the day that the children of Iſrael came up out of the land of Egypt, unto this day: [l] conſider of it, take advice, and ſpeak your minds.

v. 22—30. Behold another Lot in another Sodom! We have here,

1. The tumultuous aſſembly of the men of Gibeah. This ſhould have been a city of Levites, but perhaps not being ſufficiently numerous, the Benjamites, in whoſe tribe it lay, yet inhabited it; and a vile ſet of wretches they were, ſons of Belial, who neither feared God nor regarded man, ſet only upon the indulgence of their brutal luſts, and ſticking at nothing to gratify them. In defiance of all laws, human and divine, they beſet the houſe, demand the ſtranger, and dare avow their infamous deſigns upon him. Note, (1.) Continuance in lewdneſs breeds barefaced impudence. (2.) When a ſinner is given up to his own heart's luſts, he eaſily ſinks into the moſt unnatural crimes, which are ſhocking but to mention.

2. The good man of the houſe goes out to expoſtulate with them, pleads the rights of hoſpitality, and the wickedneſs of their demands, nay proffers to bring them (a very ſinful propoſal, which never can be vindicated) his own daughter, and the Levite's concubine, that he might, by a leſſer evil, divert them from a greater; but they are deaf to remonſtrance, and their heart is fully ſet in them to do evil. Note, (1.) Sinners often grow deſperate in wickedneſs, and, like the raging ſea, neither will bear reſtraint nor hear admonition. (2.) We may never commit one evil, to avoid a greater, but chuſe the greateſt ſuffering preferably to the leaſt ſin.

3. The Levite's wife, probably more handſome than the old man's daughter, being thruſt out to them, they ſeize her; and perhaps ſeeing the old man reſolute to gratify them no farther, they make her the object of their brutal luſt. All night they abuſed her, till the dawning day, caſting unwelcome light on ſuch deeds of darkneſs, they left her and retired. Her ſtrength exhauſted, her ſpirit ſunk with grief and ſhame, her body covered with mortal bruiſes, and murdered with this inhuman treatment, ſhe juſt crawls to the door, falls down and dies. Note, (1.) The luſt which had been her ſin, is now, in juſt judgment, made her puniſhment. (2.) They who have ruined the objects of their guilty pleaſure may think lightly of their crimes, but will ſurely meet an avenging God.

4. In the morning the Levite aroſe to go, and ſeeing his wife in this poſture, thinks her aſhamed of what had paſſed, or aſleep on the ground, and therefore bids her ariſe; but he ſoon finds his miſtake, ſhe is dead. Hereupon he quietly took her on his beaſt, glad to eſcape with his own life from ſuch a ſcene of abominations; home he haſtens, inſtead of going to Shiloh, as he propoſed: and as there was no king or general council, from whom he could ſeek redreſs, he takes a method which could not but tend to make every Iſraelite ſhudder with horror; he divided the dead body into twelve parts, and ſent one to each tribe, with an account of what had paſſed, referring it to them to conſider what puniſhment ſuch atrocious wickedneſs deſerved; one part was probably ſent to Benjamin, as well as the other tribes, if perhaps ſome might be found different from their brethren, or elſe two parts were for Manaſſeh, whoſe lot was divided.

5. Struck with indignation and horror at the deed, the whole body of the people, as one man, declare their ſenſe of ſuch an unparalleled crime. A ſolemn aſſembly is reſolved upon, where they might meet to determine the puniſhment of the offenders, and in the mean time the matter is recommended to the weighty conſideration of each man, that when they met in council they might be ready to reſolve upon a proper method of proceeding. Note, (1.) Even where the provocation is great, we do well to proceed with deliberation, leaſt our anger biaſs our reſolutions. (2.) They who would obtain God's bleſſing on the land muſt ſeek to purge iniquity from it, by executing juſtice on the criminals.

CHAP. XX.

A melancholy ſcene does this chapter preſent. We have, (1.) The Levite's cauſe heard in a general convention of the tribes, ver. 1—7. (2.) An unanimous reſolve to avenge his quarrel upon the men of Gibeah, ver. 8—11. (3.) The Benjamites appearing in defence of the criminals, ver. 12—17. (4.) The defeat of Iſrael in the firſt and ſecond day's battle, ver. 18—25. (5.) Their humbling themſelves before God upon that occaſion, ver. 26—28. (6.) The total rout they gave the Benjamites in the third engagement, ver. 29—48.

1. THEN all the children of Iſrael went out, and the congregation was gathered together [a] as one man, [b] from Dan even to Beer-ſheba, with the land of Gilead, unto the LORD in Mizpeh. 2. And the chief of all the people, even of all the tribes of Iſrael, preſented themſelves in the aſſembly of the people of God, four hundred thouſand footmen that drew ſword. 3. (Now [c] the children of Benjamin heard that the children of Iſrael were gone up to Mizpeh.) Then ſaid the children of Iſrael; Tell us, how was this wickedneſs? 4. And † the Levite, the huſband of the woman that was ſlain, anſwered and ſaid, I came into Gibeah that belongeth to Benjamin, I and my concubine to lodge. 5. And the men of Gibeah roſe againſt me, and beſet the houſe round about upon me by night, and thought to have ſlain me: and my concubine have they forced, that ſhe is dead. 6. And I took my concubine and cut her in pieces, and ſent her throughout all the country of the inheritance of Iſrael: for [d] they have committed lewdneſs and folly in Iſrael. 7. Behold, [e] ye are all children of Iſrael, give here your advice and counſel. 8. ¶ And all the people aroſe as one man, ſaying, [f] We will not any of us go to his tent, neither will we any of us turn into his houſe. 9. But now, this ſhall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah, we will go up by lot againſt it: 10. And we will take ten men of an hundred, throughout all the tribes of Iſrael, and an hundred of a thouſand, and a thouſand out of ten thouſand, to fetch victual for the people; that they may do, when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Iſrael. 11. So all the men of Iſrael were gathered againſt the city, ‡ knit together as one man.

v. 1—11. Fired with holy zeal againſt ſuch a crying enormity, the whole congregation aſſembles in Mizpeh, near Shiloh, that they may not only deliberate but conſult God's mind and will in the matter. Four hundred thouſand men, under their captains of hundreds and thouſands, furniſhed with weapons of war, are ready to put in force the ſentence which ſhall be reſolved upon. The children of Benjamin alone, though acquainted with the aſſembling of Iſrael, and the cauſe of it, refuſe to come up, and determine to protect the delinquents, becoming thereby parties in the crime, ex poſt facto, by their vindication of it.

1. A ſolemn examination and depoſition is taken from the Levite, and probably from the old man and his ſervant, who were preſent, v. 3. the circumſtances of the ſtory are related and confirmed. The Levite modeſtly interprets their deſign to have ſlain him, as the leſſer crime of the two, and to which he had ſooner ſubmitted than to their unnatural luſt, and in fact they had ſlain his concubine. Such lewdneſs and folly, eſpecially in Iſrael, deſerved, no doubt, a ſevere ſcourge; he refers himſelf for this to their wiſe and vigorous reſolutions, as children of Iſrael, who would wipe off ſuch a defiling ſtain from among them. Note, (1.) Lewdneſs in Iſrael is doubly criminal. (2.) Before we proceed to judgment, the evidence ſhould be clear and diſtinct. (3.) They who are God's people will at leaſt, by their conduct, teſtify their abhorrence of the iniquity which may be found among them, and cut off from their communion that wicked perſon.

2. The fact being undoubted, their reſolution is unanimous. They ſwear never to ſeparate till they have obtained ſatisfaction; and in order that the army may be ſupplied in their encampment before Gibeah, forty thouſand men are deputed to provide forage and proviſions. Note, (1.) When there is union in the cabinet, it promiſes ſucceſs in the field. (2.) 'Tis good to be zealouſly affected in the cauſe of God, and without delay carry our purpoſes into action.

12. ¶ And the tribes of Iſrael [g] ſent men through all the tribe of Benjamin, ſaying, What wickedneſs is this that is done among you? 13. Now therefore deliver us the men, [h] the children of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and put away evil from Iſrael. But the children of Benjamin would [i] not hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Iſrael: 14. But the children of Benjamin gathered themſelves together out of the cities, unto Gibeah, to go out to battle againſt the children of Iſrael. 15. And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time out of the cities, twenty and ſix thouſand men that drew ſword, beſide the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbred ſeven hundred choſen men. 16. Among all this people, there were ſeven hundred choſen men † left-handed, every one could ſling ſtones at an hair-breadth, and not miſs. 17. And the men of Iſrael, beſide Benjamin, were numbred four hundred thouſand men that drew ſword; all theſe were men of war.

v. 12—17. As wiſe men, who not for revenge but for the glory of God, deſired the execution of the criminals,

1. They ſend to their brethren the tribe of Benjamin, to admoniſh them of the great wickedneſs perpetrated among them, and to demand the delivery of the offenders, to put them to death. Note, (1.) We are bound to follow peace with all men, and muſt with reluctance have recourſe to the redreſs of the law or the ſword. (2.) If our traitor-ſins are with-held, there can be no hopes of peace with God. (3.) It is cruelty to the community to ſpare thoſe who, for atrocious crimes, are guilty of death.

2. The men of Benjamin reject their reaſonable demand, either thinking it beneath them to ſubmit, or looking upon it as ungenerous to deſert their brethren and companions in ſin. They are indeed unequal in numbers, and more unequal in the badneſs of their cauſe; yet ſuch confidence have they in the courage and dexterity of their ſlingers, that they dare meet their brethren in the field. Note, (1.) They who countenance others in their ſins, are juſtly reckoned alike criminal with them. (2.) Proud ſelf-dependance is the ruin of the ſinner's ſoul. (3.) They who draw the ſword in a bad cauſe, may expect to ſee it bathed in their own blood.

18. ¶ And the children of Iſrael aroſe, and went up to the houſe of God, and [k] aſked counſel of God, and ſaid, Which of us ſhall go up [l] firſt to the battle againſt the children of Benjamin? And the LORD ſaid, Judah ſhall go up firſt. 19. And the children of Iſrael roſe up in the morning, and encamped againſt Gibeah. 20. And the men of Iſrael went out to battle againſt Benjamin, and the men of Iſrael put themſelves in aray to fight againſt them at Gibeah. 21. And the children of Benjamin came forth out of Gibeah, and [m] deſtroyed down to the ground of the Iſraelites that day, twenty and two thouſand men. 22. And the people, the men of Iſrael, encouraged themſelves, and ſet their battle again in aray, in the place where they put themſelves in aray the firſt day. 23. (And the children of Iſrael went up and wept before the LORD until even, and aſked counſel of the LORD, ſaying, Shall I go up again to battle againſt the children of Benjamin my brother? and the LORD ſaid, Go up againſt him). 24. And the children of Iſrael came near againſt the children of Benjamin the ſecond day. 25. And Benjamin went forth againſt them out of Gibeah the ſecond day, and [n] deſtroyed down to the ground of the children of Iſrael again, eighteen thouſand men; all theſe drew the ſword.

v. 18—25. Peace being rejected, the ſword is drawn. But,

1. The people of Iſrael wait upon God, to know who ſhould firſt go up to the battle, and have the poſt of honour. Judah is appointed to it. Confiding in the juſtneſs of their cauſe, and perhaps proud of their numbers, they made no doubt of their ſucceſs: but the event by no means anſwers their expectations; they are routed with the loſs of twenty-thouſand men. Note, The race is not always to the ſwift, nor the battle to the ſtrong.

2. Alarmed at this diſaſter, a deputation from the camp haſtes to Shiloh in tears, as ſenſible they had ſins enough to lament, which might juſtly provoke God; they beg him to direct them, whether they ſhould go up again, or retire from their brother Benjamin. On being again ordered to go up, though they aſked not concerning the ſucceſs, nor was it promiſed, they ſet once more the battle in array, and to their increaſing confuſion their numerous hoſts are again diſcomfited, and eighteen thouſand men put to the ſword. What could they think of this ſtrange event, when in ſo good a cauſe, and under God's direction, they met with ſo ſhameful a defeat? This might be, (1.) To humble them, as having truſted too much to the arm of fleſh. (2.) To puniſh them for the idolatry which had began with impunity to ſpread among them? If they are ſo zealous to revenge corporal lewdneſs, God will be jealous for ſpiritual adultery. We may learn alſo hence, (1.) That the beſt of cauſes, even of God and religion, may fall under triumphant wickedneſs. (2.) Not to judge of right and wrong by outward proſperity and ſucceſs. (3.) To wait patiently for the great day, when the myſteries of providence ſhall be explained, and God will appear clear in his ſayings, and juſt in his judgments.

26. ¶ Then all the children of Iſrael, and all the people went up, and came unto the houſe of God, and wept, and ſat there before the LORD, and [o] faſted that day until even, and offered burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings before the LORD. 27. And the children of Iſrael enquired of the LORD, (for the ark of the covenant of God was there in thoſe days. 28. And [p] Phinehas the ſon of Eleazar, the ſon of Aaron, [q] ſtood before it in thoſe days) ſaying, Shall I yet again go out to battle againſt the children of Benjamin my brother, or ſhall I ceaſe? And the LORD ſaid, Go up, for to-morrow I will deliver them into thine hand. 29. And [r] Iſrael ſet liers in wait round about Gibeah. 30. And the children of Iſrael went up againſt the children of Benjamin on the third day, and put themſelves in aray againſt Gibeah, as at other times. 31. And the children of Benjamin went out againſt the people, and were drawn away from the city, and they began to ſmite of the people, † and kill as at other times, in the high-ways, of which one goeth up to ‡ the houſe of God, and the other to Gibeah [s] in the field, about thirty men of Iſrael. 32. And the children of Benjamin ſaid, They are ſmitten down before us, as at the firſt. But the children of Iſrael ſaid, Let us flee, and draw them from the city, unto the high-ways. 33. And all the men of Iſrael roſe up out of their place, and put themſelves in aray at Baal-tamar: and the liers in wait of Iſrael came forth out of their places, even out of the meadows of Gibeah. 34. And there came againſt Gibeah ten thouſand choſen men out of all Iſrael, and the battle was ſore: but [t] they knew not that evil was near them. 35. And the LORD ſmote Benjamin before Iſrael: and the children of Iſrael deſtroyed of the Benjamites that day, twenty and five thouſand and an hundred men, all theſe drew the ſword. 36. So the children of Benjamin ſaw that they were ſmitten: for the men of Iſrael gave place to the Benjamites, becauſe they truſted unto the liers in wait which they had ſet beſide Gibeah. 37. And the liers in wait haſted, and ruſhed upon Gibeah, and the liers in wait ‖ drew themſelves along, and ſmote all the city with the edge of the ſword. 38. Now there was an appointed ſign between the men of Iſrael and the liers in wait, that they ſhould make a great flame with ſmoke to riſe up out of the city. 39. And when the men of Iſrael retired in the battle, Benjamin began to ſmite and kill of the men of Iſrael about thirty perſons; for they ſaid, § Surely they are ſmitten down before us, as in the firſt battle. 40. But when the † flame began to riſe up out of the city, with a pillar of ſmoke, the Benjamites looked behind them, and behold, the flame of the city aſcended up to heaven. 41. And when the men of Iſrael turned again, the men of Benjamin were amazed: for they ſaw that evil was come upon them. 42. Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Iſrael, unto the way of the wilderneſs, but the battle overtook them: and them which came out of the cities, they deſtroyed in the midſt of them. 43. Thus they incloſed the Benjamites round about, and chaſed them, and trode them down with eaſe over againſt Gibeah toward the ſun-riſing. 44. And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thouſand men; all theſe were men of valour. 45. And they turned and fled toward the wilderneſs, unto [u] the rock of Rimmon: and they gleaned of them in the high-ways, five thouſand men, and purſued hard after them unto Gidom, and ſlew two thouſand men of them. 46. So that all which fell that day of Benjamin, were twenty and five thouſand men that drew the ſword; all theſe were men of valour. 47. But

v. 26—48. Confounded at theſe repeated ſtrokes, the whole congregation aſſemble before the Lord at Shiloh.

1. In deep affliction they compaſs God's altar, humbling their ſouls under the ſenſe of conſcious guilt, and crying for pardon and help from him, who alone can ſave either body or ſoul from ruin. They offer ſacrifices of atonement, and peace-offerings; and having now rejected every vain confidence, and enquired of God, not only whether they ſhould go up, but whether they ſhould ſucceed, God gives them aſſurance of victory, and bids them draw near to the battle. Note, (1.) When in true humiliation the ſoul is brought low before God, the end of its ſufferings is near. (2.) It is by the one great ſacrifice alone, the ſinner can hope for the favour and preſence of God.

2. On divine warrant they now draw near to the battle, and with a ſucceſs equal to their moſt ſanguine wiſhes. Having contrived an ambuſh near Gibeah, as at Ai, the army advances; but when the Benjamites come forth, they retire precipitately. The Benjamites, concluding they were ſmitten as before, eagerly purſue, and about thirty men are ſlain in the retreat. But now the men of Gibeah and Benjamin being at a diſtance, the ambuſh ariſes, and the defenceleſs city is ſeized and burnt. At the ſight of the aſcending ſmoke, the ſignal given, the men of Iſrael face about at Baal-tamar; the battle is renewed; the Benjamites look back, and too late diſcover the evil which had overtaken them. They are attacked in front and rear at once, routed with eaſe, and, hemmed in as they are, flight is vain. Eighteen thouſand are ſlain on the ſpot, five thouſand in the purſuit, and two thouſand at Gidom, a place they had fled to, or where they made a ſtand. Theſe, with perhaps a hundred left to guard the city, amount to twenty-five thouſand one hundred; and leſs than one thouſand could ſcarce have fallen in the former battles. Thus the very name of Benjamin had been blotted out, if ſix hundred men had not eſcaped to the rock Rimmon; for in their heat, or for their oath ſake in Mizpeh, they fell upon the cities, burnt them, ſlew men, women, and children, and every living creature, as they had done by the devoted Canaanites, and left the land ſwept as with the beſom of deſtruction. Note, (1.) What deſolations ſin makes on the earth! (2.) It is vain to fight where God is our foe, or to fly when he purſues. (3.) When God awakes to judgment in the laſt day, not a ſinner ſhall eſcape; no rock can then hide, no mountain cover him.

CHAP. XXI.

Here is, 1. The lamentation which Iſrael made for Benjamin, ver. 1—4, 6, 15. 2. The men of Jabeſh-gilead are ſlain, for not joining againſt Benjamin, and their daughters given to the ſix hundred men, that a tribe might not periſh, ver. 5, 7—14. 3. Theſe not ſufficing, the daughters of Shiloh are ſeized, ver. 16—25.

1. NOW [a] the men of Iſrael had ſworn in Mizpeh, ſaying, There ſhall not any of us give his daughter unto Benjamin to wife. 2. And [b] the people came to the houſe of God, and abode there till even before God, and lift up their voices, and wept ſore. 3. And ſaid, O LORD God of Iſrael, [c] why is this come to paſs in Iſrael, that there ſhould be to-day one tribe lacking in Iſrael? 4. And it came to paſs on the morrow, that the people roſe early, and [d] built there an altar, and offered burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings. 5. And the children of Iſrael ſaid, Who is there among all the tribes of Iſrael, that came not up with the congregation unto the LORD? for they had made a great oath concerning him that came not up to the LORD to Mizpeh, ſaying, [e] He ſhall ſurely be put to death. 6. And the children of Iſrael repented them for Benjamin their brother, and ſaid, There is one tribe cut off from Iſrael this day: 7. How ſhall we do for wives for them that remain, ſeeing we have ſworn by the LORD, that we will not give them of our daughters to wives? 8. ¶ And they ſaid, What one is there of the tribes of Iſrael, that came not up to Mizpeh to the LORD? And behold, there came none to the camp from Jabeſh-gilead to the aſſembly. 9. For the people were numbered, and behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabeſh-gilead there. 10. And the congregation ſent thither twelve thouſand † men of the valianteſt, and commanded them, ſaying, Go, and ſmite the inhabitants of Jabeſh-gilead with the edge of the ſword, with the women and the children. 11. And this is the thing that ye ſhall do, [f] ye ſhall utterly deſtroy every male, and every woman that † hath lien by man. 12. And they found among the inhabitants of Jabeſh-gilead, four hundred ‡ young virgins that had known no man by lying with any male: and they brought them unto the camp to Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan. 13. And the whole congregation ſent ſome to ſpeak to the children of Benjamin that were in [g] the rock Rimmon, and to † call peaceably unto them. 14. And Benjamin came again at that time; and they gave them wives which they had ſaved alive of the women of Jabeſh-gilead: and yet ſo they ‡ ſufficed them not. 15. And the people repented them for Benjamin, becauſe that the LORD had made a breach in the tribes of Iſrael.

v. 1—15. Their zeal for the deſtruction of Benjamin was ſcarce ſo great, as their anguiſh is when their warmth is now ſubſided. What increaſes their grief is, at Mizpeh they bound themſelves by a ſolemn execration, not only to deſtroy every city who ſhould neglect their ſummons, but alſo never to give their daughters in marriage to a Benjamite: ſo that having ſlain all the women, and by their oath being unable to give them others, whilſt it was forbidden them to marry with the nations around them, though the ſix hundred men have eſcaped, the tribe is in danger of being extinct. Note, (1.) True zeal may be carried too far. (2.) When our ſpirits are exaſperated, we too often ſpeak and do, what in cooler moments we wiſh unſaid and undone. On this mournful occaſion,

1. They wept before God in bitterneſs of ſoul. More affected with Benjamin's deſtruction, than pleaſed with their own victory, they ſpread their complaints before the ſanctuary, and offer up their ſacrifices in ſuch abundance, that they built a temporary altar for that ſervice. Note, (1.) Our diſtreſſes ſhould drive us to God. (2.) Under all our griefs the blood of atonement will afford us relief. (3.) They who pour out their complaints to the God of all grace, will uſually find a way to extricate themſelves from their difficulties.

2. The method they took to prevent the ruin of the tribe. On reviewing the troops, the men of Jabeſh-gilead are found abſent. As bound by their oath, they immediately detach twelve thouſand of their moſt valiant troops, to ſmite men, women, and children, except ſuch as had not known man: theſe are to be reſerved for their diſtreſſed brethren. Having performed this ſervice in the utter ruin of Jabeſh-gilead, they returned with four hundred young virgins to the camp in Shiloh. Meſſengers had now been diſpatched to the men who remained in the rock Rimmon: they, glad to embrace the offer of peace, come down to their brethren, and thankfully receive the wives provided for them, though there yet remained a great deficiency. Note, (1.) The quarrels of brethren are uſually bitter, and ſeldom end thus in bands of firmer friendſhip. (2.) They who make raſh vows, have only themſelves to blame for the difficulties in which they are involved.

16. ¶ Then the elders of the congregation ſaid, How ſhall we do for wives for them that remain, ſeeing the women are deſtroyed out of Benjamin? 17. And they ſaid, There muſt be an inheritance for them that be eſcaped of Benjamin, that a tribe be not deſtroyed out of Iſrael. 18. Howbeit, we may not give them wives of our daughters: for [h] the children of Iſrael have ſworn, ſaying, Curſed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin. 19. Then they ſaid, Behold, [i] there is a feaſt of the LORD in Shiloh † yearly in a place which is on the north ſide of Beth-el, on the eaſt ſide of the high-way that goeth up from Beth-el to Shechem, and on the ſouth of Lebonah. 20. Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, ſaying, Go, and lie in wait in the vineyards: 21. And ſee, and behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out to [k] dance in dances, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin. 22. And it ſhall be when their fathers, or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will ſay unto them, † Be favourable unto them for our ſakes: becauſe we reſerved not to each man his wife in the war: for ye did not give unto them at this time, that you ſhould be guilty. 23. And the children of Benjamin did ſo, and took them wives according to their number, ber, of them that danced, whom they caught ; and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and [l] repaired the cities, and dwelt in them. 24. And the children of Iſrael departed thence at that time, every man to his tribe, and to his family, and they went out from thence every man to his inheritance. 25. In thoſe days there was [m] no king in Iſrael : [n] every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

v. 16—25. We have here the expedient uſed to provide wives for the remaining two hundred men of Benjamin, without violation of their oaths. A bad ſhift 'tis true, but better than none.

1. At one of the annual feaſts, probably the feaſt of tabernacles, the daughters of Shiloh uſe to meet in a place at ſome diſtance from the city, to rejoice before the Lord, as David afterwards did, with ſacred muſic and dancing. It was not a mixed company, or lewd aſſembly : all men were excluded, which made the following ſcheme more eaſily put in execution. Note, They who plead ſcripture to countenance the modern mixed aſſemblies, neither conſider the manner nor the end of the precedents they quote.

2. The elders adviſe the two hundred men to lie in wait near the place where this ſolemnity was kept, and, when the virgins came thither, to ruſh in, and take each a wife, and retire ; promiſing to be their advocates with the enraged fathers of the damſels, whoſe oath was not broken, becauſe they were forcibly taken ; and who need not think their daughters ill diſpoſed of, when among theſe few ſurvivors the whole inheritance of Benjamin now muſt be divided. Note, (1.) One raſh ſtep draws on a train of bad conſequences. Had they been more conſiderate in their vow, they had not been reduced to ſuch a diſagreeable expedient. (2.) Though a ſtolen match is both ſinful before God, and unjuſt towards man, parents muſt not be implacable in their reſentments, but receive their children into favour again.

Before Chriſt 1426.

3. The men of Benjamin followed the advice, and ſucceeded ; and thus the ſurvivors of the tribe are again ſettled, and in a way to repair its deſolations. The children of Iſrael diſband ; every man returns to his inheritance ; and it is again repeated, that there was no king in Iſrael, as the cauſe of all the evil and confuſions related in the foregoing chapters. Note, Next to a good miniſtry, we have reaſon to eſteem magiſtracy among the chief of earthly bleſſings ; and if we know our own mercies, we have much reaſon to be thankful, that there is not only a king in England, but ſuch a king.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR; OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT Upon the BOOK of RUTH.

The Title of this Book is Ruth, ſo called; not becauſe compoſed by her, but becauſe ſhe is the ſubject of it. The writer is generally thought to be Samuel. It contains the providential hiſtory of one family, and ſhews how piety, patience in afflictions, humility, and induſtry, are often rewarded here below; but the principal cauſe for which it ſeems recorded, is, becauſe from Ruth, the chief character in the ſtory, David the great King, and Chriſt the glorious Saviour, afterwards ſprung. His deſcent from a Jew and Gentile, ſhews him deſigned to be the Saviour of both: the converſion of Ruth may be conſidered as an emblem and pledge of the Gentile church. The ſcene is laid in Bethlehem, where Jeſus was born.

CHAP. I.

Before Chriſt 1376.

In this chapter we have Naomi, 1. forced by famine to remove into the land of Moab, ver. 1, 2. 2. Bewailing the death of her huſband and her two ſons, ver. 3—5. 3. Returning in poverty to her own country, ver. 6—13. 4. Her daughters accompany her on her journey: one at her intreaty returns back, the other reſolves to abide with her, ver. 14—15. 5. The notice taken of her, and her relation of her mournful circumſtances, ver. 19—22.

1. NOW it came to paſs in the days when the judges † ruled, that there was [a] a famine in the land: and [b] a certain man of Beth-lehem-judah went to ſojourn in the country of Moab, he and his wife, and his two ſons. 2. And the name of the man was ‡ Elimelech, and the name of his wife ‖ Naomi, and the name of his two ſons, § Mahlon and † Chilion, Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-judah: and they came into the country of Moab, and continued there. 3. And Elimelech Naomi's huſband died, and ſhe was left, and her two ſons. 4. And [c] they took them wives of the women of Moab: the name of the one was Orpah, and the name of the other Ruth: and [d] they dwelled there about ten years. 5. And Mahlon and Chilion died alſo, both of them: and [e] the woman was left of her two ſons and her huſband.

v. 1—5. The date of this hiſtory is uncertain. Moſt probably it happened under the adminiſtration of Ehud or Gideon.

1. We have an account of the removal of the family of a man of Bethlehem-Judah, into the land of Moab, to ſojourn, on account of a famine in Canaan. His name was Elimelech, My God is King; his wife's name Naomi, ſweet or pleaſant, and his ſons Mahlon and Chilion, weakneſs and conſumption, ſo called, probably from their bodily habit. Note, (1.) God's enemies have often plenty, when God's Iſrael is in diſtreſs and want. (2.) A diligent care to provide for the wants of our families, is highly neceſſary and commendable.

2. Elimelech died ſoon, and his two ſons, now introduced into a Moabite acquaintance, and deſtitute of their father's advice and authority, take them wives of the daughters of the land. Note, (1.) It is a great loſs to be deprived of a pious parent. (2.) An unequal match with a Moabitiſh woman, is for a true Iſraelite a dangerous ſnare.

Before Chriſt 1376.

3. They lived about ten years, but were childleſs, and then Naomi had the double affliction of parting with both ſoon after each other. As before a diſconſolate widow, now her griefs are renewed in all their bitterneſs, bereft of children, deſolate, and deſtitute. Note, (1.) When death ſtrikes in a family, it is to warn the ſurvivors, that he is ready to ſmite again. (2) How often do we find our death in the place where we hope to prolong our lives? (3.) Worldly comforts and croſſes are nearer than we ſuſpect: whilſt we are rejoicing in the ſettlement of our children, the pleaſing proſpect vaniſhes in an inſtant, and death lays all our hopes in the grave.

6. ¶ Then ſhe aroſe with her daughters in law, that ſhe might return from the country of Moab: for ſhe had heard in the country of Moab, how that [f] the LORD had viſited his people, in giving them bread. 7. Wherefore ſhe went forth out of the place where ſhe was, and [g] her two daughters in law with her: and they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah. 8. And Naomi ſaid unto her two daughters in law, Go, return each to her mother's houſe: [h] the LORD deal kindly with you, as [i] ye have dealt with the dead, and with me. 9. The LORD grant you that you may find reſt, each of you in the houſe of her huſband. Then [k] ſhe kiſſed them: and they lift up their voice, and wept. 10. And they ſaid unto her, Surely [l] we will return with thee unto thy people. 11. And Naomi ſaid, Turn again, my daughters: why will ye go with me? are there yet any more ſons in my womb, that they may be your huſbands? 12. Turn again, my daughters, go

And they lift up their voice, and wept again: and [n] Orpah kiſſed her mother-in-law, but [o] Ruth clave unto her. 15. And ſhe ſaid, Behold, thy ſiſter-in-law is gone back unto her people, and unto her gods: [p] return thou after thy ſiſter-in-law. 16. And Ruth ſaid, † Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goeſt, I will go: and where thou lodgeſt, I will lodge: thy people ſhall be my people, and [q] thy God my God: 17. v. 6—18. Naomi, having heard that plenty was again reſtored to Iſrael,

1. Reſolves to return to her own country. Moab was now a land of ſorrow to her; every object around her renewed the bitter remembrance of her loſſes, and no comforter near, who, with diſcourſe of holy reſignation to Iſrael's God, could alleviate her griefs. Perhaps too, conſcience might now remonſtrate, that ſhe was out of the way of duty, and therefore juſtly ſmitten with the rod of correction. Note, (1.) They who are compelled for a time to dwell among thoſe who are ſtrangers to God, ought to embrace the firſt moment of liberty to return to God's people and ordinances. (2.) Change of place is often a means to aſſiſt in calming the griefs which are exaſperated by the ſight of objects, which remind us of thoſe who are taken from us. (3.) When God afflicts, it is well for us to examine, whether ſomething in us hath not brought his rod upon us. (4.) It is a mercy to have this land of our ſojourning imbittered to us, that we may be more weaned from earth, and have our converſation in heaven.

2. Her daughters accompany her to the borders of Moab, and there Naomi with tender affection intends to diſmiſs them, praying God to give them a comfortable ſettlement, each in the houſe of her huſband, and acknowledging, to their great commendation, the affection they had ſhewn to the living and the dead, as good wives, and dutiful daughters. They kiſs, embrace, then burſt into a flood of tears, the involuntary effuſion of tenderneſs, that cannot bear the heart-breaking ſeparation from thoſe we love. Note, (1.) When friends part in prayer, they may comfortably hope, either in time or eternity, to meet in praiſe. (2.) They who conſcientiouſly diſcharge their relations in life, will have the comfort of it in a parting hour. (3.) The more uncommon it is to meet with a dutiful and affectionate daughter-in-law, the more is it commendable. (4.) Though the parting of tender and affectionate friends is painful, it is a pleaſing pain of which we wiſh not to be inſenſible.

3. Unable to ſupport the thought of parting, they both reſolve to accompany her: but Naomi, fearful leſt they ſhould after repent the haſty reſolution, and to try whether they had any deſire after the worſhip of the God of Iſrael as their motive, ſeeks to diſſuade, and adviſes them to well weigh the matter, before they determined. They could hope for nothing with her, as ſhe was too old now to have children whom they might marry; or, were it poſſible, it were too long for them to wait. Beſides, God's afflicting hand was upon her, her circumſtances diſtreſſed, and no proviſion for them in Bethlehem, which grieved her more for their ſakes than her own; or, as it may be rendered, I have exceedingly more bitterneſs than you; her former croſſes heavier, and her preſent parting more grievous to herſelf than it could be to them. Such a remonſtrance produced a freſh torrent of tears. Orpah, though affectionately attached to Naomi, diſcouraged now by the difficulties, kiſſes her, and returns. Ruth, more determined by the evident tenderneſs of her mother's affection, refuſes to go back, and reſolves to cleave to her. Note, (1.) Haſty reſolutions are eaſily broken. (2.) Tender hearts can better want themſelves, than ſee thoſe whom they love expoſed to it. (3.) They who would follow Chriſt, ought firſt to count the coſt. (4.) Many ſay, I will go with thee, who, on the firſt difficulties, turn back, and walk no more with Jeſus. (5.) The difficulties of the way will bind the faithful ſoul cloſer to the Saviour.

4. To make the laſt eſſay of Ruth's determined purpoſe, Naomi again urges her to return, and pleads her ſiſter's example, who was returned to her people and her gods. But Ruth was fixed, and her choice unalterable. She begs her mother to deſiſt, or be not againſt me, as if ſhe was her enemy in diſſuading her. Though the place be diſtant, and the country unknown, I will go with thee; if thy lodging be a cottage, I ſeek no better covering; thy people ſhall be my people, in their manners, cuſtoms, and religion; and thy God, my God, renouncing every abomination of Moab, and owning Iſrael's God alone; never will I quit thee; on the ſame ſpot our dying eyes ſhall cloſe, and in the ſame grave our kindred duſt ſhall mingle, and make the clods of the valley ſweeter by the union. Such is her purpoſe; and, to prevent farther entreaty, ſhe binds her ſoul by a ſolemn vow, never but by death to part from her. Note, (1.) Nothing will be able to ſeparate that heart from Jeſus which his mighty love conſtrains; no, not death itſelf. (2.) They are truly our enemies, that ſeek to turn us back from God and godlineſs. (3.) When we have given our hearts to God, and choſen our portion among God's poor people, then in life or death we ſhall ſurrender ourſelves up to be diſpoſed of by him, as ſhall pleaſe him, content in every ſtation, and welcoming every croſs.

5. Naomi, ſatisfied now, attempts no more to diſſuade her; happy, no doubt, to hear her daughter's pious choice; and glad, amidſt every diſtreſs, to bring her to the worſhip of Iſrael's God, and to the communion of his people.

19. ¶ So [s] they two went until they came to Beth-lehem. And it came to paſs when they were come to Beth-lehem, that all the city was moved about them, and they ſaid, [t] Is this Naomi? 20. And ſhe ſaid unto them, Call me not Naomi, call me † Mara: for [u] the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me. 21. I went out full, and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, ſeeing [x] the LORD hath teſtified againſt me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me? 22. So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabiteſs her daughter-in-law with her, which [y] returned out of the country of Moab: and they came to Beth-lehem in the beginning of barley-harveſt.

v. 19—22. On now they travelled, and ſweetly, no doubt, beguiled the tedious way, in ſuch diſcourſe as might confirm Ruth's holy purpoſe, and comfort them together, in hope of God's bleſſing upon them. On their arrival at Beth-lehem notice is taken,

1. Of the reception they met with. Collecting together on the rumour of her return, the women, who remembered her former beauty and affluence, and now beheld her wrinkles and poverty, ſome perhaps in pity, ſome in ſcorn and upbraiding, and ſome in ſurprize, ſaid, Is this Naomi? Note, (1.) Age and wrinkles make ſtrange alterations on the faireſt face. It is a poor thing to be vain of what is ſo fading. (2.) They who have any feelings of humanity, and much more thoſe who have the bowels of Chriſt, will ſeek compaſſionately to alleviate the ſorrows of the miſerable. (3.) They who have carried themſelves moſt humble in proſperity, will be moſt regarded in adverſity.

2. Her name reminded her of her former condition; ſhe wiſhes therefore for one more befitting her circumſtances: Call me Mara, bitterneſs. She went out full of earthly comforts, with huſband and children; but now returns a childleſs widow: yet, not murmuring at the afflictive providence, ſhe ſees and acknowledges God's hand, receives the correction, and ſubmits to his will, as holy, juſt, and good. Note, (1.) It is a bleſſed ſign of a ſoul devoted to God, when, in humbling providences, the ſpirit is brought down to the condition. (2.) Though under affliction God permits us to complain, he forbids us to murmur. (3.) When God afflicts us, it is not only no more than we deſerve, but he knows it is what we need; and therefore whom he loveth he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.

3. The harveſt was juſt begun, providence ſo ordering it for the ſake of the events which follow. Note, The moſt minute circumſtances of our lives are directed by an over-ruling wiſdom.

v. 1—3. We have here an account,

1. Of Boaz, whoſe name is famous in the following ſtory. He was a near kinſman of Naomi, an inhabitant of Beth-lehem, a man of great wealth and generoſity too. He had heard of her return, though Naomi, out of modeſty, and unwillingneſs to trouble her rich relations, ſeems not to have made him acquainted with the diſtreſs of her circumſtances. Note, (1.) The worthleſs are importunate and clamorous, while the deſerving are modeſt and ſilent. (2.) Many have rich relations, whom they are little the better for. (3.) It is a ſure mark of a proud unthankful heart, to overlook or diſregard poor relations.

2. Of Ruth, the Moabiteſs, whoſe character ſhines with diſtinguiſhed luſtre under the ſevereſt preſſures of poverty; for ſuch hath God choſen, poor in this world, but rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom: and now that faith is tried, whether ſhe can prefer the land of Iſrael, with all the inconveniences ſhe ſuffers, to the plenty ſhe might have enjoyed in Moab. We hear no mention of the leaſt deſire in her to return: though unuſed probably to ſuch a method of getting her living, her mind is conformed to her circumſtances. She is willing not only to work for her own bread, but deſirous alſo to maintain her aged mother. In order to this ſhe aſks leave to go and glean in any field, where ſhe might, through the maſter's kindneſs, be admitted. Her mother, pleaſed with ſuch an inſtance of filial piety, affectionately lets her go. Note, (1.) None know to what ſtraits they may be reduced. It is good not to be brought up too delicately. (2.) To be content under the preſſures of poverty, is a bleſſed evidence of a faithful heart. (3.) They who know the value of their ſouls, will prefer Chriſt and a cruſt, to all the affluence and glory of the world without him. (4.) They who are poor, need be thankful for the leaſt favour ſhewn them. (5.) Induſtry in young people is highly commendable; never came there any good from an idle hand.

3. She happened to light on Boaz's field, God directing her thither for purpoſes of his own glory. Note, Circumſtances which to us appear utterly fortuitous, proceed under the unalterable decree of God: and from the moſt unexpected incidents, he can bring about the greateſt events.

4. ¶ And [d] behold, Boaz came from Beth-lehem, and ſaid unto the reapers, The LORD be with you: and they anſwered him, The LORD bleſs thee. 5. Then ſaid Boaz unto his ſervant that was [e] ſet over the reapers, Whoſe damſel is this? 6. And the ſervant that was ſet over the reapers, anſwered and ſaid, It is the Moabitiſh damſel, that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab: 7. And ſhe ſaid, [f] I pray you let me glean, and gather after the reapers amongſt the ſheaves: So ſhe came, and [g] hath continued even from the morning until now, that ſhe tarried a little in the houſe. 8. Then ſaid Boaz unto Ruth, Heareſt thou not, my daughter? Go not to glean in another field, neither go from hence, but [h] abide here faſt by my maidens. 9. Let thine eyes be on the field that they do reap, and go thou after them: have I not charged the young men, that [i] they ſhall not touch thee? and when thou art athirſt, [k] go unto the veſſels, and drink of that which the young men have drawn. 10. Then ſhe [l] fell on her face, and bowed herſelf to the ground, and ſaid unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou ſhouldſt [m] take knowledge of me, ſeeing I am a ſtranger? 11. And Boaz anſwered and ſaid unto her, [n] It hath fully been ſhewed me, [o] all that thou haſt done unto thy mother-in-law ſince the death of thine huſband: and how thou [p] haſt left thy father and thy mother, and the land of thy nativity, and art come unto a people which thou kneweſt not heretofore. 12. [q] The LORD recompence thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the LORD God of Iſrael, [r] under whoſe wings thou art come to truſt. 13. Then ſhe ſaid, Let me find favour in thy ſight, my lord, for that thou haſt comforted me, and for that thou haſt ſpoken friendly unto thine handmaid, though [s] I be not like unto one of thine handmaidens. 14. And Boaz ſaid unto her, At meal-time come thou hither, and [t] eat of the bread, and dip thy morſel in the vinegar. And [u] ſhe ſat beſide the reapers: and he reached her parched corn, and ſhe did eat and was ſufficed, and [x] left. 15. And when [y] ſhe was riſen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, ſaying, Let her glean even among the ſheaves, and † reproach her not. 16. And [z] let fall alſo ſome of the handfuls of purpoſe for her, and leave them, that ſhe may glean them, and rebuke her not.

v. 4—16. Boaz was a great man, but not too great to ſuperintend his own buſineſs. The maſter's eye makes quick work. We have him here viſiting his reapers. Obſerve,

1. The mutual ſalutations which paſſed between them; a proof that Boaz was as pious as proſperous, and that his ſervants under his care had partaken of their maſter's bleſſing. Note, (1.) Though a formal "God bleſs you," is often a profanation of the name of God, and a compliment of courſe, a thoughtful and ſerious benediction is the mark of trueſt regard. (2.) It is likely to go well with that family, where the maſter's kindneſs meets with an equal return in the ſervant's hearty regard for him and his concerns.

2. The enquiry Boaz makes concerning a ſtranger whom he obſerved, probably ſitting in the booth erected in the field, and the anſwer given him by the overſeer of the reapers. She was that Moabitiſh damſel, whoſe love for her mother, and regard for God, had brought her to Beth-lehem: ſhe had modeſtly aſked leave to glean, and, during the whole morning, had been induſtriouſly employed, till juſt now that in the heat ſhe had reſted for a moment in the houſe, and was again returned to her labour. Note, They who are entruſted by their maſters, as overſeers, muſt look carefully to their maſter's intereſts, and make a faithful report.

3. Boaz accoſts the poor ſtranger with great kindneſs, calls her daughter, bids her continue in his field during the harveſt, follow his maidens, and keep them company. He gives orders alſo to the young men to ſhew her no rudeneſs, nor give her any moleſtation; invites her to eat and drink with his reapers, and go as one of them to the booth whenever ſhe was thirſty, and at meal-time ſhare their entertainment. He adds the excellent character he had heard of her, as deſerving every token of his regard; prays God to recompence her work of filial piety, and her adherence to the worſhip of Jehovah, under whoſe wing ſhe had taken ſhelter: and then turning to the reapers, bids them purpoſely drop a handful here and there behind them, and let her glean among the ſheaves, and not reproach her for it, as if ſhe took what was not allowed her. Note, (1.) There is a manner of doing a kindneſs, that makes it doubly acceptable. (2.) They deſerve commendation and regard, who, for the ſake of God, leave all behind them. (3.) In the end they will be no looſers. (4.) A generous heart is happy in an occaſion to relieve the wants of the deſerving.

4. Ruth, overcome with ſuch kindneſs, is at a loſs to expreſs her gratitude, bows to the earth before him, in token of deepeſt reſpect, profeſſes her unworthineſs of the favour ſhewn her, v. 10, 13. admires his condeſcenſion, begs the continuance of his regard, and receives his ſpeech as the moſt friendly and reviving cordial. Accordingly, at meal-time ſhe accepts his invitation, and, to make it more welcome, he reaches her the parched corn, and by his own behaviour engages his ſervants to ſhew her every kind civility. Note, (1.) A grateful heart often wants expreſſions to ſpeak its ſenſibility. (2.) A kind look or a good word from a ſuperior, is often very uſeful: ſo cheap a charity who then need grudge. (3.) They who are moſt deſerving will have the loweſt opinion of their own deſerts.

17. So ſhe gleaned in the field [a] until even, and beat out that ſhe had gleaned: and it was about an ephah of barley. 18. ¶ And ſhe took it up, and went into the city: and her mother-in-law ſaw what ſhe had gleaned: and ſhe brought forth, and gave to her that ſhe had reſerved, after ſhe was ſufficed. 19. And her mother-in-law ſaid unto her, Where haſt thou gleaned to-day? and where wroughteſt thou? bleſſed be he that did take knowledge of thee. And ſhe ſhewed her mother-in-law with whom ſhe had wrought, and ſaid, The man's name with whom I wrought to-day is Boaz. 20. And Naomi ſaid unto her daughter-in-law, [b] Bleſſed be he of the LORD, [c] who hath not left off his kindneſs to the living and to the dead. And Naomi ſaid unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, † one of our next kinſmen. 21. And Ruth the Moabiteſs ſaid, He ſaid unto me alſo, Thou ſhalt keep faſt by my young men, until they have ended all my harveſt. 22. And Naomi ſaid unto Ruth, her daughter-in-law, [d] It is good, my daughter, that thou go out with his maidens, that [e] they meet thee not in any other field. 23. [f] So ſhe kept faſt by the maidens of Boaz to glean, [g] unto the end of barley-harveſt, and of wheat-harveſt; and dwelt with her mother-in-law.

v. 17—23. Ruth having refreſhed herſelf at dinner, returns again with diligence to her work, and at even,

1. She beats out and winnows the corn ſhe had gathered, which was between ſix and ſeven gallons of barley, and taking it up, carries it home to her mother. Note, Induſtry and plenty are twin-ſiſters; even the induſtrious poor need never want.

2. On her arrival ſhe ſhews her mother what ſhe had gleaned, gives her of the proviſion which ſhe had left at dinner, v. 14. and, in anſwer to Naomi's queſtion, who was pleaſingly ſurprized at the quantity ſhe had brought home, relates the adventures of the day, and the kind providence which had directed her to the field of Boaz. Note, (1.) A good child will always divide his morſel with his aged parent. (2.) In all our ways we muſt acknowledge God. (3.) When we go out in the way of duty, we may hope to return, and bring a bleſſing along with us.

3. Naomi hereupon bleſſes God for the mercy, and prays for his proſperity, who had ſo kindly treated her daughter. The name of Boaz awakens her remembrance of former kindneſs to her family, and ſhe now mentions what either ſhe had forgotten, or had not told her daughter before, that he was a very near kinſman to them, and by law their Goel redeemer, one of them to whom it belonged to redeem the mortgaged land of the family. This reflection perhaps now firſt ſtruck her mind, and therefore, in hope of farther kindneſs, ſhe bids her daughter accept the kind invitation ſhe had related, and, during the harveſt, follow his reapers, and go no where elſe. Theſe directions Ruth carefully followed, and, when the harveſt was ended, dwelt at home with her mother on the proviſion which her induſtry had collected. Note, (1.) The beſt returns for kindneſs are the prayers of the poor. (2.) Whatever mercies we receive from men, God muſt have the praiſe. (3.) Humility will make us ſilent of our connections, rather than boaſt, as many do, who are poor, the greatneſs of their relations. (4.) A caſual word or hint, dropped undeſignedly, is ſometimes pregnant with ſtrange conſequences. (5.) They who have the bleſſed Jeſus for their redeemer, cannot keep too cloſe to him and his reapers: his paſt favours are the earneſt of greater ſtill in ſtore for them.

1. THEN Naomi her mother-in-law ſaid unto her, My daughter, [a] ſhall I not ſeek reſt for thee, that it may be well with thee? 2. And now [b] is not Boaz of our kindred, with whoſe maidens thou waſt? Behold, he winnoweth barley to-night in the threſhing-floor. 3. Waſh thyſelf therefore, and anoint thee, and put thy raiment upon thee, and get thee down to the floor: but make not thyſelf known unto the man, until he ſhall have done eating and drinking. 4. And it ſhall be when he lieth down, that thou ſhalt [c] mark the place where he ſhall lie, and thou ſhalt go in, and † uncover his feet, and lay thee down; and he will tell thee what thou ſhalt do. 5. v. 1—5. We have here,

1. Naomi's ſollicitude to get her daughter comfortably ſettled, and at reſt in the houſe of her huſband, that ſhe might no longer be expoſed to the difficulties they now ſtruggled under. She informs Ruth, that Boaz's kindred to her, ſhe apprehended, laid him under an obligation to take his brother's widow, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother. Note, (1.) It ſeems ſafeſt and beſt that the younger widows marry, 1 Tim. v. 14. (2.) Parents ſhould ſeek the ſettlement of their children in marriage, as one great part of their duty reſpecting them. (3.) The reſt of the marriage-ſtate conſiſts in union of affection. To have a wandering heart there, is not only to be criminal, but to be wretched.

2. The method Naomi purſued to accompliſh her deſigns. Underſtanding Boaz had a feaſt on winnowing his barley, ſhe thought this a proper time to remind him of his duty, as Ruth's kinſman; for which purpoſe, ſhe bids her waſh and anoint herſelf, put on her beſt garments, and go down in the evening to the floor where they winnowed. There ſhe was to wait till the company was parted, to obſerve where Boaz went to lie down at night, and then at his feet to lay herſelf, which would give her an opportunity to remind Boaz of his relation, as the law ſeems to intimate it was her buſineſs to do, and his anſwer would determine her conduct. This proceeding ſome commentators blame, as unjuſtifiable; whilſt others vindicate, as right. It is true, the experiment to us ſeems dangerous; but as the cuſtoms of nations differ, as her intentions were honourable, and her claim juſt, it might no doubt be very capable of vindication: not to add, that there might be much of divine direction in the caſe; and this ſeems intimated in Naomi's confidence, that he would tell her what ſhe ſhould do. Note, (1.) As water is much eaſier had than paint, ſo is it a much greater recommendation to the perſon. (2.) Dreſs is then becoming, when uſed to engage their affections whom it is our duty to pleaſe. (3.) There may be occaſion given for the moſt unjuſt aſperſions ſometimes, where there is the greateſt purity of intention. (4.) The ſoul that lies down at the feet of Jeſus, will find directions for his comfort and conduct.

6. ¶ And ſhe went down unto the floor, and did according to all that her mother-in-law bad her. 7. And when Boaz had [e] eaten and drunk, and his heart was † merry, he went to lie down at the end of the heap of corn: and ſhe came ſoftly, and uncovered his feet, and laid her down. 8. ¶ And it came to paſs at midnight, that [f] the man was afraid, and turned himſelf: and behold, a woman lay at his feet. 9. ¶ And he ſaid, Who art thou? And ſhe anſwered, I am Ruth thine handmaid: [g] ſpread therefore thy ſkirt over thine handmaid, for thou art [h] a near kinſman. 10. And he ſaid, Bleſſed be thou of the LORD, my daughter: for thou haſt ſhewed more kindneſs [i] in the latter end, than at the beginning, inaſmuch as [k] thou followedſt not young men, whether poor or rich. 11. And now, my daughter, fear not, I will do to thee all that thou requireſt: for all the city of my people doth know, that [l] thou art a virtuous woman. 12. And now it is true, that I am thy near kinſman: howbeit there is a kinſman [m] nearer than I. 13. Tarry this night, and it ſhall be [n] in the morning, that if he will perform unto thee the part of a kinſman, well, let him do the kinſman's part; but if he will not do the part of a kinſman to thee, then [o] will I do the part of a kinſman to thee, as the LORD liveth: lie down until the morning.

v. 6—13. Little did Boaz think among his gueſts he ſhould find one, that, though unlooked for, would prove ſo welcome.

1. He went down to the floor, to have an eye upon his ſervants; when the work was done, he entertained them chearfully, and after ſupper lay down with a merry heart, or a good heart, as it may be rendered, thankful for his mercies, and commending himſelf to the protection of a gracious God. Nor was it thought mean or unuſual in theſe days of ſimplicity, for great men thus to be among their winnowers, or to ſleep in their threſhing-floor, which, though in the open air, was in theſe hot countries more cool and refreſhing. Note, (1.) A good maſter, who looks well to his ſervants, can beſt afford to be a generous one to reward them. (2.) They who lie down on their beds in a gracious diſpoſition, may comfortably hope to be preſerved from the evils of the night.

2. Ruth, having obſerved her mother's directions, as ſoon as Boaz was compoſed to ſleep, ſteals ſoftly, and raiſing up the ſkirt of his garment, in which he wrapped himſelf, lies down at his feet, waiting for his awaking, that ſhe might remind him of his relation to her. At midnight Boaz turning himſelf, ſtartles at finding a perſon ſo near him, and perceiving her a woman, he haſtily interrogates her name and buſineſs. Ruth now humbly and modeſtly mentions her relation to him, and the conſequent claim thence reſulting; then waits that anſwer her mother bid her be directed by. Note, (1.) When temptation ſoftly ſteals upon us, as ſoon as our eyes are open, we muſt ſtart at the danger, and turn from it. (2.) The ſinner that humbly ſeeks the Saviour's ſkirt of love to be ſpread over him, will find his requeſt graciouſly received and anſwered.

3. Boaz, far from offering her any rudeneſs, or blaming her conduct as immodeſt or forward, is convinced of her chaſtity from her former behaviour, ſtands reproved for his own backwardneſs to do her juſtice, and reſolves immediately to ſee her ſettled as ſhe deſerved. He commends her kindneſs to her mother and her family in this inſtance of her obedience; prays God to bleſs her; mentions it to her honour, that ſhe preferred the huſband the law allotted her, though aged, before younger ſuitors, which her beauty might have attracted; and promiſes to reward her virtue, which all the city knew, by marrying her immediately, if the kinſman who was nearer than himſelf, to whom the firſt right of redemption of the mortgaged eſtate belonged, ſhould refuſe. This he confirms with an oath, for her full ſatisfaction of his kind intentions. Note, (1.) They, whoſe conduct is exemplary, ſhall hear of it to their honour. (2.) In the choice of a partner, godlineſs ſhould be the firſt recommendation.

14. ¶ And ſhe lay at his feet until the morning: and ſhe roſe up before one could know another. And he ſaid, [p] Let it not be known that a woman came into the floor. 15. Alſo he ſaid, Bring the vail that thou haſt upon thee, thee, and hold it. And when ſhe held it, [q] he meaſured ſix meaſures of barley, and laid it on her: and ſhe went into the city. 16. And when ſhe came to her mother-in-law, ſhe ſaid, Who art thou, my daughter? And ſhe told her all that the man had done to her. 17. And ſhe ſaid, Theſe ſix meaſures of barley gave he me; for he ſaid to me, Go not empty unto thy mother-in-law. 18. Then ſaid ſhe, [r] Sit ſtill, my daughter, until thou know how the matter will fall: for the man will not be in reſt, until he have finiſhed the thing this day.

r Pſ. xxxvii. 3, 5. Iſa. xxviii. 16.

v. 14—18. 1. Boaz, unwilling to diſmiſs her at that hour of the night, bids her reſt in peace till morning; yet, to avoid thoſe reflections which might be made if it were known, he adviſes her early to depart, that her being there might be a ſecret. At her departure, in token of his regard, he gave her a handſome preſent of ſix homers of barley, to take home with her. Note, (1.) We cannot be too careful to remove occaſion from the envenomed tongue of ſlander; and what would be liable to be miſinterpreted, had better not be known. (2.) A preſent in token of love is twice acceptable for the giver's ſake.

2. Ruth haſtens home, and, probably, knocking for admittance before Naomi was up, ſhe enquires if it was her daughter: or it may imply a queſtion, how ſhe ſped, and whether the match were likely to ſucceed. Hereupon ſhe relates all the circumſtances which had paſſed; from which Naomi concludes, that the matter was as good as compleated; that ſhe had no more to do, but to ſit down and wait, for Boaz would not reſt till the affair was ſettled. Note, When we have waited upon God in the way of duty, we may ſit ſtill, and confidently hope to ſee his great ſalvation.

CHAP. IV.

In this chapter, 1. Boaz gets clear of his rival, ver. 1—8. 2. Marries Ruth publicly, ver. 9—12. 3. Begets Obed, the grandfather of David, ver. 13—17. 4. The pedigree of David laid down, ver. 18—22.

1. THEN went Boaz up to the gate, and ſat him down there: and behold, the kinſman of whom Boaz ſpake, came by: unto whom he ſaid, Ho, ſuch a one, turn aſide, ſit down here. And he turned aſide, and ſat down. 2. And [a] he took ten men of the elders of the city, and ſaid, Sit ye down here. And they ſat down. 3. And he ſaid unto the kinſman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, ſelleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's. 4. And † I thought to advertiſe thee, ſaying, buy it before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. If thou wilt redeem it, redeem it; but if thou wilt not redeem it; then tell me that I may know: for there is none to redeem it beſides thee, and I am after thee. And he ſaid, [b] I will redeem it. 5. Then ſaid Boaz, What day thou buyeſt the field of the hand of Naomi, thou muſt buy it alſo of [c] Ruth the Moabiteſs, the wife of the dead, to raiſe up the name of the dead upon his inheritance. 6. ¶ And the kinſman ſaid, I cannot redeem it for myſelf, leſt I mar mine own inheritance: redeem thou my right to thyſelf, for I cannot redeem it. 7. Now [d] this was the manner in former time in Iſrael, concerning redeeming, and concerning changing, for to confirm all things: a man plucked off his ſhoe, and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a teſtimony in Iſrael. 8. therefore the kinſman ſaid unto Boaz, Buy it for thee: ſo he drew off his ſhoe.

v. 1—8. Boaz, ſollicitous to terminate the affair, and, it ſhould ſeem, ſo pleaſed with Ruth's conduct as to count himſelf happy in ſuch a partner, haſtens to the gate, where was the ſeat of judgment; and having ten elders with him, to form a court for the judicial determination of the matter,

1. He ſummons the perſon who was Ruth's neareſt kinſman, perhaps as he was juſt then paſſing out at the gate, to appear, and plead his right. His name is not recorded; perhaps for this purpoſe concealed, becauſe his refuſal of his duty might have ſtamped it with infamy. Naomi having a parcel of land to ſell, the right of redemption was his; and, till he quitted his claim, Boaz will not preſume to buy it. Note, We muſt never be guilty of under-hand dealings, but act ſo as all honeſt men may approve our ſimplicity and integrity.

2. The kinſman readily enough accepts the offer; but when he finds it clogged with Mahlon's widow, either according to the law of the brother's widow, Deut. xxv. 5. or rather by Naomi's reſolution not to part with the land, without providing for her daughter, he declines the affair, and gives for a reaſon, leſt he ſhould mar his own inheritance, which, if he married a young widow who was poor, and had many children by her, might be the caſe. Note, Prudence in marriage is highly commendable; though we may not make worldly proviſion the firſt concern, yet it is a neceſſary conſideration.

3. A fair ſurrender is hereupon made to Boaz, in open court, of his right to the redemption; and this was done by the ceremony of drawing off the ſhoe, and delivering it in token of transferring the right and property in queſtion: and this ſeems to be a general form of conveyance, not that referred to, Deut. xxv. 9. which was reputed reproachful. Note, What we honeſtly come by, will be comfortably enjoyed.

9. ¶ And Boaz ſaid unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are witneſſes this day, that [e] I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi. 10. Moreover, Ruth the Moabiteſs, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchaſed to be my wife, to raiſe up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, that the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: ye are witneſſes this day. 11. And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders ſaid, We are witneſſes: [f] the LORD make the woman that is come into thine houſe, like Rachel and like Leah, which two did build the houſe of Iſrael: and † do thou worthily in Ephratah, and be famous in Beth-lehem. 12. v. 9—12. No ſooner had the neareſt kinſman quitted his right, than Boaz,

1. Puts in his claim, ready to pay the money for the land to Naomi, and purchaſe Ruth for his wife, in order to raiſe ſeed unto Mahlon; and he calls upon them to witneſs the contract, and inſert it in the public regiſter. Note, Thus hath our Goel, our divine Redeemer, when we were poor and deſtitute, and none were either able or willing to purchaſe the inheritance, which we by ſin had ſo deeply mortgaged, yea, utterly forfeited, paid down the price, even at the expence of marring his own inheritance; having left the realms of bliſs and glory for our ſake, and then eſpouſing us to himſelf, hath made us ſharers of that glory, to which the Father, as the reward of his ſufferings, hath exalted him. What love, what fidelity, conſtancy, and ſubjection, then do we owe him!

2. The people and elders receive the appeal, and declare themſelves witneſſes. It was no clandeſtine marriage, or what he was aſhamed to own in the face of the congregation. Ruth, it ſeems, was now preſent, waiting probably to ſee the iſſue of the affair; the elders and people therefore join in a ſolemn prayer for the proſperity of this new-married couple; for her, that ſhe may be fruitful as Rachel and Leah; for him, that his worth in every relation may be more diſplayed, and his name ſhine illuſtrious in the annals of futurity; for both, that the increaſe of their houſe may be like the houſe of Pharez, from whom the Beth-lehemites were deſcended, a great and numerous poſterity. Note, (1.) They who enter into new relations have need of our prayers. (2.) The increaſe of a family is a bleſſing from God. (3.) They who live exemplary in their generation, will be remembered with honour in ſucceeding ages, and ſtand as patterns worthy imitation.

13. ¶ So [h] Boaz took Ruth, and ſhe was his wife: and when he went in unto her, the LORD gave her conception, and ſhe bare a ſon. 14. And [i] the women ſaid unto Naomi, Bleſſed be the LORD which hath not † left thee this day without a ‡ kinſman, that his name may be famous in Iſrael. 15. And he ſhall be unto thee a reſtorer of thy life, and a § nouriſher of thine old age: for thy daughter-in-law which loveth thee, [k] which is better to thee than ſeven ſons, hath born him. 16. And Naomi took the child, and laid it in her boſom, and became nurſe unto it. 17. And [l] the women her neighbours gave it a name, ſaying, There is a ſon born to Naomi, and they called his name † Obed: he is the father of Jeſſe, the father of David. 18. ¶ Now theſe are the generations of [m] Pharez: Pharez begat Hezron, 19. And Hezron begat Ram, and Ram begat Amminadab, 20. And Amminadab begat Nahſhon, and Nahſhon begat Salmon, 21. And Salmon begat Boaz, and Boaz begat Obed, 22. And Obed begat Jeſſe, and Jeſſe begat [n] David.

v. 13—22. Ruth is now made happy in a loving huſband, and a liberal proviſion: ſhe finds at laſt, that ſhe hath loſt nothing by what ſhe left in Moab. Thus does God, even in this world, recompenſe thoſe who are faithful to him an hundred fold, for whatever they have forſaken on his account. Notice is taken,

1. Of Ruth's conception. God gave her a ſon; for from him is the fruit of the womb.

2. The congratulation of the holy women to Naomi hereupon. They praiſed God for the bleſſing of a child born, and expreſſed their kind wiſhes, by a confident concluſion, that ſhe would find in him a reſtorer of her life, the comforts of which former afflictions had imbittered to her; and a nouriſher of her old age, which was now coming apace upon her. Nor is her daughter forgotten: they ſpeak of her with a deſerved encomium, as if her affectionate tenderneſs was better than ſeven ſons. Note, (1.) It is Chriſtian-like to rejoice with thoſe who do rejoice. (2.) The ſupport of aged parents ſhould be the care and delight of children. (3.) God, when he deprives us of one comfort, often more than repays us, in beſtowing another.

Before Chriſt 1176.

3. The child is called Obed, ſerving, as deſigned from earlieſt infancy to be educated to ſerve the Lord Chriſt, or in view of the ſervice he would afford his aged grandmother. Naomi, pleaſed at the heart, takes the child, lays it in her boſom, and with tendereſt fondneſs nurſes it as her own. Note, On grandchildren often a double portion of maternal fondneſs reſts.

4. The book concludes with the genealogy of David, the grandſon of this child that is born to Boaz; and the hiſtory takes occaſion from thence to trace downward the pedigree from Pharez, his more diſtant anceſtor, like unto whom, the elders had prayed, might the family of Boaz be; and they are anſwered, ſince from him deſcends the Meſſiah, the Son of David, whoſe ſeed is more numerous than the ſand, and more glorious than the kings of the earth.

EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A
Upon the FIRST BOOK of SAMUEL.

This book, and that which follows it, bears the name of Samuel. Probably he was the penman of ſo much of it as fell within his own times, to the twenty-fifth chapter, in which we have an account of his death; and Gad, or Nathan, might finiſh it, See 1 Chron. xxix. 29. The firſt book contains a large account of his birth and childhood, his life and government; and of Eli, under whom he was brought up. The reſt of theſe two volumes relates the hiſtory of the reigns of Saul and David, who were both anointed by him. Thus they may be conſidered as an appendix to the book of Judges, and an introduction to the hiſtory of the Kings. They contain a conſiderable part of the ſacred hiſtory, are ſometimes referred to in the New Teſtament, and often in the titles of David's Pſalms, which, if placed in their order, would fall in, in theſe books. This firſt book gives us a full account of Eli's fall, and Samuel's riſe and good government, chap. i——viii. Of Samuel's reſignation of the government, and Saul's advancement and male-adminiſtration, chap. ix——xv. The choice of David, his ſtruggles with Saul, Saul's ruin at laſt, and the opening of the way for David to the throne, chap. xvi——xxxi. And theſe things are written for our learning.

CHAP. I.

The hiſtory of Samuel here begins as early as that of Samſon did, even before he was born. He is the child of prayer, given to Hannah when barren, on her importunate application. Thus fervent and effectual prayer availeth. Here is, 1. Her affliction becauſe ſhe was childleſs, and this affliction aggravated by her rival's inſolence, ver. 1—8. 2. Her vow to God under this affliction, ver. 9—18. 3. The birth of Samuel, ver. 19—23. 4. The preſenting of him to the Lord, ver. 24—28.

1. NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaim-zophim, of mount Ephraim, and his name was † Elkanah, the ſon of Jeroham, the ſon of Elihu, the ſon of Tohu, the ſon of Zuph, an Ephraimite: 2. And he had [a] two wives, the name of the one was ‡ Hannah, and the name of the other § Peninnah: and Peninnah had children, but [b] Hannah had no children. 3. And this man went up out of his city ‖ yearly, to worſhip and to ſacrifice unto the LORD of hoſts in Shiloh; and the two ſons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the prieſts of the LORD, were there. 4. ¶ And when the time was that Elkanah [c] offered, he gave to Peninnah his wife, and to all her ſons and her daughters, portions. 5. But unto Hannah he gave [d] a worthy portion: for [e] he loved Hannah, but the LORD had ſhut up her womb; 6. And [f] her adverſary alſo provoked her ſore, for to make her fret, becauſe the LORD had ſhut up her womb; 7. And as he did ſo year by year, † when ſhe went up to the houſe of the LORD, ſo ſhe provoked her; therefore ſhe wept, and did not eat. 8. Then ſaid Elkanah her huſband to her, Hannah, [g] why weepeſt thou? and why eateſt thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I better to thee than ten ſons?

v. 1—8. This chapter opens,

1. With an account of Samuel's parentage and birth-place. His father was of the family of Korah; a good branch from a bad ſtock. His reſidence was mount Ephraim, in a city called Ramathaim-Zophim, from two eminences on which it was built, or from watch-towers, which were on them.

2. He was the ſon of pious parents. His father Elkanah, ſignifying God hath poſſeſſed, a Levite, went up annually to ſacrifice at Shiloh with his family, unto the Lord of Sabaoth, or hoſts, (which title of God here firſt occurs) a rare inſtance of adherence to God, when Iſrael in general had apoſtatized from him; and tho' offended with the immoralities of the prieſts Hophni and Phinehas, did not therefore withdraw himſelf from the worſhip of the tabernacle. Note, (1.) It is among the greateſt bleſſings, to be the child of pious parents. (2.) The more others turn away from God, the cloſer ſhould we cleave to him. (3.) We need not ſcruple to receive the ſacraments from the hands of a miniſter, juſtly ſcandalous by his immorality, ſeeing the validity of them depends on God's inſtitution, not man's miniſtration.

3. Notice is taken of Elkanah's two wives; one ought to have ſufficed him. Probably as he had no children by the firſt, he was tempted to take a ſecond; but tho' he got his wiſh on one hand, hand, his comfort was greatly embitter'd on the other, in the conteſts and vexations occaſioned between Hannah and Peninnah. Hannah ſignifies beautiful, and had engaged Elkanah's beſt affections; Peninnah, a diamond; ſhe enriched his family with children, but was rough and ſharp in her temper. She could not bear Elkanah's partiality to her rival, and therefore took every occaſion to provoke and exaſperate her. Note, (1.) When we ſtep out of the way of God's providence and law, to gather worldly comforts, we ſhall find the ſweet we expected embittered with gall. (2.) Jealous love cannot bear a rival; let it admoniſh us to keep our hearts ſingle for God.

4. The quarrel breaks out between the two wives, even before the Lord in Shiloh: for what place ſo ſacred as to exclude the intruſion of human corruption! Peninnah, envious of Hannah's intereſt in her huſband, upbraids her with her barrenneſs, ſeeking maliciouſly to deſtroy her comfort, if ſhe cannot engage his regard. And this ſhe did at each returning feaſt, when the appearance of Elkanah's partial love to Hannah rouſed her jealouſy and reſentment. Hannah, unable to bear the aggravating taunts, and afflicted beyond meaſure under her barrenneſs, too eaſily gratified her rival's malice, by the ſenſibility ſhe expreſſed at her reproaches. Melancholy and diſcontented, ſhe would not eat, and did nothing but weep, inſtead of rejoicing before the Lord, and counting herſelf happy in the bleſſing of her huſband's affection. Note, (1.) A malicious ſpirit, like the devil, takes delight in the miſeries others ſuffer by its means. (2.) Thoſe who are of a fretful temper, lay themſelves open to continual uneaſineſs. (3.) Moſt of our miſeries we make ourſelves by our unthankfulneſs: did we weigh our mercies, we ſhould be aſhamed to complain. (4.) When we are moſt deſirous to ſerve God, perhaps on our knees before him, Satan will be eſpecially buſy to diſcompoſe and ruffle our ſpirits.

5. Elkanah by every kind endearment ſeeks to ſooth the ſorrows of her heart. His love to her was not at all affected by her barrenneſs. He carves the niceſt part at the feſtal board, to teſtify his fond regard, and with ſoft tenderneſs gently chides the uneaſineſs he with grief beheld. Why weepeſt thou? Why eateſt thou not theſe offerings of peace with a grateful heart to the God of thy mercies? Is not my love better to thee than ten ſons? Note, (1.) Love hides all blemiſhes, and ſees no faults. (2.) As barrenneſs is from God, it ill becomes us to quarrel with him; and it were cruel in a huſband to add affliction to the afflicted. (3.) We cannot ſee thoſe we love weeping, without feeling for them the tendereſt diſtreſs, and eagerly longing to relieve them. (4.) Many of our ſorrows are of our own making. It were well if we aſked ourſelves often, Why weepeſt thou? (5.) That ſorrow is to be condemned as ſinful, that unfits us for, or diverts us from, the worſhip of God. (6.) Religion and reaſon will afford us a cure for all our diſtreſſes: if we poſſeſs the one, and exerciſe the other aright, we ſhall ſoon dry up our tears.

9. ¶ So Hannah roſe up after they had eaten in Shiloh, and after they had drunk: (now Eli the prieſt ſat upon a ſeat by a poſt of [h] the temple of the LORD). 10. And ſhe was † in bitterneſs of ſoul, and prayed unto the LORD, and wept ſore. 11. And [i] ſhe vowed a vow, and ſaid, O LORD of hoſts, if thou wilt indeed look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid a man-child, then [k] I will give him unto the LORD all the days of his life, and there ſhall no razor come upon his head. 12. And it came to paſs, as ſhe ‡ continued praying before the LORD, that Eli marked her mouth. 13. Now Hannah, [l] ſhe ſpake in her heart, only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: therefore Eli [m] thought ſhe had been drunken. 14. And Eli ſaid unto her, How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee. 15. And Hannah anſwered and ſaid: No, [n] my lord, I am a woman of a ſorrowful ſpirit: I have drunk neither wine nor ſtrong drink, but have [o] poured out my ſoul before the LORD. 16. Count not thine handmaid for [p] a daughter of Belial: for out of the abundance of my § complaint and grief have I ſpoken hitherto. 17. Then Eli anſwered and ſaid, [q] Go in peace: and the God of Iſrael grant thee thy petition that thou haſt aſked of him. 18. And ſhe ſaid, Let thine handmaid find grace in thy ſight. So the woman went her way, and did eat, and [r] her countenance was no more ſad.

v. 9—18. Hannah received the kind reproof, and profited by it.

1. She accompanied him to the table, and perhaps eat and drank a little with them, though not of wine or ſtrong drink.

2. She took the firſt opportunity to retire, to pour out her complaints into the boſom of a compaſſionate God. She felt a bitterneſs which only he could remove, and mingles her tears with her prayers in the fervor of her devotion. Her petition was, that God would grant her a ſon, which, if beſtowed, ſhe vowed to dedicate as a Nazarite to God from the womb. Note, (1.) No relief like prayer for an afflicted ſoul. (2.) The tears we ſhed upon our knees are thoſe flittings God puts in his bottle, and which this Father of Mercies will wipe away by an anſwer of peace to the burdened ſoul.

3. Eli, the high-prieſt, who ſat at the gate of the court of the tabernacle, here called the temple, obſerving her moving her lips, but not hearing her voice, (for her prayer was mental, and in ſilent anguiſh the Lord who ſaw her heart, read her importunate deſires) haſtily concludes her drunken, and gives her a ſharp rebuke for her ſuppoſed impiety. Note, (1.) Haſty ſuſpicions and raſh cenſures are very ſinful. (2.) The prayer of the heart is that which God chiefly regards, and without words he can read our deſires. (3.) It is no new thing to have God's praying people abuſed as hypocrites.

4. Hannah's anſwer is as reſpectful and humble, as Eli's charge was haſty and cenſorious. Far from being provoked at an accuſation ſo contrary to the truth, ſhe with reverence addreſſes him, My lord, and meekly explains the true cauſe of her behaviour. She begs him not to have ſo ill an opinion of her, as to think her ſuch a daughter of Belial. It was not wine, but the bitterneſs of her affliction, that made her appear diſcompoſed and diſordered. Her cry was internal to the God of mercy, and her lips moved not in folly, but in prayer. Note, (1.) Every drunkard is a child of Belial, but a drunken woman doubly infamous. (2.) When unjuſtly cenſured, let us never return railing for railing. (3.) We do well to explain the motives of our conduct, to remove thoſe prejudices of our brethren, which might be entertained againſt us, however unjuſtly.

5. Eli readily receives her plea, rejoices in her vindication, is ſorry for his own raſhneſs, and makes her amends by the benediction he beſtows, and his earneſtly ſeconding her prayers, by his ſupplication to God in her behalf for an anſwer of peace. Note, (1.) We ſhould be pleaſed to find ourſelves miſtaken in our miſapprehenſion of our brethren, and endeavour to repair the error immediately. (2.) A good man's benediction and prayers are valuable bleſſings.

6. Hannah having now caſt her care upon God, puts off her ſorrow, and regains a peaceful mind, departing in faith that the Lord had heard, and would anſwer the voice of her humble petitions. Note, The prayer of faith can chear the ſinking heart, and ſmooth the diſcompoſed countenance of the afflicted.

Before Chriſt 1115.

19. ¶ And they roſe up in the morning early, and [s] worſhipped before the LORD, and returned, and came to their houſe to Ramah: and Elkanah knew Hannah his wife, and the LORD remembred her. 20. Wherefore it came to paſs † when the time was come about, after Hannah had conceived, that ſhe bare a ſon, and called his name ‡ Samuel, ſaying, Becauſe I have aſked him of the LORD. 21. And the man Elkanah, and all his houſe went up to offer unto the LORD the yearly ſacrifice, and his vow. 22. But [t] Hannah went not up, for ſhe ſaid unto her huſband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the LORD, and there abide for ever. 23. And Elkanah her huſband ſaid unto her, Do what ſeemeth thee good, tarry until thou have weaned him, only [u] the LORD eſtabliſh his word: ſo the woman abode, and gave her ſon [x] ſuck until ſhe weaned him. 24. ¶ And when ſhe had weaned him, [y] ſhe took him up with her, with three bullocks, and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine, and brought him unto the houſe of the LORD in Shiloh: and [z] the child was young. 25. And they ſlew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli. 26. And ſhe ſaid, O my lord, [a] as thy ſoul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that ſtood by thee here, [b] praying unto the LORD. 27. For this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I aſked of him: 28. Therefore alſo I have lent him to the LORD as long as he liveth, § he ſhall be lent to the LORD. And he worſhipped the LORD there.

v. 19—28. The days of the ſolemn feaſt being accompliſhed, we have,

1. The return of Elkanah and his family, after having riſen up early to worſhip God, before they proceeded on their journey. Note, (1.) Early devotions promiſe a happy day. (2.) However urgent our journey, we ſhall loſe nothing by taking God's bleſſing along with us before we ſet off.

2. Hannah becomes a joyful mother. God anſwers her according to her prayers, and ſhe acknowledges the mercy in the name ſhe gives her ſon, Samuel, as aſked of the Lord. Note, God's mercies deſerve to be kept in everlaſting remembrance.

3. The care ſhe took in nurſing the infant. She was not unnatural, as ſome mothers, to deny their breaſts to the fruit of their womb, but ſuckled him herſelf; and when Elkanah went up to ſacrifice to the Lord, as uſual, and pay his vow, made perhaps on the birth of his ſon, ſhe excuſed herſelf from going till ſhe had weaned the child, that he might, according to his dedication, miniſter before the Lord, and return to his father's houſe no more. In this Elkanah acquieſces, begging the Lord to eſtabliſh his word, that he might live, and, as was propoſed, ſerve him continually in his tabernacle. Note, (1.) When we have a lawful let from the houſe of God, ſuch as ſuckling an infant, we may look up with comfort to him over the cradle, and expect God's bleſſing and preſence there. (2.) The beſt improvement of our mercies received from God is to devote them to God.

4. When the child is weaned, as it is generally thought at three years old, Hannah performs her vows, goes up with her ſon, and takes along with her ſacrifices and offerings, as grateful acknowledgments of the mercy God had beſtowed. Preſenting him to Eli, ſhe reminds him of what had paſſed, and ſurrenders up the precious gift to the perpetual ſervice of the God that gave him, then offers her ſacrifice, and rejoices before the Lord. Note, (1.) Though we may have juſt reaſon to delay, yet muſt we in their ſeaſon pay our vows. (2.) They who are ſurrendered up to God, muſt henceforth regard themſelves no longer as their own, but his for ever.

5. Samuel was early taught: no ſooner learned to liſp, than prayer was the language. Though a child, he worſhipped before the Lord. Note, (1.) Children ſhould early be taught the way to a throne of grace. (2.) The minds of little ones are very early ſuſceptible of divine impreſſions.

v. 1—10. The grateful Hannah, big with praiſe, out of the abundance of her heart, utters this triumphant ſong. Very like it is that of Mary, Luke i. 46.

1. She opens with expreſſions of her joy in God. Not her ſon, not her huſband, not all the worldly bleſſings ſhe enjoyed, are to be compared with the ſenſe of his favour and regard. It is this revives her drooping heart, and raiſes her horn on high, her head in triumph, and her voice in praiſe. Her enemies now ſhall lick the duſt, Peninnah's lips be ſilent in ſhame, or prophetically ſhe foreſees the confuſion of Iſrael's enemies; therefore will ſhe rejoice in God's ſalvation, in his preſent mercy, and much more in hope of his eternal glory through the great Redeemer Jeſus. Note, (1.) Praiſe is comely for the upright. (2.) To poſſeſs a grateful heart, is the ſure way to ſecure continuance of our mercies. (3.) The great joy of the believer is the ſalvation by Jeſus Chriſt; compared with this, all beſide is counted but σκυϐαλα, dung and loſs.

2. She exalts God's glorious perfections. A God of immaculate holineſs, like to whom there is no other, neither men nor angels: the one Jehovah, the only God, infinite in power, a rock of ages, an everlaſting refuge to all who truſt upon him, in wiſdom unſearchable, in his vaſt mind at one view comprehending the paſt, the preſent, and the future; clearly diſcerning the characters of men, and from whom nothing is hid, nothing is ſecret. He weighs men's actions in the ſcale of impartial juſtice, and renders to every man according as his work is. Note, (1.) The conſideration of God's attributes fills the believing ſoul with wonder and praiſe. (2.) Is he holy? ſeek to be like him. Is he almighty, truſt on him in all difficulties. Is he wiſe? depend on him for direction. Is he juſt? then confidently expect the reward of glory, ſince he is the juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus.

3. She adores him for his providential diſpenſations in the diſpoſal of the affairs of mankind; inſtancing, in various particulars, where he makes his interpoſition appear. The bows of the mighty are broken: they who ſeemed ſure of victory, bow under their priſoners; whilſt they who ſtumbled, were ſo weak that they were ready to deſpair, are ſupported by the almighty arm, are girt with ſtrength. This is gloriouſly true of our ſpiritual enemies: they were too mighty for us, but Jeſus hath broken their power, and we who ſtumbled, and were unable to reſiſt their furious attacks, are out of weakneſs made ſtrong, yea, more than conquerors. The full have hired out themſelves for bread. So quick is often the tranſition from affluence to want, when God blows upon our poſſeſſions; whilſt, on the other hand, the hungry ceaſed, repleniſhed with the abundance of God's providential gifts. Note, (1.) In poverty or riches, let God's hand be acknowledged. (2.) The rich, the full of their own righteouſneſs and ſelf-ſufficiency, will know a change in the day of God, when they will be ſent empty away; whilſt the hungry, the humble ſoul, that craves the bread of life, Chriſt Jeſus, and thirſts after his righteouſneſs, ſhall be filled with the preſent bleſſings of grace, and by and by receive the fullneſs of glory, when he ſhall hunger no more, and thirſt no more. The increaſe and diminution of families is from God; her own experience can ſpeak it to his praiſe: She who was barren, hath born ſeven. Seven, a perfect number uſed to expreſs many, ſhe having, beſides Samuel, five children afterwards, given of the Lord; in confidence of which increaſe ſhe now rejoices: and ſhe that hath many children is waxed feeble, meaning perhaps Peninnah, who now ceaſed to bear children, or by death had loſt ſome of her numerous offspring. This ſhould reconcile us to the loſs of children, that it is the Lord's doing, and make us rejoice in thoſe he adds, as his gift, and to be educated for his glory. The Lord killeth and maketh alive. The iſſues of life and death are in his hands; his decree fixes the boundaries of life. The moſt likely to live he often ſmites ſecretly and ſuddenly; whilſt he delivereth thoſe appointed unto death. Yea, in the ſame perſon we ſee ſtrange changes; brought to the gates of the grave, more eminently to appear a monument of mercy. And ſpiritually alſo he killeth, caſting the ſinner into eternal death, or maketh alive, quickening his dead ſoul by his ſpirit, and raiſing up his dead body in the day of glory. Note, (1.) Death never comes by chance, but by a fixed decree. (2.) They have matter of everlaſting thankfulneſs, that by experience know God's quickning power on their ſouls, and who are paſſed from death unto life. He raiſeth up the poor out of the duſt, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghil, to ſet them among princes, and make them inherit the throne of glory. Such wondrous changes we ſee in the world of nature; but how much more frequently and glorioufly do they appear in the world of grace, where the poor in ſpirit, and the deſtitute of all help, confeſs their wants and wretchedneſs; and the rich and ſovereign grace of God is extended towards them: ſo that they are raiſed up among God's princes, and made to inherit that throne of glory which fadeth not away. For the pillars of the earth are the Lord's: his upholding power and providence are ſeen in all theſe inſtances. Or, figuratively, the pillars may ſignify the princes mentioned before, and intimates his ſovereignty in the diſpoſal of the different eſtates of men. Let great men conſider this, and think who raiſed them to their high eſtates, and to whom they are reſponſible for their conduct.

4. She prophetically foretels the proſperity of God's people, and the perdition of his enemies, which literally and ſpiritually hath been, and will be, fulfilled in its ſeaſon. 1. Literally; Under Samuel's adminiſtration, the Philiſtines, the adverſaries of the Lord, were broken to pieces: the thunder deſtroyed them, See chap. vii. Saul and David were anointed by him, and the kingdom of Iſrael greatly ſtrengthened and enlarged by them. The feet of God's ſaints were, under his guidance, kept aright, and inteſtine idolatry, confounded, fled into darkneſs; whilſt their outward oppreſſors were ſubdued and ſilenced. 2. Spiritually; it continues gloriouſly fulfilling, reſpecting all God's people. He will keep the feet of his ſervants, hold them up in the rough way, and direct them in the right way: as he hath choſen them to be holy, he will preſerve them, that they ſhall not depart from him. The wicked, the adverſaries of the Lord and his people, ſhall be broken under the rod of judgment, their preſent deſigns againſt his church diſappointed and confounded, and their doom at laſt be the outer darkneſs, where they ſhall be ſilent, condemned eternally, without a plea to object to the righteous ſentence, or power to avoid it. Jeſus the King, whom the Father hath exalted, and called My ſtrength, he ſhall perform the glorious work, accompliſh thus his people's ſalvation; and when his elect are gathered in, come to judge the ends of the earth, to give his people their inheritance, and conſign his enemies to their place of torment. And all this ſhall be purely his own work: his people prevailed not by their own might to ſave themſelves, but purely by his ſovereign grace; and his enemies ſtruggle in vain to oppoſe his power, or to eſcape his vengeance.

11. And Elkanah went to Ramah to his houſe; and the child did miniſter unto the LORD before Eli the prieſt. 12. ¶ Now the ſons of Eli were [z] ſons of Belial, [a] they knew not the LORD. 13. And [b] the prieſt's cuſtom with the people was, that when any man offered ſacrifice, the prieſt's ſervant came, while the fleſh was in ſeething, with a fleſh-hook of three teeth in his hand: 14. And he ſtruck it into the pan, or kettle, or caldron, or pot; [c] all that the fleſh-hook brought up, [d] the prieſt took for himſelf: ſo they did in Shiloh, unto all the Iſraelites that came thither. 15. Alſo before they burnt the fat, the prieſt's ſervant came, and ſaid to the man that ſacrificed, Give fleſh to roaſt for the prieſt, for he will not have ſodden fleſh of thee, but raw. 16. And if any man ſaid unto him, Let them not fail to burn the fat preſently, and then take as much as thy ſoul deſireth: then he would anſwer him, Nay, but thou ſhalt give it me now: and if not, I will take it by force. 17. Wherefore [e] the ſin of the young men was very great before the LORD: for [f] men abhorred the offering of the LORD. 18. ¶ But Samuel miniſtred before the LORD, being a child, girded with [g] a linen ephod. 19. Moreover, his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when ſhe came up with her huſband to offer the yearly ſacrifice. 20. ¶ And [h] Eli bleſſed Elkanah, and his wife, and ſaid, The LORD give thee ſeed of this woman, for the † loan which is lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home. 21. And the LORD viſited Hannah, ſo that ſhe conceived, and [i] bare three ſons, and two daughters: and [k] the child Samuel grew before the LORD. 22. ¶ Now Eli was very old, and heard all that his ſons did unto all Iſrael, and how they lay with the women that ‡ aſſembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. 23. And he ſaid unto them, Why do ye ſuch things? for I hear of your evil dealings, [l] by all this people. 24. Nay, my ſons: for it is no good report that I hear; ye make the LORD's people to § tranſgreſs. 25. If one man ſin againſt another, the judge ſhall judge him: but [m] if a man ſin againſt the LORD, who ſhall intreat for him? Notwithſtanding [n] they hearkned not unto the voice of their father, [o] becauſe the LORD would ſlay them. 26. (And the child Samuel [p] grew on, and was in favour both with the LORD, and alſo with men.)

v. 11—26. The characters of theſe families, thus contraſted, appear more conſpicuous. The negligence of Eli, the high-prieſt, makes Elkanah's diligence more remarkable; and the piety of Samuel caſts a double gloom upon the ungodlineſs of Eli's ſons.

1. Concerning Elkanah and his family, we have,

(1.) Their return unto Ramah, leaving Samuel behind, with Eli's bleſſing upon them for the loan they had lent unto the Lord, and the effect of that bleſſing taking place, in five children given to Hannah in return for Samuel. Note, Nothing returns ſo ſurely with intereſt, as that which is lent unto the Lord, and devoted to his ſervice.

(2.) Their regular and ſtated worſhip of God at Shiloh, and their care of their darling ſon, providing him with cloaths during his noviciate at the tabernacle. Note, (1.) Though we muſt be in ſpirit always worſhipping, yet regular and ſtated returns for prayer are carefully to be kept up. (2.) A due proviſion for children is a parent's duty, and ſhould be their delight, never grudging the expence of it.

Before Chriſt 1102.

(3.) The progreſs Samuel made under Eli's care and inſpection. Though ſurrounded with the bad examples of Eli's ſons, he carefully attended to Eli's inſtructions, and miniſtred before him in any little ſervice in which he was capable of being employed; and Eli, obſerving no doubt his extraordinary delight in the work, and reflecting on the extraordinary circumſtances of his birth, took care betimes to train him up to the ſervice of the tabernacle, and put him on a linnen ephod; though not a prieſt, and before he was of the uſual age to miniſter before the Lord. As he increaſed in ſtature, his underſtanding and gracious diſpoſitions, like the expanding roſe-bud, diſcloſed their ſweet perfume, and attracted the regard of God and man. Note, (1.) Under careful and pious teachers, we may hope for the bloſſoms of early piety. (2.) God is pleaſed with the graces he beſtows.

2. Concerning Eli and his houſe, we are told,

(1.) Their exceeding bad character. They were ſons of Belial. Though born of ſo godly a man, and, during their youth, brought up under his prayers and inſtructions, yet they turned out profane and profligate. They knew not the Lord, payed him no regard, made their office a mere benefice, and, though prieſts, were atheiſtical, perhaps in opinions, certainly in their practice. Note, (1.) The beſt of parents have often lived to ſee themſelves in Eli's unhappy caſe. Grace cannot be communicated but from God only. (2.) It were greatly to be wiſhed, that Eli's ſons had been the laſt of ſuch prieſts; but there are ſtill too many of their ſucceſſors, whoſe profeſſion makes their immoralities and infidelity more infamous and more guilty.

(2.) The particular acts of their wickedneſs are recorded to their everlaſting ſhame. Rapacious: They were not ſatisfied with their allotted portion, the breaſt and ſhoulder, but imperiouſly by their ſervants ſent and plundered the people, with a prong ſtriking into the caldron, where they boiled what was deſigned to feaſt the offerer and his family, and taking away all that it brought up. Nor ſatisfied with this, they demanded more of the undreſſed meat, ſuch as the prieſt liked. Profane: They would not ſuffer the fat to be burnt on God's altar, till they were ſerved. And adulterous, taking occaſion to ſeduce the women, who came up to worſhip, into their apartments, and debauching them, to gratify their vile luſts. In view of ſuch abominations, no marvel the people abhorred the offerings of the Lord, where ſuch impiety was practiſed, and that God with a deep brand ſtamped their wickedneſs before him, to be remembred quickly to their eternal confuſion. Note, (1.) A rapacious prieſt is accurſed of God, and abhorred of men. (2.) They who make a god of their belly, but add to their impiety, by the mockery of wearing Chriſt's livery. (3.) To abuſe the credit of the ſacred office, to ſucceed in the gratification of beſtial appetite, is the higheſt ſtep of human villainy, and abandoned wickedneſs.

(3.) Their hardened reſiſtance of their father's reproof. He heard of their ill-doings: no doubt the injured complained to him; but he was old, and unable therefore himſelf to inſpect the concerns of his office; and his ſons were too headſtrong to be reſtrained by him. Yet he remonſtrates with them on their evil doings, expoſtulates on the ill tendency of their wickedneſs, in leading God's people to tranſgreſs, and warns them of the dreadful danger of it to their own ſouls, when, without an advocate, they ſhould appear before God, and receive that eternal condemnation which their crimes provoked. But words ſignified little to them; they needed ſeverer correction; and for Eli's ſinful indulgence of them, God will viſit him, when he takes vengeance on them: for, having reſolved to ſlay them, God had given them up to the blindneſs and hardneſs of their own hearts; and therefore they hearkened not to their father, but went on in their iniquities. Note, (1.) There is not a more hopeleſs character, than a diſobedient child. (2.) Parents have often much reaſon to blame their ſinful lenity and indulgence, and not only are chargeable with guilt before God, for with-holding the rod of correction; but are made here to ſmart for it by their children's undutifulneſs and ſufferings. (3.) There is a ſin unto death, for which there is no entreating: let us tremble at every approach to this unpardonable ſtate. (4.) God gives men up to one ſin as the puniſhment of another, and thus hardens them, till ripe for deſtruction.

(4.) Samuel's character cloſes the narrative. His piety ſerved to remove that diſguſt which Eli's ſons had given, and his behaviour the more conciliated the regard of God's people, as it appeared more eminent and exemplary in the midſt of ſuch bad company. Note, It is ſome comfort, when great impiety and wickedneſs hath crept into the church of God, that ſome burning and ſhining lights continue to be raiſed up in it, that we might not be as Sodom, or become like unto Gomorrah.

27. ¶ And there came [q] a man of God unto Eli, and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, [r] Did I plainly appear unto the houſe of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaoh's houſe? 28. And [s] did I chooſe him out of all the tribes of Iſrael to be my prieſt, to offer upon mine altar, to burn incenſe, to wear an ephod before me? and [t] did I give unto the houſe of thy father all the offerings made by fire of the children of Iſrael? 29. Wherefore [u] kick ye at my ſacrifice, and at mine offering, which I have commanded in my habitation, and [x] honoureſt thy ſons above me, to make yourſelves fat with the chiefeſt of all the offerings of Iſrael my people? 30. Wherefore the LORD God of Iſrael ſaith, I ſaid indeed that thy houſe, and the houſe of thy † father ſhould walk before me for ever: but now the LORD ſaith, [y] Be it far from me; for [z] them that honour me, I will honour, and [a] they that deſpiſe me, ſhall be lightly eſteemed. 31. Behold, the days come that [b] I will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's houſe, that there ſhall not be an old man in thine houſe. 32. And thou ſhalt ſee ‡ an enemy in my habitation, in all the wealth which God ſhall give Iſrael: and there ſhall not be an old man in thine houſe for ever. 33. And the man of thine, whom I ſhall not cut off from mine altar, ſhall be to conſume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart: and all the increaſe of thine houſe ſhall die in the flower of their age. 34. And [c] this ſhall be a ſign unto thee, that ſhall come upon thy two ſons, on Hophni and Phinehas: [d] in one day they ſhall die both of them. 35. And I will raiſe me up [e] a faithful prieſt, that ſhall do according to that which is in mine heart, and in my mind: And I will build him || a ſure houſe, and he ſhall walk before mine Anointed [f] for ever. 36. And it ſhall come to paſs, that [g] every one that is left in thine houſe, ſhall come and crouch to him for a piece of ſilver, and a morſel of bread, and ſhall ſay, Put me (I pray thee) into one of the prieſt's offices, that I may eat a piece of bread.

v. 27—36. Becauſe Eli was ſo remiſs in reproving his ſons, God, by the mouth of a prophet, ſends him a ſharp rebuke.

1. He reminds Eli of the peculiar bleſſings he enjoyed. God had appeared to Aaron, his great progenitor, in Egypt; had conferred on his family, on their delivery from thence, the diſtinguiſhed honour of the prieſthood, and annexed thereto that liberal proviſion from the ſacrifices, which might ſupport the dignity of their office. It was therefore the more culpable in him who enjoyed theſe favours, to act with ſuch negligence. Note, (1.) Where God hath ſhewn peculiar mercies, he juſtly expects eſpecial returns. (2.) The honour of miniſtring before God is great, and his proviſion an engagement to our fidelity; how criminal then to neglect that ſervice, more ſo to devour the wages, and never do the work; and moſt of all, by open immoralities, to bring a ſcandal on the holy profeſſion. For theſe things God will viſit.

2. The charge alledged is the abuſes committed by his ſons, his own connivance at theſe abominations, to the diſhonour of God, inſtead of turning them out of their office, and his partaking with them in the meat thus ſcandalouſly obtained. Note, (1.) Our children's ſins are our own, when committed under our eye without immediate correction. (2.) They who feed themſelves to the full, will quickly kick at God's ſervice. (3.) A fat luxurious prieſt ſeems conſecrated rather to eat than pray, and to ſacrifice to his belly rather than any other god.

3. The puniſhment denounced on ſuch a diſobedient conduct, excluſion from the high-prieſthood, and the perpetual ignominy and deſolation of his family. [1.] Excluſion from the high-prieſthood. How it came ſettled in the houſe of Ithamar, from whom Eli deſcended, inſtead of Eleazar, in whoſe family it had at firſt been, is not recorded; but had they continued faithful, to walk before God, it had not again reverted to the line of Eleazar. Now the mercy is forfeited, and the honour gone, though not immediately transferred, yet the ſentence is paſſed, and it was fulfilled in Zadok, whom Solomon appointed in the room of Abiathar. And the reaſon of his determination God gives, thoſe that honour me I will honour, but they who deſpiſe me ſhall be lightly eſteemed. Note, (1.) They who are a diſhonour to the prieſthood ſhould be degraded from it. (2.) Though godlineſs may be now deſpiſed, and proſperous iniquity in honour; yet oftentimes even here, and certainly hereafter, God will exalt the horn of his people, and cover their enemies with ſhame and confuſion. (3.) All God's proceedings will ſhortly appear to be directed by the moſt perfect wiſdom, and guided by impartial juſtice. [2.] The deſolation and ignominy of Eli's family are threatned. Their power and authority ſhould be deſtroyed, their days ſhortned, dying in the flower of youth, their poſſeſſions moulder away, the ark, before which they miniſtered, be in the hand of the enemy (or perhaps ver. 32d alludes to the tranſlation of the prieſthood to their rivals) whilſt the few who remained of his poſterity ſhould be a grief and bitterneſs to thoſe who begat them, and be reduced ſo low as to beg admittance into the meaneſt offices of the tabernacle, that they might not famiſh through want, ſee 1 Kings xi. 26, 27. The beginning of theſe ſorrows his own eyes ſhould ſee, in the death of his two ſons Hophni and Phinehas, in one day, and this ſhould be the ſign of the fulfilment of all the reſt. Note, (1.) Let every ungodly miniſter read the doom of Eli's houſe and tremble. (2.) They who abuſed their power are juſtly puniſhed with infamy, and thoſe reduced to want who lived in wantonneſs. (3.) Better ſee a child in the grave than living in wickedneſs. (4.) To ſerve in the prieſt's office merely for bread, is miſerable ſervice indeed. (5.) They who have been companions in iniquity may expect to periſh together.

4. God promiſes to raiſe up to himſelf a faithful prieſt, and to preſerve to him an enduring prieſthood, to miniſter before God's anointed, as were the kings of Iſrael. This was literally fulfilled in Zadoc, whoſe poſterity continued in this office 'till the captivity in Babylon, if not 'till the coming of the Meſſiah. Spiritually it was accompliſhed in Chriſt, who put an end to the Levitical prieſthood, and remaineth a prieſt for ever. Note, (1.) Though ſome are unfaithful to the truſt of the miniſtry, God will take care his church ſhall not be left utterly deſtitute. (2.) Every believer is one of that ſure houſe which, in Chriſt, the great high-prieſt, is eſtabliſhed before God for ever.

1. AND [a] the child Samuel miniſtred unto the LORD before Eli: and [b] the word of the LORD was precious in thoſe days; there was no † open viſion. 2. And it came to paſs at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and [c] his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not ſee: 3. And ere [d] the lamp of God went out in the temple of the LORD, where the ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to ſleep: 4. That the LORD [e] called Samuel, and he anſwered, Here am I. 5. And he ran unto Eli, and ſaid, Here am I, for thou calledſt me. And he ſaid, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down. 6. And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel aroſe and went to Eli, and ſaid, Here am I, for thou didſt call me. And he anſwered, I called not, my ſon; lie down again. 7. ‡ Now Samuel did not yet know the LORD, neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him. 8. And the LORD called Samuel again the third time. And he aroſe, and went to Eli, and ſaid, Here am I, for thou didſt call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child. 9. Therefore Eli ſaid unto Samuel, Go, lie down, and it ſhall be, if he call thee, that thou ſhalt ſay, Speak LORD, for thy ſervant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place. 10. And the LORD came, and ſtood and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel anſwered, [f] Speak, for thy ſervant heareth.

v. 1—10. Juſtly provoked with the ill conduct of the prieſts, God had withdrawn his gracious appearances from them. Darkneſs now reigns in the deſolate ſanctuary, and neither viſion nor dream, for a long time, had been vouchſafed; but God having raiſed up Samuel for extraordinary ſervices, and early prepared him, by his exemplary piety, for communion with his bleſſed ſelf, begins, whilſt he is yet a youth, to manifeſt himſelf to him in Shiloh. Note, Early piety is uſually favoured with eſpecial communications of divine conſolations. We have,

1. The time when God appeared to him, in the night, when Eli, ſinking under age and infirmities, was retired for repoſe, and Samuel in ſome room near him, to be ready at Eli's call; the lamp of God yet burning, which ſeems to intimate, that it was towards morning. Note, We have to bleſs God for the bed of repoſe, on which we can ſleep in peace, and ſtill more if with refreſhing dreams he makes that repoſe doubly profitable for our ſouls as well as bodies.

2. The manner in which he appeared. By an audible voice, calling Samuel by his name; either awakened with the ſound, or awake before, and employed in holy meditation before the morning light, he anſwers immediately, ſuppoſing it Eli's voice, and runs to his chamber, to enquire what he wanted. Eli aſſures him he did not call, and bids him lie down again. Note, (1.) A willing ſervant runs at his maſter's voice, happy, and therefore in haſte, to ſerve him. (2.) They who ſee their ſervants officious to pleaſe them, ought, in return, to ſhew themſelves tender of them, and to conſult their comfort and repoſe.

3. Repeated calls are given, and Samuel returns to Eli, perſuaded the voice was his; for he was a child, and had not as yet been uſed to any ſuch extraordinary manifeſtation of God's preſence, nor had received any prophetical revelation from him. At firſt Eli ſends him back to his bed, but after a ſecond and third call, he began to reflect, and to conclude the voice divine; he therefore bids him lie down again, and at the next call to anſwer, Speak, Lord, for thy ſervant heareth, as attentive to the notice, and ready to obey the command. Hereupon, no ſooner was he compoſed on his bed, than the Lord ſtood before him, probably in a human form, as he afterwards appeared in earneſt, and called him Samuel, Samuel; Samuel, according to Eli's inſtructions, anſwers, Here am I. Note, (1.) When God deſigns to call a ſoul, he will open his ears to hear, and repeat thoſe calls ſo often, that amidſt all our miſtakes and errors, they ſhall at laſt become effectual to lead us in the right way. (2.) We may expect ſome gracious manifeſtation from God, when our obedient ear is attentive to the Divine call, and out of his word we are enquiring, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do. (3.) Such as are elder, and more experienced in the ways of God, ſhould delight to inſtruct the younger, who are training up in the ſame ways. (4.) They who are careful to obſerve the good inſtructions they receive, will find the bleſſing of ſo doing.

11. ¶ And the LORD ſaid to Samuel, Behold, [g] I will do a thing in Iſrael, [h] at which both the ears of every one that heareth it ſhall tingle. 12. In that day, [i] I will perform againſt Eli, all things which I have ſpoken concerning his houſe: † when I begin, I will alſo make an end. 13. For I have told him, that I will judge his houſe for ever, for the iniquity which he knoweth: becauſe his ſons made themſelves ‡ vile, and he ‖ reſtrained them not. 14. And therefore I have ſworn unto the houſe of Eli, that [k] the iniquity of Eli's houſe ſhall not be purged with ſacrifice nor offering for ever. 15. ¶ And Samuel lay until the morning, and opened the doors of the houſe of the LORD: and Samuel [l] feared to ſhew Eli the viſion. 16. Then Eli called Samuel, and ſaid, Samuel my ſon, And he anſwered, Here am I. 17. And he ſaid, What is the thing that the LORD hath ſaid unto thee? I pray thee hide it not from me: God do ſo to thee, and more alſo, if thou hide any thing from me, of all the things that he ſaid unto thee. 18. And Samuel told him every whit, and hid nothing from him. And he ſaid, It is the LORD: [m] let him do what ſeemeth him good.

v. 11—18. As the former warning ſeems not ſufficiently to have wrought its effect on Eli, another was needful to rouſe him to a ſeverer correction of his ungodly children. We have,

1. The ſhort but terrible meſſage Samuel receives from God concerning his judgments, and particularly on Eli's houſe. With what terror would every Iſraelite hear the ark was taken, and Eli's concern how aggravated in the loſs of both his ſons? They had made themſelves vile indeed, and Eli, by his negligence to correct them, becauſe he did not even frown upon them, though he knew their abomination, was become a party in their crime; therefore God confirms, with an oath, his former denunciations; judgment ſhall proceed againſt them, God will begin, and that ſoon, in the death of Hophni and Phinehas, and make an end in the utter diſgrace and deſolation of his family in the days of Solomon; no ſacrifice or offering could be accepted for them, the decree was gone forth, and it was too late to cry for mercy. Note, (1.) They who make themſelves vile by ſin, God will make them viler by ſuffering, when they ſhall be caſt off from his preſence, and become an abhorring to all fleſh. (2.) They who ſee ſin, eſpecially magiſtrates, maſters, and parents, without juſt rebuke, are chargeable with the guilt of the evil they connive at. (3.) When God ariſes to judgment, and pronounces the ſinner's final doom, Go accurſed, &c. it will be a ſound that will ring with terror in their ears, through a miſerable eternity. (4.) Though the ſacrifice of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſin, yet there may be a time when God hath given up the ſinner to a reprobate mind, and having loſt all feeling to pray for himſelf, God forbids us alſo to pray for him, 1 John v. 16.

2. Though Samuel was afraid to ſpeak to Eli, Eli's ſollicitude to know extorts from him the dreadful meſſage. [1.] He lay till morning; ſtruck, no doubt, with the awful apprehenſions of this approaching judgment, and meditating on the ſtrange manifeſtation which had been made to him; at early dawn ariſing, he applies himſelf to his wonted taſk of opening the doors of the Lord's houſe; not thinking himſelf, becauſe called to be a prophet, above being a door-keeper in the houſe of the Lord: unwilling to be the meſſenger of evil, he conceals from Eli the viſion. Note, (1.) Unleſs our thoughts be lifted up to God 'tis dangerous to lie awake. (2.) The riſing morn ſhould meet us at the gates of God's temple in prayer. (3.) They who are called to the higheſt honours in God's houſe think themſelves happy to be employed in the meaneſt ſervice for him. (4.) We ſhould be tender and careful not to grieve our dear friends, and rather, if we can, conceal from them what might burden their hearts with ſorrow. [2.] Eli was as ſollicitous to know the viſion as Samuel to hide it from him; perhaps ſuſpecting that it boded him no good, and willing to know the worſt, that he might prepare for ſubmiſſion: no ſooner was Samuel therefore ſtirring than Eli calls him, and obſerving, probably, ſome reluctance to communicate what had paſſed, adjures him to conceal nothing from him. Note, They who have God's meſſage entruſted to them muſt faithfully deliver it, nor, becauſe it may be grating or terrible to the ſinner's ears, through fear conceal it from them, leaſt thereby their judgment ſhould lie at our door, and their blood be required at our hands. [3.] Samuel faithfully relates, and Eli as piouſly and humbly acquieſces in the Divine will, terrible as it muſt be to nature. He knew, as it was of God, it muſt be juſt, and he acknowledged the equity of the ſentence; and as the oath of God had eſtabliſhed it, it muſt be irreverſible; he dares not pray for a change, but prepares to ſubmit, with holy reſignation of himſelf into the Lord's hands. Note, (1.) Acquieſcence in the juſtice of the divine judgments, is the beſt ſymptom of a truly humbled ſoul. (2.) Reſignation to the Divine will is the way to lighten our heavieſt burdens; the half of our bitterneſs is removed, when we can ſay, It is the Lord, let him do as ſeemeth him good.

19. ¶ And Samuel grew, and the LORD was with him, and [n] did let none of his words fall to the ground. 20. And all Iſrael, from Dan even to Beerſheba, knew that Samuel was eſtabliſhed to be a prophet of the LORD. 21. And the LORD appeared again in Shiloh: for the LORD revealed himſelf to Samuel in Shiloh, [o] by the word of the LORD.

v. 19—21. As Samuel increaſed in years he grew more diſtinguiſhed by Divine manifeſtations, and more eſteemed by the people of God.

1. The Lord appeared to him again, by the word of the Lord, the incarnate word, whoſe voice had ſpoken to him before; and all his predictions were verified in the accompliſhment, and all his words weighty and profitable. Note, (1.) They who improve one gracious viſit from God, ſhall not be long without a ſecond. (2.) God will not ſuffer the words of his miniſters to be ſpilt as water on the ground, or drop as an arrow to the earth, ere it hath reached the mark, but will cauſe his word in their mouth to be cloathed with power, and to accompliſh the thing whereunto he ſendeth it.

2. The people knew and honoured the riſing prophet; his fame ſpread throughout the land, and his piety made him as diſtinguiſhed as his prophecy. Note, Though we are not to ſeek our own honour, yet we ſhould eſteem it a valuable acquiſition to poſſeſs the eſteem and reſpect of good men.

v. 1—9. The prophecy of Samuel concerning Eli's houſe was ſoon ſpread, and men waited with ſuſpenſe for the fulfilment which quickly began in this war with the Philiſtines, which is here recorded, and happened towards the latter end of Eli's government, about forty years after the death of Samſon.

1. There was a pitched battle between the hoſts of Iſrael and Philiſtia, wherein the former were worſted with the loſs of four thouſand men; nor need we wonder, when they ſeem neither to have conſulted God in their war, nor to have repented of their ſins.

2. On retiring to their camp a counſel of war is held; wherein they ſeem not ſo much as to have aſcribed the ſtroke to God, under a humbling ſenſe of their deſerts, as to expreſs their anger for his Providence; and, inſtead of conſulting his will, fooliſhly propoſe a contrivance of their own to ſecure their future victory, by bringing down the ark of God among them; as if the preſence of that would enſure to them the power of him who dwelt between the cherubims over it. The reſolution is no ſooner taken than put in force, the ark ſent for, and Eli's ungodly ſons bring it down: how little bleſſing could be hoped from the ark in ſuch hands! Note, (1.) The afflictive providences which humble the penitent, exaſperate the hardned, and make them fret againſt the Lord. (2.) They who are moſt deſtitute of the power of godlineſs, have the greateſt dependance on the form of it, are moſt zealous for the ark, the liturgy, the prieſthood, and the ritual obſervances, and truſt more on theſe for ſalvation, than on the blood, righteouſneſs, and grace of the Redeemer, working the ſpiritual renovation of their hearts. (3.) However good any eſtabliſhment may be, whilſt the miniſters are graceleſs, the ark they bear will be an empty coffer, and no divine bleſſing can be expected to attend them.

3. Joy and triumph now ſwell the hearts of every Iſraelite, and they ſhout till the earth rings with their acclamations. Note, They uſually glory moſt in external privileges, who have leaſt experience of inward religion; and their ſhouting, like Iſrael's, is the prelude not of victory, but of their everlaſting ſhame and confuſion.

4. The Philiſtines heard the ſhouts of Iſrael, and by their ſpies quickly learned the cauſe which filled their hoſt with conſternation. Suppoſing the ark was Iſrael's God, they expreſs their apprehenſions of his preſence: they had not ſo ſhouted before, nor was the ark of God with them, when they were before defeated; and reflecting upon the traditionary notices of the former wonders God had wrought in Egypt, though they miſtake in the circumſtances, they tremble for the conſequences. However, their leaders encourage the ſoldiers not utterly to deſpond, but if the danger be great, exert the greater courage to extricate themſelves from it, reminding them of their former victories over Iſrael, and holding up to them the ignominy of ſervitude under thoſe who had ſerved them. Note, (1.) It becomes commanders to put on a good countenance in the greateſt dangers. (2.) Their triumphing will be ſhort, whoſe truſt is formality, and whoſe hope is deluſion.

10. ¶ And the Philiſtines fought, and Iſrael was ſmitten, and they fled every man into his tent: and [l] there was a very great ſlaughter, for there fell of Iſrael thirty thouſand footmen. 11. And [m] the ark of God was taken; and [n] the two ſons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were ſlain.

v. 10, 11. The event little correſponded with the ſanguine expectations of the Iſraelites. They were ſmitten before their enemies, thirty thouſand of them ſlain in the battle, among which fell the wicked ſons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas; and, to crown the victory, that ark in which they truſted, falls into the hands of their enemies. Note, (1.) The wickedneſs of thoſe who undertake to eſpouſe it often makes a good cauſe to ſuffer. (2.) The firſt and soreſt judgments of God will fall upon the heads of wicked and faithleſs miniſters. (3.) They who go out of God's way, and act without his advice, can expect no ſucceſs in their enterprizes.

12. ¶ And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army, and came to Shiloh the ſame day [o] with his clothes rent, and [p] with earth upon his head. 13. And when he came, lo, Eli ſat upon a ſeat by the way-ſide, watching; for his heart trembled for the ark of God. And when the man came into the city and told it, all the city cried out. 14. And when Eli heard the noiſe of the crying, he ſaid, What meaneth the noiſe of this tumult? And the man came in haſtily, and told Eli. 15. Now Eli was ninety and eight years old, and [q] his eyes were dim, that he could not ſee. 16. And the man ſaid unto Eli, I am he that came out of the army, and I fled today out of the army. And he ſaid, † What is there done, my ſon? 17. And the meſſenger anſwered, and ſaid, Iſrael is fled before the Philiſtines, and there hath been alſo a great ſlaughter among the people, and thy two ſons alſo, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the ark of God is taken. 18. And it came to paſs [r] when he made mention of the ark of God, that he fell from off the ſeat backward by the ſide of the gate, and [s] his neck brake, and he died: for he was an old man and heavy. v. 12—18. Bad news flies faſt. We have here,

1. A meſſenger of evil, haſting from the routed hoſts to carry the doleful tidings to Shiloh; a Benjamite; his name is not mentioned, but his concern was evident in expreſſive ſigns of ſorrow, his garments rent, and earth on his head. He entred the city, and either by paſſing Eli as unwilling to acquaint him firſt, or entring by another gate, reports the iſſue of that dreadful day. Note, The deſolations of God's Iſrael are a bitter grief to a faithful ſoul.

2. The news inſtantly fills the city with ſhrieks and cries of bitter anguiſh, men and women aloud bewailing this terrible calamity. Note, They who refuſe to ſhed the tears of penitence, are often made to ſhriek under the ſtrokes of judgment.

3. Eli's anxiety is remarked. He ſat near the way, eager to hear the tidings, yet fearing the event: the ark of God engaged his thoughts more than all beſide, and he trembled probably to think to whoſe hands it was entruſted, and to what danger it was expoſed; and perhaps condemned his own eaſy compliance in parting with it. Note, Every godly miniſter knows ſomething of Eli's concern, whilſt he looks round upon ſo many like Hophni and Phinehas in their lives, men as immoral in their conduct, as unſound in their doctrine, to whom the ark is entruſted, and who have the chief ſeats in the viſible church of God.

4. The cries of the people ſoon increaſed his terrors, and awakened his enquiries into the cauſe. The meſſenger is introduced, relates what he had ſeen; the people routed, ſad tidings for a judge in Iſrael; his ſons ſlain, more doleful ſounds for an aged parent; but moſt inſupportable for the high-prieſt of God, the ark is taken. Death-ſtruck at the mention, he falls backward from his ſeat, and being old, and very heavy or fat, his neck brake, and thus ended his government of Iſrael, after a forty years chief preſidency in the church and ſtate over them. Note, (1.) Every loſs and croſs of his own houſe affect not a man of God ſo much as the ſufferings of the cauſe of God. (2.) God permits thoſe ſometimes to die uncomfortable, who have ſuch juſt cauſe to reproach themſelves for having been unfaithful. (3.) Though a man dies unhappy, we muſt not always conclude he is undone.

19. ¶ And his daughter-in-law, Phinehas's wife, was with child, near † to be delivered: and when ſhe heard the tidings that the ark of God was taken, and that her father-in-law, and her huſband were dead, ſhe bowed herſelf and travailed; for her pains ‡ came upon her. 20. And about the time of her death, the women that ſtood by her, ſaid unto her, [t] Fear not, for thou haſt born a ſon. But ſhe anſwered not, ‖ neither did ſhe regard it. 21. And ſhe named the child § I-chabod, ſaying, The glory is departed from Iſrael: (becauſe the ark of God was taken, and becauſe of her father-in-law and her huſband) 22. being with child, and near her time, no ſooner heard thoſe accumulated evils, her huſband ſlain, her father dead, and above all, the ark taken, than her ſorrows inſtantly came upon her. Her ſpirits, ſunk under the load, are unable to ſupport her in nature's ſtruggle; the news a child was born could no longer comfort her. The glory was departed from Iſrael, this broke her heart, and with her dying breath ſhe ſpeaks her bitter anguiſh in the name ſhe gives the wretched new-born babe, Ichabod, no glory; every proſpect was dark and diſmal, ſince Iſrael's glory, the ark, was taken: ſhe can wiſh to live no longer, cloſes her eyes, and expires. Note, (1.) When the pain and peril of child-birth approaches we need ſupports; fear and diſtreſs of ſoul in that hour, make the pangs doubly bitter and dangerous. (2.) In a dying hour how vain and inſipid is every worldly comfort! (3.) If God depart from us, if his ordinances are removed, and the light of his countenance with-held, neither earth, nor the things of it, have any more ſweetneſs or glory; all is under a diſmal eclipſe, univerſal darkneſs reigns, and the ſoul experiences the foretaſtes of the outer darkneſs, in eternal death.

1. AND the Philiſtines took the ark of God, and brought it from [a] Eben-ezer unto Aſhdod. 2. When the Philiſtines took the ark of God, they brought it into the houſe of Dagon, and ſet it by Dagon. 3. ¶ And when they of Aſhdod aroſe early on the morrow, behold, [b] Dagon was fallen upon his face to the earth, before the ark of the LORD: and they took Dagon and ſet him in his place again. 4. And when they aroſe early on the morrow morning, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground, before the ark of the LORD: and [c] the head of Dagon, and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threſhold, † only the ſtump of Dagon was left to him. 5. v. 1—5. Though Iſrael utterly ſeems to have neglected the ark of God, and neither by force nor treaty ſeek to recover it, yet God will not ſuffer the ungodly to triumph for ever. We have here,

1. The Philiſtines triumphing over their priſoner. With ſolemnity they carry it down to their principal city Aſhdod, and place it in the temple of their great idol Dagon, as a trophy of the glorious victory obtained under his auſpices. Note, (1.) The cauſe of God is often ſunk ſo low, that it ſeems paſt recovery, and given up into the enemy's hand. (2.) God doth then more glorioufly diſplay his power, and make it appear how vain a thing they imagine, who ſhout, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground.

2. Little honour doth Dagon get from the vicinity of his captive; when his devotees aroſe to worſhip him, or his prieſts to rehearſe the praiſes of his victory, behold the miſerable idol on his face in the duſt, proſtrate before the ark, as if confeſſing his own vanity, and directing them to that God who is the only true object of worſhip. Thus ſhall all the powers of darkneſs, error and corruption, fall before the bright beams of truth, and the mighty work of God's ſpirit on the hearts of men; let the oppreſſed church be comforted, and the ſoul that is fainting under the power of corruption hang ſtill upon God, their diſtreſs ſhall but magnify his glory and grace in their deliverance.

3. In vain his worſhippers ſeek to repair his diſgrace, by faſtening him again in his place: the next morning preſents him ſtill more deſpicable; his ſtump, the fiſhy tail, joined to the human body, only remained; his head and hands cut off lay on the threſhold, a headleſs monſter, emblem of their folly who worſhipped him, and handleſs, to intimate the impotence of his arm to ſave himſelf or them. Note, (1.) The papiſt that worſhips the images of ſaints which never lived, is more culpable and abominable, in the eyes of God, than the Philiſtines which worſhipped monſters which never exiſted. (2.) All the devices of wicked men and devils againſt the church of God, ſhall, in the iſſue, prove as impotent as this attempt to faſten Dagon in his place again.

4. The folly of worſhipping ſuch a wretched god who could not help himſelf, one ſhould think, muſt now have appeared: yet, ſtrange to tell! they reverence the very place of his diſgrace, and honour that threſhold where his mutilated limbs were laid. Note, Where ſuperſtition reigns, nothing is ſo abſurd or impious, but it may be conſecrated into an act of religion, as we ſee in the church of Rome, even to pay reſpect unto dead men's bones, and the very broken pieces of their wretched images.

6. But [e] the hand of the LORD was heavy upon them of Aſhdod, and he deſtroyed them, [f] ſmote them with emerods, even Aſhdod and the coaſts thereof. 7. And [g] when the men of Aſhdod ſaw that it was ſo, they ſaid, The ark of the God of Iſrael ſhall not abide with us: for his hand is ſore upon us, and [h] upon Dagon our God. 8. They ſent therefore, and gathered all the lords of the Philiſtines unto them, and ſaid, [i] What ſhall we do with the ark of the God of Iſrael? And they anſwered, Let the ark of the God of Iſrael be carried about unto Gath. And they carried the ark of the God of Iſrael about thither. 9. And it was ſo, that after they had carried it about, [k] the hand of the LORD was againſt the city with a very great deſtruction: and he ſmote the men of the city, both ſmall and great, and they had emerods in their ſecret parts. 10. Therefore they ſent the ark of God to Ekron: and it came to paſs as the ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, ſaying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Iſrael † to us, to ſlay us and our people. 11. So they ſent and gathered together all the lords of the Philiſtines, and ſaid, Send away the ark of the God of Iſrael, and let it go again to his own place, that it ſlay us not, and our people: for there was a deadly deſtruction throughout all the city; the hand of God was very heavy there. 12. And [l] the men that died not, were ſmitten with the emerods: and the cry of the city went up to heaven.

v. 6—12. Since they will not ſee their folly, and be aſhamed of it, God will make them feel his arm, and ſmart for it.

1. The men of Aſhdod are viſited with a vile and painful diſeaſe, the burning anguiſh of which is only known by thoſe who have felt it. They were ſmitten with hæmorrhoids, or the piles, which was very mortal among them, and brought many of them in agonies to their graves. Note, They who riſe up againſt God do it to their ſhame and ruin.

2. The men of Aſhdod could not but perceive the hand of God in the thing; yet, far from ſeeking to him, and renouncing their idolatry, they are concerned only to get rid of the ark, that they might ſave their god as well as themſelves from deſtruction. A council is called, and the ark removed to Gath; the princes ſuſpecting, perhaps, the diſeaſe might not be from God, but epidemical. Note, When men are in danger of death, what haſte are they in to get rid of their diſeaſe; when men are in danger of hell, how unready to part with their ſins!

3. Change of place wrought no change of judgment. The men of Gath ſmarted more ſeverely ſtill, with a very great deſtruction; high and low, young and old, were ſmitten with internal hæmorrhoids, which brought on mortification and death. Note, No ſinner too great for God's judgments, or too little to be unnoticed.

4. The men of Gath reſolved immediately to be rid of this unwelcome viſitant, and haſten away the ark to Ekron. Struck with deſerved apprehenſions, the Ekronites cry out, and the iſſue proved their fears not groundleſs, for a deadly deſtruction was throughout all the city.

5. The lords of the Philiſtines are ſummoned, and whilſt they deliberate, death ravages the place; the men of Ekron urge the ſending back the ark, their cries proclaim their anguiſh, and they hope for no reſt till their deſtroyer is removed. Note, (1.) It were a happy thing if we were but half as ſollicitous to get rid of our ſins, as of the judgments they provoke. (2.) They who perſiſt in tempting God, will find every eſſay more embittered by his curſe and heavy hand upon them.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter, 1. The Philiſtines ſend back the ark, with rich preſents, ver. 1—11. 2. The Iſraelites receive it with joy, ver. 12—18. 3. For unwarrantably looking into it many are ſtruck dead, ver. 19—21.

1. AND the ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philiſtines, ſeven months. 2. And [a] the Philiſtines called for the prieſts and the diviners, ſaying, What ſhall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we ſhall ſend it to his place. 3. And they ſaid, If ye ſend away the ark of the God of Iſrael, [b] ſend it not empty; but † in any wiſe return him a treſpaſs-offering:

offering: then ye ſhall be healed, and [c] it ſhall be known to you, why his hand is not removed from you. 4. Then ſaid they, What ſhall be the treſpaſs-offering which we ſhall return to him? They anſwered, Five golden emerods, and five golden mice, according to the number of the lords of the Philiſtines: for † one plague was on you all, and on your lords. 5. Wherefore ye ſhall make images of your emerods, and images of your mice that mar the land, and [d] ye ſhall give glory unto the God of Iſrael: peradventure he will lighten his hand from off you, and [e] from off your gods, and from off your land. 6. Wherefore then do ye harden your hearts as the Egyptians and [f] Pharaoh hardned their hearts? when he had wrought wonderfully among them, did they not let the people go, and they departed? 7. Now therefore make a new cart, and take two milch-kine, on which there hath come no yoke, and tie the kine to the cart: and bring their calves home from them: 8. And take the ark of the LORD, and lay it upon the cart, and put the ‖ jewels of gold which ye return him for a treſpaſs-offering, in a coffer by the ſide thereof, and ſend it away, that it may go. 9. And ſee, if it goeth up by the way of his own coaſt to Beth-ſhemeſh, then he hath done us this great evil: but if not, then we ſhall know that it is not his hand that ſmote us; it was a chance that happened to us.

v. 1—9. At the Ekronites importunate requeſt, we have here,

1. A new counſel aſſembled. The ark of God had been with them now ſeven months, and long months they ſeemed, when every day preſented new ſcenes of ſorrow. The princes conſult the prieſts and diviners, and their unanimous voice is to ſend it back without delay. Note, (1.) They who keep back their ſins, only prolong their ſorrows. (2.) The heathen princes reverenced and conſulted the prieſts of Dagon, Shall not they condemn the preſent irreligious contempt of the miniſters of God?

2. How it muſt be ſent, is the next conſideration; and the prieſts and diviners direct the manner, and urge inſtant compliance. (1.) They admoniſh them of the danger of delay, from the Hiſtory of Pharaoh and the Egyptians, with which they appear to be acquainted. Experience what Iſrael's God had done, ſhould warn them not to harden their hearts. Note, It is far better to be warned by others experience than by our own. (2.) They preſcribe a treſpaſs-offering, that it may not return empty, but with an acknowledgment of their humiliation according to the nature of their plagues, five golden images of the hemorrhoids, and five golden mice, according to the number of their princes; for it ſeems this contemptible animal made as great havock in their fields, as the vile diſeaſe did on their perſons. They ſeem to have learnt the neceſſity of a ſatisfaction to offended juſtice, though they miſerably miſtook the way. (3.) In this caſe, they hoped the diſeaſe would be removed, or alleviated; and this would be a proof that their detention of the ark was the cauſe of it. Note, When we have repented of our ſin, we may hope for the removal of our ſorrow. (4.) To put the caſe beyond all doubt, whether their plagues were of God, they preſcribe a cart to carry it, drawn by two milch-kine, whoſe calves being detained at home, would naturally return thither, and who being without a driver, would hardly be ſuppoſed of themſelves to take the road of Beth-ſhemeſh, the neareſt city of Iſrael; yet on this they would reſt the evidence, from whoſe hand their plagues came; and if the beaſts went not the direct road, which were a miracle itſelf if they did, they would conclude their diſeaſe to be a mere chance, and not of God. Note, (1.) Wicked men would fain ſhift off their convictions, and aſcribe their ſufferings to any cauſe, rather than the hand of God. (2.) The very means men take to confirm them in infidelity, through God's ſovereign grace, ſometimes turn out to their more unanſwerable conviction of the truth.

10. ¶ And the men did ſo: and took two milch-kine, and tied them to the cart, and ſhut up their calves at home: 11. And they laid the ark of the LORD upon the cart, and the coffer with the mice of gold, and the images of their emerods. 12. And the kine took the ſtraight way to the way of Beth-ſhemeſh, † and went along the highway, lowing as they went, and turned not aſide to the right hand or to the left; and the lords of the Philiſtines went after them unto the border of Beth-ſhemeſh. 13. And they of Beth-ſhemeſh were reaping their wheat-harveſt in the valley: and they lifted up their eyes, and ſaw the ark, and rejoiced to ſee it. 14. And the cart came into the field of Joſhua a Beth-ſhemite, and ſtood there, where there was a great ſtone: and they clave the wood of the cart, and offered the kine a burnt-offering unto the LORD. 15. And the Levites took down the ark of the LORD, and the coffer that was with it, wherein the jewels of gold were, and put them on the great ſtone: and the men of Beth-ſhemeſh offered burnt-offerings, and ſacrificed ſacrifices the ſame day unto the LORD. 16. And when the five lords of the Philiſtines had ſeen it, they returned to Ekron the ſame day. 17. And theſe are the golden emerods which the Philiſtines returned for a treſpaſs-offering unto the LORD: for Aſhdod one, for Gaza one, for Aſkelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one. 18. And the golden mice according to the number of all the cities of the Philiſtines, belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities, and of country-villages, even unto the ‡ great ſtone of Abel, whereon they ſet down the ark of the LORD: which ſtone remaineth unto this day, in the field of Joſhua the Beth-ſhemite.

† Heb. In a ſtreet they went going lowing.

v. 10—18. In haſte to get rid of the ark, they immediately prepare the offering of golden hæmorrhoids and mice, put them in a little coffer, and with the ark, ſend them away on the new cart, drawn by two milch-kine.

1. No ſooner were they yoked in, than, wonderful to behold! though unaccuſtomed to draw without a driver, the way quite ſtrange to them, and the ſtrong attractive of their calves behind them, lowing with parental inſtinct to leave them, yet without the leaſt miſtake or reluctance, they purſue the ſtrait road to Beth-ſhemeſh, whilſt the lords of the Philiſtines who followed them, were fully convinced from whoſe hands their plagues came.

2. Little thought the men of Beth-ſhemeſh what an invaluable preſent was ſent them. They were reaping when the ark arrived; and, with a tranſport of wonder, laid down their hooks to run to welcome it. Note, (1.) Though induſtry is highly commendable, it becomes ſinful ſelfiſhneſs, when it makes us neglect the more needful work of prayer and praiſe to God. (2.) The return of God's preſence, and the revival of his pure worſhip, is matter of unſpeakable delight to every faithful ſoul.

3. They immediately remove the ark and coffer with the jewels of gold, and place them on a great ſtone, in the field of Joſhua, near which the kine had ſtopped, as at their journey's end; the Levites (among whom might be prieſts alſo) to whom this city belonged, take it down; and as the caſe was ſo extraordinary, they think themſelves authorized to offer ſacrifices before the ark, though out of the inſtituted way. The cart ſerves for fuel, and the kine which drew it, though females, are offered up for a burnt-offering: beſides which, they add other ſacrifices, in token of their thankfulneſs for the mercy. Note, If in an extraordinary caſe, a man moved with zeal for God's glory, ſteps out of the inſtituted way of worſhip, we ought not to be too ſevere cenſurers of the irregularity.

4. The ſtone whereon the ark reſted, with the coffer, containing the mice and emerods, for which every city under each of the five lords ſeems to have contributed, long remained a memorial of Philiſtia's ſhame, and of the glory of Iſrael's God.

19. ¶ And he ſmote the men of Beth-ſhemeſh, [g] becauſe they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he [h] ſmote of the people fifty thouſand and threeſcore and ten men: and the people lamented becauſe the LORD had ſmitten many of the people with a great ſlaughter. 20. And the men of Beth-ſhemeſh ſaid, [i] Who is able to ſtand before this holy LORD God? and to whom ſhall he go up from us? 21. ¶ And [k] they ſent meſſengers to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim, ſaying, The Philiſtines have brought again the ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you.

v. 19—21. We have here,

1. The puniſhment of the Beth-ſhemites, for their ſinful curioſity. The ark was in general hid from common eyes; the high-prieſt alone beheld it, and that only on one day of the year: this might tempt them to ſeize the opportunity given them, of prying into its contents, as we too commonly covet what is forbidden; but they ſuffer for it. Our tranſlation makes 50070 men ſlain; but ſome, from the unuſual poſition of the numbers in the Hebrew, and from the improbability, that ſo many men ſhould belong to one city, or its villages, imagine only ſeventy were ſlain in Beth-ſhemeſh; and take the 50,000 to refer to the Philiſtines, others interpret it by 50 out of 1000; ſo that 70 out of 1400, who were guilty, ſuffered for it, which would be a kind of ſemi-decimation.

2. Such a ſudden ſtroke from God greatly terrified them. They cry out, Who is able to ſtand before this holy Lord God? convinced of their ſin and guilt, and trembling with juſt apprehenſion ſion where the ruin would ſtop. They are earneſt therefore to have the ark removed, and ſend to the men of Kirjath-jearim, in the tribe of Judah, to fetch it, ſeeming to do them honour, but in truth meaning to get it away from themſelves. Note, (1.) They who look within the ark to the law only, muſt needs be in the terrors of death: but they who look above it to Jeſus Chriſt, the mercy-ſeat, may look and live. (2.) They ſometimes do us the greateſt kindneſs, who meant only to ſerve themſelves.

CHAP. VII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The abode of the ark in Kirjath-jearim for many years, ver. 1, 2. 2. The public appearing of Samuel, as Iſrael's reformer and judge. He is here active, (1.) In recovering Iſrael from their idolatry, ver. 3, 4. (2.) In the reviving of religion among them, ver. 5, 6. (3.) In praying for them againſt the Philiſtines, ver. 7, 8, 9. over whom God, in anſwer to his prayer, gave them a glorious victory, ver. 10, 11. (4.) In erecting a thankful memorial of that victory, ver. 12. (5.) In the improvement of that victory, ver. 13, 14. (6.) In the adminiſtration of juſtice, ver. 15—17.

1. AND the men of Kirjath-jearim came, and fetcht up the ark of the LORD, and brought it into the houſe of Abinadab in the hill, and ſanctified Eleazar his ſon, to keep the ark of the LORD. 2. And it came to paſs while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was long; for it was twenty years: and all the houſe of Iſrael [a] lamented after the LORD.

[a] 2 Sam. iii. 33.

v. 1, 2. Though one place thruſts from it the privileges of the goſpel, another will receive them. The ark which was a burdenſome ſtone to the eyes of the men of Beth-ſhemeſh, is a bleſſing to the men of Kirjath-jearim.

1. They are no ſooner called, than they come and bring it up to their city, with great reverence; provide an abode for it in the houſe of Abinadab, which ſtood on an eminence: a man, it ſhould ſeem, who counted himſelf highly honoured with ſuch a gueſt, and conſecrated his ſon to keep it, not to offer ſacrifice before it, for he was no prieſt; nor was there here any altar; but to keep the place clean, to prevent curious intruders, and to be ready to wait on thoſe pious Iſraelites, who might deſire to pray before it. Note, (1.) More zeal for God and his cauſe is often ſeen in one private Iſraelite, than in many a prieſt. (2.) When the church is under perſecution, and in diſtreſs, a private houſe may be converted into a temple, and a common Iſraelite's ſervice be diſpenſed with.

2. The abode of the ark at Abinadab's houſe was long, between forty and fifty years in all. During the firſt twenty of which, it ſeems to have been almoſt forgotten and diſregarded, till probably by the miniſtry of Samuel, that ſpirit of repentance was diffuſed which was here taken notice of, and they began to lament after the Lord; ſenſible of their great provocations, and deſiring the return of his preſence among them. Note, (1.) Though for a time, the church, like the ark, in this city in the woods, be driven into the wilderneſs, and continue under a cloud, yet ſhall ſhe again ariſe, and ſhine bright and glorious as the ſun, when the eclipſe is over. (2.) They who would return to God, muſt lament over thoſe ſins which have eſtranged them from him.

3. ¶ And Samuel ſpake unto all the houſe of Iſrael, ſaying, If ye do [b] return unto the LORD with all your hearts, then [c] put away the ſtrange gods, and Aſhtaroth from among you, and [d] prepare your hearts unto the LORD, and [e] ſerve him only: and he will deliver you out of the hand of the Philiſtines. 4. Then the children of Iſrael did put away [f] Baalim, and Aſhtaroth, and ſerved the LORD only. 5. And Samuel ſaid, Gather all Iſrael to Mizpeh, and [g] I will pray for you unto the LORD. 6. And they gathered together to Mizpeh, and drew water, and [h] poured it out before the LORD, and [i] faſted on that day, and ſaid there, [k] We have ſinned againſt the LORD. And [l] Samuel judged the children of Iſrael in Mizpeh.

v. 3—6. Though Samuel is not mentioned, yet he ſeems to have been inſtrumental in this repentance, which began to appear; and obſerving as he went about in circuit, ſymptoms of returning to God,

1. He ſolemnly charges them to put away their idols, their male and female deities Baalim and Aſhtaroth: there could be no return unto God whilſt they were kept back. He therefore calls on them to prepare their hearts for the Lord, and cleave to him alone; and then they might hope he would appear for them, and reſcue them from the hand of the Philiſtines, who had ſo long oppreſſed them. Note, (1.) No allowed idol ſin muſt be reſerved, when we would truly turn to God. (2.) The burden of ſin is heavier than the yoke of Philiſtia; but whenever we repent and believe, it will be lightened.

2. Great was the effect of his exhortation. A general reformation enſued; they put away their idols, and ſerved the Lord only. To confirm them in theſe good purpoſes, therefore, he appoints a ſolemn aſſembly in Mizpeh, to perfect what was ſo happily begun; and promiſes to pray for them there, that the Divine Bleſſing and Preſence might return again unto them. Note, (1.) God ſometimes works great and general changes in the manners of a people, and revives the work of religion, when it ſeems utterly decayed. (2.) A miniſter's prayers ſhould accompany his preaching, that God may make his words effectual to the converſion of men's ſouls. (3.) We ſhall always enter the pulpit with greater comfort and confidence, when we go thither from our knees.

3. The people readily obey his ſummons, and when met in Mizpeh, appear deeply affected with their ſins. In token of their ſorrow, ſincerity, and utter renouncing them, they poured out water before the Lord, wept, faſted, and made ſupplication to God, confeſſing their ſins, and imploring forgiveneſs. Note, (1.) The confeſſions and tears of penitence are the ſure forerunners of peace and joy. (2.) National ſins require national faſts, and public humiliation.

4. Samuel judged them there, reformed them from idolatry, puniſhed the incorrigible, eſtabliſhed the true worſhip of God, and adminiſtred juſtice.

7. And [m] when the Philiſtines heard that the children of Iſrael were gathered together to Mizpeh, the lords of the Philiſtines went up againſt Iſrael: and when the children of Iſrael heard it, [n] they were afraid of the Philiſtines. 8. And the children of Iſrael ſaid to Samuel, † Ceaſe not to cry unto the LORD our God for us, that he will ſave us out of the hands of the Philiſtines. 9. ¶ And Samuel took a ſucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt-offering wholly unto the LORD; and Samuel [o] cried unto the LORD for Iſrael, and [p] the LORD heard him. 10. And as Samuel was offering up the burnt-offering, the Philiſtines drew near to battle againſt Iſrael: but [q] the LORD thundred with a great thunder on that day upon the Philiſtines, and diſcomfited them, and they were ſmitten before Iſrael. 11. And the men of Iſrael went out of Mizpeh, and purſued the Philiſtines, and ſmote them, until they came under Beth-car. 12. Then Samuel [r] took a ſtone, and ſet it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it † Eben-ezer, ſaying, [s] Hitherto hath the LORD helped us.

v. 7—12. Satan will begin to roar, when ſinners begin to pray.

1. No ſooner was Iſrael aſſembled at Mizpeh to repent, than the Philiſtines take the alarm, and aſſemble to cruſh them, ſuſpecting (as the ſuſpicious are ever ready to do) that their deſigns were evil, and conſtruing their repentance towards God, into rebellion againſt them. Note, The firſt ſtruggles for glory are often the hardeſt.

2. The news terrifies the people; broken with their long ſervitude, though they had never leſs reaſon to fear, than when thus found on their knees before God, they cry to Samuel to help them with his prayers; more dependant now on the arm of God for their ſafety, than on the arm of fleſh. Note, Weak as we are to encounter the numerous hoſts of our ſpiritual enemies, we have a prevailing advocate with the Father, and if he prays for us, it is impoſſible we ſhould finally fail or fall.

3. Samuel is as ready to pray, as they to deſire him, deeply intereſted in Iſrael's ſafety; a ſucking lamb he offers for a burnt-offering, and with the blood of atonement to plead, in faith and prayer approaches the throne of grace. Note, (1.) Jeſus Chriſt is the ſlain lamb, offered up to God for us ſinners. (2.) Thro' the efficacy of his ſacrifice, we may come before God; aſſured whatſoever we aſk, believing, we ſhall receive.

4. God hears, and anſwers his requeſt. The Philiſtines drew near, whilſt the ſacrifice was offering, and never was an attack ſo ill-timed for them, ſo critical for Iſrael. Armed with hot thunder-bolts, in wrath the God of Iſrael aroſe, and who can ſtand before the blaſting breath of his diſpleaſure? The flaſhing lightnings glare around, the terrible thunders roll above them, terror and amaze ſeize their affrighted hoſts, they turn, they fly; whilſt the men of Iſrael, ſhouting, purſue their defenceleſs foes, and ſmite them down, like ſheep appointed for the ſlaughter. Note, (1.) When God ariſes, his enemies muſt be ſcattered. (2.) Glorious and inſtant are the anſwers God often gives to the prayer of faith.

5. Samuel commemorates the glorious victory, by ſetting up a great ſtone on the ſpot, and calling it Ebenezer, The Stone of help. And it is remarkable, this was the very place where Iſrael, chap. iv. 1. were defeated by the Philiſtines, in which paſſage this name is given it by anticipation. Note, (1.) Anſwers of prayer, deſerve memorials of gratitude. (2.) Every chriſtian may, by experience, ſet up his Ebenezer, and whilſt he acknowledges paſt help, confidently depend on the continuance of the ſame protection.

13. ¶ So the Philiſtines were ſubdued, and they came no more into the coaſt of Iſrael: and the hand of the LORD was againſt the Philiſtines, all the days of Samuel. 14. And the cities which the Philiſtines had taken from Iſrael were reſtored to Iſrael, from Ekron even unto Gath, and the coaſts thereof did Iſrael deliver out of the hands of the Philiſtines: and [t] there was peace between Iſrael and the Amorites. 15. And Samuel judged Iſrael [u] all the days of his life. 16. And he went from year to year in circuit to Beth-el, and Gilgal, and Mizpeh, and judged Iſrael in all thoſe places. 17. And his return was to Ramah; for there was his houſe: and there he judged Iſrael, and there he built an altar unto the LORD.

v. 13—17. Great were the bleſſings which followed this victory, under Samuel's wiſe and ſpirited adminiſtration.

1. The Philiſtines were ſo broken and intimidated, that they gave Iſrael no more diſturbance, whilſt Samuel preſided; but quitted all the cities, which they had taken between Ekron and Gaza peaceably to them. And the Amorites, now ſtruck with terror, were glad to be left quiet, ſo that peace was perfectly reſtored within their borders. Note, (1.) When a man's ways pleaſe the Lord, he maketh his enemies to be at peace with him. (2.) Prayer and penitence can do more for a nation, than the ſword.

2. The internal peace of the people was ſecured to them by the regular adminiſtration of juſtice. Samuel went his yearly circuit, to Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpeh, where he heard and determined the cauſes which were brought before him; and at his reſidence in Ramah, judged Iſrael, who brought their complaints thither, and abode by his deciſions; and perhaps came thither to worſhip and offer ſacrifices, and to hear his preaching, and partake of his prayers: for Samuel had built an altar at Ramah, as no other place was yet fixed for ſtated offerings to God. As a prophet raiſed up of God, he might be authorized to offer his own and the people's ſacrifices there, till the ark and tabernacle-worſhip ſhould be again ſet up. Note, (1.) The adminiſtration of impartial juſtice is among the greateſt bleſſings any land can enjoy. (2.) They will be upright in their deciſions among men, who, like Samuel, keep God always before them, and walk in his fear and worſhip. An irreligious judge cannot be truly impartial.

1. AND it came to paſs when Samuel was old, that [a] he made his ſons judges over Iſrael. 2. Now the name of his firſt-born was † Joel, and the name of his ſecond, Abiah: they were judges in Beer-ſheba. 3. And [b] his ſons walked not in his ways, but [c] turned aſide after lucre, and [d] took bribes, and perverted judgment.

v. 1—3. Samuel now began to ſink under age and infirmities, and being no longer able to undergo the fatigue, appoints his ſons aſſiſtant judges; not out of partiality for them, we may hope, but becauſe they were beſt qualified, had a good education, and promiſed to tread in his ſteps; but they ſadly degenerated from their father's example, being fixed at Beerſheba, at a diſtance from him, for the convenience of that part of the country, they took bribes, and perverted judgment; deciding in favour not of him who had moſt right, but moſt money. Note, (1.) Old age will put a period to our uſefulneſs, therefore, before the evil days come, what our hand findeth to do, let us do it with our might. (2.) A good education does not always produce a gracious conduct; nor a pious father tranſmit his virtues to his children. (3.) Though outward decency may be kept up, under the eye of a careful inſpector, when the heart is unconverted, diſtance quickly removes the reſtraint, and the inward corruption appears. (4.) Covetouſneſs is among the moſt dangerous ſnares to the ſoul. (5.) A corrupt judge is a great curſe to any people.

4. Then all the elders of Iſrael gathered themſelves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah. 5. And ſaid unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy ſons walk not in thy ways: now [e] make us a king to judge us like all the nations. 6. ¶ But [f] the thing diſpleaſed Samuel, when they ſaid, Give us a king to judge us: and [g] Samuel prayed unto the LORD. 7. And the LORD ſaid unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they ſay unto thee: for they have not rejected [h] thee, but they have rejected [i] me, that [k] I ſhould not reign over them. 8. According to all the works which they have done ſince the day that I brought them up out of Egypt even unto this day, wherewith they have forſaken me, and ſerved other gods: ſo do they alſo unto thee. 9. Now therefore hearken unto their voice: † howbeit, yet proteſt ſolemnly unto them, and ſhew them the manner of the king that ſhall reign over them. 10. ¶ And Samuel told all the words of the LORD unto the people, that aſked of him a king. 11. And he ſaid, This will be the manner of the king that ſhall reign over you: [l] He will take your ſons, and appoint them for himſelf, for his chariots, and to be his horſemen, and ſome ſhall run before his chariots. 12. And he will appoint him captains over thouſands, and captains over fifties, and will ſet them to ear his ground, and to reap his harveſt, and to make his inſtruments of war, and inſtruments of his chariots. 13. And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. 14. And [m] he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your olive-yards, even the beſt of them, and give them to his ſervants. 15. And he will take the tenth of your ſeed, and of your vineyards, and give to his ‡ officers, and to his ſervants. 16. And he will take your men-ſervants, and your maid-ſervants, and your goodlieſt young men, and your aſſes, and put them to his work. 17. He will take the tenth of your ſheep: and ye ſhall be his ſervants. 18. And [n] ye ſhall cry out in that day, becauſe of your king which ye ſhall have choſen you; and [o] the LORD will not hear you in that day. 19. ¶ Nevertheleſs [p] the people refuſed to obey the voice of Samuel; and they ſaid, [q] Nay, but we will have a king over us: 20. That [r] we alſo may be like all the nations and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles. 21. And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and he rehearſed them in the ears of the LORD. 22. And the LORD ſaid to Samuel, Hearken unto their voice, and make them a king. And Samuel ſaid unto the men of Iſrael, Go ye every man unto his city.

v. 4—22. We have here a motion made for the alteration of the government, and the introduction of monarchy among the Jewiſh people.

1. Taking occaſion from the ill conduct of Samuel's ſons, ſome intriguing ſpirits excite the people in general to a change of government, and for this purpoſe they aſſemble in a body at Ramah, with a remonſtrance of their grievance, and a petition for redreſs in the appointment of a king over them, like the nations around them, that he might keep a court, and appear in ſtate and dignity amongſt them. A requeſt not only highly ſinful againſt God, but moſt ungrateful to Samuel, whoſe own adminiſtration had been ſo upright, and who deſerved no blame for his ſon's ill conduct, having given them better advice, and being ready to have ſuperſeded their commiſſions on the people's juſt complaints. Note, It is not unuſual for thoſe to meet with ungrateful returns, and to be neglected when they are old, who have ſpent their lives in the ſervice of the public.

2. Samuel deeply reſents the propoſal, not becauſe of their ill uſage of himſelf, but ſenſible of their great ſin againſt God, and therefore ere he returns an anſwer, he flies to God for direction, and probably intercedes with him for their pardon, fearing leaſt wrath ſhould go forth againſt them. Note, (1.) When we are in difficulties, it is a great relief to have a God of wiſdom and love to cry to. (2.) They who uſe us ungratefully, muſt have a remembrance in our prayer, not only to engage God to pardon them, but ourſelves to forgive and love them.

3. God anſwers his prayer, and gives him directions what to reply to the people. He muſt not be grieved at the inſult offered him, ſince it was more aimed againſt God himſelf. He was their king, and is rejected by them; nor was their ingratitude to their governors a new thing: ever ſince they came from Egypt, they had acted thus, even to Moſes and Aaron; nor was it to be wondered they ſought a new king, when they had ſo often ſought new gods: let them have therefore their requeſt, but it ſhall be a king in anger, and of this Samuel muſt ſolemnly warn them; ſince they will be like the nations around them, they ſhall feel the kingly ſceptre to be an iron rod. Note, (1.) When we come to God in prayer, he will anſwer us for our direction and comfort. (2.) We may not expect kind returns from thoſe, who have ſhewn their ingratitude to others before us.

4. Samuel makes a faithful report of the Divine meſſage; admoniſhing them of God's diſpleaſure at their requeſt, and the conſequences which would follow from the eſtabliſhment of that kingly government they were ſo ſet upon. They looked only to the pomp, but conſidered not they muſt bear the burden. Under his deſpotic ſway, their ſons would be enſlaved, liſted in his guards as ſoldiers, or as footmen attendant on his chariot, or as ſervants employed to till and reap his ground. His table, covered with luxury, would require their daughters laborious ſervice, to prepare for it proviſions and delicacies: to gratify his favourites, or reward his officers, the inſtruments of his oppreſſion, the beſt of their poſſeſſions would be plundered; whilſt rivalling the tabernacle of God, another tenth of their increaſe muſt be paid for ſupport of his grandeur. When theſe burdens were felt, they would complain, but in vain: God would juſtly reject their petitions, and leave them to the miſery they had courted. Note, (1.) The gratification of our inordinate deſires brings a plague along with it. (2.) They who rejected God, are juſtly rejected by him.

5. Far from deſiſting on this repreſentation, they obſtinately perſevere in their demands, and will have a king, diſcrediting Samuel's report; perhaps ſuſpecting him of deſign. They will be like the nations, tho' ſlaves, and have a king to go before them to battle; though taught by late experience, how much better it was to have God to fight for them, than to fight for themſelves. Note, (1.) No reproofs will reſtrain the obſtinate ſinner. (2.) The kindeſt advice is ſometimes liable to be miſrepreſented as ſelfiſh and deſigning.

6. Samuel, at God's command, conſents to their requeſt: having retired to wait upon God, and know his final reſolution, he is commanded to aſſure them, they ſhall have a king, and bids them in the mean time return, and expect ſhortly to hear the nomination of the perſon God would chuſe to reign in Iſrael.

v. 1, 2. It being reſolved a king ſhould reign, this chapter opens with an account of a perſon who ſeemed to correſpond to the people's wiſhes. A Benjamite, whoſe name is Saul, the ſame the great Apoſtle bore, who was of this tribe alſo. The ſon of Kiſh, a great man in wealth and influence; his perſon remarkably noble and tall, graceful, and finely proportioned, ſo that to look upon, Iſrael produced not ſuch another. Note, (1.) A good look is a ſtrong letter of recommendation. (2.) A noble preſence in a king, adds double dignity to his ſtation.

3. And [c] the aſſes of Kiſh, Saul's father, were loſt; and Kiſh ſaid to Saul his ſon, Take now one of the ſervants with thee, and ariſe, go ſeek the aſſes. 4. And he paſſed through mount Ephraim, and paſſed through the land of Shaliſha, but they found them not: then they paſſed through the land of Shalim, and there they were not: and he paſſed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not. 5. And when they were come to the land of Zuph, Saul ſaid to his ſervant that was with him, Come, and let us return; leſt my father leave caring for the aſſes, and take thought for us. 6. And he ſaid unto him, Behold now, there is in this city [d] a man of God, and he is [e] an honourable man; [f] all that he ſaith, cometh ſurely to paſs: now let us go thither; peradventure he can ſhew us our way that we ſhould go. 7. Then ſaid Saul to his ſervant, But behold, if we go, [g] what ſhall we bring the man? for the bread is ſpent in our veſſels, and there is not a preſent to bring to the man of God: what have we? 8. And the ſervant anſwered Saul again, and ſaid, Behold, † I have here at hand the fourth part of a ſhekel of ſilver: that will I give to the man of God, to tell us our way. 9. (Beforetime in Iſrael, when [h] a man went to enquire of God, thus he ſpake, Come, and let us go to the ſeer: for he that is now called a Prophet, was beforetime called [i] a Seer.) 10. Then ſaid Saul to his ſervant, † Well ſaid, come, let us go: ſo they went unto the city where the man of God was.

v. 3—10. Few would have looked for a king choſen from ſuch an employment; but God's choice is often marvellous in our eyes. We have here,

1. Saul ſent to ſeek his father's aſſes, which were ſtrayed. Agreable to the ſimplicity of thoſe days, when no man was too great to mind his own affairs, Kiſh ſends his ſon with a ſervant in queſt of the ſtrayed aſſes; and his ſon, forward to obey his parent's orders, and induſtrious in his buſineſs, immediately ſets himſelf to make ſearch after them.

2. Their ſearch was long and fruitleſs; and Saul, apprehenſive his father would be uneaſy at his abſence, reſolves to give over and return. Dutiful children will always thus tenderly conſult their parents peace.

3. The ſervant reflecting they were near Ramah, where Samuel dwelt, ſuggeſts whether it might not be worth their while to conſult him on the occaſion; he gives him a great character as a man of God, and a moſt reſpectable perſon; a ſeer, whoſe prophecies always come to paſs, and who might be able to inform them of their loſt aſſes. Note, (1.) When we are near a man of God, it is worth while to call upon him, and not to paſs by without a word of advice. (2.) People are uſually more ſollicitous about the things of the world, than the things of God: and ſo prepoſterous in their care, that they who would run to conſult a miniſter of God, could he direct them to the recovery of loſt goods, will neither conſult nor be directed by him, for the recovery of their loſt ſouls.

4. The advice was good; but Saul heſitates, becauſe their money was ſpent, and their victuals almoſt finiſhed, and therefore they could not make the cuſtomary preſent: not as the price for divination, but the token of reſpect, which was common from inferiors to their ſuperiors in the eaſt. This objection the ſervant anſwers, by producing a bit of ſilver, the fourth part of a ſhekel; whereupon they proceed to the city, where Samuel the ſeer dwelt, which name is taken notice of, as the general appellation then, of thoſe who were afterwards ſtiled prophets. Note, They who are appointed to teach others, muſt firſt ſee the truth diſtinctly themſelves.

11. ¶ And as they went up the hill to the city, [k] they found young maidens going out to draw water, and ſaid unto them, Is the ſeer here? 12. And they anſwered them, and ſaid, He is; behold he is before you: make haſte now, for he came to day to the city; for there is a † ſacrifice of the people to day [l] in the high place. 13. As ſoon as ye be come into the city, ye ſhall ſtraightway find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat until he come, becauſe he doth bleſs the ſacrifice, and afterwards they eat that be bidden. Now therefore get you up, for about this time ye ſhall find him. 14. And they went up into the city: and when they were come into the city, behold, Samuel came out againſt them, for to go up to the high place.

v. 11—14. Saul drawing nigh to Ramah, meets ſome maidens, of whom he enquires concerning the ſeer, and receives very particular information concerning him. His houſe was juſt before them, but they muſt make haſte, for he was juſt going to the high place in the city, it being a day of ſolemn ſacrifice, which as there was no ſettled place for God's worſhip at preſent, might be performed on Samuel's altar, chap. vii. 17. and the people waited for his benediction on the table, before they ſat down to feaſt on their ſacrifice. Note, (1.) Whether we eat or drink, it ſhould be to the glory of God, and after having firſt craved his bleſſing: irreverent meals ſhew an irreligious temper. (2.) Thoſe who are enquiring after a true prophet, we ſhould delight to help on their way.

15. ¶ Now [m] the LORD had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, ſaying, 16. To morrow about this time I will ſend thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou ſhalt anoint him to be captain over my people Iſrael, that he may ſave my people out of the hand of the Philiſtines: for I have looked upon my people, becauſe their cry is come unto me. 17. v. 15—17. Samuel was now juſt coming from his door when Saul appears in ſight. He had, by a ſecret whiſper from God the preceding day, been informed of his deſign, to ſend to him the perſon appointed to be the ruler of his people; and though in anger this king was given, yet God hath deſigns of grace to anſwer: though they ſhall ſmart by their king, they ſhall be ſaved by him from their enemies. Their cry God hath heard; whether the cry of diſtreſs from fear of the Philiſtines, or their former ſupplication to Samuel; and now behold the man whom God hath appointed to reign over Iſrael as a king; or as the word ſignifies, to reſtrain them from the evil of their ways. Note, (1.) Circumſtances that appear utterly fortuitous, are yet all ordered of God with deep deſign. (2.) When God will puniſh his people, he will in wrath remember mercy.

18. Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and ſaid, Tell me, I pray thee, where the ſeer's houſe is. 19. And Samuel anſwered Saul, and ſaid, I am the ſeer: go up before me unto the high place, for ye ſhall eat with me to day; and to-morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart. 20. And as for thine aſſes that were loſt three days ago, ſet not thy mind on them, for they are found: and on whom is all the deſire of Iſrael? is it not on thee, and on all thy father's houſe? 21. And Saul anſwered and ſaid, Am not I a Benjamite [o] of the ſmalleſt of the tribes of Iſrael? and [p] my family the leaſt of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? wherefore then ſpeakeſt thou ſo to me? 22. And Samuel took Saul, and his ſervant, and brought them into the parlour, and made them ſit in the chiefeſt place among them that were bidden, which were about thirty perſons. 23. And Samuel ſaid unto the cook, Bring [q] the portion which I give thee, of which I ſaid unto thee, Set it by thee. 24. And the cook took up the [r] ſhoulder, and that which was upon it, and ſet it before Saul: and Samuel ſaid, Behold, that which is left, ſet it before thee, and eat; for unto this time hath it been kept for thee, ſince I ſaid, I have invited the people: ſo Saul did eat with Samuel that day. 25. ¶ And when they were come down from the high place into the city, Samuel communed with Saul [s] upon the top of the houſe. 26. And they aroſe early: and it came to paſs about the ſpring of the day, that Samuel called Saul to the top of the houſe, ſaying, Up, that I may ſend thee away. And Saul aroſe, and they went out both of them, he and Samuel, abroad. 27. And as they were going down to the end of the city, Samuel ſaid to Saul, Bid the ſervant paſs on before us, (and he paſſed on) but ſtand thou ſtill a while, that I may † ſhew thee the word of God.

v. 18—27. We have here the firſt interview between Saul and Samuel. Meeting a man in the gate of the city, bearing no marks of diſtinction about him, Saul enquired after the ſeer, and was not a little ſurprized when he heard him reply, I am he.

1. Samuel hereupon, without his enquiry, ſatisfies him concerning the buſineſs he came upon: the aſſes are found, he need not farther concern himſelf about them; he preſſes him to ſpend the day with him at the feaſt, ſends him up before him to the high place, either as giving him precedence, or as having ſome buſineſs to do by the way, and drops an intimation of that preferment, which, little as he thought of it, God intended for him.

2. Saul heſitates at the meſſage, and can ſcarce believe him in earneſt, modeſtly ſpeaking of his family and ſelf, as unworthy of ſuch an honour. Note, An humble mind is the ornament of every ſtation.

3. At the feaſt, Samuel treats him with peculiar diſtinction: he is ſet in the higheſt place, and the beſt diſh carried to him; which before he came had been deſigned and ſet apart for him, and his ſervant ſhares in his maſter's honour, and partakes of the entertainment. Note, (1.) Whom God honours, we muſt reſpect for his ſake, and yield that place to them which Providence has aſſigned. (2.) We muſt not envy thoſe whom God is pleaſed to advance, though we ourſelves may be eclipſed by them.

4. When they came down from the high place, Samuel ſpent the evening and next morning in communion with Saul on the roof of his houſe, which was flat, and for coolneſs much reſorted to; and we may ſuppoſe, fully informed him concerning God's election, his own readineſs to reſign to him, and the behaviour ſuitable to his ſtation, and probably prayed for him and over him, that he might be faithful to his truſt. Thus very early in the morning, he brought him on his journey, and having deſired him to diſmiſs his ſervant, he confirms the word which he had ſpoken to him from God, by a ſolemn anointing him as king, as the beginning of the next chapter will inform us.

v. 1—8. Samuel now gives Saul a confirmation of the word of God he had ſpoken to him.

1. By anointing him ſolemnly as God's king elect, and kiſſing him in token of hearty congratulation and chearful homage. Theſe unctions pointed to the Great King, emphatically called the Meſſiah, who was anointed with the oil of gladneſs above his fellows, and on whom the fulneſs of the ſpirit in all his gifts and graces reſted.

2. By giving him certain ſigns for the confirmation of his faith in this tranſaction. (1.) That in the way at Rachel's ſepulchre, at Zelzah, he ſhould meet two men, who would inform him that the aſſes he ſought were found, and his father now in pain for his return. (2.) That afterwards he ſhould meet three men going to Bethel, where was an high place to ſacrifice, with three kids, three loaves, and a bottle of wine; and though unknown to them, they would ſalute him, and give him two loaves of bread, which he ſhould receive, not only as proviſion for his journey, but as the firſt-fruits of his office as king. (3.) That a more extraordinary thing ſhould happen to him at Geba, where was a garriſon of the Philiſtines, and a ſchool of prophets, educated under the care of ſome eminent man, and trained up in religious exerciſes, pſalmody, and the ſtudy of the law: theſe he ſhould meet coming down from ſacrificing on the high place, with inſtruments of muſic praiſing God; hereupon he ſhould inſtantly be ſeized with ſacred rapture, and though untaught before, be enabled to join with them in theſe divine exerciſes, and prophecy or praiſe in the midſt of them, and in his ſpirit ſhould alſo experience a great change, ſo that he ſhould be another man, filled with thoſe qualifications befitting the high office he was appointed unto. Theſe ſigns conveyed leſſons of inſtruction; at Rachel's ſepulchre, he might read the vanity of grandeur; from the bread he received, to be kind to the poor; and from this firſt connection with God's prophets, to maintain and ſupport thoſe ſeminaries of religion and learning, which would conduce much to the benefit of his people.

3. Samuel gives him directions to act hereupon, as occaſion ſhould ſerve, according to the wiſdom God would give him; and on emergencies he ſhould go down to Gilgal, where, within in ſeven days after notice, Samuel would meet him, and offer ſacrifices for him, and ſhew him what to do; but he muſt by no means proceed to ſacrifice till Samuel come. The diſobedience to this order was afterwards the forfeiture of his kingdom.

9. ¶ And it was ſo, that when he had turned his back to go from Samuel, God † gave him another heart: and all thoſe ſigns came to paſs that day. 10. And when they came thither to the hill, behold, a company of prophets met him, and the ſpirit of God came upon him, and he propheſied among them. 11. And it came to paſs when all that knew him beforetime, ſaw, that behold, he propheſied among the prophets, then the people ſaid one to another, What is this that is come unto the ſon of Kiſh? [m] Is Saul alſo among the prophets? 12. And one of the ſame place anſwered and ſaid, But [n] who is their father? Therefore it became a proverb, Is Saul alſo among the prophets? 13. And when he had made an end of propheſying, he came to the high-place. 14. ¶ And Saul's uncle ſaid unto him, and unto his ſervant, Whither went ye? And he ſaid, To ſeek the aſſes; and when we ſaw that they were no where, we came to Samuel. 15. And Saul's uncle ſaid, Tell me, I pray thee, what Samuel ſaid unto you. 16. And Saul ſaid unto his uncle, He told us plainly that the aſſes were found. But [o] of the matter of the kingdom whereof Samuel ſpake, he told him not.

v. 9—16. Saul and Samuel now part. Saul returns homeward, and feels a wondrous change paſſed upon him; no longer groveling cares, nor ſervile labours engage his thoughts, but high and elevated ſentiments becoming a king, the redreſſing Iſrael's grievances, and the weighty concerns of the ſtate poſſeſs his ſoul. The ſigns happened according to the prediction, and the laſt of them is particularly taken notice of.

No ſooner was he come to the hill, than he met the prophets, and inſtantly joined in their devout exerciſes. As he was ſo near home, and well known there, thoſe who ſaw him expreſſed their aſtoniſhment, that an untutor'd huſbandman, the ſon of Kiſh, ſhould be thus engaged; when one of the company well obſerved, Who is their father? Is not all prophecy from God? What ſignifies whoſe ſon he is, or what was his employment, if God calls and qualifies him? This afterwards became a proverb, when a perſon of low ſtation was raiſed to any dignity, or a perſon of immoral character reclaimed, Is Saul alſo among the prophets? Note, (1.) Many ſuch a wonder hath divine grace wrought, where the chief of ſinners have become moſt eminent among the ſaints. (2.) Let not great and ſudden changes be too much depended on. A man may have a new tongue, new company, new manners, and yet not truly become a new man.

When he had made an end of prophecying, the gift not continuing always, he came to the high place to acknowledge the mercies he had received, and then returned. His uncle meeting him as he arrived, enquired of his journey, the cauſe of which he informs him, and their viſit to Samuel; on which his uncle, perhaps ſuſpecting ſomething from the univerſal expectation which was raiſed of a king, is ſollicitous to know what paſſed. But Saul prudently concealed what related to the kingdom; as it ſeemed not yet a proper occaſion to declare himſelf, and Samuel might have enjoined him to ſecrecy, till the time came, when his election ſhould be publickly notified; and therefore he only ſpeaks of the anſwer Samuel gave him concerning the aſſes. Note, (1.) The art of prudent concealment is a piece of true wiſdom. (2.) The heirs of God's kingdom will be content to be unknown in the world, till God himſelf ſhall proclaim their glory.

17. ¶ And Samuel called the people together [p] unto the LORD to Mizpeh; 18. And ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, [g] I brought up Iſrael out of Egypt, and delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all kingdoms, and of them that oppreſſed you. 19. And ye have this day [r] rejected your God, who himſelf ſaved you out of all your adverſities and your tribulations: and ye have ſaid unto him, [s] Nay, but ſet a king over us. Now therefore preſent yourſelves before the LORD by your tribes, and [t] by your thouſands. 20. And when Samuel had cauſed all the tribes of Iſrael to [u] come near, the tribe of Benjamin was taken. 21. When he had cauſed the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Matri was taken, and Saul the ſon of Kiſh was taken: and when they ſought him, he could not be found. 22. Therefore [x] they enquired of the LORD further, if the man ſhould yet come thither: and the LORD anſwered, Behold, [y] he hath hid himſelf among the ſtuff. 23. And they ran and fetched him thence: and when he ſtood among the people, [z] he was higher than any of the people, from his ſhoulders and upward. 24. And Samuel ſaid to all the people, See ye him whom the LORD hath choſen, that there is none like him among all the people? And all the people ſhouted, and ſaid, † God ſave the king. 25. Then Samuel told the people [a] the manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the LORD: and Samuel ſent all the people away, every man to his houſe. 26. ¶ And Saul alſo went home to Gibeah, and there went with him a band of men, whoſe hearts God had touched. 27. But [b] the children of Belial ſaid, How ſhall this man ſave us? And they deſpiſed him, and [c] brought him no preſents: but he ‡ held his peace.

v. 17—27. The people's impatience for a king is now to be gratified. A ſolemn convocation is called at Mizpeh, under Samuel as preſident, in order to fix on the perſon.

1. Samuel opens the convocation, with a ſevere rebuke of their wickedneſs in thus reſolving to have a king, which was in fact rejecting God, who had hitherto governed them more immediately himſelf, and ſaved them by multiplied miracles. What man could they chuſe like unto him? Note, They who reject God's government, ſin againſt their own mercies.

2. The choice of the perſon being yet to be referred to God, Samuel cauſes the tribes to come near, by their repreſentatives, in order to caſt lots, and Benjamin is choſen. Of the families of Benjamin, the lot falls on Matri, and Saul the ſon of Kiſh is fixed upon as the man. But whilſt any man beſides would have been eager to ſhew himſelf, they cannot find him: for perceiving how the lot was going, and expecting from what had paſſed, that it would come to him, he hid himſelf, unwilling to take a charge for which he apprehended he was too unqualified; fearing too perhaps, that this crown would be a crown of thorns, when God's diſpleaſure at the matter had been ſo ſolemnly declared, and the ſtate of affairs from the Philiſtines and Amorites looked ſo lowring and dangerous.

3. The people hereupon enquire farther; whether he who was choſen, ſhould yet come to the aſſembly, or how they might find him? and they are directed to fetch him from his hiding-place among the baggage, which was immediately done.

4. When he appeared, his majeſtic preſence ſeemed deſigned for the dignity to which he was advanced. Samuel bids them look upon him, tall as a cedar, and admire the divine choice of a perſon, ſo ſuited to their wiſhes: hereupon the earth rings with ſhouting, God ſave the King, or Let the King live; let his reign be long and glorious, under the Divine protection and bleſſing. Note, It is the duty of every good ſubject, to pray for the life and proſperity of the ſovereign whom God appoints over him.

5. The King being choſen of God, muſt rule according to divine preſcription. The manner of the kingdom, how he muſt govern, and they obey, Samuel declares; and for the continual obſervance of theſe rules, writes them in a book, to be laid up in the tabernacle, and referred to on occaſion. Hereupon the people are diſmiſſed, Saul not immediately taking upon him the exerciſe of government. Note, Kings muſt remember, though they are above others, they are not above law.

6. The congregation broke up with very different ſentiments of their king. Some reſpected the Divine choice, and when Saul returned to his houſe at Gibeah, they accompanied him as body guard, to do him honour; having their hearts touched of God, inclined to pay the duty they owed their new ſovereign. But others, ſons of Belial, who had no regard for a king of God's appointment, and arrogantly conceiting they could have choſen a man of greater power, influence, and rank, than the ſon of Kiſh; perhaps envious at his advancement, and thinking themſelves injured by the preference given him; deſpiſed him, as a mean contemptible fellow, unfit to be a king, would not congratulate him on his acceſſion, nor bring him any preſents, in token of their ſubmiſſion and allegiance. This contempt Saul wiſely overlooked, till a proper occaſion offered, to ſhew how deſerving he was of the honour conferred on him, by deeds of valour which ſhould ſhame his enemies to an acknowledgment of his deſert. Note, (1.) When God touches the heart, we ſhall be inclined to follow chearfully Jeſus our king. (2.) They who are offended at the meanneſs of Jeſus in the manger, will tremble before him, when he ſhall come at the head of his angelic hoſts. (3.) It is wiſdom to diſſemble ſometimes our knowledge of the wrongs done us, leaſt the breach be made irreparable, which patience and forbearing might have healed.

CHAP. XI.

In this chapter we have the firſt-fruits of Saul's government, in the reſcue of Jabeſh-gilead. Here is, 1. The great extremity to which the city was reduced by the Ammonites, ver. 1—3. 2. Saul's readineſs to come to their relief, ver. 4—10. 3. The ſucceſs of his attempt, ver. 11. 4. His tenderneſs to thoſe that had oppoſed him, ver. 12, 13. 5. The public confirmation of his election to the government, ver. 14, 15.

1. THEN Nahaſh the Ammonite came up, and encamped againſt Jabeſh-gilead: and all the men of Jabeſh ſaid unto Nahaſh, [a] Make a covenant with us, and we will ſerve thee. 2. And Nahaſh the Ammonite anſwered them, [b] On this condition will I make a covenant with you, that I may thruſt out all your right eyes, and lay it for a reproach upon all Iſrael. 3. And the elders of Jabeſh ſaid unto him, † Give us ſeven days reſpite, that we may ſend meſſengers unto all the coaſts of Iſrael: and then if there be no man to ſave us, we will come out to thee. 4. ¶ Then came [c] the meſſengers to Gibeah of Saul, and told the tidings in the ears of the people: and all the people lift up their voices, and wept.

v. 1—4. Jabeſh-gilead is hardly yet reinhabited and recovered from its deſolations, Judg. xxi. 10. before it is threatned with a ſecond ſcourge from the ſword of Ammon.

1. Nahaſh king of the Ammonites beſieges them; and fearing themſelves unable to reſiſt his forces, they ſue for peace, and offer to become tributary.

2. The conditions propoſed by this haughty king, are cruel and ignominious; not content with their ſervice, he would torment them with the loſs of their right eye, unfit them for war, and leave a brand upon the whole nation, as unable to defend themſelves. Note, They who offer to become ſervants to ſin and Satan, will find the bitterneſs and baſeneſs of this ſervice.

3. They deſire ſeven days reſpite, to acquaint their brethren of their diſtreſs; and if during this time they are not ſuccoured, they will ſubmit to his tyrannical demands. This being granted from the confidence of the impoſſibility of help, they ſend to Saul at Gibeah; and their ſituation, when known in the city, produces a general lamentation. Note, The ſorrows of his brethren, a Chriſtian heart feels as his own.

5. And behold, Saul came after the † herd out of the field, and Saul ſaid, What aileth the people that they weep? and they told him the tidings of the men of Jabeſh.
6. And [d] the ſpirit of God came upon Saul, when he heard thoſe tidings, and his anger was kindled greatly.
7. And he took a yoke of oxen, and [e] hewed them in pieces, and ſent them throughout all the coaſts of Iſrael by the hands of meſſengers, ſaying, Whoſoever cometh not forth after Saul and after Samuel, [f] ſo ſhall it be done unto his oxen: and the fear of the LORD fell on the people, and they came out ‡ with one conſent.
8. And when he numbred them in Bezek, the children of Iſrael were three hundred thouſand, and the men of Judah thirty thouſand. 9. And they ſaid unto the meſſengers that came, Thus ſhall ye ſay unto the men of Jabeſh-gilead, To-morrow by that time the ſun be hot, ye ſhall have help. And the meſſengers came and ſhewed it to the men of Jabeſh, and they were glad. 10.
Therefore the men of Jabeſh ſaid, To-morrow we will come out unto you, and ye ſhall do with us all that ſeemeth good unto you. 11. And it was ſo [g] on the morrow, that Saul put the people in three ‖ companies, and they came into the midſt of the hoſt [h] in the morning watch, and ſlew the Ammonites, until the heat of the day: and it came to paſs, that they which remained were ſcattered, ſo that [i] two of them were not left together.

v. 5—11. The ſons of Belial now ſhall ſee whether Saul is able to ſave them or not.

1. Saul was in the field tending his cattle when the meſſage came. Though choſen to be a king, yet returning to his old employment till God ſhould call him out to action. As he followed his cattle home, the cry of the people excited his enquiry; and when he heard the cauſe, anger againſt the inhuman Ammonite kindled in his boſom; he felt his ſpirit moved with unuſual ardour, and inſtantly reſolves the reſcue of Jabeſh-gilead. Note, (1.) We muſt not hear the ſorrows of the afflicted, without kind enquiries, and proffering ready help to alleviate their miſeries. (2.) A holy indignation againſt deeds of cruelty and wickedneſes is highly commendable.

2. The method he took to raiſe the forces of Iſrael. He hewed a yoke of oxen in pieces, and ſent theſe by the meſſengers into all the coaſts, threatning ſo to do by their oxen who ſhould be abſent from the general rendezvous; and joined Samuel's name with his own, both to pay him honour, and to engage the readier ſubmiſſion. The effect produced was great; God put his fear upon the people, and they inſtantly aſſembled from every quarter, to the number of three hundred thouſand men of Iſrael, beſides thirty thouſand of Judah; whoſe proportion, though apparently ſmaller than might be expected, may eaſily be accounted for, as the Philiſtines lay on their borders, againſt whom they muſt be guarded. Note, Where the fear of God is in the heart, there men will make conſcience of their duty in every ſtation, and be on principle good ſubjects, good ſoldiers, and good ſervants.

3. Confident of ſucceſs, Saul ſends the meſſengers back with aſſurance of immediate relief: he doubted not but on the morrow he ſhould be with them, which filled the city with joy. To perform his promiſe, he marches inſtantly in three bodies; and though the diſtance was ſixty miles, and all on foot, on the third day before morning watch, he broke into the camp of the Ammonites, lulled into ſecurity with the meſſage the men of Jabeſh-gilead had ſent them, on the return of the meſſengers, that they would come out to them the next day. A general rout enſued; till mid-day they made havock of the flying Ammonites, and ſo diſperſed and deſtroyed them, that not two were left together, of all their numerous hoſts. Note, When we go out, dependant upon God, we ſhall return crowned with victory.

12. ¶ And the people ſaid unto Samuel, Who is he that ſaid, [k] Shall Saul reign over us? bring the men, that we may put them to death. 13. And Saul ſaid, [l] There ſhall not a man be put to death this day: for to day the LORD hath wrought ſalvation in Iſrael. 14. Then ſaid Samuel to the people, Come, and let us go to Gilgal, and renew the kingdom there. 15. And all the people went to Gilgal, and there [m] they made Saul king before the LORD in Gilgal: and there they ſacrificed ſacrifices of peace-offerings before the LORD: and there Saul and all the men of Iſrael rejoiced greatly.

[m] Chap. x. 24.

v. 12—15. Samuel, it ſeems, had either accompanied them in the expedition, or met them on their return. And, jealous now for the honour of their king, endeared to them by his victory, though they had before taken no notice of the inſult, the people apply to him, as judge in Iſrael, for the death of theſe ſons of Belial, who had deſpiſed the anointed of the Lord. Saul, like a good king, taking more pleaſure in exerciſing his clemency, than executing the offenders, interpoſes, and will not have that day ſtained with Iſraelitiſh blood, in which God had wrought ſo great a ſalvation for them. Note, All our ſucceſſes muſt be aſcribed to God; for it is his arm alone that obtains the victory for us, over our enemies ſpiritual and temporal. Samuel now ſeizes the favourable diſpoſition of the people, to confirm the kingdom to Saul: He led them to Gilgal; and amidſt the joyful ſacrifices for their paſt victory, Saul is ſolemnly inveſted with the ſupreme power by univerſal conſent, and with great ſolemnity. Note, It is good to make uſe of the favourable gale that blows.

CHAP. XII.

In this chapter, we have Samuel's ſpeech to the general aſſembly of the ſtates, when he reſigned the government into the hands of Saul. In which he, 1. Calls them to witneſs to the uprightneſs of his adminiſtration, ver. 1—5. 2. He reminds them of what God had done for them, and for their fathers, ver. 6—13. 3. Sets before them good and evil, the bleſſing and the curſe, ver. 14, 15. 4. Awakens them to regard what he ſaid, by calling to God for thunder, ver. 16—19. And 5. Gives them hopes that all ſhould be well, ver. 20—25.

1. AND Samuel ſaid unto all Iſrael, Behold, I have hearkned unto your voice in all that ye ſaid unto me, and [a] have made a king over you. 2. And now behold, the king walketh before you: And [b] I am old, and gray-headed, and behold, my ſons are with you:
and I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day. 3. Behold, [c] here I am, witneſs againſt me before the LORD, and before his anointed: [d] whoſe ox have I taken? or whoſe aſs have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppreſſed? or of whoſe hand have I received any bribe to [e] blind mine eyes therewith?
and I will reſtore it you. 4. And they ſaid, [f] Thou haſt not defrauded us, nor oppreſſed us, neither haſt thou taken ought of any man's hand. 5. And he

v. 1—5. Before Samuel parted with the aſſembly, he addreſſes himſelf to them,

1. By way of appeal for his own integrity among them. He had now reſigned the government; their king ſtood before them, and he was a ſubject as well as they, and ready to anſwer any man who would call him to account; and his ſons are now private perſons, and open to any accuſation which might be laid againſt them. He reminds them of his grey hairs, which they ſhould have regarded with greater reverence, as coming upon him in their ſervice, in which, from earlieſt infancy he had been employed. He challenges them to lay the leaſt crime to his charge, of bribery or oppreſſion committed by him during all his adminiſtration, and therein tacitly reflects upon their own ſin and folly in rejecting one who, without fee or reward, had governed them with ſuch impartial juſtice. Note, (1.) To vindicate our character from the aſperſions of calumny, is a debt due to a man's good name. (2.) They who are conſcious of their own integrity, are not afraid of enquiry into their conduct.

2. The people willingly bear teſtimony to his uprightneſs among them. He had never oppreſſed them in the leaſt matter, nor received ought at their hands, as a reward for his ſervice. The Lord therefore is appealed to againſt any future charge, as their own confeſſions proclaim his innocence, and they replied, He is witneſs, that they had fully cleared him from every ſuſpicion of mal-adminiſtration. Note, It is a great comfort to have the witneſs of God for our integrity.

6. ¶ And Samuel ſaid unto the people, [h] It is the LORD that advanced Moſes and Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt. 7. Now therefore ſtand ſtill, that [i] I may reaſon with you before the LORD, of all the righteous acts of the LORD, which he did to you and to your fathers. 8. [k] When Jacob was come into Egypt, and [l] your fathers cried unto the LORD, then [m] the LORD ſent Moſes and Aaron, which brought forth your fathers, out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place. 9. And [n] when they forgat the LORD their God, [o] he ſold them into the hand of Siſera, captain of the hoſt of Hazor, and into the hand of [p] the Philiſtines, and into the hand of [q] the king of Moab, and they fought againſt them. 10. And they cried unto the LORD, and ſaid, [r] We have ſinned, becauſe we have forſaken the LORD, and [s] have ſerved Baalim and Aſhtaroth: but now deliver us out of the hand of our enemies, and we will ſerve thee. 11. And the LORD ſent [t] Jerubbaal, and Bedan, and [u] Jephthah, and [x] Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every ſide, and ye dwelled ſafe. 12. And when ye ſaw that Nahaſh the king of the children of Ammon came againſt you, ye ſaid unto me, [y] Nay, but a king ſhall reign over us; when [z] the LORD your God was your king. 13. Now therefore behold [a] the king whom ye have choſen, and whom ye have deſired: and behold, [b] the LORD hath ſet a king over you. 14. [c] If ye will fear the LORD, and ſerve him, and obey his voice, and not rebel againſt the commandment of the LORD, then ſhall both ye, and alſo the king that reigneth over you, continue following the LORD your God. 15. But [d] if ye will not obey the voice of the LORD, but rebel againſt the commandment of the LORD, then ſhall the hand of the LORD be againſt you, as it was againſt your fathers.

v. 6—15. Samuel having vindicated himſelf, proceeds to remind them of what God had done for them, as a proof of their ingratitude in rejecting him; yet with inſtructions how this change might iſſue to their good.

1. He abridges their hiſtory. God had delivered them from Egypt; but their ungrateful fathers forſook him for idols, and brought themſelves thereby into bitter diſtreſs, under Siſera, the Philiſtines, and Moabites: yet, whenever they returned to him in penitence, he returned to them in mercy, and delivered them by the hands of judges divinely raiſed up, until his own time, who had been the laſt of them. Notwithſtanding, they were bent on a king, and God had gratified them. He reaſons therefore with them on the obligation they were under to this gracious God, and their ingratitude in reſolving to have another king; in which alſo his compliance with their requeſt was a freſh token of his patience and mercy towards them. Note, (1.) The more we reflect upon God's dealings with us, the more reaſon we ſhall have to chuſe his government, and to condemn the folly and ingratitude of ever leaving him. (2.) Paſt experience ſhould be remembered for preſent conduct. They who forſook God, always ſuffered for it.

2. He inſtructs them how the alteration of the government might turn to their good. If they were faithful to God, obſervant of his worſhip, and perſevering in his ſervice, then God would keep them in his holy ways, and it ſhould go well with them and their king: but if they apoſtatized from God, then they might expect to feel his heavy hand, till they were conſumed together. Note, (1.) They who are faithful to the grace beſtowed, as their reward, ſhall have that grace confirmed and ſtrengthened. (2.) God's ſervice brings a preſent reward along with it now, and enſures an eternal reward hereafter. (3.) They who will not be brought under the yoke of God's laws, muſt be broken by the rod of his judgments.

16. Now therefore ſtand and ſee this great thing which the LORD will do before your eyes. 17. [e] Is it not wheat-harveſt to-day? [f] I will call unto the LORD, and he ſhall ſend thunder and rain: that ye may perceive and ſee that [g] your wickedneſs is great, which ye have done in the ſight of the LORD, in aſking you a king. 18. So Samuel called unto the LORD, and [h] the LORD ſent thunder and rain that day: and all the people greatly [i] feared the LORD and Samuel. 19. And all the people ſaid unto Samuel, Pray for thy ſervants unto the LORD thy God, that we die not: for we have added unto all our ſins, this evil, to aſk us a king. 20. ¶ And Samuel ſaid unto the people, Fear not: (ye have done all this wickedneſs: yet [k] turn not aſide from following the LORD, but [l] ſerve the LORD with all your heart; 21. And turn ye not aſide: for then [m] ſhould ye go after vain things, which cannot profit nor deliver, for they are vain) 22. For the LORD will not forſake his people, [n] for his great name's ſake: becauſe [o] it hath pleaſed the LORD to make you his people. 23. Moreover, as for me, [p] God forbid that I ſhould ſin againſt the LORD, in ceaſing to pray for you: but [q] I will teach you the good and the right way. 24. Only fear the LORD, and ſerve him in truth with all your heart: for [r] conſider how great things he hath done for you. 25. But if ye ſhall ſtill do wickedly, [s] ye ſhall be conſumed, both ye and your king.

v. 16—25. Whatever God of his ſovereign grace pleaſed to do for them in a way of mercy, that did not at all leſſen their guilt before him. Therefore, though he had given them a promiſe juſt before, and they were now to appearance ſucceſsful in their choice, yet he would remind them, that their ſin was great. Note, Succeſs in an evil way never ſanctifies it. To convince them of this, he uſes an argument more effectual than words, to which they might be inattentive, and dull of hearing. For,

1. He prays to God in their preſence, and inſtantly terrible thunders utter their voice, and though the day was ſerene before, and in that ſeaſon of the year, it being wheat-harveſt, rain never fell in Judea; yet now the thick clouds gather round, and pour down a torrent of water. Theſe were manifeſt evidences of God's diſpleaſure, of their folly in preferring the ſword of a king, before the prayers of ſuch a prophet, and warnings how ſoon their ſin would turn their preſent peaceful calm into a ſtorm of wrath. Note, (1.) All the elements are ready armed to avenge God's quarrels, whenever he pleaſes to ſend them. (2.) It is a dangerous thing to turn the prayers of God's miniſters againſt us, for their quarrel is the Lord's.

2. Terror and diſmay ſeize the affrighted congregation. Fearing God's diſpleaſure, and perceiving the power of Samuel's prayers, they confeſs their guilt and folly, and earneſtly intreat him to intercede for them, that they periſh not, as they were conſcious they had deſerved to do. Note, (1.) The time will come, when ſinners will cry for their prayers, whom now they deſpiſe. (2.) Though the terrors of the Lord put men into a fright, they work no laſting change; when the ſtorm is blown over, they quickly relapſe into their former ways.

3. Samuel kindly undertakes to be their advocate, their comforter, and friendly adviſer. He bids them not fear. Theſe thunders were not to deſtroy, but to humble them, and bring them to a ſenſe of their great wickedneſs. As God had choſen them, not for their deſerts, but for his own great name's ſake, he would keep them; only they muſt beware not to turn aſide unto idols, which never could profit them. For his own part, he could not but pray for them without ceaſing, and ſhould continue to give them his beſt advice, to preſerve them in fidelity to their covenant God; exhorting them earneſtly to fear the Lord, and ſerve him in ſimplicity, both in gratitude and love, for the great things he had already done for them, and leſt their diſobedience ſhould provoke him to deſtroy both them and the king in whom they gloried. Note, (1.) God's choice is ſovereign; and as of his grace he calls, ſo by his grace he will keep his choſen: though their ſins provoke him to ſcourge them, yet will he not utterly deſtroy them. (2.) Whatever creature engages our affections from God, it makes the heart idolatrous, and will deceive our expectations. (3.) Thoſe who injure us, we muſt ſtill pray for; how much more thoſe who turn and ſay, Forgive. (4.) Miniſters muſt not ceaſe teaching people the good and right way, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear. (5.) The more we conſider what God has done for us, the more ſhall we feel ourſelves conſtrained to love and ſerve him. (6.) When a miniſter is faithful, if the people continue refractory, he will have the comfort of having delivered his own ſoul. (7.) Apoſtacy from God, and eternal ruin, are inſeparably connected.

v. 1—7. Saul reigned one year, counting from his being anointed at Ramah, to his inauguration at Gilgal; and when he had reigned two years over Iſrael, he choſe three thouſand men, as his guard: of theſe, two thouſand were with himſelf in mount Bethel, and one with Jonathan in Gibeah. Peace ſeems to have ſubſiſted at preſent between the Iſraelites and the Philiſtines, who had garriſons in ſome cities, to keep the people of Iſrael in ſubjection. Saul determines to diſpoſſeſs them, and thereby brings himſelf into the greateſt difficulties.

1. Jonathan, at his command, ſurprizes the garriſon of Geba, which was near to Gibeah, his ſtation; and as this ſeems to have been done treacherouſly, whilſt they relied on the peace, and all might perhaps be put to the ſword, the Philiſtines juſtly reſented it, and abhorred the perfidious manner in which they acted. To oppoſe therefore the ſtorm which he expected, Saul, by ſound of trumpet, ſummons the people to attend; but whether diſliking his conduct, or dreading the power of the Philiſtines, few gathered to his ſtandard. Note, (1.) Haſty and ill-adviſed proceedings often involve us in difficulties, which conſideration might have foreſeen and avoided. (2.) The ſins of profeſſors bring the greateſt reproach upon the cauſe of God.

2. The Philiſtines, exaſperated to the uttermoſt, and breathing revenge, aſſemble all their forces, and raiſe their confederates. Their foot being as the ſand on the ſea-ſhore for multitude, their horſe ſix thouſand, and their chariots thirty thouſand, they probably thought themſelves ſure of ſucceſs, and collected ſuch an incredible number, not for war, but to remove their ſpoil. This interpretation I would rather prefer to the ſuppoſition of ſome, that the number is a miſtake of the copier for three thouſand; or of others, who would refer this to the men who fought in the chariots. Note, The powers of darkneſs leagued againſt us are more numerous, and the leaſt of them mightier than theſe chariots or horſemen: how unable then muſt we needs be to ſtand, unleſs God fight for us.

3. The Iſraelites in their danger have loſt all courage. Far from animating each other to ſtand their ground, and make a noble effort for their liberty, ſome fly to rocks and thickets for ſhelter; others haſte to the moſt diſtant border to Gilead, that they may be as far as poſſible from the danger; whilſt the few who remain are quite diſpirited, and, though aſhamed to deſert their king, yet follow him trembling. Note, (1.) God will make men rue their folly ſoon: they would have a king, and now they ſuffer for it. (2.) They who are conſcious of their unpreparedneſs for death, cannot but tremble at its approach.

8. ¶ And he tarried [c] ſeven days, according to the ſet time that Samuel had appointed: but Samuel came not to Gilgal, and the people were ſcattered from him. 9. And Saul ſaid, [d] Bring hither a burnt-offering to me, and peace-offerings. And he offered the burnt-offering. 10. And it came to paſs, that [e] as ſoon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, behold, Samuel came, and Saul went out to meet him, that he might † ſalute him. 11. ¶ And Samuel ſaid, What haſt thou done? And Saul ſaid, Becauſe I ſaw that the people were ſcattered from me, and that [f] thou cameſt not within the days appointed, and that the Philiſtines gathered themſelves together to Michmaſh: 12. Therefore [g] ſaid I, the Philiſtines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not ‡ made ſupplication unto the LORD: [h] I forced myſelf therefore, and offered a burnt-offering. 13. And Samuel ſaid to Saul, [i] Thou haſt done fooliſhly: thou haſt not kept the commandment of the LORD thy God, which he commanded thee: for now would the LORD have eſtabliſhed thy kingdom upon Iſrael for ever. 14. But now [k] thy kingdom ſhall not continue: [l] the LORD hath ſought him a man after his own heart, and the LORD hath commanded him to be captain over his people, becauſe thou haſt not kept that which the LORD commanded thee.

v. 8—14. We have here,

1. Saul's diſobedience. Samuel had given him in charge, Chap. x. 8. to wait for him ſeven days in Gilgal, either in any general difficulty, or with an eye to this particular ſeaſon, and he would come and ſacrifice for him, and give him inſtructions how to proceed. Saul waited ſix days; on the ſeventh, ſeeing the people deſerting him, and the Philiſtines advancing upon him, he haſtily concludes, that Samuel either would not come, or would come too late; and therefore preſumes to ſacrifice without him, though neither prieſt nor prophet to authorize him for ſuch a deed. But juſt as he had made an end of the burnt-offering, a meſſage is brought that Samuel was near. Conſcious of his guilt, he haſtens to meet him; and, in anſwer to Samuel's enquiry, ſeeks to excuſe what he had done, with the plauſible pleas of piety towards God, regard for the people, and the urgency of his affairs, which forced him againſt his own inclinations and conſcience, not without a reflection on Samuel's delay, as if he had broke his promiſe. But Samuel, though he had deferred his coming, to try Saul's faith and obedience, to the laſt day, had not exceeded the time appointed, as he inſinuated, the ſeventh day being not yet expired. Note, (1.) Impatience to help ourſelves, and unwillingneſs to leave our concerns in God's hands, ſerve only to involve us in new troubles. (2.) Diſobedience againſt a poſitive precept can have no excuſe; and every attempt to extenuate our guilt, is a proof of an unhumbled ſpirit. (3.) The more we ſin againſt conviction, the more aggravated our tranſgreſſions. (4.) Pretences to religion, whilſt we act in oppoſition to God's commands, are barefaced hypocriſy.

2. Samuel's rebuke. Though a king, he is not afraid to condemn his wickedneſs, and reproach his folly; yea, to denounce upon him the ſentence of God. He tells him plainly, that he that ſet him up, will, for his diſobedience, caſt him down. His kingdom ſhall not continue; another is choſen in his room, a man after God's own heart, to be captain over his Iſrael. After this, Samuel turns, and leaves him to meditate on his folly. Note, (1.) Plain and faithful rebukes become God's miniſters, even before kings. (2.) Folly and wickedneſs are twin ſiſters; and the ſinner will by and by reproach himſelf for his want of ſenſe, as much as want of grace. (3.) Sins, which to us may appear little, have dangerous conſequences. (4.) They who reject God's government, are juſtly excluded from his everlaſting kingdom.

15. And Samuel aroſe, and gat him up from Gilgal, unto Gibeah of Benjamin: and Saul numbred the people that were preſent with him, [m] about ſix hundred men. 16. And Saul and Jonathan his ſon, and the people † that were preſent with them, abode in Gibeah of Benjamin: but the Philiſtines encamped in Michmaſh. 17. ¶ And the ſpoilers came out of the camp of the Philiſtines, in three companies: one company turned unto the way that leadeth to Ophrah, unto the land of Shual. 18. And another company turned the way to Beth-horon: and another company turned to the way of the border, that looketh to the valley of Zeboim toward the wilderneſs. 19. ¶ Now [n] there was no ſmith found throughout all the land of Iſrael: (for the Philiſtines ſaid, Leſt the Hebrews make them ſwords or ſpears) 20. But all the Iſraelites went down to the Philiſtines, to ſharpen every man his ſhare and his coulter, and his ax, and his mattock. 21. Yet they had ‡ a file for the mattocks, and for the coulters, and for the forks, and for the axes, and to ſharpen the goads. 22. So it came to paſs in the day of battle, that there was neither ſword nor ſpear found in the hand of any of the people that were with Saul and Jonathan: but with Saul and with Jonathan his ſon was there found. 23. And the † garriſon of the Philiſtines went out to the paſſage of Michmaſh.

v. 15—23. Samuel in diſpleaſure retires to Gibeah, and Saul, with the few who adhered to him, no more than ſix hundred men, the reſt having deſerted him, goes thither alſo. Perhaps this was a defenſible place, where they might ſtand a ſiege, tho' they were unable to meet the Philiſtines in the field. Hereupon two things are obſerved,

1. The havock made by the Philiſtines. As there was no army to oppoſe them, they made ſeveral detachments from their main body, that they might the ſooner plunder and ſubdue the country; and, to prevent all interruption of their parties, they ſeize the paſſage of Michmaſh, which was near to Gibeah, purpoſing probably to lay ſiege quickly to that place. Note, They who provoke God to leave them in diſtreſs, have only themſelves to blame for their ſufferings.

2. The wretched and weak ſtate of the people of Iſrael. When they need moſt the weapons of war to defend themſelves, by the policy of the Philiſtines they are quite unarmed. They had, during the time of their power, taken care to remove all the ſmiths, and to forbid any Iſraelite exerciſing the trade; ſo that, even to make or repair his utenſils of huſbandry, every man was obliged to go down to the Philiſtines, either to their country, or to their garriſons; only each man was allowed a file, to ſharpen thoſe that were in conſtant uſe. But as for ſword or ſpear, there were none found among all the hoſts of Iſrael, ſave with Saul and Jonathan, which is indeed wonderful, conſidering the victories lately obtained over the Philiſtines and Ammonites. It may be, the ſucceſs they then had, from the divine interpoſition, made them leſs careful to provide for their future defence; or they truſted chiefly to bows and arrows, or to their ſlingers, for which Benjamin was ſo famous. It argues, however, Saul's overſight, and ſhews the reaſon of the preſent faint-heartedneſs of the people, being thus defenceleſs. Note, When the ſword of the Spirit, the word of God, is wreſted out of our hands, we cannot but become an eaſy prey to the enemy of our ſouls.

1. NOW it came to paſs upon a day, that Jonathan the ſon of Saul ſaid unto the young man that bare his armour, Come, and let us go over to the Philiſtines garriſon, that is on the other ſide: but he told not his father. 2. And Saul tarried in the uttermoſt part of Gibeah, under a pomegranate-tree, which is in Migron: and the people that were with him were about ſix hundred men; 3. And † Ahiah the ſon of Ahitub, [a] I-chabod's brother, the ſon of Phinehas, the ſon of Eli, the LORD's prieſt in Shiloh, wearing an ephod; and the people knew not that Jonathan was gone. 4. ¶ And between the paſſages, by which Jonathan ſought to go over unto the Philiſtines garriſon, there was ‡ a ſharp rock on the one ſide, and a ſharp rock on the other ſide: and the name of the one was Bozez, and the name of the other Seneh. 5. The § forefront of the one was ſituate northward over-againſt Michmaſh, and the other ſouthward over-againſt Gibeah. 6. And Jonathan ſaid to the young man that bare his armour, Come, and let us go over unto the garriſon of [b] theſe uncircumciſed: [c] it may be that the LORD will work for us: for there is no reſtraint to the LORD, [d] to ſave by many or by few. 7. And his armour-bearer ſaid unto him, Do all that is in thine heart: turn thee, behold, I am with thee according to thy heart. 8. Then ſaid Jonathan, Behold, we will paſs over unto theſe men, and we will diſcover ourſelves unto them. 9. [e] If they ſay thus unto us, Tarry until we come to you; then we will ſtand ſtill in our place, and will not go up unto them. 10. But if they ſay thus, Come up unto us; then we will go up: for the LORD hath delivered them into our hand; and this ſhall be a ſign unto us. 11. And both of them diſcovered themſelves unto the garriſon of the Philiſtines: and the Philiſtines ſaid, Behold, the Hebrews come forth out of the holes, where they had hid themſelves. 12. And the men of the garriſon anſwered Jonathan and his armour-bearer, and ſaid, Come up to us, and [f] we will ſhew you a thing. And Jonathan ſaid unto his armour-bearer, Come up after me; for the LORD hath delivered them into the hand of Iſrael. 13. And Jonathan climbed up upon his hands and upon his feet, and his armour-bearer after him: and [g] they fell before Jonathan; and his armour-bearer ſlew after him. 14. And that firſt ſlaughter which Jonathan and his armour-bearer made, was about twenty men, within as it were § an half acre of land, which a yoke of oxen might plow. 15. And [h] there was trembling in the hoſt, in the field, and among all the people: the garriſon, and the ſpoilers, they alſo trembled, and the earth quaked: ſo it was † a very great trembling.

v. 1—15. Never did Iſrael appear in a more diſtreſſed ſituation: they have neither courage nor arms; God is offended; their enemies are at the gate; and they without place to flee to, or power to reſiſt: but, for his own name's ſake, God will not utterly forſake his people, though they ſo juſtly deſerved it. We have here,

1. Saul reduced to the greateſt ſtraits; no increaſe of his army; retired to the uttermoſt part of Gibeah, for the greater ſecurity, or more ready flight, if the Philiſtines advanced; his tent ſpread under a pomegranate-tree, or under Rimmon, perhaps the noted rock, Judg. xx. 47. where the tribe of Benjamin had before taken ſhelter. Hither, to conſult God in his difficulties, ſince Samuel had left him, he ſends for the ark of God, and Ahiah the high-prieſt, hoping by this application to God in his own way he might have better ſucceſs, than when he ſacrificed for himſelf. Note, (1.) Drowning men catch at ſtraws. They will have the prieſt and ſacrament at their dying bed, who in their lives were negligent of both. (2.) If the power of godlineſs be abſent, the form of it can profit us nothing; nay, only deceive us, if we truſt on it, to our ruin.

2. Jonathan's noble exploit. Moved, as we muſt ſuppoſe, by a divine impulſe, he ſecretly quits the camp in Gibeah, and, with his armour-bearer, advances towards the Philiſtines garriſon, who ſeem to have been poſted on one of the craggy rocks near Michmaſh, to guard the paſs that was between them. Jonathan propoſes to his armour-bearer to go boldly up and fall upon them, ſince, if the Lord pleaſed, he could ſave as well by few as many. The propoſal being agreed to, Jonathan determines to reſt the matter upon a providential iſſue. He would appear in ſight of the garriſon; if the men called to them to ſtand, and threatened to come over, then they ſhould advance no further; but if they ſaid, in contempt of them, Come up; then they ſhould fall on, aſſuredly concluding God was with them. Juſt as he ſaid, God directed their word. The Philiſtines concluded them famiſhed for hunger, and forced to ſurrender, and therefore deridingly bid them come up, and then they ſhould ſee how they would treat them. Inſpired with divine courage and confidence, they now advance, aſſuredly concluding God had delivered them into their hands. Though ſteep the precipice, they climb the craggy rock, whilſt, expecting no danger, the Philiſtines probably looked on, and ſported themſelves with the eagerneſs of theſe deſpiſed Hebrews. But no ſooner had Jonathan and his armour-bearer firm footing, than they fell on furiouſly and unexpectedly, and twenty men preſently were ſlain within the ſpace of half an acre of land. Probably theſe were a party of ſcouts, who, thus ſmitten, fled, and carried a panic along with them into the garriſon and camp, God ſpreading the terror on every ſide; whilſt, to compleat their diſmay, the earth quaked under them, as ready to ſwallow them up: ſo that the apprehenſions of danger became very terrible, and God's hand was heavy upon them. Note, (1.) The greatneſs of danger ſerves only for the more glorious exerciſe of faith in the ſaints of God. (2.) Whatever our difficulties are, if we have Omnipotence on our ſide, we may boldly advance. (3.) It is good to follow the leadings of providence. (4.) They who ſport at God's Iſrael, will do it at their coſt. (5.) God can with ſecret terrors reach the hearts of his enemies, and turn their own ſwords againſt them. (6.) They who commit their ways unto the Lord, will find he can bring to paſs the moſt improbable events. No man ever truſted him, and was confounded.

16. And the watchmen of Saul in Gibeah of Benjamin looked; and behold, the multitude melted away, and they went on beating down one another. 17. Then ſaid Saul unto the people that were with him, Number now, and ſee who is gone from us. And when they had numbred, behold, Jonathan and his armour-bearer were not there. 18. And Saul ſaid unto Ahiah, Bring hither the ark of God: (for the ark of God was at that time with the children of Iſrael.) 19. ¶ And it came to paſs, while Saul talked unto the prieſt, that the noiſe that was in the hoſt of the Philiſtines went on, and increaſed: and Saul ſaid unto the prieſt, [i] Withdraw thine hand. 20. And Saul, and all the people that were with him, aſſembled themſelves, and they came to the battle: and behold, [k] every man's ſword was againſt his fellow, and there was a very great diſcomfiture. 21. Moreover, the Hebrews that were with the Philiſtines before that time, which went up with them into the camp from the country round about, even they alſo turned to be with the Iſraelites, that were with Saul and Jonathan. 22. Likewiſe all the men of Iſrael which had hid themſelves in mount Ephraim, when they heard that the Philiſtines fled, even they alſo followed hard after them in the battle. 23. So [l] the LORD ſaved Iſrael that day: and the battle paſſed over unto Beth-aven.

v. 16—23. The terror of the Philiſtines was ſoon obſerved by the ſentinels in Gibeah, who, to their aſtoniſhment, beheld them melting like ſnow, and falling one on another. Tidings are inſtantly brought to Saul, who calls over the muſter-roll, that he might ſee who was abſent, and Jonathan and his armour-bearer are wanting. Hereupon,

1. Saul bids Ahiah bring the ark, and conſult God about what he ſhould do in the caſe; but whilſt he was talking with him, the noiſe increaſing, and the flight of the Philiſtines evident, he bids him deſiſt, being in haſte to purſue. Note, (1.) In all our proceedings, to enquire at God's word is the ſureſt way to ſucceed. (2.) They who are impatient to run before they are ſent, will be in danger of making more haſte than good ſpeed.

2. They immediately follow the flying hoſts, nor needed ſword or ſpear, when the Philiſtines fell faſter by the hands of each other. Not only the ſix hundred men who were with Saul, aſſembled, but the deſerters and priſoners turned upon the fugitives; and thoſe who refuſed to fight, and fled to the mountains, dare now purſue. Thus the Lord ſaved Iſrael, and the diſcomfiture here was very great, becauſe it was his doing. Note, (1.) All our ſalvation muſt be aſcribed to God's free grace and mercy alone. (2.) The Lord Jeſus hath conquered for us; let us not then, weak as we are, fear to purſue, and ſeize the prey.

24. ¶ And the men of Iſrael were diſtreſſed that day: for Saul had [m] adjured the people, ſaying, Curſed be the man that eateth any food until the evening, [n] that I may be avenged on mine enemies: ſo none of the people taſted any food. 25. And all they of the land came to a wood, and there was [o] honey upon the ground. 26. And when the people were come into the wood, behold, the honey dropped, but no man put his hand to his mouth: for the people feared the oath. 27. But Jonathan heard not when his father charged the people with the oath: wherefore he put forth the end of the rod that was in his hand, and dipt it in † an honey-comb, and put his hand to his mouth; and [p] his eyes were enlightened. 28. Then anſwered one of the people, and ſaid, Thy father ‡ ſtraitly charged the people with an oath, ſaying, Curſed be the man that eateth any food this day. And the people were faint. 29. Then ſaid Jonathan, My father hath troubled the land: ſee, I pray you, how mine eyes have been enlightened, becauſe I taſted a little of this honey: 30. How much more, if haply the people had eaten freely to-day of the ſpoil of their enemies which they found? § for had there not been now a much greater ſlaughter among the Philiſtines? 31. And they ſmote the Philiſtines that day from Michmaſh to Aijalon: and the people were very faint. 32. And the people flew upon the ſpoil, and took ſheep, and oxen, and calves, and ſlew them on the ground: and the people did eat them [q] with the blood. 33. ¶ Then they told Saul, ſaying, Behold, the people ſin againſt the LORD, in that they eat with the blood. And he ſaid, [r] Ye have tranſgreſſed: roll a great ſtone unto me this day. 34. And Saul ſaid, Diſperſe yourſelves among the people, and ſay unto them, Bring me hither every man his ox, and every man his ſheep, and ſlay them here, and eat; and ſin not againſt the LORD in eating with the blood. And all the people brought every man his ox with him that night, and ſlew them there. 35. And Saul [s] built an altar unto the LORD: ‖ the ſame was the firſt altar that he built unto the LORD.

v. 24—35. As Saul's impolitic conduct had brought them into their diſtreſs, his raſh oath prevents their making the beſt uſe of their victory.

1. Saul forbad the people to taſte any refreſhment until evening, fearing leſt they ſhould be detained from the purſuit, and with a curſe devoted to death the perſon who ſhould be found diſobedient. Note, (1.) He that caſteth abroad curſes, caſteth fire-brands and death, and endangers his own houſe to be conſumed. (2.) Haſty reſolves generally afford matter for leiſurely repentance.

2. The ill effects produced by this adjuration. 1. Jonathan, who was abſent when the order was given, ignorantly tranſgreſſes. As he paſſed through a wood, weary and hungry, where was plenty of honey, he thruſt his rod, or ſpear, into an honey-comb, and took it, and eat it, and felt himſelf exceedingly refreſhed, being faint with want of food, and his eyes dim. One of the people obſerving him, informed him of his father's adjuration; and ſo obſervant of it were the people, that none dared to touch the honey which dropped around them, though diſabled more by hunger, than the way, from a briſk purſuit of their enemies. Jonathan, by experience of the refreſhment he had received, could not but condemn his father's ill-adviſed reſtraint, which, ſo far from furthering the victory, greatly prevented the improvement of it. Note, (1.) Many a good ſon is involved in difficulties by the folly of an inconſiderate father. (2.) When we follow our own heads, without waiting to conſult God, we ſhall certainly live to repent our raſhneſs. (3.) If, for fear of the curſe of a wicked king, an Iſraelite can deny even the innocent cravings of hunger; ſhall not we fear to incur the Anathema of a holy God, by gratifying our ſinful appetites? 2. The people at even are ſo impatient through hunger, that, before the blood was drained from the beaſts, they flew on them raw, or half-dreſſed. Saul quickly hears, and rebukes the tranſgreſſion of the people, though the fault lay chiefly at his own door. Proclamation is made through the camp to ſtay ſuch irregularities, by ordering all the cattle for food to be ſlain on a ſtone under his own eye; and there he built an altar unto the Lord, the firſt he had yet erected for God's worſhip, to offer ſacrifices of thankſgivings for his victory. As it might be rendered, He began to build: ſome think he was in ſuch haſte, that he left the altar unfiniſhed, through eagerneſs to purſue the victory. Note, (1.) How much readier are we to rebuke the ſins which lie at others doors, than to acknowledge how culpable we are ourſelves? (2.) Exceſs in eating is as dangerous to the body, as ſinful to the ſoul.

36. ¶ And Saul ſaid, Let us go down after the Philiſtines by night, and ſpoil them until the morning light, and let us not leave a man of them. And they ſaid, Do whatſoever ſeemeth good unto thee. Then ſaid the prieſt, [t] Let us draw near hither unto God. 37. And Saul [u] aſked counſel of God, Shall I go down after the Philiſtines? wilt thou deliver them into the hand of Iſrael? But he anſwered him [x] not that day. 38. And Saul ſaid, Draw ye near hither all the † chief of the people: and know and ſee [y] wherein this ſin hath been this day. 39. For as the LORD liveth, which ſaveth Iſrael, though it be in Jonathan my ſon, he ſhall ſurely die. But there was not a man among all the people that anſwered him. 40. Then ſaid he unto all Iſrael, Be ye on one ſide, and I and Jonathan my ſon will be on the other ſide. And the people ſaid unto Saul, Do what ſeemeth good unto thee. 41. Therefore Saul ſaid unto the LORD God of Iſrael, ‡ Give a perfect lot. And Saul and Jonathan were taken: but the people eſcaped. 42. And Saul ſaid, Caſt lots between me and Jonathan my ſon. And Jonathan was taken. 43. Then Saul ſaid to Jonathan, Tell me what thou haſt done. And Jonathan told him, and ſaid, I did but taſte a little honey with the end of the rod that was in mine hand, and lo I muſt die. 44. And Saul anſwered, God do ſo, and more alſo: for [z] thou ſhalt ſurely die, Jonathan. 45. And the people ſaid unto Saul, Shall Jonathan die, who hath wrought this great ſalvation in Iſrael? God forbid: as the LORD liveth, [a] there ſhall not one hair of his head fall to the ground; for [b] he hath wrought with God this day. So the people reſcued Jonathan, that he died not. 46. Then Saul went up from following the Philiſtines: and the Philiſtines went to their own place.

v. 36—46. Saul has no ſooner given his army a moment's refreſhment, than he is eager to purſue again the flying Philiſtines; and, though weary and wanting repoſe, his men, as faithful ſoldiers, are ſubmiſſive to his orders, and ready to follow him. But,

1. Abiathar deſires to conſult God firſt, and Saul conſents to the motion; but when they drew near, God gave them no anſwer. Note, It is good to have near us a faithful miniſter, to adviſe and admoniſh us of our duty.

2. Saul hereupon concludes, that ſome ſin had been committed, which provoked God thus to withdraw, and therefore as paſſionately reſolves to puniſh, as he had imprudently bound them under a curſe. To determine the caſe, lots are caſt; and though none dared or cared to inform againſt Jonathan, God is pleaſed, at Saul's prayer, to give the diſcovery in the perſon of Jonathan his ſon, on whom the lot fell. Note, (1.) We may well conclude God is angry, when our prayers find no anſwer of peace from him. (2.) We ſhould ſollicitouſly enquire what it is wherein we have offended, that we may put away iniquity from us.

3. Jonathan, at Saul's injunction, acknowledges he had taſted a little honey that day in the wood; and though he thinks it hard to die for ſuch a fault, ſpeaks as expecting it from his father's raſh and unrelenting ſpirit; whilſt Saul, agreably to his character, binds his reſolution with a ſolemn oath, that nothing ſhould ſave him. Note, (1.) Violent tempers will ſacrifice to their paſſions even the deareſt relatives. (2.) An angry judge cannot but paſs a raſh and unjuſt ſentence. (3.) They that ſwear in heat, will often not only be guilty of profaneneſs, but perjury.

4. The people are highly diſpleaſed at Saul's reſolution, and bind themſelves by oath to prevent the execution. It was unjuſt to condemn Jonathan for ignorantly offending, and ungrateful to put him to death, who, under God, that day had ſaved their lives and all Iſrael; therefore they reſcued, or redeemed, him out of his hands. Note, (1.) Thoſe whom God in his cauſe evidently honours with his bleſſing, we muſt ſtand by againſt all oppoſers. (2.) When kings act madly againſt the laws of God, and tyrannical againſt the lives and liberties of the people; reſiſtance, that tends to reduce them to their duty, without injuring their perſons, or leſſening their lawful authority, is, no doubt, true patriotiſm, and agreable to true piety.

5. The ſeaſon of purſuit being loſt by altercation, and God reſerving the Philiſtines for a further ſcourge, thoſe who eſcaped from the battle, got into places of ſafety, and Saul returned to Gibeah. Thus diſſentions between the generals have often loſt the advantages of victory.

47. ¶ So Saul took the kingdom over Iſrael, and fought againſt all his enemies on every ſide, againſt Moab, and againſt the children of Ammon, and againſt Edom, and againſt the kings of Zobah, and againſt the Philiſtines: and whitherſoever he turned himſelf, [c] he vexed them. 48. And he gathered an hoſt, and ſmote the Amalekites, and delivered Iſrael out of the hands of them that ſpoiled them. 49. Now the ſons of Saul were Jonathan, and Iſhui, and Melchi-ſhuah: and the names of his two daughters were theſe; the name of the firſt-born Merab, and the name of the younger Michal: 50. And the name of Saul's wife was Ahinoam, the daughter of Ahimaaz: and the name of the captain of his hoſt was Abner the ſon of Ner, Saul's uncle. 51. And Kiſh was the father of Saul; and Ner, the father of Abner, was the ſon of Abiel. 52. And there was ſore war againſt the Philiſtines all the days of Saul: and when Saul ſaw any ſtrong man, or any † valiant man, he took him unto him.

v. 47—52. We have here,

1. An account of Saul's military exploits. Having reaſſumed the exerciſe of his power, which ſeemed almoſt annihilated, he recruits his army with picked men out of all Iſrael, and by making every where head againſt his enemies, he defeated them, and waged ſore war with the Philiſtines all his days. Note, The comforts of reigning are dearly purchaſed, at the expence of the conſtant care, danger, and toil, which attends it.

2. His family are taken notice of, his wife and five children, though he had others by Rizpah his concubine, who, as illegitimate, are not mentioned; and his uncle Abner was his general. His houſe was now eſtabliſhed, like his kingdom, great and proſperous; but how fading are all ſublunary things! In a few years his houſe becomes ruined, and his kingdom removed. Let us never place confidence then in any thing beneath the ſun. The faſhion of this world paſſeth away.

CHAP. XV.

In this chapter we have the final rejection of Saul from being king, for his diſobedience. Here is, 1. The commiſſion God gave him utterly to deſtroy the Amalekites, ver. 1—3. 2. Saul's preparation for it, ver. 4—6. 3. His ſucceſs, and partial execution of this commiſſion, ver. 7—9. 4. His examination before Samuel, and ſentence paſt upon him for his diſobedience, ver. 10—31. 5. The ſlaying of Agag, ver. 32, 33. 6. Samuel's final farewel to Saul, ver. 34, 35.

1. SAmuel alſo ſaid unto Saul, [a] The LORD ſent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Iſrael: now therefore [b] hearken thou unto the voice of the words of the LORD. 2. Thus ſaith the LORD of hoſts, [c] I remember that which Amalek did to Iſrael, [d] how he laid wait for him in the way when he came up from Egypt. 3. Now go, and ſmite Amalek, and [e] utterly deſtroy all that they have, and ſpare them not; but ſlay both man and woman, infant and ſuckling, [f] ox and ſheep, camel and aſs. 4. And Saul gathered the people together, and numbred them in Telaim, two hundred thouſand footmen, and ten thouſand men of Judah. 5. And Saul came to a city of Amalek, and † laid wait in the valley. 6. ¶ And Saul ſaid unto the Kenites, Go, depart, get [g] you down from among the Amalekites, leſt I deſtroy you with them: for [h] ye ſhewed kindneſs to all the children of Iſrael when they came up out of Egypt. So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites. 7. And Saul ſmote [i] the Amalekites from Havilah, until thou comeſt to Shur, that is over-againſt Egypt. 8. And he took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly deſtroyed all the people with the edge of the ſword. 9. But Saul and the people [k] ſpared Agag, and [l] the beſt of the ſheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly deſtroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuſe, that they deſtroyed utterly.

v. 1—9. Though Saul had been threatned, he had not yet been utterly rejected; but now the critical moment comes, when his fate is to be determined.

1. Samuel is ſent from God to remind him by whoſe favour he reigned, and to exhort him to dutiful obedience, particularly in the expedition for which he muſt now prepare. Amalek had behaved cruelly to God's Iſrael, when they came from Egypt, and God had long threatned to blot out their remembrance from under heaven; and now God remembers their old iniquities, and Saul muſt be the executioner of divine juſtice, nor ſpare any thing which breathed, but utterly deſtroy man and beaſt. Note, (1.) God will certainly remember the injuries done his people, eſpecially the diſcouragements put in the way of young converts. (2.) Though God is patient, even towards the veſſels of wrath, yet their deſolations are determined, and their ruin certain. (3.) God will not want executioners of juſtice, when the meaſure of a nation's ſins is full.

2. Saul inſtantly proceeds, and is followed by a numerous army of two hundred thouſand men, beſides ten thouſand of Judah, whoſe ſmall proportion ſome aſcribe to envy, others to the neceſſity of guarding their borders, as moſt expoſed during the abſence of the army. When he arrived in the enemies country, he ſent a friendly meſſage to the Kenites, who for the convenience of paſturage had gone thither, to come up, leſt they ſhould fall in the promiſcuous ruin, which they immediately did; and the reaſon of this kindneſs he gives in the friendſhip they had ſhown to Iſrael when they came from Egypt. Note, (1.) Kindneſſes done to God's people ſhall often be recompenſed in this world, but certainly in the reſurrection of the juſt. (2.) They are in danger of ſharing with ſinners in their plagues, who by choice take up their reſidence among them. (3.) We cannot make too much haſte to ſeparate ourſelves from the communion of the ungodly.

3. No ſooner were the Kenites in ſafety, than the Amalekites begin to feel the ſword. The ambuſh in the valley ſucceeds, their army is routed, the capital taken, the country ravaged from end to end, and the king himſelf a priſoner. But Saul, through falſe pity, or covetouſneſs, ſpared him from death, with the beſt of the cattle, and utterly deſtroyed the reſt, though ſome, it ſeems, with their effects, eſcaped by flight, and for a little while longer preſerved the dying name of Amalek. Note, (1.) Partial obedience detects the hypocrite. (2.) Covetouſneſs is often its own puniſhment. He made a bad bargain, who, to ſecure the cattle of Amalek, loſt the kingdom of Iſrael.

10. ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Samuel, ſaying, 11. [m] It repenteth me that I have ſet up Saul to be king, for [n] he is turned back from following me, and [o] hath not performed my commandments. And it grieved Samuel; and [p] he cried unto the LORD all night. 12. And when Samuel roſe early to meet Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel, ſaying, Saul came to Carmel, and behold, he ſet him up a place, and is gone about, and paſſed on, and gone down to Gilgal. 13. And Samuel came to Saul: and Saul ſaid unto him, Bleſſed be thou of the LORD: [q] I have performed the commandment of the LORD. 14. And Samuel ſaid, What meaneth then this bleating of the ſheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear? 15. And Saul ſaid, They have brought them from the Amalekites: for [r] the people ſpared the beſt of the ſheep and of the oxen, to ſacrifice unto the LORD thy God, and the reſt we have utterly deſtroyed. 16. Then Samuel ſaid unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee what the LORD hath ſaid to me this night. And he ſaid unto him, Say on. 17. And Samuel ſaid, [s] When thou waſt little in thine own ſight, waſt thou not made the head of the tribes of Iſrael, and the LORD anointed thee king over Iſrael? 18. And the LORD ſent thee on a journey, and ſaid, Go, and [t] utterly deſtroy the ſinners the Amalekites, and fight againſt them until they be conſumed. 19. Wherefore then didſt thou not obey the voice of the LORD, but [u] didſt fly upon the ſpoil, and didſt evil in the ſight of the LORD? 20. And Saul ſaid unto Samuel, Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the LORD, and have gone the way which the LORD ſent me, and [x] have brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly deſtroyed the Amalekites. 21. But [y] the people took of the ſpoil, ſheep and oxen, the chief of the things which ſhould have been utterly deſtroyed, to ſacrifice unto the LORD thy God in Gilgal. 22. And Samuel ſaid, [z] Hath the LORD as great delight in burnt-offerings and ſacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, [a] to obey is better than ſacrifice; and to hearken, than the fat of rams. 23. For [b] rebellion is as the ſin of witchcraft, and ſtubbornneſs is as iniquity and idolatry: becauſe thou haſt rejected the word of the LORD, he hath alſo rejected thee from being king.

v. 10—23. We have here the interview between Samuel and Saul returning from his victory, which made his bright day cloſe with darkneſs.

1. God informs Samuel of Saul's diſobedience, his repentance that he had made him king, and the removal of the crown from his family, determined thereupon. Note, Repentance with God ſignifies not a change of mind, but of his methods of dealing with men.

2. Samuel is bitterly afflicted herewith, and ſpends the night in prayers and tears, to gain the reverſion of the ſentence, but in vain. Note, The ruin of ſinners is the bitter grief of God's faithful miniſters.

3. According to appointment he goes to Carmel, to meet Saul, and not finding him there, where he had ſtaid no longer than to erect a trophy of his victory, he follows him to Gilgal.

4. Saul comes to meet him, with great confidence boaſting his obedience, and bleſſing Samuel for the proſperous undertaking on which he had ſent him. Note, They who are trumpeters of their own good works, will ſoon diſcover the vanity of their pretences.

5. Samuel's ears are more attentive to the bleating of the ſheep, than the boaſting of the king; and he upbraids him for the falſeneſs and folly of his conduct, of which his ſpoils afforded ſuch inconteſtible evidence.

6. Saul ſeeks to excuſe the fact he cannot deny, by laying the fault on the people, pretending to deſign God's glory in the ſacrifice of the cattle, and the honour of Iſrael in ſhewing them the captive king; but his plea was falſe as frivolous: none would have dared to act without his orders, and his own profit and glory was at the bottom of his pretended piety. Note, (1.) In vain do we vaunt our expenſive ſacrifices, and keep up the outward pomp and form of religion, if pride, luſt, and covetouſneſs are in poſſeſſion of the heart; our very boaſted ſervices are an abomination. (2.) They who ſeek to exculpate themſelves by accuſing others who were partners, or tempters in their guilt, ſhew themſelves utterly unhumbled under it.

7. His plea is rejected, and his excuſes confuted. Samuel, as commanded of God, delivers his meſſage, and having his authority, claims an audience. He reminds him of the exaltation to which, from his low eſtate, God had brought him, and which ſhould, in gratitude, have kept him obedient; the orders he received, on the preſent occaſion, were plain and expreſs, ſo that the offence muſt be wilful and deliberate; wherefore he expoſtulates with him on the inexcuſableneſs of his conduct, and the greatneſs of his ſin. Note, (1.) Though it be a terrible meſſage God gives us againſt the ſinner, we muſt not fear to deliver it plainly and faithfully. (2.) The more God's mercy hath been ſhewn us, the more ungrateful are our ill returns.

8. Saul interrupts the prophet in his meſſage, with repeated aſſertions of his obedience; though his own acknowledgments give the lie to his profeſſions. Note, They who are hardened in ſin and formality, will not be beat out of their vain confidence by the plaineſt confutation.

Laſtly. Samuel ſilences him with an appeal to his own conſcience; the moſt coſtly ſervices bear no proportion with dutiful obedience; rebellion againſt God's expreſs command, was criminal as witchcraft, and ſtubbornneſs in maintaining his innocence an aggravation of his iniquity like unto idolatry itſelf. Therefore, as the juſt reward of ſuch tranſgreſſion, he denounces his doom, God hath rejected him from being king, and cut off the entail of the government from his family. Note, (1.) Obedience to God is the moſt acceptable ſacrifice we can offer; a heart ſubmiſſive to his holy will is better than a hecatomb. (2.) All diſobedience is ſpiritual idolatry, as it ſets up the will of the creature above the will of God. (3.) Let kings know, that though they have no ſuperior on earth, they have a King of kings; and rebellion againſt him by ſin will be viſited with condign puniſhment.

24. ¶ And Saul ſaid unto Samuel, [c] I have ſinned: for I have tranſgreſſed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words: becauſe [d] I feared the people, and obeyed their voice. 25. Now therefore, I pray thee, pardon my ſin, and turn again with me, that I may worſhip the LORD. 26. And Samuel ſaid unto Saul, [e] I will not return with thee: for thou haſt rejected the word of the LORD, and [f] the LORD hath rejected thee from being king over Iſrael. 27. And as Samuel turned about to go away, he laid hold upon the ſkirt of his mantle, and it rent. 28. And Samuel ſaid unto him, [g] The LORD hath rent the kingdom of Iſrael from thee this day, and hath given it to a neighbour of thine, that is better than thou. 29. And alſo the † ſtrength of Iſrael [h] will not lie, nor repent; for [i] he is not a man that he ſhould repent. 30. Then he ſaid, I have ſinned; yet honour me now, I pray thee, before the elders of my people, and before Iſrael, and turn again with me, that I may worſhip the LORD thy God. 31. So Samuel turned again after Saul, and Saul worſhipped the LORD.

v. 24—31. Such evidence Saul can no longer withſtand. Therefore,

1. He confeſſes his ſin, yet in ſuch a way as makes him appear more ſollicitous to gain Samuel's favour, than God's forgiveneſs, and more anxious to ſave his credit with the world, than his conſcience from the guilt of his iniquity; his confeſſion is neither humbling nor ſincere, and he ſtill endeavours to extenuate his fault, with urging his fears of the people. Note, (1.) To confeſs the guilt we cannot conceal is no proof of real penitence. (2.) They who are more afraid of the ſhame of their ſins before men, than of the guilt of them before God, are ſtrangers to true conviction of the evil of ſin.

2. Samuel refuſes to return with him, and repeats God's determined purpoſe concerning him. As he was turning to go from him, Saul ſeized the ſkirt of his garment to ſtay him, and it rent in his hand; this the prophet immediately interprets the rending his kingdom from him, and takes occaſion thence to confirm the irreverſible decree of God. The Strength, or Victory of Iſrael, the God who protected his people, and to whom they were indebted for every ſucceſs, was incapable of falſhood or change of mind; yet when Saul pleaded his honour before the people, whom ſuch an abrupt departure of the prophet might have exaſperated againſt him, Samuel turned again, changing his mind, or receiving a divine notice to alter his reſolution; and ſince Saul was, for a time, to continue in poſſeſſion of the throne, he would not leſſen his authority; and he had alſo another commiſſion to execute, in the death of Agag, whom Saul had ſpared. Note, (1.) We are guilty of no lie, when we ſee cauſe to alter our reſolution from ſome new reaſons which did not before appear. (2.) Repentance comes too late when the judgment of rejection is gone forth.

32. ¶ Then ſaid Samuel, Bring you hither to me Agag the king of the Amalekites: and Agag came unto him delicately. And Agag ſaid, [k] Surely the bitterneſs of death is paſt. 33. And Samuel ſaid, [l] As thy ſword hath made women childleſs, ſo ſhall thy mother be childleſs among women. And Samuel [m] hewed Agag in pieces before the LORD in Gilgal. 34. ¶ Then Samuel went to Ramah, and Saul went up to his houſe to Gibeah of Saul. 35. And Samuel [n] came no more to ſee Saul until the day of his death: nevertheleſs, Samuel [o] mourned for Saul: and the LORD repented that he had made Saul king over Iſrael.

v. 32—35. We have,

1. Samuel executing juſtice upon Agag. He commands Agag to be brought, and he appears dreſſed like a king, delicately, or as the Vulgate tranſlation, and the Septuagint add, yet trembling, between fear and hope, flattering himſelf that the bitterneſs of death is paſt, but he ſoon finds his ſad miſtake; Samuel reproaching him with his former cruelties, denounces the juſt ſentence of retaliation upon him, and with the ſword himſelf, or ſome other by his orders, hews him in pieces before the Lord, as a ſacrifice to divine juſtice. Note, (1.) Bloody kings will meet an avenging God. (2.) Death is bitter to the ſinner, but to the believer in Jeſus, ſin being removed from his conſcience, the bitterneſs of death is paſſed. (3.) Many promiſe themſelves life and peace, who do not ſee the dart of death, like this ſword of Samuel, ready to pierce them to the heart.

2. Samuel takes his final leave of Saul, and never came to ſee him more, to the day of his death; that is, he never viſited him as a friend, though he might afterwards undeſignedly ſee him, as he did at Ramah, chap. xix. 24. yet he mourned for him, under the ſenſe of his terrible ſituation, and the ruin which hung over him, God having utterly rejected him. Note, It is bitter to nature to ſee thoſe we love in the ways of death and hell; we cannot but mourn over them.

CHAP. XVI.

At this chapter begins the ſtory of David, who, both with his ſword and his pen, ſerved the honour of God and the intereſts of Iſrael, as much as moſt ever did, and was as illuſtrious a type of Chriſt. 1. Samuel is commiſſioned to anoint one of Jeſſe's ſons king, ver. 1—5. 2. All his elder ſons are paſſed by, and David the youngeſt is choſen and anointed, ver. 6—13. 3. Saul growing melancholy, David plays before and relieves him, ver. 14—23. Thus ſmall are the beginnings of that great man.

About 1063.

1. AND the LORD ſaid unto Samuel, [a] How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, ſeeing I have rejected him from reigning over Iſrael? [b] fill thine horn with oil, and go, I will ſend thee to Jeſſe the Beth-lehemite: for [c] I have provided me a king among his ſons. 2. And Samuel ſaid, [d] How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the LORD ſaid, Take an heifer with thee, and ſay, [e] I am come to ſacrifice to the LORD. 3. And call Jeſſe to the ſacrifice, and I will ſhew thee what thou ſhalt do: and thou ſhalt anoint unto me him whom I name unto thee. 4. And Samuel did that which the LORD ſpake, and came to Beth-lehem: and [f] the elders of the town trembled at his coming, and ſaid, † Comeſt thou peaceably? 5. And he ſaid, Peaceably: I am come to ſacrifice unto the LORD: [g] ſanctify yourſelves, and come with me to the ſacrifice. And he ſanctified Jeſſe and his ſons, and called them to the ſacrifice.

v. 1—5. The prophet long bewailed in Ramah his rejected friend, and now retired from public eyes, ſpent his time in the care of the ſchool of the prophets. Here God again appears to him, either in a viſion of the night, or ſpeaking with an articulate voice.

1. He blames his inordinate grief for Saul, which was not only exceſſive in meaſure and duration, but fruitleſs alſo, ſeeing he was rejected for ever. Note, We are not forbidden to mourn, but immoderate grief is ſinful.

2. He ſends him on an important errand, even to anoint another king in the room of Saul, or rather as his ſucceſſor. An employment full of danger, conſidering the ſtate of Saul's mind, and at which Samuel heſitates through fear, leaſt Saul ſhould hear of it and kill him; but God inſtructs him how to proceed, ſo as to be without ſuſpicion or danger, ver. 2. and there he would fix upon the perſon, and give him directions for his conduct. Note, (1.) The beſt of men, this ſide the grave, have fears at times; 'tis recorded for the comfort of thoſe who have weak faith. (2.) They who follow God in his ways ſhall be directed aright.

3. Samuel obeys, goes to Beth-lehem with his ſacrifice, and being met by the elders, who were in fear leaſt ſuch an unexpected viſit boded no good, or leaſt Saul ſhould reſent their entertainment of him, if he came thither as a place of refuge, they aſk if he came peaceably. Samuel quickly removes their fears, and invites them to come to the ſacrifice he had provided; in order to which they are commanded to ſanctify themſelves with the uſual ablutions, and Jeſſe and his ſons are particularly called to the feaſt. Note, They who would draw near to God with acceptance, muſt have their conſciences ſanctified through the blood of Jeſus, and the waſhing of regeneration.

6. And it came to paſs when they were come, that he looked on [h] Eliab, and ſaid, Surely the LORD's anointed is before him. 7. But the LORD ſaid unto Samuel, [i] Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his ſtature; becauſe I have refuſed him: for the LORD ſeeth not as man ſeeth; for man looketh on the † outward appearance, but [k] the LORD looketh on the heart. 8. Then Jeſſe called Abinadab, and made him paſs before Samuel: and he ſaid, Neither hath the LORD choſen this. 9. Then Jeſſe made [l] Shammah to paſs by: and he ſaid, Neither hath the LORD choſen this. 10. Again Jeſſe made ſeven of his ſons to paſs before Samuel: and Samuel ſaid unto Jeſſe, The LORD hath not choſen theſe. 11. And Samuel ſaid unto Jeſſe, Are here all thy children? and he ſaid, There remaineth yet the youngeſt, and behold, he keepeth the ſheep. And Samuel ſaid unto Jeſſe, [m] Send and fetch him: for we will not ſit down till he come hither. 12. And he ſent, and brought him in: Now [n] he was ruddy, and withal ‡ of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the LORD ſaid, Ariſe, anoint him: for this is he. 13. Then Samuel [o] took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midſt of his brethren: and [p] the ſpirit of the LORD came upon David, from that day forward: ſo Samuel roſe up and went to Ramah.

v. 6—13. The king being to be choſen out of the ſons of Jeſſe, which was probably communicated to their father, though not to them, we have them here paſſing in review before Samuel.

1. The eldeſt came, and being a goodly perſonage, tall, majeſtic, Samuel was ready to conclude this was God's elect; ſo much does a noble preſence prejudice us in a man's favour: but God let him know he is miſtaken. God judgeth not as man, by outward qualifications, but by the heart, the diſpoſitions of which he regards, and with the inmoſt thought of it he is acquainted. Six more of Jeſſe's ſons appear, yet none of theſe doth God chuſe. Note, God's choice is ſovereign; he often makes the laſt to be firſt. For hereupon,

2. Samuel aſks Jeſſe if he has no other children, and receives anſwer that the youngeſt, the little one, was with the ſheep. Inſtantly he is ſent for, his preſence was the moſt needful of any at the feaſt; he appears in his ſhepherd's dreſs, the bloom of youth was on his ruddy cheek, his countenance, or, as the word ſignifies, his eyes beautiful and ſparkling, and his aſpect and manner beſpoke the more pleaſing diſpoſitions of his mind: this is he. God commands and Samuel obeys; the horn of oil is poured upon him, in token of the divine deſignation, and in or rather from the midſt of his brethren he is anointed, as choſen out of them, or in private from them, as it was a ſecret which required concealment. Note, (1.) Youth and beauty are pleaſing recommendations; and when the mind is fraught with divine grace, and natural ſweetneſs, it ſpreads a new luſtre on the gifts of nature, and makes the poſſeſſor twice amiable. (2.) Diligence in an inferior ſtation is the way to riſe to greater honour. (3.) This ſhepherd-king is the type of that anointed Jeſus, his ſon and ſucceſſor, who ſhould feed his flock like a ſhepherd.

3. He is no ſooner anointed, than the Lord pours out upon him an extraordinary meaſure of his ſpirit, fitting him for the great deſigns he has in view; increaſing not only his ſpiritual gifts and graces, but filling him with courage, and probably beſtowing an extraordinary ſkill in muſic and poetry. Note, Every ſoul whom God chuſes to the heavenly kingdom, hath an unction from the Holy One; and they who experience the work of his ſpirit, may be aſſured of the election of his grace.

4. Samuel now retires to Ramah, where he lives and dies in peace, and is but once more mentioned in this hiſtory. He had finiſhed his work, and God brings him ſhortly to his reward.

14. ¶ But [q] the ſpirit of the LORD departed from Saul, and [r] an evil ſpirit from the LORD troubled him. 15. And Saul's ſervants ſaid unto him, Behold now, an evil ſpirit [s] from God troubleth thee. 16. Let our lord now command thy ſervants which are before thee, to ſeek out a man who is a cunning player on an harp: and it ſhall come to paſs when the evil ſpirit from God is upon thee, that he ſhall play with his hand, and [t] thou ſhalt be well. 17. And Saul ſaid unto his ſervants, Provide me now a man that can play well, and bring him to me. 18. Then anſwered one of the ſervants, and ſaid, Behold, I have ſeen a ſon of Jeſſe the Beth-lehemite, that is cunning in playing, and [u] a mighty valiant man, and a man of war, and prudent in † matters, and a comely perſon, and the LORD is with him. 19. ¶ Wherefore Saul ſent meſſengers unto Jeſſe, and ſaid, Send me David thy ſon, [x] which is with the ſheep. 20. And Jeſſe took an aſs laden with bread, and a bottle of wine, and a kid, and ſent them by David his ſon unto Saul. 21. And David came to Saul, and ſtood before him; and [y] he loved him greatly, and he became his armour-bearer. 22. And Saul ſent to Jeſſe, ſaying, Let David, I pray thee, ſtand before me; for he hath found favour in my ſight. 23. And it came to paſs, when the evil ſpirit from God was upon Saul, that David took an harp, and played with his hand: ſo Saul was refreſhed, and was well, and [z] the evil ſpirit departed from him.

v. 14—23. Behold,

1. Saul a miſerable ſpectacle, forſaken of God, deprived of his wonted wiſdom and courage, and haunted by an evil ſpirit, terrified with the gnawings of remorſe, gloomy, timorous, cruel, raving; diſtracted with ſuſpicion and envy, and mad with deſpair. Note, How like a devil may man become in this world, when the reſtraints of God's ſpirit are taken from him, and he is given up to an evil conſcience and the power of ſatan!

2. His ſervants, perhaps his phyſicians, beholding his ſtrange diſeaſe, knew medicine was vain; they tell him their apprehenſion of his caſe, and preſcribe a palliative, if not a cure, to ſooth the ruffled paſſions of his mind, and lull his troubled boſom to repoſe. Muſic hath magic powers, and melody might harmonize the jarring diſcord of his ſoul; a cunning player on the harp would be his beſt phyſician. Saul reſolves to try the preſcription, and commands ſuch an one to be procured: one of his ſervants hearing his order, recommends the ſon of Jeſſe, a man eminent for every endowment of mind and perſon, handſome, wiſe, valiant, and, for muſical ſkill and execution peerleſs. Him therefore Saul inſtantly ſends for to court. Note, (1.) It were pity that ſo divine a ſcience as muſic ſhould ever, by lewd ſonnets, be proſtituted to inflame thoſe paſſions it was deſigned to calm and ſuppreſs. (2.) It is fatally dangerous for the ſoul to ſeak eaſe in ſenſual delights, inſtead of carrying a troubled conſcience to a pardoning God. (3.) When God is pleaſed to diſtinguiſh a ſoul by his gifts and graces, obſcurity cannot hide the luſtre.

3. No ſooner is he ſent for than he comes. His father, according to the cuſtom of the times, ſends a preſent by him, to teſtify his dutiful ſubjection, and Saul is charmed with his behaviour, makes him his armour-bearer, and deſires his father's leave to keep him continually about his perſon; for ſoon he experienced the efficacy of David's muſic. The evil ſpirit ſeizing him as uſual, his melancholy reflections returned; then David took the harp, and in ſounds melodious ſoothed his ſorrows, and, as Joſephus ſaith, joined to his melting lyre a voice ſeraphic as the ſong: at this the ravings of the king ſubſide, the evil ſpirit leaves him, and he regains his uſual ſerenity. Note, (1.) Muſic hath power over ſome ſouls, which they who feel can only tell. (2.) It once was found ſucceſsful to drive the evil ſpirit from the ſoul: Satan perceived the good, and liſted muſic in his cauſe; and how hath it ſerved ſince to convey to the enchanted mind, with deeper poiſon, the ſentiments of luſt, revelling, and creature idolatry, and to drive from the ſoul not the evil ſpirit, but the good!

1. NOW the Philiſtines gathered together their armies to battle, and were gathered together at Shochoh, which belongeth to Judah, and pitched between Shochoh and Azekah, in Ephes-dammim. 2. And Saul and the men of Iſrael were gathered together, and pitched by the valley of Elah, and † ſet the battle in aray againſt the Philiſtines. 3. And the Philiſtines ſtood on a mountain on the one ſide, and Iſrael ſtood on a mountain on the other ſide: and there was a valley between them. 4. ¶ And there went out a ‡ champion out of the camp of the Philiſtines, named Goliath, of Gath, [a] whoſe height was ſix cubits and a ſpan; 5. And he had an helmet of braſs upon his head, and he was armed with a coat of mail: and the weight of the coat was five thouſand ſhekels of braſs. 6. And he had greaves of braſs upon his legs, and a target of braſs between his ſhoulders. 7. And the ſtaff of his ſpear was like a weaver's beam, and his ſpear's head weighed ſix hundred ſhekels of iron: and one bearing a ſhield went before him. 8. And he ſtood and cried unto the armies of Iſrael, and ſaid unto them, Why are ye come out to ſet your battle in aray? am not I a Philiſtine, and you ſervants to Saul? chooſe you a man for you, and let him come down to me. 9. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your ſervants: but if I prevail againſt him, and kill him, then ſhall ye be our ſervants, and ſerve us. 10. And the Philiſtine ſaid, [b] I defy the armies of Iſrael this day; give me a man, that we may fight together. 11. When Saul and all Iſrael heard thoſe words of the Philiſtine, they were diſmayed, and greatly afraid.

v. 1—11. When David had ſucceeded, and no relapſe for ſome time made his ſtay longer neceſſary, he returned to his father's houſe at Bethlehem; probably not reliſhing the diſſolute manners of a court, and infinitely happier in retirement and communion with God, whilſt he kept his father's flock. Here he ſeems to have been almoſt, if not altogether, forgotten, till a new incident calls him once more into the preſence and family of the king.

1. The Philiſtines recover from their late defeat, and encouraged, no doubt, by the accounts they had received of Saul's quarrel with Samuel, and his diſtracted ſtate of mind, again invade Iſrael. But Saul, now recovered, is enabled to make head againſt them, and with his army encamps on the hill oppoſite his enemies. Note, The enemies of God's people are always watching to take advantage, and eſpecially to profit by their diſputes and diviſions.

2. A mighty champion went out of their camp, their boaſt and glory, and proudly defied the armies of Iſrael; his height was prodigious, according to the beſt calculation ſomewhat more than eleven feet four inches; his armour was proportioned to his ſize, his helmet braſs, his coat of mail conſiſted of plates of braſs, that lay one over another like fiſhes ſcales, and weighed upwards of one hundred and fifty-ſix pounds, beſides the greaves of braſs on his legs, and corſlet of braſs between his ſhoulders; all together a weight more than an ordinary man could well ſupport. His ſpear vaſt and huge, the handle large as a weaver's beam, the head of iron weighing ſix hundred ſhekels, near nineteen pounds; and his ſhield carried before him by his eſquire, either for pomp or to be uſed, if any daring Iſraelite accepted his challenge. Forth he marches, proud in his ſtrength and ſtature, and with a voice loud as thunder, challenges the armies of Iſraelites to ſend a man to fight with him, offers in bravado to have the fate of either kingdom decided by the iſſue of the combat, and vaunts his own condeſcenſion in thus ſubmitting, though a prince in Philiſtia, to accept a man out of their army, who were no better than ſervants to Saul. Note, Pride will ſooner or later have a fall.

3. The effect this produced on Saul and the Iſraelites. They were quite diſpirited, and ready to fly before a ſingle Philiſtine. Note, When we have provoked God to depart from us, fear will terrify us on every approach of danger.

12. ¶ Now [c] David was the ſon of that Ephrathite of Beth-lehem-judah, whoſe name was Jeſſe, and he had eight ſons: and the man went among men for an old man in the days of Saul. 13. And the three eldeſt ſons of Jeſſe went, and followed Saul to the battle: and the names of his three ſons that went to the battle, were Eliab the firſt-born, and next unto him, Abinadab, and the third Shammah. 14. And David was the youngeſt: and the three eldeſt followed Saul. 15. But David went, and returned from Saul, [d] to feed his father's ſheep at Beth-lehem. 16. And the Philiſtine drew near, morning and evening, and preſented himſelf forty days. 17.

And Jeſſe ſaid unto David his ſon, Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this parched corn, and theſe ten loaves, and run to the camp to thy brethren. 18. And carry theſe ten cheeſes unto the captain of their thouſand, and look how thy brethren fare, and take their pledge. 19. Now Saul, and they, and all the men of Iſrael were in the valley of Elah, fighting with the Philiſtines.

v. 12—19. Forty days the armies lay encamped, and, morning and evening, the champion of Philiſtia renewed his challenge, and reproached the cowardice of his foes; when lo! an adverſary appears, little thought of, and, to human view, very unequal for the combat. Three of Jeſſe's ſons, being ſoldiers in Saul's army, were gone down to the battle, Jeſſe himſelf being a very aged man, and unable to bear the fatigues of war. David had for ſome time paſt returned from court to his old occupation, and fed his father's ſheep at Bethlehem. Here he receives his father's orders to carry down proviſions to his brethren, who, by the length of the encampment, might be diſtreſſed, (as it is thought every ſoldier then provided his own victuals), and a preſent to their captain, and take their pledge, either redeem what they had pawned for their ſuſtenance, or bring back a token from them of their welfare. Note, They who take the field as ſoldiers, muſt be prepared to endure hardneſs

20. ¶ And David roſe up early in the morning, and left the ſheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jeſſe had commanded him; and he came to the † trench, as the hoſt was going forth to fight, and ſhouted for the battle. 21. For Iſrael and the Philiſtines had put the battle in aray, army againſt army. 22. And David left his carriage in the hand of the keeper of the carriage, and ran into the army, and came and ‡ ſaluted his brethren. 23. And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion (the Philiſtine of Gath, Goliath by name) out of the armies of the Philiſtines, and ſpake according to the ſame words: and David heard them. 24. And all the men of Iſrael, when they ſaw the man, fled § from him, and were ſore afraid. 25. And the men of Iſrael ſaid, Have ye ſeen this man that is come up? ſurely to defy Iſrael is he come up: and it ſhall be that the man who killeth him, the king will enrich him with great riches, and [e] will give him his daughter, and make his father's houſe free in Iſrael. 26. And David ſpake to the men that ſtood by him, ſaying, What ſhall be done to the man that killeth this Philiſtine, and [f] taketh away the reproach from Iſrael? for who is this uncircumciſed Philiſtine, that he ſhould defy the armies of [g] the living God? 27. And the people anſwered him after this manner, ſaying, So ſhall it be done to the man that killeth him. 28. ¶ And Eliab his eldeſt brother heard when he ſpake unto the men; and [h] Eliab's anger was kindled againſt David, and he ſaid, Why cameſt thou down hither? and with whom haſt thou left thoſe few ſheep in the wilderneſs? [i] I know thy pride, and the naughtineſs of thine heart; for thou art come down, that thou mighteſt ſee the battle. 29. And David ſaid, What have I now done? [k] Is there not a cauſe? 30. ¶ And he turned from him towards another, and ſpake after the ſame ‖ manner: and the people anſwered him again after the former manner.

v. 20—30. David, in obedience to his father's commands, and in love to his brethren, though, if we may judge of their paſt by their preſent conduct, they little deſerved it at his hands, having left his ſheep with a keeper, haſtes to the camp, and enters it juſt as the hoſt was marching forth to engage. As he could not then carry the proviſions to his brethren, he left them with thoſe who guarded the baggage, and ran to ſalute his brethren, and diſcharge his commiſſion to them from his father. And whilſt he talked with them, juſt then Goliath marches forth from the ranks of the Philiſtines, and renews his proud challenge; where we may obſerve,

1. The cowardice of the people. They fled from him; not a man dared face him.

2. The great reward Saul promiſed, to encourage any man who would venture to engage this mighty warrior; wealth and honour for himſelf and for his family, freedom from all taxes, and hereditary nobility.

3. David hearing the blaſphemy of the Philiſtine, felt his ſpirit kindling in his boſom. He could not bear that an uncircumciſed Philiſtine ſhould thus triumph in his proud boaſting, or that the armies of the living God ſhould be thus defied, and a reflection thereby caſt on his honour. Therefore he enquires concerning the reward, as if he wondered that none dared accept the challenge; and, by the earneſtneſs and repetition of his queſtion, intimated his own readineſs to do it. Note, A ſoul filled with holy zeal cannot bear to ſee God or his cauſe blaſphemed, without riſing up in its vindication.

4. Eliab's anger riſes againſt him. He could not hear his enquiries, and the daring ſpirit he ſhewed, without feeling the workings of jealouſy and envy againſt him: perhaps ſtung too with the reflection of David, as if he among the reſt wanted courage for the combat. To quench therefore this riſing ſpark of zeal, he abuſes him as a negligent youth, who had, through pride and curioſity, quitted his calling, and left the few ſheep of his poor father, to come down to ſee the battle; inſolently and cenſoriouſly pretending to know the pride and naughtineſs of his heart, and ſeeking not only to diſcourage his own ſpirit, but to make him appear deſpicable, and his words diſregarded, by thoſe to whom he addreſſed himſelf. Note, (1.) The enmity of an offended brother is moſt bitter and implacable. (2.) The moſt upright and innocent intentions envy can eaſily miſrepreſent. (3.) cenſoriouſneſs will not only make men miſinterpret our actions, but pretend to know thoſe ſecrets of the heart, which are open to God alone.

5. David, unprovoked with ſuch unjuſt and illiberal abuſe, mildly confutes his miſrepreſentation. Was there not a cauſe for his coming? Was it not his father's orders, and on a meſſage of kindneſs to him? And was there not reaſon to expreſs reſentment at ſuch an impious defiance? He therefore turns from him, and, undiſmayed, continues his enquiries, and intimates his readineſs to undertake this boaſter. Note, (1.) A ſoft anſwer turneth away wrath. (2.) We muſt not be diſcouraged in well doing, nor ceaſe becauſe our good intentions are miſrepreſented or abuſed.

31. And when the words were heard which David ſpake, they rehearſed them before Saul: and he ſent for him. 32. ¶ And David ſaid to Saul, [l] Let no man's heart fail becauſe of him; [m] thy ſervant will go and fight with this Philiſtine. 33. And Saul ſaid to David, [n] Thou art not able to go againſt this Philiſtine, to fight with him: for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth. 34. And David ſaid unto Saul, Thy ſervant † kept his father's ſheep, and there came a lion and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock. 35. And I went out after him, and ſmote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he aroſe againſt me, I caught him by his beard, and [o] ſmote him, and ſlew him. 36. Thy ſervant ſlew both the lion and the bear: and this uncircumciſed Philiſtine ſhall be as one of them, ſeeing he hath defied the armies of the living God. 37. David ſaid moreover, The LORD that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, [p] he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philiſtine. And Saul ſaid unto David, Go, and the LORD be with thee. 38. And Saul ‡ armed David with his armour, and he put an helmet of braſs upon his head, alſo he armed him with a coat of mail. 39. And David girded his ſword upon his armour, and he aſſayed to go, for he had not proved it: and David ſaid unto Saul, [q] I cannot go with theſe: for I have not proved them. And David put them off him.

v. 31—39. Such repeated enquiries, and apparent reſolution, are quickly carried to the ears of Saul, and David is ſent for to his tent.

1. He offers to engage in ſingle combat with the Philiſtine, and, with the intrepidity of a hero, dares encourage the timorous hoſts that fled before him. Note, The righteous is as bold as a lion.

2. Saul diſcourages him from the undertaking, by pleading his youth and inexperience; great as his courage might be, the conteſt was utterly unequal. Note, We muſt not judge by appearances. They who have God for them, have more with them than can be againſt them.

3. David modeſtly anſwers the objection of the king; he was not ſo unuſed to hazardous enterprizes as he ſeemed to apprehend. As he fed his flock a lion, fierce with hunger, came and ſeized a lamb, which he purſued, ſeized by the beard, and ſlew him unarmed; a bear too, who made the ſame attempt, ſhared the ſame fate: and if God ſtrengthened him thus againſt the lion and the bear, how much more would he deliver him from the hand of a Philiſtine, who, by his defiance of the armies of the living God, had provoked the God of Iſrael's armies to deſtroy him. Note, (1.) We need never be aſhamed of an honeſt calling, though mean. (2.) David is the type of him, who, from the mouth of the roaring lion, hath delivered the lambs of his flock. (3.) Paſt experience ſhould be preſent encouragement.

4. Saul, ſatisfied, conſents to his going, and prays the Lord to be with him, and give him ſucceſs; and to equip him for the battle, brings down a ſuit of armour, and fits it on him; but after eſſaying to go in it, either his ſpirit was admoniſhed not to make uſe of theſe defences, leaſt God's arm might not be ſo much ſeen; or, more probably, not being accuſtomed to walk in armour, he felt it encumbered rather than aſſiſted him, therefore he put it off, reſolving to advance juſt as he was. Note, They have the beſt armour that go forth with a good conſcience in a good cauſe.

40. And [r] he took his ſtaff in his hand, and choſe him [s] five ſmooth ſtones out of the brook, and put them in his ſhepherd's bag which he had, even in a ſcrip, and his ſling was in his hand, and he drew near to the Philiſtine. 41. And the Philiſtine came on and drew near unto David, and the man that bare the [t] ſhield went before him. 42. And when the Philiſtine looked about and ſaw David, [u] he diſdained him: for he was but a youth, and ruddy, and of a fair countenance. 43. And the Philiſtine ſaid unto David, Am I a dog, that thou comeſt to me with [x] ſtaves? and the Philiſtine curſed David by his gods. 44. And the Philiſtine ſaid to David, Come to me, and [y] I will give thy fleſh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beaſt of the field. 45. Then ſaid David to the Philiſtine, Thou comeſt to me with a ſword, and with a ſpear, and with a ſhield; but I come to thee [z] in the name of the LORD of hoſts, the God of the armies of Iſrael, whom thou haſt defied. 46. [a] This day will the LORD deliver thee into mine hand, and I will ſmite thee, and take thine head from thee, and I will give [b] the carcaſes of the hoſt of the Philiſtines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beaſts of the earth; [c] that all the earth may know that there is a God in Iſrael. 47. And all this aſſembly ſhall know that [d] the LORD ſaveth not with ſword and ſpear: for [e] the battle is the LORD's, and he will give you into our hands.

v. 40—47. David having put off his armour, in his ſhepherd's dreſs, with his ſling in his hand, marches down toward this proud Philiſtine, and chuſes five ſmooth ſtones from the brook which ran in the valley, nor was at all terrified with the formidable appearance of his antagoniſt, ſince God was the ſtrength of his hope.

1. Goliath, looking on ſuch a puny foe, a youth, and, ſo accoutred, with high diſdain treated his inſolence in daring to approach him, as if a dog, to be beaten with a ſhepherd's ſtaff; and curſing him by his gods, threatens, as eaſily as a lion tears the lamb, to give his fleſh to the birds and beaſts. Note, (1.) The curſe that is cauſeleſs falls only on the head that utters it. (2.) The preſumption of the proud deſtroys them.

2. David replies with confidence and dependance upon God, and hurls back this boaſter's threatnings into his face; having authority from the God of Iſrael, whom, in his people, Goliath had defied, dependent on the arm of that omnipotent Lord of hoſts, who alone giveth victory in the battle, he threatens that his carcaſs, and thoſe of his countrymen, ſhall this day afford a nobler feaſt to the birds and beaſts: the nations around ſhall then acknowledge the glory of Iſrael's God, and his church and people adore him for a ſalvation ſo great and wonderful.

48. And it came to paſs when the Philiſtine aroſe, and came and drew nigh to meet David, that David haſted, and ran toward the army to meet the Philiſtine. 49. And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a ſtone, and ſlang it, and ſmote the Philiſtine in his forehead, that the ſtone † ſunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth. 50. So [f] David prevailed over the Philiſtine with a ſling and with a ſtone, and ſmote the Philiſtine and ſlew him; but there was no ſword in the hand of David. 51. Therefore David ran and ſtood upon the Philiſtine, and took his ſword, and drew it out of the ſheath thereof, and ſlew him, and cut off his head therewith. And when the Philiſtines ſaw their champion was dead, they fled. 52. And the men of Iſrael and of Judah aroſe, and ſhouted and purſued the Philiſtines, until thou come to the valley, and to the gates of Ekron: and the wounded of the Philiſtines fell down by the way to Shaaraim, even unto Gath, and unto Ekron. 53. And the children of Iſrael returned from chaſing after the Philiſtines, and they ſpoiled their tents. 54. And David took the head of the Philiſtine, and [g] brought it to Jeruſalem; but he put his armour in ‡ his tent. 55. And when Saul ſaw David go forth againſt the Philiſtine, he ſaid unto Abner the captain of the hoſt, Abner, whoſe ſon is this youth? And Abner ſaid, As thy ſoul liveth, O king, I cannot tell. 56. And the king ſaid, Enquire thou whoſe ſon the ſtripling is. 57. And as David returned from the ſlaughter of the Philiſtine, Abner took him and brought him before Saul, with the head of the Philiſtine in his hand. 58. And Saul ſaid to him, Whoſe ſon art thou, thou young man? And David anſwered, I am the ſon of thy ſervant Jeſſe the Beth-lehemite.

v. 48—58. We have here the iſſue of this unequal match, and ſee the battle is not always to the ſtrong.

1. Like a Coloſſus huge Goliath ſtrides along, glittering in burniſhed armour; David, with nimbler ſtep, haſtes to meet him, and having fitted the ſtone into his ſling, aimed at the broad mark of this Philiſtine's forehead. Swift flew the meſſenger of death, reſiſtleſs pierces through his ſkull, and backward fell the mighty hero, extended breathleſs on the plain. Probably deſpiſing ſuch a youth, he turned back the caſket of his helmet, or through the eye the ſtone might enter, as the Targum intimates; or, ſince it was of God, through the brazen helmet, and hardened forehead, it might paſs ſwift as lightning, and reſiſtleſs as the thunderbolt. With eagerneſs now David flies on his prey, draws forth the vanquiſhed champion's ſword, and ſevers his head from his body, as the trophy of his victory. Note, (1.) Vain is the arm of fleſh againſt the power of God. (2.) Thus hath Jeſus conquered the powers of darkneſs, and ſpoiled them openly; and thus ſhall every believer conquer thoſe giant-like corruptions that wage war againſt his ſoul.

2. A panic ſeizes the hoſts of Philiſtia, when they behold their boaſted hero fallen, whilſt Iſrael's armies, ſhouting for victory, purſue the diſpirited fugitives even to the gates of their cities, and on their return plunder the camp. Note, They who truſt on man will find their dependance but a broken reed.

3. David ſpoiled the Philiſtine of his armour, as well as his head; and having carried the latter in triumph round the cities of Iſrael, fixed it up at Jeruſalem, as a terror to the Jebuſites who ſtill held the fortreſs of Zion; the armour he laid up in his tent, or perhaps in God's tent or tabernacle, as a monument of the victory, where we find the ſword of Goliath, chap. xxi. 9.

4. Saul makes enquiries about this young hero, having forgotten David by his abſence from court, and ſo differently dreſſed, and in ſo different a character; or if he recollected him, he was, as the queſtion ſeems to import, ſollicitous to know his family and extraction, whether he were nobly deſcended, having engaged to marry his daughter to him. Abner profeſſes his ignorance of his family; but David appears and ſatisfies his enquiries, with a modeſt account of his parentage, as the ſon of Jeſſe the Beth-lehemite. Note, It is not high birth, but deeds of high deſert, that conſtitute true nobility.

1. AND it came to paſs, when he had made an end of ſpeaking unto Saul, that [a] the ſoul of Jonathan was knit with the ſoul of David, and Jonathan loved him, as his own ſoul. 2. And Saul took him that day, and would let him go no more home to his father's houſe. 3. Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, becauſe he loved him as his own ſoul. 4. And Jonathan ſtript himſelf of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his ſword, and to his bow, and to his girdle. 5. ¶ And David went out whitherſoever Saul ſent him, and † behaved himſelf [b] wiſely: and Saul ſet him over the men of war, and he was accepted in the ſight of all the people, and alſo in the ſight of Saul's ſervants.

v. 1—5. David is now fixed at court.

1. Saul reſolves to keep him about his perſon, advances him to the command of a troop, and employs him often in his affairs of ſtate; in all which David approves himſelf a faithful and diligent ſervant. Thus he learnt to obey, before he came to rule.

2. Jonathan, Saul's ſon, is raviſhed with the excellences that appear in him, and from his behaviour conceives the warmeſt affection for him; probably their age was nearly equal, their manners ſimilar, and their ſouls, as generous ſpirits always are, ſuſceptible of the tendereſt feelings of friendſhip. To give him an immediate mark of his regard, Jonathan carries him to his tent, ſtrips off his own cloaths, even to his ſword and his girdle; and as David muſt appear at court, will have him dreſſed as a courtier, and ſuitable to his high deſerts. There, to perpetuate the bands of friendſhip, a ſolemen covenant is made between them, to be faithful to each other 'till death. Note, (1.) A faithful friend is among the greateſt of human bleſſings. (2.) True friendſhip is conſtant, and ſtartles not at aſſurances. (3.) They who are Chriſt's friends would bind themſelves to be his for ever.

3. David's conduct got him univerſal eſteem; his valour made him loved abroad, and his humility kept him from being envied at court. Note, In high ſtations 'tis a difficult part ſo to act as to procure honour without provoking envy.

6. And it came to paſs as they came when David was returned from the ſlaughter of the Philiſtine, that the women came out of all cities of Iſrael, [d] ſinging and dancing, to meet king Saul, with tabrets, with joy, and with inſtruments of muſic. 7. And the women [e] anſwered one another as they played, and ſaid, [f] Saul hath ſlain his thouſands, and David his ten thouſands. 8. And Saul was very wroth, and the ſaying † diſpleaſed him; and he ſaid, They have aſcribed unto David ten thouſands, and to me they have aſcribed but thouſands; and what can he have more but [g] the kingdom? 9. And Saul [h] eyed David from that day and forward. 10. ¶ And it came to paſs on the morrow, that [i] the evil ſpirit from God came upon Saul, and [k] he propheſied in the midſt of the houſe: and David played with his hand, as at other times; and there was a javelin in Saul's hand. 11. And [l] Saul caſt the javelin; for he ſaid, I will ſmite David even to the wall with it: and David avoided out of his preſence twice.

v. 6—11. To allay the joy of his preferment his troubles quickly follow.

1. Saul becomes jealous of his growing greatneſs; having made a triumphant progreſs through the cities of Iſrael, after the victory, and being met by the women, ſinging the praiſes of the conquerors, his ſoul is ſtung with envy to hear ten thouſands ſlain aſcribed to David, and to himſelf but thouſands. From that day forward his look of complacence changed into the frown of diſpleaſure, and dark ſuſpicions troubled him, conſcious that his kingdom was forfeited, and fearing that this was his rival, who would dethrone him. Note, (1.) The praiſes of merit are, in the ears of envy, grating diſcord. (2.) An evil and malignant eye betrays the rancour of the heart.

2. He attempts to deſtroy him. Brooding all night over theſe dark thoughts, next day his former demoniacal phrenzy returns upon him; pretending prophetic impulſe, his geſtures were ſtrange, or, perhaps, he really predicted, as a Jewiſh writer ſays, his own ruin and David's advancement. David, obſerving his unhappy caſe, ran to his harp, that before had ſoothed his rage; but Saul, mad with envy, hurls his javelin at him, with ſuch violence as to faſten him with it to the wall. Note, (1.) They who indulge the evil thoughts of their own hearts, invite the devil to take poſſeſſion of them. (2.) Jealouſy is cruel as the grave, and thirſts for the precious life.

3. David eſcapes the wicked attempt, twice made on his life, either the ſame day or once afterwards, chap. xix. 9. He perhaps obſerved Saul's trembling hand, and ſlipt away from the ſtroke aimed at his heart, or God, in watchful mercy, turned the javelin aſide. Note, God guards his people from many a mortal blow their great enemy aims at them, to deſtroy them.

12. ¶ And Saul was afraid of David, becauſe the LORD was with him, and was departed from Saul. 13. Therefore Saul removed him from him, and [m] made him his captain over a thouſand; and [n] he went out and came in before the people. 14. And David behaved himſelf wiſely in all his ways: and the LORD was with him. 15. Wherefore when Saul ſaw that he behaved himſelf very wiſely, he was afraid of him. 16. But all Iſrael and Judah loved David, becauſe he went out and came in before them. 17. ¶ And Saul ſaid to David, [o] Behold, my elder daughter Merab, her will I give thee to wife: only be thou † valiant for me, and [p] fight the LORD's battles: for Saul ſaid, [q] Let not mine hand be upon him, but let the hand of the Philiſtines be upon him. 18. And David ſaid unto Saul, [r] Who am I? and what is my life, or my father's family in Iſrael, that I ſhould be ſon-in-law to the king? 19. But it came to paſs at the time when Merab Saul's daughter ſhould have been given to David, that ſhe was given unto Adriel the Meholathite to wife. 20. And Michal Saul's daughter loved David: and they told Saul, and the thing pleaſed him. 21. And Saul ſaid, I will give him her, that [s] ſhe may be a ſnare to him, and that [t] the hand of the Philiſtines may be againſt him. Wherefore Saul ſaid to David, Thou ſhalt this day be my ſon-in-law in the one of the twain. 22. And Saul commanded his ſervants, ſaying, Commune with David ſecretly, and ſay, Behold, the king hath delight in thee, and all his ſervants love thee: now therefore be the king's ſon-in-law. 23. And Saul's ſervants ſpake thoſe words in the ears of David: and David ſaid, Seemeth it to you a light thing to be a king's ſon-in-law, ſeeing that [u] I am a poor man, and lightly eſteemed? 24. And the ſervants of Saul told him, ſaying, ‡ On this manner ſpake David. 25. And Saul ſaid, Thus ſhall ye ſay to David, The king deſireth not [x] any dowry, but an hundred foreſkins of the Philiſtines, to be avenged of the king's enemies. But Saul thought to make David fall by the hand of the Philiſtines. 26. And when his ſervants told David theſe words, it ‖ pleaſed David well to be the king's ſon-in-law: and the days were not expired. 27. Wherefore David aroſe and went, he and his men, and ſlew of the Philiſtines two hundred men; and [y] David brought their foreſkins, and they gave them in full tale to the king, that he might be the king's ſon-in-law: and Saul gave him Michal his daughter to wife. 28. ¶ And Saul ſaw and knew that the LORD was with David, and that Michal Saul's daughter loved him. 29. And [z] Saul was yet the more afraid of David; and Saul became David's enemy continually. 30. Then the princes of the Philiſtines went forth, and it came to paſs after they went forth, that David behaved himſelf § more wiſely than all the ſervants of Saul, ſo that his name was † much ſet by.

v. 12—30. What Saul cannot perpetrate by open violence, he ſeeks to accompliſh by ſecret fraud.

1. His fears, the more increaſed by the evident bleſſing of God upon David, put him upon removing him from court. But this he ſeeks to do in ſuch a way as, under pretence of preferment, to expoſe him to danger and death; he therefore makes him captain of a thouſand, and ſends him out to fight the Philiſtines, and to whet his ardor, the more to endanger his life, gives him hopes that he will beſtow on him his eldeſt daughter to wife, if he returns victorious, and approves himſelf in deeds of valour. This indeed was what he before deſerved, though he had not claimed her, and now modeſtly profeſſes himſelf unworthy ſuch an honour; ready, however, to obey his ſovereign, and zealous for Iſrael's glory, his exploits ſerve to ſpread his fame, and ingratiate him with the army, whilſt his prudent conduct engages the regard of all. Note, (1.) God can overrule the wickedeſt deſigns of our enemies, for our good, and to the confuſion of their authors. (2.) Modeſt worth ſhines with double luſtre.

2. The more David proſpers the more Saul fears; therefore, to exaſperate him into ſome raſh word, or falſe ſtep, he affronts him, by giving his daughter to another, perhaps on the very day fixed for the bridal feaſt.

3. Saul lays a new ſnare for him. Though he had robbed him of one daughter he would entice him with the other, and ſets his courtiers to encourage him to hope for the honour of being yet the king's ſon-in-law, pretending the pleaſure that Saul took in him, and propoſing the dowry that Saul expected, an hundred foreſkins of the Philiſtines. He hoped that this expedition might prove fatal to him, as the Philiſtines would be exaſperated at ſuch inſult offered them, and he ſhould get rid thus of his enemy; at leaſt, if he ſucceeded, he promiſed himſelf his daughter would take part with him againſt her huſband. But as wicked men's ſchemes, however deep laid, often are, he was diſappointed of the one by David's valour, and of the other by Michal's love.

4. David at firſt declined the hints of the courtiers, and behaved the more cautiouſly, as he ſaw them wait for his halting. He humbly urges the greatneſs of the honour, and his own unworthineſs of it, whoſe fortune or faſhion were not, in anywiſe, anſwerable to ſuch a match; but ſeeing, at laſt, that it was really the king's mind, he liked very well the propoſal, and ere the time propoſed was expired, he doubled the number of fore-ſkins, that ſince this was to be the dowry he might not appear deficient: and now he hath Michal's hand, as he before poſſeſſed her heart. Note, (1.) Kings never want wicked inſtruments to further their baſeſt deſigns. (2.) True humility will make a man rather undervalue than over-rate his own importance. (3.) If it be ſuch an honour to be a king's ſon-in-law, how much greater to become the ſons and heirs of the eternal king, as every believer is that is joined to the Lord.

5. His marriage kept him not from the field. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf again beyond all Saul's ſervants againſt the princes of the Philiſtines, and gained a great name among the people, whilſt Saul's envy increaſed in proportion with David's eminence. So will God confound the wiſe in their own craftineſs, and in ſpite of every danger exalt the man whom he delighteth to honour.

CHAP. XIX.

We have here four eſcapes of David from the ſword of Saul, 1. By the mediation of Jonathan, ver. 1—7. 2. By his own quickneſs, ver. 8—10. 3. By Michal's fidelity, ver. 11—17. 4. By Samuel's protection, ver. 18—24. Thus God has many ways of preſerving his people. Providence is never at a loſs.

1. AND [a] Saul ſpake to Jonathan his ſon, and to all his ſervants, that they ſhould kill David. 2. But Jonathan Saul's ſon [b] delighted much in David: and [c] Jonathan told David, ſaying, Saul my father ſeeketh to kill thee: now therefore, I pray thee, take heed to thyſelf until the morning, and abide in a ſecret place, and hide thyſelf: 3. And I will go out and ſtand before my father in the field where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee: and what I ſee, that I will tell thee. 4. ¶ And Jonathan ſpake good of David unto Saul his father, and ſaid unto him, Let not the king [d] ſin againſt his ſervant, againſt David: becauſe [e] he hath not ſinned againſt thee, and becauſe his works have been to thee-ward very good. 5. For [f] he did put his life in his hand, and ſlew the Philiſtine, and [g] the LORD wrought a great ſalvation for all Iſrael: thou ſaweſt it, and didſt rejoice; [h] wherefore then wilt thou ſin againſt innocent blood, to ſlay David without a cauſe? 6. And Saul hearkened unto the voice of Jonathan: and Saul [i] ſware, As the LORD liveth, he ſhall not be ſlain. 7. And Jonathan called David, and Jonathan ſhewed him all thoſe things: and Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he was in his preſence, as in times paſt.

v. 1—7. Saul no longer ſeeks to cloak his bloody deſigns, but gives public orders to kill David as a traitor, and particularly to Jonathan, to diſpatch the rival of his crown; but Jonathan's love was ſtronger than the ambition of a throne; and Saul's malice, by being undiſguiſed, was the eaſier diſappointed.

1. He warns David of his danger, and bids him hide himſelf till the morning in ſome ſecret place, becauſe of the order which had been given, and by that time he hoped to procure ſome change in his cruel father, or at leaſt to let David know how to proceed.

2. He takes the firſt opportunity, the next morning, to expoſtulate with his father, and to pacify his reſentment. He urges the kindneſſes David had ſhewn him, the great obligations the whole land owed him, nay Saul's own acknowledgments of it. How ungrateful and baſe then to murder ſo faithful a ſervant, and ſo valiant a ſubject! Had he committed ought worthy of death indeed this might cancel his paſt ſervices, but Saul muſt be conſcious of his innocence; and therefore, to ſhed his blood would be as inhuman as unjuſt. Note, Such a friend as Jonathan, ſo diſintereſted, ſo faithful, is rare.

3. Saul having ſlept, his paſſion was cooled. Conviction accompanied Jonathan's arguments; he ſwears to ſave David harmleſs, revokes his bloody edict, and reſtores him to his place at court, with every apparent mark of regard and confidence. Note, (1.) The oath of a common ſwearer is bad ſecurity. (2.) Good advice, though from an inferior, deſerves attention. (3.) Sudden changes of paſſionate men prognoſticate no long continuance.

8. And there was war again: and David went out, and fought with the Philiſtines, and ſlew them with a great ſlaughter; and they fled from him. 9. And [k] the evil ſpirit from the LORD was upon Saul, as he ſat in his houſe with his javelin in his hand: and David played with his hand. 10. And [l] Saul ſought to ſmite David even to the wall with his javelin; but he ſlipt away out of Saul's preſence: and he ſmote the javelin into the wall: and David fled, and [m] eſcaped that night.

v. 8—10. David is ever armed in Iſrael's cauſe; we find him again in the field, fighting the Lord's battles, and again victorious over the Philiſtines. But every freſh laurel on David's brow puts a ſharp thorn in Saul's boſom; his melancholy returns; and willing to relieve him, his ſon thinks it not beneath his dignity again to handle the harp: but whilſt, in kind regard, he ſought to ſooth the torments of his heart, he little ſuſpects the ſpear that ſtood ready to pierce his own. Swift and violent Saul hurls the javelin, to pierce him to the wall, but his agility avoids the blow, and leaving his preſence, where it was no longer ſafe to ſtay, he ſeeks, by flight, to ſave himſelf from the enraged monarch. Note, (1.) Something will always be found to allay the joys of our triumphs. (2.) No kindneſs can cure the ranklings of inveterate malice.

11. Saul alſo [n] ſent meſſengers unto David's houſe to watch him, and to ſlay him in the morning: and Michal David's wife told him, ſaying, If thou ſave not thy life to-night, to-morrow thou ſhalt be ſlain. 12. ¶ So Michal let David down [o] through a window: and he went and fled, and eſcaped. 13. And Michal took † an image and laid it in the bed, and put a pillow of goat's hair for his bolſter, and covered it with a cloth. 14. And when Saul ſent meſſengers to take David, ſhe ſaid, He is ſick. 15. And Saul ſent the meſſengers again to ſee David, ſaying, Bring him up to me in the bed, that I may ſlay him. 16. And when the meſſengers were come in, behold, there was an image in the bed, with a pillow of goat's hair for his bolſter. 17. And Saul ſaid unto Michal, [p] Why haſt thou deceived me ſo, and ſent away mine enemy, that he is eſcaped? And Michal anſwered Saul, He ſaid unto me, Let me go; why ſhould I kill thee?

v. 11—17. David was now in imminent danger; for Saul ſuppoſing him fled to his own houſe, diſpatches a party to watch him and kill him there; but through mercy he eſcapes.

1. Michal, from whom Saul hoped to ruin him, loves him too well to betray him; no ſooner is ſhe apprized of his danger, than ſhe informs him; and in the night, through the window, lets him down, that he might not be perceived by thoſe who had beſet the houſe: and in the morning, to give him more leiſure to eſcape, feigns he is ſick, puts an image in his bed, and deceives thus the meſſengers of Saul. Note, (1.) Wives muſt love their huſbands, and cleave to them even beyond their own parents. (2.) A woman's wits are often ſharper than her huſband's; it is no diſparagement for a man to follow his wife's advice.

2. Saul's rage will not put up with excuſe; he will have David brought in his bed, that he may have the ſatisfaction of murdering him by his own hand. Note, Wicked men grow worſe and worſe as they reſiſt their convictions, and provoke God to give them up to their violent paſſions.

3. Michal, when the cheat was diſcovered, well knowing her father's mad rage, ſeeks to appeaſe him; and as ſhe ſtuck not at one lie to ſave her huſband, ſhe heſitates not at another to excuſe herſelf, even at the expence of her huſband's character. Note, One lie uſually hardens the conſcience for another.

18. ¶ So David fled, and eſcaped, and came to Samuel to Ramah, and told him all that Saul had done to him: and he and Samuel went and dwelt in Naioth. 19. And [q] it was told Saul, ſaying, Behold, David is at Naioth in Ramah. 20. And Saul ſent meſſengers to take David: and when they ſaw the company of the prophets propheſying, and Samuel ſtanding as appointed over them, the Spirit of God was upon the meſſengers of Saul, and [r] they alſo propheſied. 21. And when it was told Saul, he ſent other meſſengers, and they propheſied likewiſe: and Saul ſent meſſengers again [s] the third time, and they propheſied alſo. 22. Then went he alſo to Ramah, and came to a great well that is in Sechu: and he aſked and ſaid, Where are Samuel and David? And one ſaid, Behold, they be at Naioth in Ramah. 23. And he went thither to Naioth in Ramah: and [t] the Spirit of God was upon him alſo, and he went on and [u] propheſied, until he came to Naioth in Ramah: 24. v. 18—24. We have here,

1. David's flight to Samuel, to conſult him in his diſtreſs, and to have his faith ſupported, with regard to the kingdom, now ſeverely ſhaken by theſe perſecutions. Note, God's miniſters, in our diſtreſſes, are the propereſt adviſers.

2. Saul is no ſooner informed of the place of his abode, than he ſends meſſengers to Naioth in Ramah, to ſeize him. But God ſo over-ruled their ſpirits, that inſtead of bringing David priſoner, they no ſooner came into the congregation of the prophets, with Samuel at their head, than themſelves were ſeized with the ſacred enthuſiaſm, and propheſied among them: repeated meſſengers feel the ſame irreſiſtible impulſe, yet Saul, breathing out threatnings and ſlaughter, will not deſiſt; preſuming his own heart ſecure from the impreſſion, he will go in perſon, and rather than not deſtroy David will be himſelf his executioner. But how vain are man's impotent deſigns! He too again feels the ſtrange influence. Before he approaches the gates of Ramah his fury ſubſides, and laying aſide his military garb and weapons of war, he lay down at Samuel's feet a day and night, to the admiration of the beholders, who revived the proverb on ſeeing ſo ſtrange an alteration; Is Saul alſo among the prophets? Mean time David had an opportunity given him to eſcape. Note, (1.) Many have come into the aſſembly of God's people with the moſt violent deſigns, who have fallen before the power of God, and been forced to hang down the arms deſigned to be lifted up in wrath. (2.) God can turn perſecutors into preachers, and make thoſe who breathed out threatnings ſing his praiſes. (3.) It is no ſtrange thing to ſee wicked men prophecy in his name, and do wonderful works; but all theſe without a change of heart only aggravate their final reprobacy and eternal ruin.

David, before he reſolves on any farther ſtep for his ſafety, conſults his faithful Jonathan, 1. He complains to him of his preſent diſtreſs, and engageth him to be his friend, ver. 1—8. 2. Jonathan promiſes to give him intelligence, how his father ſtood affected to him, and renews the covenant of friendſhip with him, ver. 9—23. 3. Jonathan finds his father implacable to David, ver. 24—34. 4. He gives David notice of this, ver. 35—42.

v. 1—8. Whilſt Saul continued bound at Naioth, David embraces the opportunity to fly to Jonathan, and adviſe with him about the ſteps he ſhould take.

1. We have their converſation together. David, conſcious of his innocence, appeals to Jonathan, and expreſſes his juſt fears for his life. Jonathan is willing to hope his father's oath, if nothing elſe, would bind him, and that it was not ſo: but David ſolemnly aſſures him he was on the brink of death, that his ruin was reſolved, and that becauſe of his friendſhip for him only, Saul concealed it from him. Note, (1.) We may apply David's expreſſion every day, and it is an awakening one, There is but a ſtep between us and death. (2.) Though charity bids us hope the beſt, it does not oblige us to ſhut our eyes againſt conviction.

2. Jonathan is ready to do every thing for his friend, and David propoſes a method to come at the knowledge of Saul's ſentiments. The morrow was the new moon, on which eſpecial ſacrifices were offered; and afterwards Saul kept a feaſt for his family, or chief officers, to either of which David belonged. On ſuch a ſolemnity he would be expected to appear, and Jonathan muſt excuſe his abſence, by declaring, he had given him leave to attend a yearly ſacrifice at Beth-lehem, which no doubt was the real truth. If Saul accepted the excuſe, it would be a ſign his reſentment was ſubſided; but if he appeared angry, then miſchief, no doubt, was in his heart. Againſt the third day, at even, he would be in a neighbouring field, and there expect to hear from Jonathan; confident in his kindneſs, pleading the covenant between them for the continuance of it, and offering himſelf readily to be ſlain by him, if he was guilty; and more eligible it would be to die by his hand, than to be delivered up to his father. Note, (1.) At the ſolemn feſtivals, many are regular to appear at the Lord's feaſt, whoſe formality only ſerves to deceive them, whilſt their evil tempers continue unmortified. (2.) Though whenever God calls, we muſt be ready to lay down our lives: yet are we called to take every prudent method to preſerve them.

9. And Jonathan ſaid, Far be it from thee: for if I knew certainly, that evil were determined by my father to come upon thee, then would not I tell it thee? 10.
Then ſaid David to Jonathan, Who ſhall tell me? or what if thy father anſwer thee roughly? 11. ¶ And Jonathan ſaid unto David, Come and let us go out into the field. And they went out both of them into the which thou and I have ſpoken of, behold, the LORD be between thee and me for ever.

v. 9—23. As David was now in ſore diſtreſs, Jonathan endeavours to comfort him with the warmeſt profeſſions of regard.

1. He aſſures him he was perfectly convinced of his innocence, and would conceal nothing from him of his father's deſigns. For greater privacy, he carries him into the fields, and there makes a ſolemn appeal to God of his fidelity and care, to inform him what ſhould paſs, and prays affectionately for God's bleſſing to reſt upon him, as it had done on his father, till for his ſins he was rejected. Note, Solemn appeals to God in caſes of importance, are lawful, and give great ſatisfaction.

2. They there confirm the covenant of love between them and their families. Jonathan, perſuaded of David's deſignation to the kingdom, would ſecure his regard to his children, as well as himſelf; that when he came to the throne, he would not cut off him or his poſterity, who might ſeem competitors for it, but ſhew them kindneſs, and that their families might have the entail of their friendſhip delivered down to them. David conſents to the covenant, and with a ſolemn oath they each confirm the inviolable band between them. At parting, Jonathan calls on God to be between them for ever, keeping them faithful to their vows, or as the avenger if they failed. For Jonathan loved David as his own ſoul, therefore his anxious ſollicitude appeared ſo urgent. Note, (1.) It is a great mercy to have the love of thoſe who have the evident bleſſing of God upon them. (2.) Fervent love ſeems often importunate, and is jealous of every ſhadow that might breed a ſeparation.

3. Before they part, if the interview on the third day ſhould be dangerous, Jonathan propoſes a method that would convey the intelligence to him, whilſt he lay hid in the field, v. 19—22. that ſo he might retire undiſcovered, and ſave himſelf if danger was before him.

24. ¶ So [m] David hid himſelf in the field: and when the new moon was come, the king ſat him down to eat meat. 25. And the king ſat upon his ſeat, as at other times, even upon a ſeat by the wall: and Jonathan aroſe, and Abner ſat by Saul's ſide, and David's place was empty. 26. Nevertheleſs, Saul ſpake not any thing that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him, [n] he is not clean; ſurely he is not clean. 27. And it came to paſs on the morrow, which was the ſecond day of the month, that David's place was empty: and Saul ſaid unto Jonathan his ſon, [o] Wherefore cometh not [p] the ſon of Jeſſe to meat, neither yeſterday nor to day? 28. And Jonathan anſwered Saul, David earneſtly aſked leave of me, to go to Beth-lehem: 29. And he ſaid, Let me go, I pray thee, for our family hath a ſacrifice in the city, and my brother, he hath commanded me to be there; and now if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away I pray thee, and ſee my brethren: Therefore he cometh not unto the king's table. 30. Then Saul's anger was kindled againſt Jonathan, and he ſaid unto him, Thou ſon † of the perverſe rebellious woman, do not I know that thou haſt choſen the ſon of Jeſſe to thine own confuſion, and unto the confuſion of thy mother's nakedneſs? 31. For as long as the ſon of Jeſſe liveth upon the ground, thou ſhalt not be eſtabliſhed, nor thy kingdom: wherefore now ſend and fetch him unto me, for he ‡ ſhall ſurely die. 32. And Jonathan anſwered Saul his father, and ſaid unto him, [q] Wherefore ſhall he be ſlain? what hath he done? 33. And Saul caſt a javelin at him to ſmite him; whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to ſlay David. 34. So Jonathan aroſe from the table in fierce anger, and did eat no meat the ſecond day of the month: for he was grieved for David, becauſe his father had done him ſhame.

v. 24—34. As was expected, we have here,

1. Saul enquiring for David. His ſeat was vacant, but the firſt day Saul imputed it to ſome ceremonial uncleanneſs, and therefore repreſſed his enquiries. When the ſecond day's feaſt came, and David did not appear, he can no longer contain; but aſks in diſpleaſure for the ſon of Jeſſe. Note, They who come to the Lord's table with rancour in their heart, may be aſſured their offerings are an abomination.

2. Jonathan makes his excuſe; that it was not through want of reſpect to the king, or without leave he was abſent; but a family-ſacrifice, and his elder brother's preſſing invitation had made him deſirous to pay this duty to his relations, and he had aſked of him, and obtained permiſſion to go.

3. Saul's rage can no longer be contained, he publicly abuſes Jonathan with opprobrious names as a baſtard or traitor; reproaches him as a fool, for his regard to his rival, declares his determined purpoſe to deſtroy David, and bids him fetch him inſtantly from Beth-lehem. Jonathan cannot forbear a vindication of his friend, and Saul now mad with him for ſuch an expoſtulation, darts his javelin at him, to kill him. With indignation at ſuch treatment, he riſes from the table, and paſſes the day faſting, through vexation; grieved for himſelf to be ſo vilified and ill uſed, but more grieved for the danger of his friend, whoſe ruin now he ſaw reſolved upon. Note, (1.) Foul language is always a ſign of a bad cauſe. (2.) Every angry man is a murderer in heart, and wants nothing but provocation and impunity to make him ſo in deed. (3.) It is a bitter grief to ſee thoſe who are near and dear to us, act vilely and wickedly. (4.) A generous ſpirit can ſooner bear to be inſulted himſelf, than hear his friend abuſed. (5.) Vexation and anguiſh of mind deſtroy the appetite, and make us forget to eat our bread.

35. ¶ And it came to paſs in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field, [r] at the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him. 36. And he ſaid unto his lad, Run, find out now the arrows which I ſhoot. And as the lad ran, he ſhot an arrow † beyond him. 37. And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had ſhot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and ſaid, Is not the arrow beyond thee? 38. And Jonathan cried after the lad, Make ſpeed, haſte, ſtay not. And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his maſter. 39. But the lad knew not any thing: only Jonathan and David knew the matter. 40. And Jonathan gave his ‡ artillery unto his lad, and ſaid unto him, Go, carry them to the city. 41. ¶ And as ſoon as the lad was gone, David aroſe out of a place toward the ſouth, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himſelf three times: and they kiſſed one another, and wept one with another, until David || exceeded. 42. And Jonathan ſaid to David, [s] Go in peace, § foraſmuch as we have ſworn both of us in the name of the LORD, ſaying, The LORD be between me and thee, and between my ſeed and thy ſeed for ever. And he aroſe and departed: and Jonathan went into the city.

v. 35—42. On the third morning, according to appointment, with his lad he walked into the field where David was hid, and ſhot the arrow that carried the fatal tidings. David well underſtood the ſignal, beyond you; and concludes the deſperateneſs of his ſituation. Jonathan ſeeing none near, diſmiſſes his lad, and ſeeks one moment's converſation ere they part; perhaps to meet no more; nor did they ever again, but once by ſtealth in a wood, chap. xxiii. 16. The ſcene was inexpreſſibly tender; how could it be otherwiſe between ſuch affectionate friends! David, with deepeſt gratitude, acknowledges his obligations to him; then claſp'd in affectionate embraces, diſtreſs unutterable ſtops for a time the power of utterance; whilſt floods of tears ran down their manly cheeks, and beſpeak the bitter anguiſh of their hearts. David exceeded, not becauſe his affection was moſt violent, for tenderer heart than Jonathan's nature never formed, but becauſe his ſituation was moſt afflictive; baniſhed from his friends, his family, his all; treated as an outlaw, each ſtep in danger, and each breath in jeopardy; cut off from the ſanctuary of God, and dragging on, at beſt, in exile, the miſerable remains of a precarious life. But Jonathan ſeeks to conſole and encourage him; reminds him of the covenant betwixt them; and ſince part they muſt, with ſad reluctance, and many a wiſhful look, no doubt, behind them, David departs to ſecure himſelf, and Jonathan carries back his melancholy heart to Gibeah. Note, It ſhould be a comfort to us in every trial, that they are ſhort; and if our ſouls are intereſted in the everlaſting covenant eſtabliſhed with the friend of ſinners, we know we ſhall meet him to part no more, where every tear will be wiped from our eyes.

CHAP. XXI.

David having now taken leave, both of Saul's court and camp, and bid farewel to his beloved Jonathan, is henceforward treated as an outlaw, and proclaimed a traitor. Driven by danger and diſtreſs, we have him here in his flight, 1. Impoſing upon Abimelech the prieſt, to get from him victuals and arms, ver. 1—9. 2. Impoſing upon Achiſh, king of Gath, by feigning himſelf mad, ver. 10—15. Juſtly are troubles called temptations, for many are by them drawn into ſin.

1. THEN came David to Nob, to Ahimelech the prieſt: and [a] Ahimelech was afraid at the meeting of David, and ſaid unto him, [b] Why art thou alone, and no man with thee? 2. And David ſaid unto Ahimelech the prieſt, [c] The king hath commanded me a buſineſs, and hath ſaid unto me, Let no man know any thing of the buſineſs whereabout I ſend thee, and what I have commanded thee: and I have appointed my ſervants to ſuch and ſuch a place. 3. Now therefore what is under thine hand? Give me five loaves of bread in mine hand, or what there is preſent. 4. And the prieſt anſwered David, and ſaid, There is no common bread under mine hand, but there is [d] hallowed bread; [e] if the young men have kept themſelves at leaſt from women. 5. v. 1—9. David is now flying for his life; and in his way being deſtitute of both arms and victuals, he calls at Nob, where the ark lay, in hopes of a ſupply: probably truſting the well-known piety of his character would enſure to him a kind reception from the prieſts of God. But when a man is oppreſſed and diſgraced, he muſt expect to be treated coldly, even by many profeſſed friends.

1. Ahimelech is ſurprized to ſee him alone, and queſtions him about it; ſuſpecting from what was well known, that ſome quarrel had occaſioned his journey; and fearing that he came to take refuge, and ſeek concealment there. Note, High places are ſlippery ones: the levee that is crowded to-day, will be deſerted to-morrow, if the king's ſmiles turn into frowns.

2. David diſtreſſed, and from the apparent fears of Ahimelech, little expecting relief if he told the truth, is tempted to give a lying anſwer. The conſequences of which, he lived to lament, as the occaſion of the murder of many innocent perſons; ſo dangerous is every deviation from the truth. He pretends to be on a buſineſs of importance, which required ſecrecy; that he had appointed his ſervants to meet him, and deſires him to give him a ſupply of proviſions for himſelf and them. Note, (1.) Let no man be too ſecure, or ſelf-confident; he knows not what temptations are before him, or how weak he is to reſiſt. (2.) We muſt not haſtily conclude a man hath no grace, becauſe we ſee him overtaken with ſin.

3. Ahimelech ſeems ſatisfied with his anſwer; but appears unable to ſupply his wants, except with the ſhew-bread, of which in general it was not lawful for any but the prieſts to eat; though he intimates, that he apprehended, in ſuch an extraordinary caſe, it might be diſpenſed with, under the circumſtance mentioned ver. 4. David aſſures him they have been three days from their wives, and clean from all ceremonial impurity, and therefore as the bread was removed from the table, it was in a manner common, and their urgent caſe pleaded a diſpenſation. On this, Ahimelech complies. Note, God will have mercy, and not ſacrifice. Circumſtances of neceſſity lawfully claim a diſpenſation for neglecting ceremonial obſervances.

4. David wanted a ſword as well as bread, pretending the haſte of the king's buſineſs, but in truth his own danger which hurried him away unarmed, therefore he deſires Ahimelech to furniſh him with one; but in a prieſt's houſe, no ſuch was found: only he tells him the ſword of Goliath, wrapped up behind the ephod, was there. In David's eye, there is none like it; it appeared happily ominous to be poſſeſſed of that, and a confirmation of his faith, that all his enemies ſhould be made like Goliath to fall before him: thus armed therefore he departs. Note, God often comforts his people in their diſtreſſes with ſuch providential incidents, as are ſuited to ſupport their faith.

5. Unhappily one of Saul's ſervants, Doeg, an Edomite, a proſelyte, or one who had ſojourned in Edom, was preſent at this interview; detained before the Lord, on account of ſome vow, or ceremonial impurity; or as an act of religion worſhipping there, whoſe evil report we ſhall quickly hear. Note, The devil hath often his ſpies in the houſe of God, who come pretending to worſhip, but in truth to malign, and be miſchievous.

10. ¶ And David aroſe, and [l] fled that day for fear of Saul, and went to [m] Achiſh the king of Gath. 11. And [n] the ſervants of Achiſh ſaid unto him, Is not this David the king of the land? did they not ſing one to another of him in dances, ſaying, [o] Saul hath ſlain his thouſands, and David his ten thouſands? 12. And David laid up theſe words in his heart, and [p] was ſore afraid of Achiſh the king of Gath: 13. And he changed his behaviour before them, and feigned himſelf mad in their hands, and † ſcrabbled on the doors of the gate, and let his ſpittle fall down upon his beard. 14. Then ſaid Achiſh unto his ſervants, Lo, you ſee the man is ‡ mad: wherefore then have ye brought him to me? 15. Have I need of mad-men, that ye have brought this fellow to play the mad-man in my preſence? ſhall this fellow come into mine houſe?

v. 10—15. No longer in ſafety in the land of Iſrael, David's deſperate circumſtances make him reſolve to throw himſelf into the arms of his mortal enemies, the Philiſtines.

1. He fled to Achiſh, king of Gath, who ſeems to have had a friendſhip for him, and from whom he might hope for protection, as perſecuted now by Saul, with whom the Philiſtines were at war. Note, Deſperate diſeaſes call for deſperate remedies.

2. The ſervants of Achiſh are offended at the reception given him, which Achiſh might think politic; but they remembering the former miſchief done them by his hands, and having learned he was expected hereafter to be Iſrael's king, could not but think they cheriſhed an enemy in their boſom.

3. David heard the whiſpers of his enemies, and juſtly apprehenſive of ſome fatal blow in ſecret from them, endeavours to avert it by a ſtratagem, which ſucceeded. He feigned himſelf mad, and acted as a driveller; nor was it at all improbable, that his ill uſage might have had this effect on him. Note, (1.) Oppreſſion will ſometimes really make a wiſe man mad. (2.) Though diſſimulation cannot be juſtified, ſelf-preſervation may perhaps plead his excuſe.

4. Achiſh either believing it real, or willing to protect David, by humouring the device, appears diſpleaſed at the madman's preſence; bids his ſervants turn him out of his houſe, as unfit for any employment there, and this gives him an opportunity to eſcape from his enemies. Note, In every trial, God can open a way for our eſcape; and can make even our enemies inſtruments of our deliverance.

1. DAvid therefore departed thence, and eſcaped to [a] the cave Adullam: and when his brethren, and all his father's houſe heard it, they went down thither to him. 2. And every one that was [b] in diſtreſs, and every one that was † in debt, and every one that was ‡ diſcontented, gathered themſelves unto him, and [c] he became a captain over them: and there were with him about four hundred men. 3. ¶ And David went thence to Mizpeh of Moab: and he ſaid unto the king of Moab, [d] Let my father and my mother, I pray thee, come forth, and be with you, till I know what God will do for me. 4. And he brought them before the king of Moab: and they dwelt with him all the while that David was in the hold. 5. ¶ And [e] the prophet Gad ſaid unto David, Abide not in the hold, [f] depart, and get thee into the land of Judah. Then David departed, and came into the foreſt of Hareth.

v. 1—5. Since innocence could be no longer his ſecurity, David ſeeks it by his ſword. Having pitched on a fortreſs ſtrong by nature, he reſolves to maintain himſelf there.

1. Here his brethren came to him; having perhaps become obnoxious to Saul by their relation to him; or willing to ſhare his lot, in confidence of his future advancement. And as he wanted an armed force, not to act againſt his king, but defend himſelf from the malice of his perſecutor, he entertained men of deſperate fortunes, who reſorted to him; and thoſe malecontents who were diſpleaſed with Saul's adminiſtration, to the number of four hundred, and he became their captain. Note, (1.) They who take part in the afflictions of the people of God, ſhall ſhare with them in their kingdom of glory. (2.) The Lord Jeſus refuſes none; let the deſperate ſinner, that knows not where to flee; let the miſerable debtor, obnoxious to the arreſts of Divine Juſtice; let the diſcontented, who are weary of the dominion of ſin and Satan, come to him, he will be a captain unto them, for he receiveth ſuch.

2. Having a guard for his own perſon, David is ſollicitous to remove his parents to a place of ſafety, as Saul would now probably wreak his vengeance on them and theirs. With the permiſſion of the king of Moab, he brings them to Mizpeh, in Moab, and leaves them there, till he ſhould know what God would do with him; how long, or in what manner he would exerciſe his faith and patience, before he fulfilled his promiſes. Note, (1.) A good man cannot but be a dutiful child, and earneſt to ſecure the repoſe of his aged parents. (2.) Whilſt we have the fulleſt aſſurance of God's protection, we muſt be waiting upon him in the way of means, and patiently expect his ſalvation.

3. Gad the prophet, who had joined him in his exile, perhaps haps ſent of Samuel to be with him to adviſe him, perſuades him to go into the land of Judah; which being his own tribe, he might expect more friends; and by appearing publickly, would ſhew his own innocence, and confidence in God. David conſents, and takes up his abode in the foreſt of Hareth.

6. ¶ When Saul heard that David was diſcovered, and the men that were with him, (now Saul abode in Gibeah, under a tree in Ramah, having his ſpear in his hand, and all his ſervants were ſtanding about him) 7. Then Saul ſaid unto his ſervants that ſtood about him, Hear now, ye Benjamites, Will [g] the Son of Jeſſe give every one of you fields and vineyards, and make you all captains of thouſands, and captains of hundreds: 8. That all of you have conſpired againſt me, and there is none that ſheweth me that [h] my ſon hath made a league with the ſon of Jeſſe, and there is none of you that is ſorry for me, or ſheweth unto me, that my ſon hath ſtirred up my ſervant againſt me, to lie in wait, as at this day? 9. ¶ Then [i] anſwered Doeg the Edomite, (which was ſet over the ſervants of Saul) and ſaid; I ſaw the ſon of Jeſſe coming to Nob, to Ahimelech the ſon of Ahitub. 10. And [k] he enquired of the LORD for him: and gave him victuals, and [l] gave him the ſword of Goliath the Philiſtine. 11. [m] Then the king ſent to call Ahimelech the prieſt the ſon of Ahitub, and all his father's houſe, the prieſts that were in Nob: and they came all of them to the king. 12. And Saul ſaid, Hear now, thou ſon of Ahitub: and he anſwered, † Here I am, my lord. 13. And Saul ſaid unto him, Why have ye conſpired againſt me, thou and the ſon of Jeſſe; in that thou haſt given him bread, and a ſword, and haſt enquired of God for him, that [n] he ſhould riſe againſt me to lie in wait, as at this day? 14. Then Ahimelech anſwered the king, and ſaid, And who is ſo faithful among all thy ſervants, as David, which is the king's ſon in law, and [o] goeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine houſe? 15. Did I then begin to enquire of God for him? be it far from me: let not the king impute any thing unto his ſervant, nor to all the houſe of my father: for thy ſervant knew nothing of all this, leſs or more. 16. And the king ſaid, ‡ Thou ſhalt ſurely die, Ahimelech, thou, and [p] all thy father's houſe. 17. ¶ And the king ſaid unto the ‖ footmen that ſtood about him, [q] Turn, and ſlay the prieſts of the LORD, becauſe their hand alſo is with David, and becauſe they knew when he fled, and did not ſhew it to me. But [r] the ſervants of the king would not put forth their hand to fall upon the prieſts of the LORD. 18. And the king ſaid to Doeg, Turn thou and fall upon the prieſts. And [s] Doeg the Edomite turned, and he fell upon the prieſts, and ſlew on that day fourſcore and five perſons that did wear a linen ephod. 19. And Nob, the city of the prieſts, ſmote he with the edge of the ſword, [t] both men and women, children and ſucklings, and oxen, and aſſes, and ſheep, with the edge of the ſword.

v. 6—19. No ſooner is David diſcovered, and reported to be raiſing men; and probably, as reports ſeldom fail of ſwelling as they go, his deſign conſtrued into an intention to dethrone Saul, than his invenomed ſpirit breathes forth fury.

1. With his ſpear in his hand, and his guards around him, he burſts forth into a paſſionate upbraiding of his ſervants, as if they were privy to the ſuppoſed treaſon againſt him, and aiders and abetters of David. Knowing the friendſhip ſubſiſting between Jonathan and David, he concludes they were in conſpiracy, and with careſſes, ſeeks to draw the ſuppoſed ſecret from them. He pleads what he had done, and could do for them, to make them his friends, and they could expect nothing as Benjamites from the ſon of Jeſſe; he accuſes them of want of concern for his ſafety, and charges them with his ſuſpicions, as if he had known them to be undoubted facts. Note, (1.) It is but too common to have the faithful repreſented as ſeditious, and accuſed as meditating the worſt deſigns. (2.) Jealouſy is ever tormented with its own ſuſpicions.

2. As every man no doubt had full conviction of the innocence of theſe faithful friends, none dared accuſe them. But Doeg the Edomite, to give Saul all the ſatisfaction he could, and to curry favour with the king, informs him of what happened at Nob where he was; of David's coming thither, and Ahimelech's kindneſs to him. Though he ſuppreſſed the circumſtances which would ſhew Ahimelech's innocence, and by his repreſentation, ſeemed to make him an accomplice with David. Note, There is an invidious way of repreſenting the truth, which by ſuppreſſing ſome circumſtances, renders the report more malignant than a groſs lie.

3. Ahimelech is inſtantly ſummoned to appear, to anſwer the charge laid againſt him, as guilty of treaſon, in aiding and abetting the king's enemies. He appears at the firſt ſummons, and his brethren with him. The king with inſolence arraigns him; whilſt he reſpectfully anſwers, and pleads his innocence of every traiterous deſign: entirely ignorant of the cauſe of David's journey, he received him with the reſpect due to the king's ſon, and did him every ſervice he required, as preſuming it was the king's buſineſs, in which he was employed. Being a man highly honoured, and uſually ſent on affairs of importance, he conſulted God for him, as he had done often before: and therefore the king ought not to impute his well-meant duty into a crime; it being impoſſible for him, unacquainted as he was with David's circumſtances, to have acted otherwiſe. A clearer defence could not well be made; but how unavailing when he hath to do with an inflamed, partial, and prejudiced judge! Note, Innocence is far from being a protection, when power is in the hand of the oppreſſors.

4. The king is deaf to his plea; reſolves his death as a traitor, as if he had conſpired with David againſt him; and not ſatisfied with the blood of one innocent man, he inhumanly bids his ſervants fall on all the prieſts of the Lord, as if he would wreak his anger againſt God, by murdering his miniſters. But his ſervants ſhocked at the cruel command, a violation not only of juſtice, but of humanity, and reverencing the ſacred character of the prieſts, refuſe, though at the peril of their lives, to obey him. But fixed is the dire reſolve; Doeg, the accuſer, will not fail to be the executioner: him he commands, and he obeys. Eighty-five who wore an ephod, were murdered on the ſpot; and not glutted with ſo much innocent blood, he ſends him with a party to Nob, and ſlays every creature which breathed with the edge of the ſword; and thus the prophecy againſt Eli's houſe is dreadfully accompliſhed. Who can without horror read ſuch a maſſacre! What is man, when left to the power of the devil? more ſavage than the monſters of the wilderneſs. Note, (1.) A wicked tyrannical king will not want inſtruments to execute his cruel decrees. (2.) We muſt not haſtily find fault with God's providence, in permitting ſuch ſcenes of impiety and bloodſhed; the myſtery will by and by be explained, and God be found juſt and righteous in all his judgments.

20. ¶ And one of the ſons of Ahimelech, the ſon of Ahitub, named Abiathar, eſcaped and fled after David. 21. And Abiathar ſhewed David, that Saul had ſlain the LORD's prieſts. 22. And David ſaid unto Abiathar, I knew it that day, when Doeg the Edomite was there, that he would ſurely tell Saul: [u] I have occaſioned the death of all the perſons of thy father's houſe. 23. Abide thou with me, fear not: for he that ſeeketh my life, ſeeketh thy † life: but with me thou ſhalt be in ſafeguard.

v. 20—23. Tidings of what paſſed at court, had reached Nob before the bloody Doeg arrived thither. Abiathar, therefore, the only ſurviving ſon of Ahimelech, thought it high time to conſult his ſafety, and flies to David, who receives him very affectionately, and aſſures him of his protection; but is exceedingly grieved at the ſad tidings Abiathar brings, eſpecially reflecting how inſtrumental, though undeſignedly, he had been to the death of theſe innocent men. Doeg's preſence there had given him ſuſpicions of ſome miſchief; though the iſſue much exceeded his fears. Note, It is a matter of real ſorrow, even innocently to have been the occaſion of other's ſufferings; and how much more, if our own conſciences reproach us with guilt in the matter.

CHAP. XXIII.

We have here, 1. David reſcuing the city of Keilah out of the hands of the Philiſtines, ver. 1—6. 2. His danger from Saul's deſign to ſurprize him, and the people's treachery, which by Divine direction he eſcapes, ver. 7—13. 3. Jonathan's viſit to him in a wood, ver. 14—18. 4. The information which the Ziphites brought Saul of David's haunts, and Saul's purſuit after him, ver. 19—25. 5. David's narrow eſcape out of his hands, ver. 26—29. Many are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of them all.

1. THEN they told David, ſaying, Behold, the Philiſtines fight againſt Keilah, and they rob the threſhing-floors. 2. Therefore [a] David enquired of the LORD, ſaying, Shall I go and ſmite theſe Philiſtines? And the LORD ſaid unto David, Go, and ſmite the Philiſtines, and ſave Keilah. 3. much more then if we come to Keilah againſt the armies of the Philiſtines? 4. Then David enquired of the LORD [b] yet again: and the LORD anſwered him, and ſaid, Ariſe, go down to Keilah: for I will deliver the Philiſtines into thine hand. 5. So David and his men went to Keilah, and fought with the Philiſtines, and brought away their cattle, and ſmote them with a great ſlaughter: ſo David ſaved the inhabitants of Keilah. 6. And it came to paſs [c] when Abiathar, the ſon of Ahimelech, fled to David to Keilah, that he came down with [d] an ephod in his hand.

v. 1—6. Though David is driven from the country as a traitor, we find him diſcharging the part of a bold and loyal ſubject againſt his country's enemies.

1. Keilah, a city on the border of the Philiſtines being beſieged, tidings are brought him of it, and he reſolves, with God's permiſſion, to attempt its relief. Dangerous as his ſituation was, he nobly prefers the public ſafety to his own. But firſt he would enquire of the Lord, which he did, either by the prophet Gad, or by Abiathar, who about this time joined him, when he was near Keilah, ſay ſome, or after he had raiſed the ſiege as others. The anſwer was agreeable to his wiſhes, and God promiſes him victory. Note, (1.) We muſt not reſent the injuries we have received, ſo as to withdraw our help, when the diſtreſs of our country calls for it. (2.) We ſhall ſpeed well, when we take God's counſel and bleſſing along with us.

2. His men ſeem in no wiſe inclined to the expedition; they object they were ſcarcely ſecure where they were, and how much greater would be their danger if they expoſed themſelves, where they had as much to fear from the ſword of Saul, as the army of the Philiſtines. Note, The diſcouragement we meet with from our friends, is often more diſheartning than the avowed oppoſition of our enemies.

3. Once more David enquires of God for the ſatisfaction of his little band; and having received an expreſs command to go, and promiſe of ſucceſs, they are content to follow him, and accordingly they fall upon their enemy, give them a total overthrow, and not only relieve Keilah, but make an incurſion into the country of the Philiſtines, and return laden with ſpoils. Note, They who go out under a Divine call, will return triumphant over all their enemies.

7. ¶ And it was told Saul that David was come to Keilah: and Saul ſaid, God hath [e] delivered him into mine hand; for [f] he is ſhut in by entring into a town that hath gates and bars. 8. And Saul called all the people together to war, to go down to Keilah, to beſiege David and his men. 9. ¶ And David knew that Saul ſecretly practiſed miſchief againſt him; and he ſaid to Abiathar the prieſt, [g] bring hither the ephod. 10. Then ſaid David, O LORD God of Iſrael, thy ſervant hath † certainly heard that Saul ſeeketh to come to Keilah to deſtroy the city [h] for my ſake. 11. Will the men of Keilah deliver me up into his hand? will Saul come down as thy ſervant hath heard? O LORD God of Iſrael, I beſeech thee, tell thy ſervant. And [i] the LORD ſaid, He will come down. 12. Then ſaid David, Will the men of Keilah ‡ deliver me and my men into the hand of Saul? and the LORD ſaid, They will deliver thee up. 13. ¶ Then David and his men, which were about ſix hundred, aroſe and departed out of Keilah, and went whitherſoever they could go: and it was told Saul that David was eſcaped from Keilah: and he forbare to go forth.

v. 7—13. How often do we place our ſafety in that which moſt endangers it! David in a fortified city might hope to be ſecure, but here his peril is greater than in the deſart.

1. Saul hears of him, and though he no doubt well knew the generous action which had brought David thither, he contrives his deſtruction; and fooliſhly as wickedly concludes that it was God's doing, to give him this advantage againſt his rival, by ſhutting him up, where, if his army ſurrounded the city, it was impracticable for him to eſcape. He pretends war againſt the Philiſtines, but in fact deſigns the armament againſt David, and ſummons all Iſrael to attend him, to go down to Keilah. Note, (1.) Wicked men often cloak with fair pretexts the fouleſt deſigns. (2.) When providence ſeems to favour a bad cauſe, thoſe who are engaged in it, are fooliſhly ready to conclude God is on their ſide.

2. David had friends at court, who took care to warn him of ſome miſchief deſigned him. He therefore inſtantly has recourſe to God, and makes uſe of that ephod which the Lord had ſo graciouſly ſent him. He humbly begs God to direct him. He aſks whether Saul would come, and the Keilites betray or defend him? And God kindly informs him of Saul's intentions, and that if he ſtayed in Keilah, they would deliver him up. God knows the thoughts and intentions of men, and not only foreſees what will happen, but what would have happened, if he had not interpoſed to prevent it. Note, (1.) They who ſeem our firmeſt friends when danger is diſtant, will often, when it threatens them near, deſert us to ſecure themſelves. (2.) God knoweth how to deliver his people out of temptation, and to diſappoint the ſecret purpoſes of their enemies.

Before Chriſt 1060.

3. David hereupon leaves Keilah: his little army being now increaſed to ſix hundred men, and Saul having heard his eſcape, deſiſts from this enterprize, to follow other methods of deſtroying him. Note, All the diſappointments of God will not alter the mind that is bent upon miſchief.

About 1060.

14. ¶ And David abode in the wilderneſs in ſtrong holds, and remained in a mountain in the wilderneſs of Ziph: and [k] Saul ſought him every day, but [l] God delivered him not into his hand. 15. And David ſaw that Saul was come out to ſeek his life: and David was in the wilderneſs of Ziph in a wood. 16. And Jonathan Saul's ſon aroſe, and went to David into the wood, and [m] ſtrengthened his hand in God. 17. And he ſaid unto him, Fear not: for the hand of Saul my father ſhall not find thee, and thou ſhalt be king over Iſrael, and I ſhall be next unto thee; and that alſo [n] Saul my father knoweth. 18. v. 14—18. Being diſappointed of his ſcheme on Keilah, Saul ſets himſelf in reſtleſs malice to the purſuit of David, who, without reſiſtance, ſought only by flight and concealment to eſcape his fury.

1. David ſecures himſelf in places hard of acceſs, in a wilderneſs, a wood, a mountain, ſhifting his abode that it might be more difficult to find him: attempting neither to ſtir up rebellion, nor oppoſe force by force, but leaving his caſe entirely in God's hands, and waiting his leiſure.

2. God continues to protect him, and to diſappoint all Saul's indefatigable endeavours to diſcover and deſtroy him. Vain is might or cunning againſt the Lord: though all the powers of hell, and all the malice of earth join with the corruption within, to make a prey of the redeemed ſinner, yet none can pluck him out of the Saviour's arms.

3. Jonathan, his faithful friend, by appointment meets him once in a wood, during this purſuit, and greatly encourages his confidence in God. Though the interview muſt have been fatal if diſcovered, yet love is ſtronger than death, and will break through all fears for the enjoyment of their company who are dear to us. David might juſtly fear whilſt thus purſued, but Jonathan bids him be of good courage, God would preſerve him from his father, the kingdom would infallibly be his own, and Saul himſelf, tho' thus fighting againſt God, was convinced of it; he gladly reſigns to him, content to be next him, and happy to ſee his friend ſit on the throne, that by hereditary right, would have deſcended to himſelf. Here they renew their covenant, and part; not according to Jonathan's fond wiſhes, to meet again in peace, but (ſo providence ordained) to ſee each other in the fleſh no more. Note, (1.) The words of a pious friend are a reviving cordial to a fainting heart. (2.) Where true love is, even kingdoms are not too great to part with. (3.) Renewed engagements are a ſtrengthening to the bands of friendſhip; and the friend of Jeſus is glad of every opportunity to repeat his vows of fidelity to him.

19. ¶ [p] Then came up the Ziphites to Saul to Gibeah, ſaying, Doth not David hide himſelf with us in ſtrong holds in the wood, in the hill of Hachilah, which is on † the ſouth of Jeſhimon? 20. Now therefore, O king, come down according to all the deſire of thy ſoul to come down, and ‡ our part ſhall be to deliver him into the king's hand. 21. And Saul ſaid, Bleſſed be ye of the LORD; for [q] ye have compaſſion on me. 22. Go, I pray you, prepare yet, and know and ſee his place where his ‖ haunt is, and who hath ſeen him there: for it is told me, that he dealeth very ſubtilly. 23. See therefore, and take knowledge of all the lurking places where he hideth himſelf, and come ye again to me, with the certainty, and I will go with you: and it ſhall come to paſs, if he be in the land, that I will ſearch him out throughout all the thouſands of Judah. 24. And they aroſe, and went to Ziph before Saul: but David and his men were in the wilderneſs of Maon, in the plain on the ſouth of Jeſhimon. 25. Saul alſo and his men went to ſeek him; and they told David: wherefore he came down § into a rock, and abode in the wilderneſs of Maon:

on: and when Saul heard that, he purſued after David in the wilderneſs of Maon. 26. And Saul went on this ſide of the mountain, and David and his men on that ſide of the mountain: and [r] David made haſte to get away for fear of Saul; for Saul and his men [s] compaſſed David and his men round about to take them. 27. ¶ But [t] there came a meſſenger unto Saul, ſaying, Haſte thee, and come; for the Philiſtines have † invaded the land. 28. Wherefore Saul returned from purſuing after David, and went againſt the Philiſtines: therefore they called that place ‡ Sela-Hammahle-koth. 29. ¶ And David went up from thence, and dwelt in ſtrong holds at En-gedi.

v. 19—29. In his own tribe, David hoped for protection, but alas! a man's foes are often thoſe of his own houſhold.

1. The Ziphites, either afraid of Saul's cruelty if they concealed their knowledge of David's haunts, or to ingratiate themſelves with him by ſo acceptable a piece of intelligence, inform the king where he was, invite him to come, and promiſe him to deliver up David into his hand.

2. Saul embraces the welcome offer, bleſſing God and them for their regard to him, whilſt none about him ſeem to compaſſionate his troubles. To make his prey the ſurer, he bids them get diſtinct information, and he would go with them, and ſeize him. Note, (1.) They are truly miſerable men, whoſe pride, ambition, malice, and envy prey upon them; and ſuffer them not to enjoy the bleſſings they poſſeſs. (2.) God mocks at men's impotent attempts, and when they ſeem ſureſt to ſucceed, he baffles and confounds them with their own devices.

3. The delay of Saul gave David time to eſcape; he received intelligence of the plot, and retired to the wilderneſs of Maon; ſo that when the Ziphites led down Saul's army, he was fled. However, Saul purſues him, and was ſo near overtaking him, that whilſt his troops aſcended a mountain on one ſide, David and his men fled on the other. Juſt at that critical juncture, news is brought Saul from court, that the Philiſtines had invaded the country; probably they had heard of Saul's abſence, and had fallen upon Benjamin, where Saul's eſtate lay: this makes him ſtay the purſuit, and return to make head againſt the invaders, which gives David an opportunity to eſcape to the ſtrong holds at En-gedi; and the place, in memory of this deliverance, was called Sela-Hammahle-koth, the Rock of Diviſion. Note, (1.) God has various ways of delivering his people; even the Philiſtines ſhall ſometimes be made inſtruments of his mercy to them. (2.) They who have fled to the mountain of refuge Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall find ſuch a ſtrong rock of diviſion between them and danger, that none ſhall be able to hurt them.

CHAP. XXIV.

We have here, 1. The malice of Saul in ſeeking David's life, and David's generoſity in ſparing his, when in his power, ver. 1—8. 2. How pathetically he reaſoned with Saul upon this, ver. 9—15. 3. The good impreſſion this made upon Saul for the preſent, ver. 16—22.

1. AND it came to paſs [a] when Saul was returned from following the Philiſtines, that [b] it was told him, ſaying, Behold David is in the wilderneſs of En-gedi. 2. Then Saul took three thouſand choſen men out of all Iſrael, and [c] went to ſeek David and his men upon the rocks of the wild goats. 3. And he came to the ſheep-cotes by the way, where was a cave, and Saul went in [d] to cover his feet: and [e] David and his men remained in the ſides of the cave. 4. And the men of David ſaid unto him, Behold the day of which the LORD ſaid unto thee, Behold, I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand, that thou mayſt do to him as it ſhall ſeem good unto thee. Then David aroſe, and cut off the ſkirt of Saul's robe privily. 5. And it came to paſs afterwards, that [f] David's heart ſmote him, becauſe he had cut off Saul's ſkirt. 6. And he ſaid unto his men, [g] The LORD forbid that I ſhould do this thing unto my maſter the LORD's anointed, to ſtretch forth mine hand againſt him, ſeeing he is the anointed of the LORD. 7. So David † ſtayed his ſervants with theſe words, and ſuffered them not to riſe againſt Saul: but Saul aroſe up out of the cave, and went on his way.

v. 1—7. No ſooner hath Saul checked the Philiſtines, than he becomes more ſollicitous to deſtroy David, than improve his victory over the nation's enemies: he therefore returns to the purſuit, and as it would be inconvenient to take all his army in ſo rocky and mountainous a country; with three thouſand picked men, he climbs the precipices of En-gedi. And here we have,

1. The danger into which Saul is brought. In the heat of the day, fatigued probably, with the toil of mounting theſe craggy ſteeps, he retires into a cave to cover his feet, wrapping himſelf up in his garments, for a little repoſe. In this cave lay David and his men concealed; perhaps a party of them only: or if they were all there, it need not appear ſtrange, as caves by nature or art have been not uncommon, where a much greater number might be hid; and as it was all dark within, Saul diſcovered nothing of them. Note, When we lie down on our beds, we know not what dangers compaſs us about; how ought we then ever to commend our ſouls to God, ere we cloſe our eyes in ſleep, that if we never wake again, it may be well with us!

2. The deliverance he obtains through David's generoſity, and pious regard to God. His men urge him to take the advantage which Divine Providence had given him, and plead the promiſe God had made him: but David better underſtood theſe than his ſervants, and therefore ſtarts back from the propoſal with abhorrence. His loyalty to his king, and his duty to God, forbid the deed: nor would he ſuffer them to do Saul the leaſt hurt, but only himſelf ſilently, during his ſleep, cut off the ſkirt of his robe; and even for this his heart ſmote him, leaſt it might ſeem putting an indignity upon his ſovereign. Note, (1.) A tender conſcience will ſtart, not only at evident crimes, but at the appearance of evil. (2.) We may not take all the advantages, even againſt our enemies, God's providence gives us, but rather ſeek to overcome them with patience and kindneſs. (3.) Nothing can ever excuſe or juſtify embruing our hands in the blood of our ſovereign, though he were never ſo tyrannical, unjuſt, or bloody a perſecutor. (4.) When temptation comes in never ſo pleaſing a form, we muſt turn from it, as from the face of a ſerpent.

8. David alſo aroſe afterward, and went out of the cave, and cried after Saul, ſaying, My lord the king. And when Saul looked behind him, David ſtooped with his face to the earth, and bowed himſelf. 9. ¶ And David ſaid to Saul, [h] Wherefore heareſt thou men's words, ſaying, Behold, David ſeeketh thy hurt? 10. Behold, this day thine eyes have ſeen, how that the LORD had delivered thee to day into mine hand in the cave, and ſome bad me kill thee, but mine eye ſpared thee, and I ſaid, I will not put forth mine hand againſt my lord, for he is the LORD's anointed. 11. Moreover, [i] my father, ſee, yea, ſee the ſkirt of thy robe in mine hand: for in that I cut off the ſkirt of thy robe, and killed thee not; know thou and ſee, that [k] there is neither evil nor tranſgreſſion in mine hand, and I have not ſinned againſt thee; yet [l] thou hunteſt my ſoul to take it. 12. [m] The LORD judge between me and thee, and [n] the LORD avenge me of thee: but [o] mine hand ſhall not be upon thee. 13. As ſaith the proverb of the ancients, [p] Wickedneſs proceedeth from the wicked: but mine hand ſhall not be upon thee. 14. After whom is the king of Iſrael come out? after whom doſt thou purſue? [q] after a dead dog, after a flea. 15. The LORD therefore be judge, and judge between me and thee, and ſee, and [r] plead my cauſe, and deliver me out of thine hand.

v. 8—15. Saul, when his nap was over, unſuſpicious of what had paſſed, ariſes and departs; David quickly follows him, and ere he was gone far, cries after him with the moſt honourable title, My lord the king; and bows before him with the deepeſt reſpect. Surpriſed, no doubt, greatly at the voice, he turns; more ſurpriſed at the perſon, and moſt with the diſcourſe which was addreſſed to him by his pious ſon and loyal ſubject.

1. He wiſely and politely lays the blame of Saul's conduct on his courtiers rather than himſelf; and many ſuch as Doeg, no doubt there were, that envied David's preferment. The courts of princes abound with ſycophants: it is difficult to ſee with their own eyes; and the beſt friends of their country, repreſented through this medium, are often made to appear, and are treated, as her ſworn enemies.

2. He produces the ſtrongeſt evidence of his innocence, in that day's occurrence: ſo far from ſeeking Saul's life, when urged to ſlay him when lying at his mercy, the ſkirt he held up proclaimed how tender he was of his life; he reverenced him as God's anointed, he reſpected him as his king; and he adds the endearing name of father, as a reaſon both of rejecting ſo wicked a propoſal, and to awaken the tenderneſs of a father's bowels towards a ſon ſo dutiful, and a ſervant ſo faithful. Note, No provocation can vindicate regicide.

3. He ſolemnly proteſts it never was his intention, and never would be his deſire to avenge himſelf: he referred the matter wholly to God, and obſerves, according to an ancient proverb,

Wicked-

Wickedneſs proceedeth from the wicked; as a man's heart is, ſo are his actions: had he harboured any ill deſign, it muſt then have undoubtedly appeared; therefore Saul might be aſſured of his innocence and loyalty. Note, (1.) As the ſaying is, conveys many a good admonition; the words of the wiſe deſerve to be long remembred, and often quoted. (2.) The only ſafe concluſion of a man's temper is certainly from his ways. An evil tree beareth not good fruit.

4. He expoſtulates with him not only how unbecoming a good man it was to purſue the innocent, but how unbecoming a great king to perſecute one ſo much his inferior, a ſhepherd, an exile, leaping as a flea from hill to hill for ſafety; and as worthleſs and unable to make reſiſtance as a dead dog. Note, Yielding pacifies wrath: to humble ourſelves before others, is the beſt way to keep them from trampling upon us, if they have any nobleneſs of ſpirit remaining.

Laſtly, he reſts his cauſe in the hands of the great judge and avenger, and truſts he will plead for him now, and ſtand by him, if the king ſtill refuſes to be convinced by ſuch undeniable evidence of his innocency. Note, It is the comfort of the oppreſſed that they have a tribunal to appeal to, where juſtice ſhall be done them. The laſt day at leaſt will be our vindication from every malignant accuſation.

16. ¶ And it came to paſs, [s] when David had made an end of ſpeaking theſe words unto Saul, that Saul ſaid, Is this thy voice, [t] my ſon David? and Saul lift up his voice and wept. 17. And he ſaid to David, [u] Thou art more righteous than I: for thou haſt rewarded me good, whereas I have rewarded thee evil. 18. And thou haſt ſhewed this day, how that thou haſt dealt well with me: foraſmuch as when the LORD had † delivered me into thine hand, thou killedſt me not. 19. For if a man find his enemy, will he let him go well away? wherefore the LORD reward thee good, for that thou haſt done unto me this day. 20. And now behold, [x] I know well that thou ſhalt ſurely be king, and that the kingdom of Iſrael ſhall be eſtabliſhed in thine hand. 21. Swear now therefore unto me by the LORD, that thou wilt not cut off my ſeed after me, and that thou wilt not deſtroy my name out of my father's houſe. 22. And [y] David ſware unto Saul; and Saul went home: but [z] David and his men gat them up unto the hold.

v. 16—22. Such a conduct, and ſo pathetic an expoſtulation, quite diſarmed Saul's malice; for what ſtony heart could but relent before ſuch evidence?

1. He burſts into tears, of no feigned remorſe, overcome with the kindneſs of his perſecuted and innocent ſon. Note, Many a ſinner is brought to his tears, and haſty reſolutions againſt his ſins, whoſe heart is unchanged, and who will notwithſtanding weep in eternal darkneſs.

2. He acknowledges David's uprightneſs, admires his uncommon behaviour to him, ſo unlike what he in ſuch circumſtances would have done, and prays that God would reward him for ſuch unparalleled generoſity. Note, (1.) There may be a real confeſſion of ſin, when there is no true repentance for it. (2.) Nothing ſo confounds a carnal world, as the greatneſs of a chriſtian's ſoul, in his love towards his enemies. (3.) The leaſt we can do for thoſe who are kind to us, is to pray for them.

3. He profeſſes his conviction of the kingdom's deſcending to him. David's behaviour confirms the well-known anointing of Samuel: perhaps too, Samuel's ſkirt, which was rent in Saul's hand, might now be remembred by him, when his own ſkirt was cut off, and the threatning then pronounced be brought to his mind. Note, God's word will be fulfilled in its ſeaſon, and even his enemies ſhall be forced to own him faithful.

4. So convinced is Saul now, that oppoſition is vain; that he requires of David an oath, not to extirpate his family when he came to the throne; which David ſolemnly makes, and religiouſly obſerved, maintaining Mephiboſheth, and revenging the murder of Iſhboſheth. The ſons of Rizpah, ſlain at the requeſt of the Gibeonites, ſeem to have been illegitimate; and as it was done by divine appointment, that exculpates David.

5. The ſolemn oath being given, they part in peace; Saul to his houſe, till his wonted enmity revived again, and David to his ſtrong hold, little caring to truſt his ſafety on ſo precarious a foundation as Saul's momentary relenting. Note, (1.) It is prudent to guard againſt a known enemy. (2.) Fits of partial repentance never laſt long.

1. AND [a] Samuel died, and all the Iſraelites were gathered together, and [b] lamented him, and buried him in his houſe at Ramah. And David aroſe, and went down to the wilderneſs of Paran.

[a] Chap. xxviii. 3. Ecclus xlvi. 13, 20.

v. 1. The beſt of men are dying worms. Samuel departs in peace: he had lived highly reſpected, and dies univerſally lamented. His laſt days he had ſpent far from a buſy world, in the pleaſing employment of preſiding in the ſchool of the prophets at Naioth, where he was at leiſure to look forward to that reſt, to which he was going, and wait his joyful diſmiſſion. He was buried in Ramah, in his own houſe or garden, and all Iſrael mourned his loſs; a loſs the more ſenſibly felt in the preſent diſtracted condition of their country, under Saul's outrageous government. David hereupon retires to Paran, that he might be more out of the way of Saul. Note, (1.) In age it becomes us particularly to look forward, and as we grow nearer our journey's end, to prepare for our great change. (2.) The death of a great and faithful miniſter will draw forth tears of real grief from all who know the invaluable bleſſing they have loſt, and who ſenſibly feel the want of his admonition, preaching, and prayers.

2. And there was a man in Maon, [c] whoſe poſſeſſions were in Carmel, and the man was very great, and he had three thouſand ſheep, and a thouſand goats: and he was ſhearing his ſheep in Carmel. 3. Now the name of the man was † Nabal, and the name of his wife ‡ Abigail: and ſhe was a woman of good underſtanding, and of a beautiful countenance: but the man was churliſh, and evil in his doings, and he was of the houſe of Caleb. 4. ¶ And David heard in the wilderneſs, that [d] Nabal did ſhear his ſheep. 5. And David ſent out ten young men, and David ſaid unto the young men, Get you up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and ‖ greet him in my name: 6. And thus ſhall ye ſay to him that liveth in proſperity, Peace be both to thee, and [e] peace be to thine houſe, and peace be unto all that thou haſt. 7. And now I have heard that thou haſt ſhearers: now thy ſhepherds which were with us, [f] we hurt them not, [g] neither was there ought miſſing unto them all the while they were in Carmel. 8. Aſk thy young men, and they will ſhew thee: wherefore let the young men find favour in thine eyes: (for [h] we come in a good day) give, I pray thee, whatſoever cometh to thine hand unto thy ſervants, and to thy ſon David. 9. And when David's young men came, they ſpake to Nabal according to all thoſe words in the name of David, and ceaſed. 10. ¶ And Nabal anſwered David's ſervants, and ſaid, [i] Who is David? and who is the ſon of Jeſſe? There be many ſervants now adays, [k] that break away every man from his maſter. 11. v. 2—11. We have here,

1. An account of Nabal, his family, and circumſtances: His name ſignifies a fool, and his conduct too much verified its propriety: he was ſprung from a noble ſtock, the diſtinguiſhed Caleb; but like many an other, became the reproach of his anceſtors. A man indeed of vaſt wealth, which made him great in the eyes of men, but of a mean and little ſpirit; and, as mean ſpirits uſually are, inſolent, churliſh, and overbearing. His wife was of a character the reverſe of his; her name Abigail, her father's joy, a woman of excellent underſtanding, generous in her temper, and as much adorned with the accompliſhments of her perſon, as the beauties of her mind. Note, (1.) The greateſt gifts of this world, are often poſſeſſed by thoſe who have neither wiſdom nor grace to improve them. (2.) Many a wife, like Abigail, for the great eſtate, is doomed, by inhuman parents, to bear the yoke of ſuch a Nabal. But how little happineſs can be expected from ſuch an union!

2. David being in diſtreſs, makes application to Nabal for relief. Hearing when he kept his ſhearing feaſt, he ſends a very humble and reſpectful meſſage to him, wiſhing him all peace and proſperity, begs the favour of him to give him ought that came to hand, if of the ſuperfluities of the banquet, and intimates the care he and his men had taken of Nabal's ſervants in the wilderneſs, where not only no violence was offered them, but as the ſhepherds acknowledged, they were a protection and guard to them from danger day and night. Note, (1.) It becomes the poor to uſe entreaties. It is better to beg than ſteal. (2.) Whilſt we feaſt, we ſhould remember thoſe who famiſh, and break our bread to the hungry. (3.) One good turn deſerves another: though we cannot claim it as our right, yet we may expect it as the debt of gratitude.

3. Nabal's anſwer is as rude and unmannerly, as David's meſſage was reſpectful and ſubmiſſive. Not content with a ſurly refuſal, he adds inſolent abuſe; as many a covetous man, like him, ſtill drives the poor beggar from his door, and by calling him vagrant, ſeeks to excuſe himſelf from relieving him. He ſpeaks with diſdain of the ſon of Jeſſe, whoſe praiſe the daughters of the land had ſo loudly proclaimed, as a poor inconſiderable fellow, whom nobody of credit knew; treats him and his companions as runagates and vagabonds, and refuſes them a draught of water, or a morſel of bread: they were his own, and he ſhould not ſpare a crumb. Note, (1.) A foul tongue is always a ſign of a wicked heart. (2.) The beſt of men have been treated with the moſt ſcurrilous invectives, and illiberal reproach: let us not count it ſtrange, if we meet with the ſame. (3.) It is greatly to be feared, that they who appear ſo very tenacious of their own, have uſed the ſame hard hand in getting as ſaving.

12. So David's young men [n] turned their way, and went again, and came and told him all thoſe ſayings. 13. And David ſaid unto his men, [o] Gird you on every man his ſword. And they girded on every man his ſword, and David alſo girded on his ſword: and there went up after David about four hundred men, and two hundred abode by the ſtuff. 14. ¶ But one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, ſaying, Behold, David ſent meſſengers out of the wilderneſs to ſalute our maſter; and he † railed on them. 15. But the men were very good unto us, and [p] we were not hurt, neither miſſed we any thing as long as we were converſant with them, when we were in the fields. 16. They were [q] a wall unto us both by night and day, all the while we were with them, keeping the ſheep. 17. Now therefore know and conſider what thou wilt do: for evil is determined againſt our maſter, and againſt all his houſhold: for he is ſuch [r] a ſon of Belial, that a man cannot ſpeak to him.

v. 12—17. David's ſervants ſaw it in vain to expoſtulate, and were too well taught to return railing for railing, but returned, and let David know the ill uſage and affront put upon him; whereupon,

1. David in great wrath girds on his ſword, aſſembles his troops, and ſwears raſhly, and too paſſionately, ver. 21, 22, to leave no man of Nabal's family alive by morning light. They march four hundred ſtrong immediately, and now death and ruin hang over Nabal's head. Note, (1.) When we meet with unkindneſs from thoſe, of whom we had reaſon to expect other treatment, it is apt to exaſperate us more, than the greateſt injuries we receive from others. (2.) Violent paſſions are deadly dangerous, and deeply ſinful. (3.) The beſt of men, when taken off their guard, have given ſad proofs of the power of remaining corruption in them. Let it teach us to watch and pray, that we fall not into temptation.

2. One of Nabal's ſervants, juſtly apprehenſive of the conſequences, ſteps aſide to acquaint his miſtreſs; informs her of the meſſage ſent by David, and the railings of his maſter; the obligations they were under to David and his men, and the care they took of them in the wilderneſs; and begs her to conſider what to do; for from ſomething which might have dropped from the meſſengers as they retired, or the greatneſs of the provocation, he concludes David would revenge ſuch inſolent abuſe; and he applied to her, for ſhe knew, as well as himſelf, Nabal's temper, that to ſpeak to him would be uſeleſs, and but provoke him more. Note, He is a bad maſter indeed, of whom his ſervants give ſuch a character.

18. ¶ Then Abigail [s] made haſte, and took two hundred loaves, and two bottles of wine, and five ſheep ready dreſſed, and five meaſures of parched corn, and an hundred cluſters of raiſins, and two hundred cakes of figs, and laid them on aſſes. 19. And ſhe ſaid unto her ſervants, [t] Go on before me, behold, I come after you: but ſhe told not her huſband Nabal. 20. And it was ſo, as ſhe rode on the aſs, that ſhe came down by the covert of the hill, and behold, David and his men came down againſt her, and ſhe met them. 21. (Now David had ſaid, [u] Surely in vain have I kept all that this fellow hath in the wilderneſs, ſo that nothing was miſſed of all that pertained unto him: and [x] he hath requited me evil for good. 22. [y] So and more alſo do God unto the enemies of David, if I leave of all that pertain to him, by the morning light, [z] any that piſſeth againſt the wall.) 23. And when Abigail ſaw David, ſhe haſted, and [a] lighted off the aſs, and fell before David on her face, and bowed herſelf to the ground, 24. And fell at his feet, and ſaid, Upon me, my lord, upon me let this iniquity be, and let thine handmaid, I pray thee, ſpeak in thine † audience, and hear the words of thine handmaid. 25. Let not my lord, I pray thee, ‡ regard this man of Belial, even Nabal: for as his name is, ſo is he; [b] Nabal is his name, and folly is with him: but I thine handmaid ſaw not the young men of my lord, whom thou didſt ſend. 26. Now therefore, my lord, [c] as the LORD liveth, and as thy ſoul liveth, ſeeing the LORD hath withholden thee from coming § to ſhed blood, and from [d] avenging thyſelf with thine own hand: now let thine enemies, and they that ſeek evil to my lord, [e] be as Nabal. 27. And now this ‖ bleſſing which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that † follow my lord. 28. I pray thee, forgive the treſpaſs of thine handmaid: for the LORD will certainly make my lord [f] a ſure houſe: becauſe my lord [g] fighteth the battles of the LORD, and [h] evil hath not been found in thee all thy days. 29. Yet a man is riſen to purſue thee, and to ſeek thy ſoul: but [i] the ſoul of my lord ſhall be bound in the bundle of life with the LORD thy God; and the ſouls of thine enemies, them ſhall [k] he ſling out, as out of the middle of a ſling. 30. And it ſhall come to paſs, when the LORD ſhall have done to my lord according to all the good that he hath ſpoken concerning thee, and ſhall have appointed thee ruler over Iſrael; 31. That this ſhall be no ‡ grief unto thee, nor offence of heart unto my lord, either that thou haſt ſhed blood cauſeleſs, or that my lord hath avenged himſelf: but when the LORD ſhall have dealt well with my lord, then remember thine handmaid.

v. 18—31. Abigail no ſooner hears the ſtory, than ſhe haſtes, unknown to her huſband, to prevent the danger ſhe foreſaw.

1. She took a good ſupply of proviſions, much more than David had deſired, and ſent them before, to pave the way for her apology; for a gift pacifieth anger.

2. She followed herſelf, and by a behaviour ſo admirably ſubmiſſive, and a ſpeech ſo exquiſitely ordered to diſarm his reſentment, ſtays him on his march, and reſcues her family. No ſooner does he appear, than ſhe alights, bows to the duſt before him, addreſſes him with the greateſt reſpect and reverence, calls him My Lord, and begs permiſſion to ſpeak in his audience. She deſires to take the fault of her huſband's ill conduct on herſelf; excuſes him, by laying it to the weakneſs of his underſtanding, rather than the wickedneſs of his heart; expreſſes her concern that ſhe ſaw not the meſſengers, who would then have met with a better reception; imputes it to God's mercy, that he had been withholden from ſhedding blood, and avenging himſelf, which ſhe expreſſes her confidence himſelf would rejoice in; wiſhes all his enemies as unable to hurt him, as her weak and fooliſh huſband; begs his ſervants acceptance of her preſent, as if ſhe eſteemed it not worthy his own; honourably mentions his gallant conduct under the Lord's guidance, and his innocence under the perſecutions he had ſuffered; expreſſes her confidence, that his life would be ever precious to God, his malicious enemy diſappointed and deſtroyed, and his kingdom confirmed and eſtabliſhed according to the divine promiſe: begs him to forgive the trouble ſhe had given him; is confident he will never hereafter repent his lenity in granting her requeſt; and concludes with a humble deſire of his remembrance, when he comes to ſit on the throne of Iſrael. Such rhetoric, and ſuch a ſpeaker, could not fail of ſucceſs. Note, (1.) A wife who regards her huſband, would gladly remove any blame from him, by transferring it to herſelf. (2.) Every faithful ſoul is bound up in the bundle of life with the Lord; and therefore, even in death, he cannot die; but becauſe his Lord lives, he liveth alſo. (3.) What we do in a paſſion, will afterwards be a grief to us. When we reflect, and ſtay our anger, we conſult our own peace. (4.) It is always a greater ſatisfaction to forgive an offence, than to revenge it.

32. ¶ And David ſaid to Abigail, Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael, which ſent thee this day to meet me: 33. And [l] bleſſed be thy advice, and bleſſed be thou, which haſt kept me this day from coming to ſhed blood, and from avenging myſelf with mine own hand.

34. For in very deed, as the LORD God of Iſrael liveth, which hath kept me back from hurting thee, except thou hadſt haſted and come to meet me, ſurely, [m] there had not been left unto Nabal, by the morning light, any that piſſeth againſt the wall. 35. So David received of her hand that which ſhe had brought him, and ſaid unto her, Go up in peace to thine houſe; ſee, I have hearkened to thy voice, and have accepted thy perſon.

v. 32—35. David's anger quickly ſubſides before ſo powerful an apology. He bleſſes God for ſending her to ſtay him from the vengeance he meditated, and thanks her heartily for her kind interpoſition; ſenſible that he was on the brink of a grievous ſin, and ſhould, unleſs reſtrained, have accompliſhed his raſh and bloody vow.* He receives her preſent, diſmiſſes her in peace, and profeſſes his gracious acceptance of her coming, and her apology. Note, (1.) Thoſe deſerve our warmeſt thanks, who keep us from ſin. (2.) That ſin on reflection ſhocks us, which in the heat of paſſion was overlooked. (3.) The nearer we are to ſin, and the more heinous the crime, the greater is the mercy of God in reſcuing us from it. (4.) A raſh and ſinful oath is better broken than kept. (5.) They who come trembling to the offended, find often greater favour from them than they could expect.

* The literal tranſlation of the Hebrew phraſe for every male, v. 34. hath here a very peculiar inelegance and indelicacy; and it were well, if in other places, as well as here, this phraſe were more agreeably expreſſed.

36. ¶ And Abigail came to Nabal, and behold, he held a feaſt in his houſe, [n] like the feaſt of a king, and Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he was [o] very drunken: [p] wherefore ſhe told him nothing, leſs or more, until the morning light. 37. But it came to paſs in the morning, when the wine was gone out of Nabal, and his wife had told him theſe things, that his heart [q] died within him, and he became as a ſtone. 38. And it came to paſs about ten days after, that the LORD ſmote Nabal, that he died. 39. ¶ And when David heard that Nabal was dead, he ſaid, [r] Bleſſed be the LORD that hath pleaded the cauſe of my reproach from the hand of Nabal, and hath kept his ſervant from evil: for [s] the LORD hath returned the wickedneſs of Nabal upon his own head. And David ſent and communed with Abigail, [t] to take her to him to wife. 40. And when the ſervants of David were come to Abigail to Carmel, they ſpake unto her, ſaying, David ſent us unto thee, to take thee to him to wife. 41. And ſhe aroſe, and bowed herſelf on her face to the earth, and ſaid, Behold, [u] let thine handmaid be a ſervant to waſh the feet of the ſervants of my lord. 42. And Abigail haſted, and aroſe, and rode upon an aſs, and five damſels of hers that went † after her: and ſhe went after the meſſengers of David, and became his wife. 43. David alſo took Ahinoam of Jezreel, and [x] they were alſo both of them his wives. 44. ¶ But Saul had given Michal his daughter, David's wife, to Phalti the ſon of Laiſh, which was of Gallim.

v. 36—44. 1. Abigail at her return finds Nabal carouſing with his men, and dead drunk; therefore ſhe prudently ſays nothing; for to ſpeak to a drunken man, is to caſt pearls before ſwine. But in the morning, when he had ſlept out the fumes of wine, ſhe let him know the danger his churliſh behaviour had brought upon him. Note, (1.) Many a fooliſh ſinner, like Nabal, is loſt in feaſting and jollity, inſenſible to the wrath of God which hangs over his head. (2.) A drunken man makes himſelf not only a fool, but a beaſt, incapable either of profiting by advice or correction.

2. The effect of the news on Nabal. His heart ſunk like a ſtone, terrified at the thoughts of the danger he had eſcaped, and dying with the fright. The ſhock ſeized his ſpirits, he drooped about ten days, when God ſmote him with his death-ſtroke, and unlamented he went to his grave. Note, The ſinner's riotous joys will ſoon be turned into the ſorrows of eternal death.

3. David on hearing it thanks God, not that Nabal was dead, but that he was kept from avenging himſelf on him, and that God had vindicated his juſtice upon ſuch a ſinner. Note, (1.) God will avenge his ſervants, and that ſpeedily. (2.) It is matter of unſpeakable thankfulneſs, to be kept from avenging ourſelves.

4. David now remembering the excellencies of Abigail, offers to make her his wife. She receives the meſſage with great humility, and acknowledges herſelf unworthy the honour; yet, glad to be in his family, though employed in the meaneſt offices in it, ſhe ſets out with her retinue, and David is happy in ſo valuable a woman, who to a churl behaved ſo kindly, and would much more to a man who knew how to value her worth. David had alſo another wife, according to the evil cuſtoms of thoſe days, Ahinoam, a Jezreeliteſs. His former wife, Michal, Saul had wickedly robbed him of, and married to Phalti the ſon of Laiſh, which is given as the reaſon of his marrying again. Note, (1.) Every believer counts himſelf happy to take Chriſt with his croſs, knowing, that though now for a while he muſt ſuffer with him, yet ſhortly he ſhall reign with him. (2.) Poligamy, though countenanced by good men, is yet a bad thing, and contrary to our Saviour's expreſs precept, and the original inſtitution of marriage.

CHAP. XXVI.

David's troubles from Saul here begin again; his repentance laſted not long. 1. The Ziphites inform him where David was, ver. 1. and thereupon he marches out in queſt of him, ver. 2, 3. 2. David gains intelligence of his motions, ver. 4. and takes a view of his camp, ver. 5. 3. He and one of his men venture into it in the night, and find him and all his guards aſleep, ver. 6, 7. 4. David ſpares his life, but carries off his ſpear and cruſe of water, ver. 8—12. 5. He produces them to Saul, as a further witneſs that he did not deſign him any ill, and reaſons with him upon it, ver. 13—20 6. Saul hereby convinced of his error, once more gives over the perſecution, ver. 21—25.

1. AND [a] the Ziphites came unto Saul to Gibeah, ſaying, Doth not David hide himſelf in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeſhimon? 2. [b] Then Saul aroſe, and went down to the wilderneſs of Ziph, having three thouſand choſen men of Iſrael with him, [c] to ſeek David in the wilderneſs of Ziph. 3. And Saul pitched in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeſhimon by the way: but David abode in the wilderneſs, and he ſaw that Saul came after him into the wilderneſs. 4. [d] David therefore ſent out ſpies, and underſtood that Saul was come in very deed. 5. ¶ And David aroſe, and came to the place where Saul had pitched: and David beheld the place where Saul lay, and Abner the ſon of Ner, the captain of his hoſt: and Saul lay † in the trench, and the people pitched round about him.

v. 1—5. Good impreſſions are quickly worn out, where the heart is not truly turned to God.

1. Saul returns to the purſuit of David, ſtill retaining the old rancour, and perhaps inſtigated by the Ziphites, who, from their former ill behaviour to David, might be apprehenſive of ſuffering for it, ſhould he ever come to the throne. Note, (1.) One ſin uſually involves the ſoul in another, ſo connected is the chain of evil. (2.) A little inſtigation will revive the old grudge, where the reconciliation is not ſincere.

2. David gets information of Saul's motions, and, as before, truſts not to his ſword, but to concealment, for his ſafety. So unwilling was he, under every provocation, to appear in arms againſt his ſovereign. Being apprized by his ſpies where Saul had pitched his camp, he went out unobſerved to reconnoitre the ſituation. Note, A good general will, as often as poſſible, truſt to no information, but make uſe of his own eyes to obſerve the enemy's poſition.

6. Then anſwered David, and ſaid to Ahimelech the Hittite, and to Abiſhai the ſon of [e] Zeruiah, brother to Joab, ſaying, Who will go down with me to Saul to the camp? And Abiſhai ſaid, I will go down with thee. 7. [f] So David and Abiſhai came to the people [g] by night, and behold, Saul lay ſleeping within the trench, and his ſpear ſtuck in the ground at his bolſter: but Abner and the people lay round about him. 8. Then ſaid Abiſhai to David, God hath † delivered thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore let me ſmite him, I pray thee, with the ſpear, even to the earth at once, and I will not ſmite him the ſecond time. 9. And David ſaid to Abiſhai, Deſtroy him not: for [h] who can ſtretch forth his hand againſt the LORD's anointed, and be guiltleſs? 10. David ſaid furthermore, As the LORD liveth, [i] the LORD ſhall ſmite him, or [k] his day ſhall come to die, or [l] he ſhall deſcend into battle, and periſh. 11. The LORD forbid that I ſhould ſtretch forth mine hand againſt the LORD's anointed: but I pray thee, take thou now the ſpear that is at his bolſter, and the cruſe of water, and let us go. 12. [m] So David took the ſpear and the cruſe of water from Saul's bolſter, and they gat them away, and no man ſaw it, nor knew it, neither awaked:

v. 6—12. David having obſerved the camp, reſolves on a dangerous enterprize; though, it is to be preſumed, he had ſome divine admonition for this ſtep, which would otherwiſe appear raſh and unwarrantable.

1. He goes down to Saul's camp in the night with Abiſhai, who offered to be his companion, Ahimelech declining the danger, or Abiſhai being moſt forward to go. A deep ſleep from God had ſeized the hoſt: Saul lay in the midſt of the camp, which was compaſſed with an entrenchment; or in his chariot, as the word alſo ſignifies, with his ſpear ready at his bolſter, and a cruſe of water, and his army aſleep around him, to the very centinels. So ſoon can God diſarm the mighty, and leave them a prey to the feeble.

2. Abiſhai is eager to improve the advantage ſo remarkable a providence gave them, concludes that God deſigned Saul's deſtruction, and offers at a ſtroke to diſpatch him.

3. David refuſes the offer, and withholds his hands. He uſes the ſame argument as before, the ſacred office with which he was inveſted, and the allegiance therefore due to him. He doubted not but God would avenge his quarrel by ſome ſudden judgment, or he would fall in battle, or die a natural death; and he is content to wait the Lord's leiſure, rather preferring ſuffering in the fleſh for a while, than by ſuch a blow to bring guilt on his conſcience. Note, They who know the evil of ſin, think a crown too dearly purchaſed by the leaſt tranſgreſſion.

4. Though he will not hurt him, he takes away the evidences of his power to have done ſo, his ſpear and cruſe, and thus in ſafety they retire. Note, They are ſecure in the midſt of danger, from whom God gives a charge to the angel of death to withhold his hand.

13. ¶ Then David went over to the other ſide, and ſtood on the top of an hill afar off, (a great ſpace being between them:) 14. And David cried to the people, and to Abner the ſon of Ner, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou not, Abner? Then Abner anſwered and ſaid, Who art thou that crieſt to the king? 15. And David ſaid to Abner, Art not thou a valiant man? and who is like to thee in Iſrael? wherefore then haſt thou not kept thy lord the king? † for there came one of the people in to deſtroy the king thy lord. 16. This thing is not good that thou haſt done: as the LORD liveth, ye are ‡ worthy to die, becauſe ye have not kept your maſter the LORD's anointed: and now ſee where the king's ſpear is, and the cruſe of water that was at his bolſter. 17. And Saul knew David's voice, and ſaid, Is this thy voice, my ſon David? And David ſaid, It is my voice, my lord, O king. 18. And he ſaid, Wherefore doth my lord thus purſue after his ſervant? for [o] what have I done? or what evil is in mine hand? 19. Now therefore, I pray thee, let my lord the king hear the words of his ſervant: [p] If the LORD have ſtirred thee up againſt me, let him § accept an offering: but if they be the children of men, [q] curſed be they before the LORD; for they have driven me out this day from ‖ abiding in the inheritance of the LORD, ſaying, [r] Go ſerve other gods. 20. Now therefore let not my blood fall to the earth before the face of the LORD: for [s] the king of Iſrael is come out to ſeek a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge in the mountains.

v. 13—20. When David had got out of danger, on the oppoſite hill, from whence he could be heard, though not hurt,

1. He rouſes Abner from ſleep with a loud call, and rallies him for his negligence, in not being more watchful over his ſovereign's ſafety. Producing the ſpear and cruiſe, he declares him, and all the guards, by martial law deſerving death, for ſuffering the king to be thus expoſed, leaving them to judge who was moſt the king's friend, they who ſlept and left him in danger, or he who watched over his ſafety, and reſtrained the arm of one of the people, which was ready to deſtroy him. Note, They whom we treat as our greateſt enemies, ſometimes prove themſelves our beſt friends.

2. Saul knowing the voice, and obſerving the danger he had eſcaped, is again overcome with his ſon's generoſity; and David takes occaſion once more, with theſe evidences of innocence in his hands, to expoſtulate with him on the injuſtice of his perſecutions, and on the miſeries which he ſuffered by it. He was a faithful ſervant, and it was Saul's loſs thus to force him from him. He was a true worſhipper of God; but by his neceſſities driven for refuge among idolaters, was in great danger, without eſpecial ſupports from God, of apoſtatizing from his worſhip; he could appeal to Saul himſelf for inconteſtible proofs of his innocence. It was below the dignity of the king of Iſrael to hunt a poor fugitive, that, like a frighted partridge, ſought only his ſafety by flight, and was no more to be feared than the moſt contemptible animal, even a flea: he begs therefore the king would deſiſt from thirſting after his blood, which, if ſhed, the Lord would avenge. If he had offended God in ought, and by him Saul was ſtirred up to chaſtiſe him, he would ſeek, by offering and ſacrifice, reconciliation: or if an evil ſpirit moved him, let them join in prayer and ſacrifice for its removal: but if wicked and malicious enemies were the inſtigators, he imprecates the juſt vengeance of God upon their guilty heads. Note, (1.) They are our worſt enemies, that expoſe us to the temptation of falling from God, by driving us from his worſhip and people. (2.) Innocent blood ſhall never be ſhed without a ſevere reckoning. (3.) Reconciliation with God deſerves our firſt concern; that obtained, other troubles will abate. (4.) Though the curſe cauſeleſs ſhall not fall, yet woe to thoſe againſt whom God's people bring their juſt complaints.

Before Chriſt 1057.

21. ¶ Then ſaid Saul, [t] I have ſinned: return, my ſon David, for [u] I will no more do thee harm, becauſe my ſoul was precious in thine eyes this day: behold, I have played the fool, and have erred exceedingly. 22. And David anſwered and ſaid, Behold the king's ſpear, and let one of the young men come over and fetch it. 23. [x] The LORD render to every man his righteouſneſs and his faithfulneſs: for the LORD delivered thee into my hand to-day, but I would not ſtretch forth mine hand againſt the LORD's anointed. 24. And behold, as thy life was much ſet by this day in mine eyes, ſo let my life be much ſet by in the eyes of the LORD, and let him deliver me out of all tribulation. 25. Then Saul ſaid to David, Bleſſed be thou, my ſon David: thou ſhalt both do great things, and alſo ſhalt ſtill prevail. So David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place.

v. 21—25. We have here,

1. Saul melted down under David's remonſtrance. He ſees now how precious his life was in David's ſight, and therefore how ſinful againſt God to perſecute the innocent, as well as fooliſh to drive ſo faithful a ſervant from him. He owns the aggravation of his ſin, that he hath erred exceedingly; invites him to return to court, and ſolemnly promiſes never more to attempt his harm. Note, Sin is the greateſt folly, and will appear ſo at laſt.

2. David enforces the conviction of his innocence; deſires the king to ſend for his ſpear and cruiſe; prays to God to deal with him according to his uprightneſs before him; aſſures Saul his hand would never be againſt him, as that day's experience would teſtify; the anointing oil would be his ſacred guard, and refers himſelf to God for the ſame protection, preſervation,, and deliverance, as that day he had ſhewn to Saul. Note, (1.) God is a righteous judge, and his diſpenſations all prove him to be ſo. (2.) They who ſhew mercy, may hope to find mercy.

3. Saul is quite overcome, bleſſes his ſon, acknowledges, before his army, his righteous dealing, and predicts his greatneſs and prevalence over all his enemies. Note, God will at laſt make his enemies bow at the feet of his perſecuted people, and know that he hath loved them. Rev. iii. 9.

4. Saul and David part to meet no more: Saul returns to Gibeah, David to his faſtneſſes, unwilling to truſt promiſes which had been ſo often broken. Note, It is folly to truſt thoſe who have once deceived us.

place in ſome town in the country, that I may dwell there: for why ſhould thy ſervant dwell in the royal city with thee? 6. v. 1—7. Though there was an apparent reconciliation now wrought between them, David knew too well Saul's temper, to hope it would be of long continuance. We have here,

1. His fearfulneſs and unbelief. God's promiſes, and his own paſt experience, cannot prevent melancholy apprehenſions of his danger, and he is ready to deſpair, after all his deliverances, and fears he ſhall yet fall by the hand of Saul. Note, Many a poor trembling heart is exerciſed like David, and, from the ſenſe of his numerous corruptions, is ready to give up all hope, and diſhonour God's faithfulneſs.

2. His reſolution hereupon, to fly into the land of the Philiſtines, hoping, that then Saul would deſiſt from any further purſuit. A dangerous courſe; but in dangerous circumſtances ſomething muſt be hazarded.

3. He met with a kind reception from Achiſh. Probably David had firſt acquainted him with his diſtreſs, and obtained his protection; and he can ſooner rely on the word of a Philiſtine, than the oath of Saul. His ſix hundred men accompanied him with their houſholds, and dwelt at firſt with Achiſh at Gath; but finding many inconveniencies there, he deſires, and Achiſh conſents to give him Ziklag for his abode. Being in the royal city expoſed him to envy, and the courtiers of Achiſh probably diſliked the friendſhip their king ſhewed him. Beſides, here the public exerciſe of his religion was more offenſive, and his men in greater danger of being corrupted. On every account therefore the motion was prudent, and the iſſue proved it ſo; for hither his friends could more eaſily reſort to him, and by the preſent grant, the city became ever after annexed to the crown of Judah, as it had been in their lot before, though not occupied by that tribe. Here he abode, not a year and four months, but days, even four months, Saul being within that time ſlain, and David ſucceeding to the throne. Note, (1.) It is our duty to withdraw from temptation. (2.) We ſhall never loſe by what we give up for the ſake of God and our ſouls.

4. Saul deſiſted now from any farther purſuit, which it ſeems he again intended, if he had not been gone out of his reach. Note, It is not for want of will, but power, that the evil of many a wicked man is kept within bounds.

8. ¶ And David and his men went up and invaded the Geſhurites, and the Gezrites, and the Amalekites: for thoſe nations were of old the inhabitants of the land, as thou goeſt to Shur, even unto the land of Egypt. 9. And David [c] ſmote the land, and left neither man nor woman alive, and took away the ſheep, and the oxen, and the aſſes, and the camels, and the apparel, and returned, and came to Achiſh. 10. And Achiſh ſaid, Whither have ye made a road to-day? And David ſaid, [d] Againſt the ſouth of Judah, and againſt the ſouth of the Jerahmeelites, and againſt the ſouth of the Kenites. 11. And David ſaved neither man or woman alive, to bring tidings to Gath, ſaying, leſt they ſhould tell on us, ſaying, So did David, and ſo will be his manner, all the while he dwelleth in the country of the Philiſtines. 12. And Achiſh believed David, ſaying, he hath made † his people Iſrael utterly to abhor him; therefore he ſhall be my ſervant for ever.

v. 8—12. Wherever David is, he cannot long be inactive.

1. He meditates and executes an inroad on the Geſhurites and Gezrites, ſome of the remainder of the Amorites, and the Amalekites, who probably were incorporated among them, when they fled from Saul. As theſe were devoted nations, he leaves none alive: and beſide, there was another reaſon, that they might not carry tidings to Achiſh, from whom he intended to conceal what he had done, leſt it ſhould alarm the jealouſy of the Philiſtines.

2. Achiſh, on his return, enquires of his expedition, and David very ſinfully, to conceal the truth, prevaricates; pretending to have made an inroad on the ſouth of Judah, which was in a ſenſe true, as theſe people lay ſouthward; but David, it is to be feared, intended to be otherwiſe underſtood, as if he had fallen on his own countrymen, in which ſenſe Achiſh apprehended him, and concluded from thence his fidelity to him, and that his countrymen would be ſo exaſperated againſt him, that now David would be his ſervant for ever. Note, (1.) Equivocation is as bad as a direct lie. (2.) Let the ſins of great and good men be looked upon not as an exculpation for our imitation of them, but as an admonition to avoid them.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Preparations are here making for that war, which will put an end to the life and reign of Saul, and ſo make way for David to the throne. 1. The Philiſtines are the aggreſſors, and Achiſh their king makes David his confident, ver. 1, 2. 2. Saul appears in deſpair, ver. 3—6. 3. His application to a witch, to bring up Samuel, ver. 7—14. 3. His diſcourſe with the apparition, ver. 15—19. 4. The damp it ſtruck upon him, ver. 21—25.

1. AND it came to paſs in thoſe days, that [a] the Philiſtines gathered their armies together for warfare, to fight with Iſrael: and Achiſh ſaid unto David, † Know thou aſſuredly, that thou ſhalt go out with me to battle, thou and thy men. 2. And David ſaid unto Achiſh, [b] Surely thou ſhalt know what thy ſervant can do. And Achiſh ſaid to David, Therefore will I make thee keeper of mine head for ever. 3. Now [c] Samuel was dead, and all Iſrael had lamented him, and buried him in Ramah, even in his own city: and [d] Saul had put away thoſe that had familiar ſpirits, and the wizards, out of the land. 4. ¶ And the Philiſtines gathered themſelves together, and came and pitched in Shunem: and Saul gathered all Iſrael together, and they pitched in Gilboa. 5. And when Saul ſaw the hoſt of the Philiſtines, [e] he was afraid, and his heart greatly trembled. 6. And when Saul [f] enquired of the LORD, the LORD anſwered him not, neither [g] by dreams, nor [h] by Urim, nor [i] by prophets.

v. 1—6. We have here,

1. The diſtreſs David is reduced to, in a war between the Philiſtines and Iſrael. Taking advantage of Saul's bad government, and David's preſence with them, to whom their former defeats had been owing, they gather their armies, and Achiſh, as he juſtly might, inſiſts on David's going with him to battle. David dared not refuſe, though he no doubt reſolved not to fight againſt God's people: he therefore gives an ambiguous anſwer, which Achiſh interprets of his fidelity and valour, and promiſes to make him captain of his guards for life, if he acquitted himſelf well. Hereupon the Philiſtines march, and David with them, into the heart of Canaan, and encamp at Shunem, without oppoſition.

2. Saul, with his forces collected at Gilboa, appears greatly terrified at his danger, and now, no doubt, heartily wiſhes for David back again, whoſe preſence in the oppoſite army gives ſuch weight to his foes. The remembrance of his paſt guilt adds terrors to his preſent danger, whilſt the ſenſe of his preſent danger awakens his conſcience to a deeper ſenſibility of his paſt wickedneſs. To accumulate his miſeries, no anſwer from God is given; he is vouchſafed no divine viſion in a dream; has no Urim to conſult, ſince the prieſt is fled with it to David; nor prophet to adviſe or direct him. At laſt, he is reſolved to have recourſe to the devil for advice; but his own former edicts againſt ſorcerers make it difficult to find one, as he had, in pretended zeal for God, or at Samuel's inſtigation, put to death all ſuch abominable workers of iniquity throughout the land of Iſrael. Note, (1.) They who refuſe to ſeek God whilſt he may be found, will cry in vain, when he refuſes to anſwer. (2.) The troubles of the wicked are doubly aggravated by the terrors of an evil conſcience. (3.) The ſins men once profeſs to be moſt zealous againſt, when they have thrown off the cloak of religion, to them they will readily abandon themſelves.

7. ¶ Then ſaid Saul unto his ſervants, [k] Seek me a woman that hath a familiar ſpirit, that I may go to her, and enquire of her. And his ſervants ſaid to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar ſpirit at Endor. 8. And Saul diſguiſed himſelf, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman [l] by night; and he ſaid, I pray thee divine unto me by the familiar ſpirit, and bring me him up, whom I ſhall name unto thee. 9. And the woman ſaid unto him, Behold, thou knoweſt what Saul hath done, how he hath cut off thoſe that have familiar ſpirits, and the wizards, out of the land: wherefore then layeſt thou a ſnare for my life, to cauſe me to die? 10. And Saul [m] ſware to her by the LORD, ſaying, As the LORD liveth, there ſhall no puniſhment happen to thee for this thing. 11. Then ſaid the woman, Whom ſhall I bring up unto thee? And he ſaid, Bring me up Samuel. 12. And when the woman ſaw [n] Samuel, ſhe cried with a loud voice: And the woman ſpake to Saul, ſaying, what ſaweſt thou? And the woman ſaid unto Saul, I ſaw [o] gods aſcending out of the earth. 14. And he ſaid unto her, What form is he of? And ſhe ſaid, An old

v. 7—14. Loſt to all ſenſe of God and goodneſs, Saul determines, ſince he is refuſed direction from heaven, to aſk it from hell. Flectere ſi nequeo ſuperos, Acheronta movebo.

1. He enquires out a woman that hath a familiar ſpirit, and being directed to one at Endor, he diſguiſes himſelf, aſhamed to be known employed on ſuch an errand, and, with two ſervants only, by night goes to conſult her; ſhewing therein his own folly, as well as contempt of God, to have recourſe to that which ſo lately he had condemned as abominable. Note, (1.) Works of darkneſs hate the light; but what darkneſs can hide from the piercing eye of God? (2.) Many who have caſt off the fear of God, are yet aſhamed to appear ſo bad as they are before men.

2. Saul being arrived, acquaints her with his buſineſs; and when ſhe expreſſed her fear of Saul, from his former edict, unmoved with the cutting memorial, he daringly with an oath promiſes her impunity, and bids her proceed, and bring up Samuel from the dead. Note, (1.) The fear of human laws is on moſt minds a much ſtronger tie, than the apprehenſion of the wrath of God. (2.) They who ſwear, will lie. Saul's oath could little ſecure her from the puniſhment of her ſin. (3.) The miniſters of God, who when alive were neglected or deſpiſed, after death are many times ſought for, and wiſhed again to return; but they who hear them not now, can expect no meſſage of peace from them hereafter.

3. Samuel, or his reſemblance rather, appears. We hear nothing of her charms or incantations: theſe depths of Satan are better concealed, leſt wicked men in other times, as no doubt they would, ſhould practiſe the ſame diabolical arts. There have been many diſputes, whether Samuel really appeared, or whether it were a mere juggle of the woman, and Saul in his condition was unable to detect the cheat; or whether the devil perſonated the prophet. The more generally received opinion, that which ſtands moſt free from objection, and is moſt agreeable to the ſtory, is the laſt. It is incredible, that the devil ſhould have any power over the ſouls of the righteous; nor can we conceive God would, to countenance ſuch an abomination, ſuffer the holy prophet to appear. The ſoul which was in heaven, could not come up out of the earth; nor the glorified ſpirit be troubled, as this apparition complains: much leſs could Samuel ſay, Saul ſhould be with him to-morrow, whoſe impenitent end gives no hopes of his happineſs. That it was not a mere juggle, the whole circumſtances of the ſtory ſeem to ſhew, and muſt be ſuppoſed in the very notion of a perſon's having a familiar ſpirit, and the conſciouſneſs of her being liable to death for ſuch diabolical communion. But that Satan ſhould be ſuffered to act thus as a ſpirit of deluſion, to hurry Saul to his ruin, is very credible, and a moſt juſt judgment of God upon him.

4. The woman now diſcovers Saul, though diſguiſed, informed, it ſhould ſeem, by her familiar, and appears terrified. He bids her fear not, but proceed, and let him know what ſhe ſaw, which ſhe deſcribes as gods, or a ſpirit, riſing from the earth. When he enquires his form and mein, ſhe tells him it was an old man, covered with a mantle, ſuch as princes and judges wore. Concluding from the woman's deſcription that it was really Samuel, (for he himſelf does not appear to have ſeen any thing, whether the incantations were in another room, or that he dared not look Samuel in the face,) he bowed to the earth, either as a token of reverence to the ſuppoſed prophet, or to hear the whiſper which familiar ſpirits are ſaid to give out of the duſt. Note, It is juſt in God to give thoſe up to ſtrong deluſions, to believe a lie, who have no pleaſure in the truth, but have pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs.

15. ¶ And Samuel ſaid to Saul, [r] Why haſt thou diſ-quieted me to bring me up? And Saul anſwered, [s] I am ſore diſtreſſed, for the Philiſtines make war againſt me, and God is departed from me, and anſwereth me no more, neither by prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayeſt make known unto me what I ſhall do. 16. Then [t] ſaid Samuel, Wherefore then doſt thou aſk of me, ſeeing the LORD is departed from thee, and is become thine enemy? 17. And the LORD hath done † to him, [u] as he ſpake by ‡ me:
for the LORD hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given it to thy neighbour, even to David:
18. Becauſe thou obeyedſt not the voice of the LORD, [x] nor executedſt his fierce wrath upon Amalek, [y] therefore hath the LORD done this thing unto thee this day.
19. Moreover, the LORD will alſo deliver Iſrael with thee, into the hand of the Philiſtines: and to-morrow ſhalt thou and thy ſons be with me: the LORD alſo ſhall deliver the hoſt of Iſrael into the hand of the Philiſtines.

v. 15—19. We have here,

1. Saul's bitter diſtreſs. The apparition demands the cauſe of his troubling his repoſe by ſuch magical incantations, to beget in Saul a confidence in the power of this charmer. Saul ſpreads his terrible caſe before him: the Philiſtines war againſt him, and he is unable to make head againſt their armies; and, worſe than this, God hath forſaken him, will give him no direction, nor afford him any anſwer; therefore, reduced to deſpair, he is driven to this method of enquiring of him what he ſhould do. Was ever ſuch folly and madneſs? Would Samuel direct him whom God had forſaken? Or was it conceivable, that when no living prophet would adviſe him, he ſhould find help from the dead? Note, (1.) The ſinner has only himſelf to blame for all the miſeries to which he is reduced. (2.) It is too late to knock, when the door of mercy is ſhut.

2. The anſwer he receives is fearful, and betrays the lips it flows from, tending evidently to drive him to deſpair. The devil, perſonating the prophet, appears angry at being diſturbed; declares the vanity of his attempt in thus ſeeking relief; for ſince God is departed from him, all is loſt; reminds him of his anointing David in his ſtead; and aſſures him the word then brought from God is ready to be accompliſhed, (ſo eaſily can Satan make uſe of the ſcriptures, when they anſwer his deſigns); upbraids him with his diſobedience in the caſe of the Amalekites; foretels the rout of his army by the Philiſtines on the morrow; and denounces his own death and his ſons in the battle. Not a word of comfort appears throughout; no intimation of mercy, or admonition to repent; but every proſpect is terminated with black deſpair. Note, The livelieſt image of hell upon earth, is a ſinner given up to deſpair.

20. Then Saul † fell ſtraightway all along on the earth, and was ſore afraid becauſe of the words of Samuel, and there was no ſtrength in him: for he had eaten no bread all the day, nor all the night. 21. ¶ And the woman came unto Saul, and ſaw that he was ſore troubled, and ſaid unto him, Behold, thine handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and [z] I have put my life in my hand, and have hearkned unto thy words which thou ſpakeſt unto me.
22. Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou alſo unto the voice of thine handmaid, and let me ſet a morſel of bread before thee; and eat, that thou mayeſt have ſtrength when thou goeſt on thy way. 23. But he re-fuſed, and ſaid, [a] I will not eat. But his ſervants, together with the woman, compelled him, and he hearkned unto their voice: ſo he aroſe from the earth, and ſat upon the bed. 24. And the woman had a fat calf in the houſe, and ſhe haſted and killed it, and took flour, and kneaded it, and did bake unleavened bread thereof. 25. And ſhe brought it before Saul, and before his ſervants, and they did eat: then they roſe up, and went away that night.

v. 20—25. Shocked with the dreadful tidings, the dejected king ſinks ſpiritleſs to the earth; his ſoul is in the agonies of death with fear; and his body, weakened with faſting, having that day taken no food, is unable to riſe without help, and ready to expire on the ſpot. On this, the woman, hearing him fall, or perceiving the apparition was gone, during whoſe ſtay ſhe had left him alone with it, haſtens in, and is terribly frighted, not ſo much for the king's danger as her own, ſhould he die there; and therefore with great ſollicitude importunes him to take ſome refreſhment, that he might have ſtrength to return to the camp. At firſt he obſtinately rejected her offer, as if chuſing rather to die by hunger, than the ſword of the Philiſtines; but his ſervants earneſtly ſeconding her entreaties, they compel him by their perſuaſion to conſent. He ariſes therefore from the earth, and the woman inſtantly preparing ſome proviſion, he and his ſervants eat. Being thus refreſhed, they haſten back to the camp before the morning light, that they might not be diſcovered. Note, (1.) They who depart from God, leave their own mercies. A miſerable life, and a more miſerable death, is their wretched portion. (2.) When a man is given up to deſpair, he ruſheth on his own deſtruction, as the horſe ruſheth into the battle. (3.) Let every man who reads Saul's end, tremble at the thought of grieving the holy Spirit of God, leſt he be thus forſaken, and left to the wickedneſs and deſpair of his own heart.

CHAP. XXIX.

We left David much embarrassed; God here extricates him from his difficulties. 1. He marches with the Philistines, ver. 1, 2. Is excepted against by the lords of the Philistines, ver. 3—5. and, 3. Happily dismissed, ver. 6—11.

1. NOW the Philistines gathered together all their armies to Aphek: and the Israelites pitched by a fountain which is in Jezreel. 2. And the lords of the Philistines passed on by hundreds, and by thousands: but [a] David and his men passed on in the rereward with Achish. 3. Then said the princes of the Philistines, What do these Hebrews here? And Achish said unto the princes of the Philistines, Is not this David the servant of Saul the king of Israel, which hath been with me [b] these days, or these years, and [c] I have found no fault in him since he fell unto me unto this day? 4. And the princes of the Philistines were wroth with him, and the princes of the Philistines said unto him, [d] Make this fellow return, that he may go again to his place which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, [e] lest in the battle he be an adversary to us: for wherewith should he reconcile himself unto his master? should it not be with the heads of these men? 5. Is not this David, of whom they sang one to another in dances, saying, [f] Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

v. 1—5. David was now in the army of the Philistines, posted with Achish in the rear, greatly distressed how to act, being in equal difficulties and danger, whether to desert his friend Achish, who had protected him, or draw his sword against God's people. But God knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation.

1. The Philistine lords, on the review of their forces, observe David and his men; and the remembrance of his former deeds awaken their jealousy, that he would turn against them in the battle, and reconcile himself to Saul by so acceptable a service, as falling on their rear, whilst their front was engaged. Note, Just suspicions deserve consideration.

2. They come to Achish in a body, and present a remonstrance against permitting these Hebrews to go farther with them. Achish urges the experience he had of David's fidelity, and suggests the quarrel between Saul and him, as what would make him firm in their interests: but they insist on his immediate dismission, as a fellow in no wise to be trusted; and Achish is forced to comply. Note, That which is meant for our disgrace, proves often in the issue to be our mercy.

6. ¶ Then Achish called David, and said unto him, Surely, as the LORD liveth, thou hast been upright, and [g] thy going out, and thy coming in with me in the host, is good in my sight: for I have not found evil in thee, since the day of thy coming unto me unto this day: nevertheless, † the lords favour thee not. 7. Wherefore now return, and go in peace, that thou ‡ displease not the lords of the Philistines. 8. ¶ And David said unto Achish, But what have I done? and what hast thou found in thy servant, so long as I have been § with thee unto this day, that I may not go fight against the enemies of my lord the king? 9. And Achish answered and said to David, I know that thou art good in my sight as an angel of God: notwithstanding the princes of the Philistines have said, He shall not go up with us to the battle. 10. Wherefore now rise up early in the morning, with thy master's servants that are come with thee: and as soon as ye be up early in the morning, and have light, depart. 11. [h] So David and his men rose up early to depart in the morning, to return unto the land of the Philistines, and the Philistines went up to Jezreel.

v. 6—11. Achish being but one against many, though reluctantly, is constrained to consent.

1. He sends for David, and, to soften the disgrace which seems to be put on him, and to make apology for his dismission, professes the confidence he reposed in him; solemnly declares his unexceptionable conduct; but the lords of the Philistines favour him not, have taken up suspicions, and, as he would not displease them, he begs him to retire in peace to Ziklag. Note, (1.) When we bring an unkind message, we should seek not to make it more unkind by the delivery. (2.) It is a good sign to have even the Philistines witnesses for our uprightness.

2. David receives, no doubt, with joy the news, but thinks it prudent to dissemble, pretends zeal to fight for Achish against his enemies, and seems to resent the suspicions cast upon him. Note, Compliments paid to the great, are often lies in disguise; and many a man chuses rather thus to dissemble before God, than appear unmannerly.

3. Achish is sorry that his lords are peremptory; repeats his high opinion of David's deserts, even as an angel of the Lord; yet urges his instant obedience before the morning broke, lest the Philistines by his delay should be confirmed in their suspicions, and perhaps be induced to fall upon him. David therefore with his men hastens home, and we shall see in the next chapter how much he was wanted, and how providential his return.

CHAP. XXX.

We have here, 1. The desolate condition in which David found Ziklag on his return; his and the people's distress thereupon, ver. 1—6. 2. What course he took to recover what he had lost. He enquired of God, ver. 7, 8. pursued the enemy, ver. 9, 10. gained intelligence from a straggler, ver. 11—15. attacked and routed them, ver. 16, 17. and recovered all that they had carried off, ver. 18—20. 3. What method he observed in the distribution of the spoil, ver. 21—31.

1. AND it came to pass when David and his men were come to Ziklag on the third day, that [a] the Amalekites had invaded the south, and Ziklag, and smitten Ziklag, and burnt it with fire: 2. And had taken the women captives, that were therein: [b] they slew not any, either great or small, but carried them away, and went on their way. 3. ¶ So David and his men came to the city, and behold [c] it was burnt with fire, and their wives, and their sons, and their daughters were taken captives. 4. Then David, and the people that were with him, lift up their voice and wept, until they had no more power to weep. 5. And David's two wives were taken captives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite. 6. And David was greatly distressed; for [d] the people spake of stoning him, because the soul of all the people was grieved, every man for his sons, and for his daughters: but [e] David encouraged himself in the LORD his God.

v. 1—6. Little thought David and his men, whilst they were marching in the camp of the Philistines, what ravages were committed at home by their enemies.

1. The Amalekites in their absence, having probably intelligence of it, fall upon the defenceless city, plunder and burn it, reserving all the persons alive; not out of pity, it is to be feared, but covetousness, as their slavery would profit them more than their death, but in truth withheld secretly by God. Note, God can make the sins of men subserve his designs of mercy.

2. Great was the distress and consternation of David and his men at this unexpected calamity. Three days they had spent in marching home, and when they hoped to rest their weary limbs, lo! their houses are burnt, and their families gone, uncertain whether captives or murdered, and David's wives among the rest. Note, (1.) We know not, when we go from home, what scenes of mourning may meet us on our return. (2.) The more we promise ourselves comfort in the creature, the bitterer will be our disappointment.

3. Whilst tears would flow, they wept, and wearied themselves with sorrow; and when these fountains were dry, in distress and despair the men turned their complaints on David, and threatned to stone him as the author of their calamity, by leading them from their home. Thus was his faith severely exercised, and sorrow added to sorrow. Note, (1.) Suffering is apt to make us impatient; and though we dare not fly in the face of God, we are ready to lay hands on those who have been, though innocently, instruments of bringing us into the trouble. (2.) Great saints become so by great sufferings. Grace, like the palm-tree, crescit sub pondere, grows under trials.

4. David, under all his afflictions, encouraged himself in God. Though he shared deeper than any man in the general loss, and in this unreasonable anger of theirs bore a grief peculiarly his own, he thought yet upon God, his power, love, and faithfulness, and still hoped in his mercy. This was his support in the time of his trouble; nor was he disappointed of his hope; for no man ever trusted God, and was ashamed. Note, (1.) Our circumstances can never be so bad, nor our case so deplorable, but there is ground for faith in the promises of God. (2.) To encourage our souls in him, is the surest way to escape from our troubles.

And David [f] enquired at the LORD, ſaying, Shall I purſue after this troop? ſhall I overtake them? And he anſwered him, Purſue; for thou ſhalt ſurely overtake them, and without fail recover all. 9. So David went, he and the ſix hundred men that were with him, and came to the brook Beſor, where thoſe that were left behind, ſtayed. 10. But David purſued, he and four hundred men; (for two hundred abode behind, which were ſo faint, that they could not go over the brook Beſor). 11. ¶ And [g] they found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David, and gave him bread, and he did eat, and they made him drink water. 12. And they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two cluſters of raiſins: and when he had eaten, [h] his ſpirit came again to him: for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water three days and three nights. 13. And David ſaid unto him, To whom belongeſt thou? and whence art thou? And he ſaid, I am a young man of Egypt, ſervant to an Amalekite, and my maſter left me, [i] becauſe three days agone I fell ſick. 14. We made an invaſion upon the ſouth of the Cherethites, and upon the coaſt which belongeth to Judah, and upon the ſouth of Caleb, and we burnt Ziklag with fire. 15. And David ſaid to him, Canſt thou bring me down to this company? And he ſaid, Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt neither kill me, nor deliver me into the hands of my maſter, and I will bring thee down to this company. 16. ¶ And when he had brought him down, behold, they were ſpread abroad upon all the earth, [k] eating, and drinking, and dancing, becauſe of all the great ſpoil that they had taken out of the land of the Philiſtines, and out of the land of Judah. 17. And David ſmote them from the twilight, even unto the evening of the next day: and there eſcaped not a man of them, ſave four hundred young men, which rode upon camels, and fled. 18. And David recovered all that the Amalekites had carried away: and David reſcued his two wives. 19. And there was nothing lacking to them, neither ſmall nor great, neither ſons nor daughters, neither ſpoil nor any thing that they had taken to them: David recovered all. 20. And David took all the flocks, and the herds, which they drave before thoſe other cattle, and ſaid, [m] This is David's ſpoil.

v. 7—20. David, having encouraged himſelf in God, addreſſes himſelf to him for direction.

1. He orders Abiathar to bring the ephod, and enquire whether he ſhould go down after theſe ſpoilers, and whether he ſhould overtake them, and receives a command to go, and an aſſurance of ſucceſs. Had he conſulted God before his expedition with the Philiſtines, perhaps all his trouble might have been prevented. It is good to be made wiſe by paſt overſights.

2. Encouraged by this anſwer from God, he immediately purſues with his ſix hundred men, who, though fatigued with their march, and more with their trouble, follow hard after the track of theſe ſpoilers. Two hundred at the brook Beſor were quite faint and diſabled; theſe therefore he is compelled to leave there to recover themſelves, whilſt he continues the purſuit with the remainder, truſting not on the arm of fleſh, but on the promiſe of God. Note, (1.) Diſcouraging providences will but exalt the faith of the determined ſoul. (2.) They who ſtill preſs forward, will infallibly ſeize the prize. (3.) The Son of David conſiders our infirmities, and pities our weakneſs.

3. God brings him a guide: a wretched Egyptian lies in their way, ſunk under the complicated preſſures of ſickneſs and want, ſpeechleſs, and ready to expire. The men bring him to David, and compaſſion moves him to relieve ſo miſerable an object. The refreſhment they gave him ſoon brought him to his ſenſes, and enabled him to give an account of himſelf, and who he belonged to. He was an Egyptian, ſervant to an Amalekite, as indeed his treatment ſhewed. Being overtaken with ſickneſs, got in his hard ſervice, his inhuman maſter had deſerted him, and left him barbarouſly to periſh for want. He gives him an account of their expedition, their ravages on the ſouth of Judah, and their capture of Ziklag; and, at David's requeſt, having by an oath bound him not to deliver him up to his dreaded maſter, offers to bring him down to the place where theſe plunderers were. Note, (1.) Great events often depend on very unexpected incidents. (2.) No man ſo mean and deſpicable, as to be beneath our notice: we know not how much good or evil the weakeſt inſtruments may do us. (3.) He is a cruel and an Amalekite maſter, that, when his poor ſervants are ſick, diſmiſſes them haſtily, and leaves them to ſhift for themſelves, when they are ſo diſabled and helpleſs. (4.) Nothing is ever loſt by compaſſion: charity uſually brings its own reward.

4. The Amalekites are ſurprized in the midſt of their feaſt. Triumphing in their ſucceſs, and concluding themſelves ſafe from all fear of being purſued, military order was neglected; all were buſy in eating, drinking, and dancing, ſpending the evening in mirth and jollity, when David and his men ſuddenly fall upon them, and without reſiſtance put them to the ſword. The purſuit continued till the evening of the next day, and not a man eſcaped, but four hundred young men, who owed their preſervation to the ſwiftneſs of the camels, or dromedaries, on which they rode. All the ſpoil of their camp fell into the victors hands: they recovered not only all they had loſt, particularly David's wives are mentioned, as the deareſt and neareſt to his heart, but alſo the flocks and herds of the Amalekites, which in triumph were driven home before them, as David's ſpoil. Note, (1.) Security is the deſtruction of the ſinner. (2.) Death unſeen is hovering over many a ſoul, that to dance and ſong devotes the day, and little thinks, in the midſt of pleaſure's throng, how near he ſtands on the brink of never-ending pain. (3.) In proſperity they will be careſſed and honoured, who in diſtreſs, like David, were inſulted. (4.) The Son of David hath recovered out of the hands of ſin and Satan all that poor ſinners had loſt, and enriched his faithful people with better ſpoils than theſe flocks and herds, even with treaſures which robbers can never ſteal, and manſions of glory, that are incorruptible, undefiled, and never fade away.

21. ¶ And David came to the two hundred men, which were ſo faint that they could not follow David, whom they had made alſo to abide at the brook Beſor: and they went forth to meet David, and to meet the people that were with him: and when David came near to the people, he ſaluted them. 22. Then anſwered all the wicked men, and men of Belial, of thoſe that went with David, and ſaid, [n] Becauſe they went not with us, we will not give them ought of the ſpoil that we have recovered, ſave to every man his wife and his children, that they may lead them away, and depart. 23. Then ſaid David, Ye ſhall not do ſo, my brethren, with that which [o] the LORD hath given us, who hath preſerved us, and delivered the company that came againſt us, into our hand. 24. For who will hearken unto you in this matter? but as his part is that goeth down to the battle, [p] ſo ſhall his part be that tarrieth by the ſtuff: they ſhall part alike. 25. And it was ſo from that day forward that he made it a ſtatute and an ordinance for Iſrael unto this day. 26. ¶ And when David came to Ziklag, [q] he ſent of the ſpoil unto the elders of Judah, even to his friends, (ſaying, Behold [r] a † preſent for you of the ſpoil of the enemies of the LORD). 27. To them which were in Beth-el, and to them which were in South-Ramoth, and to them which were in Jattir, 28. And to them which were in Aroer, and to them which were in Siphmoth, and to them which were in Eſhtemoa, 29. And to them which were in Rachal, and to them which were in the cities of the Jerahmeelites, and to them which were in the cities of the Kenites, 30. And to them which were in Hormah, and to them which were in Chor-aſhan, and to them which were in Athach, 31. And to them which were in Hebron, and to all the places where David himſelf and his men were wont to haunt.

v. 21—31. We have here David returning triumphant, and laden with ſpoil.

1. His wearied troops, who were left at the brook Bezor with their baggage, come to meet him, and congratulate his victory, and David receives them with great kindneſs and affection. Note, They who are willing, but weak, muſt not be upbraided with, but comforted under, their infirmities.

2. The ſame wicked men, who had talked ſo mutinouſly againſt their leader, now ſhew the ſame inhumanity and uncharitableneſs to their brethren; would greedily rob them, not only of part of the ſpoils, but of all that was their own, except their wives and children, which, left thus ſtripped and deſtitute, would be but a burden to them. Note, (1.) The covetous heart is hardened againſt the ſufferings of the needy. (2.) Being in the beſt company, and under the beſt inſtructions, makes no change on the hearts of the men of Belial.

3. David rejects ſo unreaſonable a propoſal. It was highly ungrateful to God, whoſe hand alone had given them the victory. It was moſt injurious to their brethren, who not by choice, but neceſſity, were left behind, and then alſo employed in the needful ſervice of guarding the baggage. David therefore commands an equal diſtribution to be made between them all, and ordained it for a perpetual ſtatute in Iſrael, that they who tarried by the ſtuff, ſhould ſhare with thoſe who went into the battle; and hereunto they accquieſced, overcome by his perſuaſion, and overawed by his authority. Note, Reſolute firmneſs is needful in a commander to reſtrain factious ſpirits.

4. David generouſly diſtributes his own ſhare of the ſpoil among his friends in Judah, in gratitude for the favour and protection they ſhewed him during his haunts among them; in compenſation of the damage they might have ſuſtained by this irruption of the Amalekites; and in policy, to engage them more readily to eſpouſe his cauſe, when the day ſhould come, that the throne of Iſrael would be vacant. Note, (1.) Every gracious ſoul muſt be generous: He that gives a new heart, gives a liberal hand. (2.) They who have ſhewn us kindneſs, deſerve a recompence whenever God puts it in our power. (3.) A well-timed preſent is the beſt letter of recommendation. (4.) They who are diſpoſed to receive the Son of David for their king, will be enriched by his munificence, not merely with the gifts of grace in time, but with the riches of glory in eternity.

And the battle went ſore againſt Saul, and [c] the archers hit him, and he was ſore wounded of the archers. 4. [d] Then ſaid Saul unto his armour-bearer, Draw thy ſword, and thruſt me through therewith, leſt theſe uncircumciſed come and thruſt me through, and ‡ abuſe me. v. 1—7. At laſt Saul's day is come, when his evil is had in remembrance before God, and his judgment overtakes him.

1. The Philiſtines bravely fall upon the Iſraelites, who, on the firſt ſhock, are broken, and take to flight. Multitudes fall under the devouring ſword, and the moſt valiant, who refuſe to fly, expoſe themſelves only to more certain ruin. Among theſe, it ſeems, were the brave ſons of Saul, and the amiable Jonathan at their head, who ſeeing the battle preſs hard on them, and their father in danger, ſeek to ſtay by their bravery the fury of the conquerors: but being unable to ſuſtain the ſhock, they fall nobly in the bed of honour. A heavy judgment on Saul's houſe, but which made David's way to the throne much eaſier, theſe competitors being removed. Note, The righteous here are involved in ruin with the wicked, but the day of final recompenſe ſhall vindicate all God's diſpenſations.

2. Saul himſelf at laſt is overtaken, and wounded with an arrow, ſhot perhaps at a venture, but directed by God to this mark. Unable to fight or fly, yet too proud to bear the thoughts of captivity, or dreading to fall by the ſword of a Philiſtine, who might torture or inſult him, he bids his armour-bearer diſpatch him; but reſpect for his maſter, as the Lord's anointed, or fear leſt he might be called to account for it, withheld him; ſo that Saul, reſolved to die, put the point of his own ſword to his breaſt, and fell upon it, cloſing a wicked, miſerable life, with a more wicked and miſerable death. Note, (1.) It is pride makes a man a ſelf-murderer. (2.) They make a dreadful exchange, who think to eſcape the miſeries of life, by plunging into the horrors of eternal death.

3. His armour-bearer ſeeing his king fall, would not ſurvive him; and though he refuſed to ſlay Saul, raſhly murders himſelf. If this, as hath been conjectured, was Doeg, we ſee the juſt judgment of God upon him; the ſword that was bathed in the blood of the prieſts at Nob, now was ſheathed in his own heart.

4. The Philiſtines on this victory ſeized the cities near the field of battle, which the terrified inhabitants had deſerted, and dwelt in them, till diſpoſſeſſed by David; and thus ſmarted the land for their choice of their king, and their evil ways during his reign, according to the threatning denounced by Samuel, Ye ſhall be conſumed, both you and your king.

8. And it came to paſs on the morrow, when the Philiſtines came to ſtrip the ſlain, that they found Saul and his three ſons fallen in mount Gilboa. 9. And they cut off his head, and ſtripped off his armour, and ſent into the land of the Philiſtines round about, [h] to publiſh it in the houſe of their idols, and among the people. 10. And [i] they put his armour in the houſe of Aſhtaroth: and [k] they faſtned his body to the wall of Beth-ſhan. 11. ¶ And [l] when the inhabitants of Jabeſh-gilead heard of that which the Philiſtines had done to Saul: 12. All the valiant men aroſe, and went all night, and took the body of Saul, and the bodies of his ſons from the wall of Beth-ſhan, and came to Jabeſh, and [m] burnt them there. 13. And they took their bones, and buried them under a tree at Jabeſh, and [n] faſted ſeven days.

v. 8—13. That day the purſuit laſted, and Hebrew blood dyed the clods of the valley. On the morrow they return to ſtrip the ſlain, and to their joy find their enemy Saul a breathleſs corpſe, and his ſons fallen with him. Hereupon we have,

1. The inſult offered to the dead body of Saul. They cut off his head, which (See 1 Chron. x. 10.) they ſtuck up as a trophy of their victory in the houſe of their god Dagon, and placed his armour in the temple of Aſhtaroth, and took the trunk, and the bodies of his ſons, and ignominiouſly faſtened them with nails to the wall of Beth-ſhan, or hung them on gibbets upon the wall. Thus the inſult Saul by ſelf-murder wiſhed to avoid, overtook him.

2. They proclaimed their victory through the land, and ſet apart a day of ſolemn thankſgiving to praiſe their idols, to whom they aſcribed their ſucceſs. Note, Blind idolaters often ſhew more gratitude to, and dependance upon, ſtocks and ſtones, than they who pretend to worſhip the true God, expreſs to the living Jehovah; therefore in the day of judgment theſe ſhall riſe up to condemn them.

3. The men of Jabeſh-gilead, fired at the inſult ſhewn the royal corpſe, as well as mindful of their particular obligations to Saul, boldly adventure to croſs Jordan, and by night take down, unperceived, the bodies from the wall of Beth-ſhan; and carrying them home, with great ſolemnity burn either the fleſh which began to putrify, or ſweet odours over them; then take up the bones and aſhes, and bury them under an oak, and keep a ſeven days mournful faſt, every day until evening, for the death of their ſovereign, and the deſolations of their country. Thus cloſes this firſt book, where Iſrael's ſun ſets in blood, and darkneſs and deſpair ſeem to cover the land: but we ſhall find the morning break upon us in the opening of the next volume, and the bright ſun of David, the glorious type of Jeſus, the Sun of Righteouſneſs, ariſing to chear the deſolate valleys of Judah, and ſhining forth in his meridian ſplendor, whilſt all their enemies are led captive at his chariot wheels.

OR, A
Upon the SECOND BOOK of SAMUEL.

This Book is the hiſtory of the reign of king David. We had in the foregoing Book an account of his deſignation to the government and his ſtruggles with Saul, which ended at length in the death of his perſecutor: This opens with his acceſſion to the throne, and is entirely taken up with the affairs of the government during the forty years he reigned. It gives us an account of his triumphs and his troubles. 1. His triumphs over the houſe of Saul, chap. i—iv. Over the Jebuſites and Philiſtines, chap. v. In the bringing up of the ark, chap. vi, and vii. Over the neighbouring nations that oppoſed him, chap. viii—x. And ſo far the hiſtory is agreeable to what we might expect from David's character, and the choice made of him. But this bright cloud has a dark ſide. 2. We have his troubles, the cauſe of them, his ſin in the matter of Uriah, chap. xi, and xii. The troubles themſelves from the ſin of Amnon, chap. xiii. The rebellion of Abſalom, chap. xiv—xix. and of Sheba, chap. xx. And the plague in Iſrael for his numbring the people, chap. xxiv. beſides the famine for the Gibeonites, chap. xxi. His ſong we have, chap. xxii, and his words and worthies, chap. xxiii. Many things in this hiſtory are very inſtructive; but the hero, who is the ſubject of it, though in many inſtances he appears great, and good, and the favourite of heaven, yet it muſt be confeſſed his honour ſhines brighter in his Pſalms than in his Annals.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter we have, 1. Tidings brought David of the death of Saul and Jonathan, ver. 1—10. 2. David's ſorrowful reſentment of theſe tidings, ver. 11—12. 3. Juſtice done upon the meſſenger who had helped to ſlay Saul, ver. 13—16. 4. An elegy which David penned upon this occaſion, ver. 17—27.

1. NOW it came to paſs after the death of Saul, when David was returned from [a] the ſlaughter of the Amalekites, and David had abode two days in Ziklag: 2. It came even to paſs on the third day, that behold, a man came out of the camp from Saul, [b] with his clothes rent, and earth upon his head: and ſo it was, when he came to David, that he fell to the earth, and did obeiſance. 3. And David ſaid unto him, From whence cameſt thou? And he ſaid unto him, Out of the camp of Iſrael am I eſcaped. 4. And David ſaid unto him, How went the matter? I pray thee tell me. And he anſwered, That the people are fled from the battle, and many of the people alſo are fallen and dead, and Saul and Jonathan his ſon are dead alſo. 5. And David ſaid unto the young man that told him, [c] How knoweſt thou that Saul and Jonathan his ſon be dead? 6. And the young man that told him, ſaid, † As I happened by chance upon mount Gilboa, behold, Saul leaned upon his ſpear: and lo, the chariots and horſemen followed hard after him. 7. And when he looked behind him, he ſaw me, and called unto me: and I anſwered, Here am I. 8. And he ſaid unto me, Who art thou? and I anſwered him, I am an Amalekite. 9. He ſaid unto me again, Stand, I pray thee, upon me, and ſlay me: for ‡ anguiſh is come upon me, becauſe my life is yet whole in me. 10. So [c] I ſtood upon him, and ſlew him, becauſe I was ſure that he could not live after that he was fallen: and I took the crown that was upon his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm, and have brought them hither unto my lord.

v. 1—10. David had now ſet himſelf to repair the deſolations of Ziklag, and this was the third day after his return. When lo! a man arrives, whoſe rent cloaths, and the earth upon his head, declare him the meſſenger of evil. On David's enquiry whence he came, we have,

1. His relation of the rout of Iſrael before the Philiſtines, with great ſlaughter in the purſuit; and, among the reſt, Saul and Jonathan are fallen, and himſelf, with difficulty, eſcaped to bring the news.

2. David enquires particularly about the death of Saul and Jonathan, for whom he was moſt concerned; and the meſſenger gives a very explicit account of Saul, waving to ſpeak of Jonathan, becauſe he knew David's affection to him, and his deſign was to recommend himſelf, by being the firſt to bring him notice of the death of his enemy. Among the fugitives (being a ſlave probably to ſome Iſraelite) he happened to paſs by the ſpot where Saul was attempting to run himſelf through; but whether his heart failed, or through the loſs of blood exhauſted, or unable to pierce his coat of mail, he called to him, enquired his country, and when he found he was not a Philiſtine, begged him to diſpatch him immediately, as in anguiſh through his wounds, or the apprehenſion of falling into the hands of the Philiſtines; with his requeſt he complied, drew his ſword and thruſt him through, it being impoſſible he ſhould live, as he muſt have fallen in the purſuit, or would have given himſelf another thruſt. The generality of commentators conceive this was a made ſtory, purely to recommend himſelf, as he thought, to David, and that though he was a ſpectator, he boaſted of that as meritorious, in which he had no hand; but the whole of what he reports may be reconciled very well with the account given before. However, the fact he reported of Saul's death was unqueſtionably true, as he produces the crown which was on his head, and the bracelet from his arm, and preſents them to David, as now his ſucceſſor in the kingdom. Note, (1.) Anguiſh often comes on departing ſinners, and ſome foretaſtes of eternal torments ſeize them on this ſide the grave. (2.) Men now ſometimes think to fly to death, as a relief; but in that miſerable world whither they go, they ſhall deſire to die, and death ſhall flee from them. (3.) The eminence we enjoy, like the crown on Saul's head, makes us but the fairer mark for the arrow of envy. (4.) He who refuſed to execute judgment on the Amalekites, and flew on their forbidden ſpoil, himſelf probably loſes his life, and is deprived of the richeſt enſigns of royalty, by the hand of an Amalekite. So juſt doth God appear in his judgments.

11. Then David took hold on his clothes, and [f] rent them, and likewiſe all the men that were with him. 12. And they mourned and wept, and faſted until even, [g] for Saul and for Jonathan his ſon, and [h] for the people of the LORD, and for the houſe of Iſrael; becauſe they were fallen by the ſword. 13. ¶ And David ſaid unto the young man that told him, Whence art thou? And he anſwered, I am the ſon of a ſtranger, an Amalekite. 14. And David ſaid unto him, [i] How waſt thou not afraid to ſtretch forth thine hand, to deſtroy the LORD's anointed? 15. And David called one of the young men, and ſaid, Go near, and fall upon him. And he ſmote him that he died. 16. And David ſaid unto him, [k] Thy blood be upon thy head: [l] for thy mouth hath teſtified againſt thee, ſaying, I have ſlain the LORD's anointed.

v. 11—16. Far other than the Amelekite expected, was David's reception of theſe tidings.

1. In the agony of ſorrow he rent his cloaths, and all that were with him followed his example; the day is ſpent in bitter mourning, and they obſerve a ſolemn faſt until evening. He mourned for Jonathan his friend, but there was hope in his death; he mourned more bitterly for Saul his enemy, where none appeared, and eſpecially over the deſolations of Iſrael, fallen by the ſword of the Philiſtines. Note, (1.) His country's ſufferings are a grief to the true patriot's heart. (2.) The loſs of ſuch whom we hope to meet again in glory, is much more tolerable than of thoſe concerning whom we have no hope. (3.) As a good man loves his enemy whilſt alive, he is ſo far from rejoicing at his fall, that he weeps over his grave.

2. He commands immediate execution on the meſſenger; he hoped to have met the beſt preferment, but he ſuffers the juſt reward of his deeds; not only as a devoted Amalekite, but as daring to ſtretch forth his hand againſt the ſacred majeſty of Iſrael's king. Thus would David expreſs his own deteſtation of regicide, teſtify the ſincerity of his grief, and recommend himſelf to the regard of the people.

17. ¶ And David lamented with this lamentation over Saul, and over Jonathan his ſon: 18. (Alſo [m] he bad them teach the children of Judah the uſe of the bow: behold, it is written [n] in the book of Jaſher) 19. [o] The beauty of Iſrael is ſlain upon thy high places: [p] how are the mighty fallen! 20. v. 17—27. In ſong diſtinguiſhed, as in battle great, Iſrael's ſweet ſinger tunes to mournful notes his harp; and whilſt he weeps over the mighty fallen, in elegiac ſtrains of plaintive woe, calls forth the ſympathetic tear. We have,

1. The elegy. Whatever was great, noble, and amiable in Saul is dwelt upon; and Jonathan's lovely name mentioned with tender diſtreſs. In their lives they were in love united, in death nothing could divide them. Shocked that in Gath ſuch tidings ſhould be told, and that uncircumciſed Philiſtines ſhould triumph over the mighty fallen, he beautifully bids fame be ſilent, and, poetically to deſcribe his ſenſe of the calamity, wiſhes the unhappy mountains of Gilboa for ever in barrenneſs, to bewail the blood that was ſhed upon them. The daughters of Iſrael, whom Saul had arrayed in ſcarlet and gold, the ſpoils of conquered enemies, he calls to mourn with him; and cloſes with the warm remembrance of Jonathan's uncommon love, and a fine apoſtrophe, the third time repeated, over the loſs Iſrael ſuſtained in theſe mighty heroes fallen, and the weapons of war periſhed. Note, (1.) Death ſhould wipe out the remembrance of paſt injuries of thoſe who are gone; let us ſpeak nothing, except in their commendation. (2.) There is a friendſhip ſome great ſouls are capable of, that exceeds all other paſſions. (3.) The triumphing of the wicked, over the cauſe of God, is grievous to the faithful.

2. The misfortune David lamented he ſought to prevent, by enjoining the children of Judah the uſe of the bow, in which the Philiſtines ſeem now to have excelled them, fas eſt & ab hoſte doceri. And this his ordinance was inſerted in the book of Jaſher, for future generations. This book ſeems to have been a public regiſter, wherein every memorable affair was faithfully recorded.

v. 1—7. David's army had been much reinforced, as appears 1 Chron. xii. yet he doth not immediately ſeize the throne, or march to compel allegiance to himſelf, though their anointed ſovereign; but, readily received, and to what place? God anſwers him, Go; and directs him to Hebron, which ſeems to have been then the metropolis. It was a city of refuge, and chiefly inhabited by the prieſts. Note, They who wait upon God for direction, will be led in the right way to the kingdom.

2. David immediately obeys, and takes his wives along with him, and his men of war and their houſholds; they had been his companions in tribulation, it is but right and honourable to take them to ſhare in his advancement. Note, They who follow Chriſt under the croſs, ſhall reign with him in the day of his appearing and glory.

3. He meets with a very welcome reception. The men of Judah recognized the divine deſignation, and anointed him their king; not obtruding him upon the other tribes, but expecting, according to the divine determination, they would quickly follow ſo good an example. Thus, ſtep by ſtep, he advances to the throne of Iſrael. Note, They who would have Chriſt to reign over them, muſt chuſe him for their king; not but that it is of grace they are inclined, and made thus a willing people.

4. On enquiry probably after Saul's corpſe and Jonathan's, for which he purpoſed an honourable interment, he is informed of the generous behaviour of the men of Jabeſh-gilead. As a token how kindly he took this noble action of theirs, he ſends them a hearty commendation, prays the Lord to bleſs them for their kindneſs, and aſſures them he will take occaſion to requite them. Though Saul is dead, who defended them, David will be their friend, who is anointed in his ſtead; therefore they need not fear any thing from the Philiſtines, who might reſent their deed; he bids them be ſtrong and valiant, and as he hoped they would receive him as their king, they might depend upon his protection. Note, (1.) A kindneſs ſhewn to our friends is an obligation conferred on ourſelves. (2.) It is not enough to beſtow our good wiſhes, but we muſt recompenſe, as we are able, thoſe who have well deſerved. (3.) To have thoſe for our friends, whoſe fidelity to others hath been tried, is a valuable acquiſition.

8. ¶ But Abner the ſon of Ner, captain of Saul's hoſt, took † Iſh-boſheth the ſon of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanaim. 9. And he made him king over Gilead, and over the Aſhurites, and over Jezreel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Iſrael. 10. Iſh-boſheth Saul's ſon was forty years old when he began to reign over Iſrael, and reigned two years: but the houſe of Judah followed David. 11. (And the ‡ time that David was king in Hebron over the houſe of Judah, was ſeven years and ſix months.) 12. ¶ And Abner the ſon of Ner, and the ſervants of Iſh-boſheth the ſon of Saul, [h] went out from Mahanaim to Gibeon. 13. And Joab the ſon of Zeruiah, and the ſervants of David went out, and met together by the pool of Gibeon: and they ſat down, the one on the one ſide of the pool, and the other on the other ſide of the pool. 14. And Abner ſaid to Joab, Let the young men now ariſe, and [i] play before us: and Joab ſaid, Let them ariſe. 15. Then there aroſe and went over by number twelve of Benjamin, which pertained to Iſh-boſheth the ſon of Saul, and twelve of the ſervants of David. 16. And they caught every one his fellow by the head, and thruſt his ſword into his fellow's ſide: ſo they fell down together: wherefore that place was called ‖ Helkath-hazzurim, which is in Gibeon. 17. And there was a very ſore battle that day: and Abner was beaten, and the men of Iſrael, before the ſervants of David.

v. 8—17. The ambition of Abner, who was general to Saul, and zeal for his family, prevails upon him to ſet up Iſh-boſheth, the only ſurviving legitimate ſon of Saul, as king; and whilſt David, in dependance upon God's promiſes, remained quiet at Hebron, Abner, by his aſſiduity, gained over the land of Gilead beyond Jordan firſt, and then all the tribes but Judah, to acknowledge Iſh-boſheth. And thus began that competition, which, after two years peace and five of war, terminated in the death of Iſh-boſheth, and the entire ſubmiſſion of all the tribes to David. Note, Before we come to the throne our faith will be tried, and we muſt expect war in the gates.

1. Abner begins the war, which, as it ſeems, David would never have entered into, though his right to the crown was ſo evident, unleſs he had been obliged; ſo deſirous was he rather to preſerve the lives of thoſe who ſhould be his future ſubjects, than treat them now as rebels againſt his crown. The tribes of Iſrael collect their army in Mahanaim, and march to Gibeon; Joab, David's general, meets them there. Note, If when we ſpeak for peace others make themſelves ready for battle, then we muſt of neceſſity defend ourſelves.

2. Abner ſeeing Joab, probably, backward to engage, David being unwilling to ſhed Iſraelitiſh blood, challenges him to produce twelve men of Judah, againſt twelve of his Iſraelites, and play before them, that is, fight ſo many duels; for, to a fierce warrior, blood and wounds are ſport and paſtime. Joab, like too many, had entertained thoſe falſe notions of honour, that he dared not refuſe the challenge; the men are ſelected, matched, enter the liſts, and engage: each inſtantly ſeizes his fellow, plunges his ſword into the other's ſide, and all of them fall together; ſo laviſh are generals often of the lives of their brave ſoldiers, to gratify their caprice. The place, from this occurrence, is called, The Field of Rocks, from the brave men, hardy and firm as a rock, who fell there. Note, (1.) They buy honour dear that purchaſe it at the expence of their brother's blood. (2.) Falſe notions of honour are among the accurſed wiles Satan employs for the deſtruction both of men's bodies and ſouls.

3. The general battle hereupon enſues, and Abner and his forces are routed. They who ſtir up ſtrife thus, often meddle to their hurt, and 'tis juſt in God to puniſh the aggreſſor, and cover thoſe with ſhame who ſeek to advance themſelves upon their neighbour's ruin.

18. ¶ And there were [k] three ſons of Zeruiah there, Joab, and Abiſhai, and Aſahel: and Aſahel was [l] as light of foot as † a wild roe. 19. And Aſahel purſued after Abner, and in going he turned not to the right hand, nor to the left [m] from following Abner. 20. Then Abner looked behind him, and ſaid, Art thou Aſahel? And he anſwered, I am. 21. And Abner ſaid to him, Turn thee aſide to thy right hand, or to thy left, and lay thee hold on one of the young men, and take thee his ‡ armour. But Aſahel would not turn aſide from following of him. 22. And Abner ſaid again to Aſahel, Turn thee aſide from following me: wherefore ſhould I ſmite thee to the ground? how then ſhould I hold up my face to Joab thy brother? 23. Howbeit, he refuſed to turn aſide: wherefore Abner with the hinder end of the ſpear ſmote him [n] under the fifth rib, that the ſpear came out behind him; and he fell down there, and died in the ſame place: and it came to paſs, that as many as came to the place where Aſahel fell down and died, ſtood ſtill. 24. Joab alſo and Abiſhai purſued after Abner: and the ſun went down when they were come to the hill of Ammah that lieth before Giah, by the way of the wilderneſs of Gibeon.

v. 18—24. Abner's forces being routed, he himſelf is forced to fly for his life, but is cloſe purſued by Joab's brother Aſahel, whoſe ſwiftneſs was as the mountain roe; having ſingled him out, he ſticks cloſe to him, ambitious to make him his priſoner, and hoping thus to end the war, of which Abner was the chief ſupport. It was nobly aimed, but he was an unequal match, and therefore purſued only his ruin. Note, They who aim too high, ſtand on a precipice which makes their fall the deeper. Abner ſaw the young man's ambition, and kindly admoniſhes him of his danger, deſiring him to ſeize ſome other prey, which he was equal to; but, fired with ambition, he continues the purſuit, and perhaps imputes to timidity the friendly caution. Once more he begs him not to put him on the unwilling neceſſity of hurting him; for how ſhould he then look his brother in the face, whom, though an enemy, he reſpected, or probably apprehended that he might need his favour if David ſucceeded, as his conſcience now miſgave. The remonſtrance was vain, Aſahel perſiſts, and rues his folly. Abner, as he advanced, by a back thruſt ſmote him under the fifth rib, a mortal blow, and he fell dead to the earth. This gave Abner ſome breathing; the people who came to the place where Aſahel lay, halted till Joab and Abiſhai came up, who urged on the purſuit, and had well nigh overtaken him again, when night gave the vanquiſhed time to rally. Note, (1.) The qualifications we are proud of are commonly our ruin. (2.) When we are moſt eager in the purſuit of our worldly ſchemes, and ſeem ready to graſp the prize of happineſs, death, like Abner's ſpear, ſtops our career, and lays our big-ſwoln hopes and honour in the duſt.

25. ¶ And the children of Benjamin gathered themſelves together after Abner, and became one troop, and ſtood on the top of an hill. 26. Then Abner called to Joab and ſaid, Shall the ſword devour for ever? knoweſt thou not that [o] it will be bitterneſs in the latter end? how long ſhall it be then, ere thou bid the people return from [p] following their brethren? 27. And Joab ſaid, As God liveth, [q] unleſs thou hadſt ſpoken, ſurely then in the morning the people had gone up every one from following his brother. 28. So Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people ſtood ſtill, and purſued after Iſrael no more,

[r] neither fought they any more. 29. And Abner and his men walked all that night through the plain, and paſſed over Jordan, and went through all Bithron, and they came to Mahanaim. 30. And Joab returned from following Abner: and when he had gathered all the people together, there lacked of David's ſervants nineteen men, and Aſahel. 31. But the ſervants of David had ſmitten of Benjamin and of Abner's men, ſo that three hundred and threeſcore men died. 32. ¶ And they took up Aſahel, and buried him in the ſepulchre of his father, which was in Beth-lehem: and Joab and his men went all night, and they came to Hebron at break of day.

v. 25—32. The routed troops making a ſtand on the hill, perhaps being joined by ſome freſh forces from Benjamin,

1. Abner begs of Joab to ſtay the purſuit. He who made a ſport of the ſword in the morning, now dreads its devouring edge, and fain would have it return to the ſcabbard again; he pleads with Joab the near relation between the people, they were brethren, and if brother imbrued his hands in brother's blood, whoever gained the day the remembrance would be bitter. Sound reaſoning, but juſt a day too late; had he thus argued with himſelf before, the ſword had not been drawn. But we can ſee that right when the caſe is our own, which pride and prejudice prevented us from diſcerning when our neighbour's intereſt was at ſtake.

2. Joab nobly agrees to the requeſt; no doubt his orders were to be ſparing of blood, and therefore he lays the blame of what had been ſhed on Abner's obſtinacy, but for whoſe challenge they might have retired in the morning in peace. A retreat is now ſounded, and Abner ſuffered to depart to Mahanaim, whilſt Joab returns to his king at Hebron, with the loſs of but nineteen men, beſides Aſahel; nor was the loſs of Iſrael and Benjamin great. A former ſeverity, Judges xx. 44. had made the conquerors more tender of their brethren; and it was well known that David wiſhed as little blood might be ſhed as poſſible. Aſahel receives all military honours, and is buried in the ſepulchre of his fathers, the reſt on the field of battle. Thus terminates the firſt rencounter in favour of David, as a prelude to his greater future ſucceſſes. Note, (1.) 'Tis vain to ſtruggle againſt the Divine decree. (2.) Though the clods of the valley are made more honourable to ſome than others, and they are diſtinguiſhed in the grave, yet when they come again from thence, nobility will meet no diſtinction, and only the good be great in a reſurrection day.

v. 1—6. Abner was the life of the cauſe of Iſh-boſheth, and one defeat ended not the war. It was protracted ſeveral years; and though no more pitched battles were fought, yet David's houſe ſtrengthened daily by the acquiſition of new territories, and the deſertion of thoſe who were willing to caſt their weight into the deſcending ſcale. At laſt the houſe of Saul, daily weakened, began to be reduced to the utmoſt extremities. Note, The war between grace and corruption is long, to exerciſe the faith and patience of the ſaints, but the iſſue is ſure; and every day, like the houſe of Saul, corruption is weakening and grace ſtrengthening, till in death the ſhout of victory ſhall be heard, and ſin ſhall fall to riſe no more for ever. Beſides his ſucceſs in the war, David is bleſt with a conſiderable increaſe of his family, which ſtrengthened his cauſe; ſix ſons were born to him in Hebron, from ſo many wives. Polygamy had long received ſanction from prevailing cuſtom, but it is in itſelf evil; and no cuſtom or authority can conſecrate a bad practice. And could David indeed have foreſeen how his children would have proved, it would have abated the joy of their birth; for three of them at leaſt lived to give him many a bitter pang. So often do we find our ſcourges in that wherein we promiſed ourſelves the greateſt comfort.

v. 7—21. How precarious are worldly friendſhips, where one croſs word breeds diviſion and enmity.

1. Abner quarrels with Iſh-boſheth. Iſh-boſheth accuſes him of debauching a concubine of his father's, and probably was jealous of ſome ambitious deſign therein. Abner highly reſents the accuſation; whether guilty or not of the charge it does not appear; if innocent, the more provoked; if really culpable, yet conceiving his deſerts at Iſh-boſheth's hands merited better than to be thus upbraided; therefore, in great anger, he reproaches him with his ingratitude in this contemptible treatment of him, as if he were a dog; though he owed his crown to his bravery and zeal, and ſwears to be revenged, by transferring the kingdom to David, whom he acknowledges God deſigned for the throne: and therefore he acted againſt his own conſcience and better knowledge in his oppoſition to him. Iſh-boſheth knew Abner's influence, and was ſilent; for he feared the conſequence of his revolt, and wanted the ſpirit of a king either to war for himſelf abroad, or maintain reſpect and authority at home. Note, (1.) The ſins of wicked men are made ſubſervient to bring about God's determined purpoſes. (2.) Many fight againſt the convictions of their conſcience. (3.) Pride cannot bear rebuke, eſpecially from thoſe on whom obligations have been conferred. (4.) There is little dependance to be placed on thoſe whoſe zeal for our ſervice is at bottom but the gratification of their own ambition. (5.) A weak king will be a ſlave to his own ſervants.

2. Abner is as good as his word. He immediately ſends meſſengers to make his peace with David, and acknowledges his right to the kingdom : probably he was ſick of a ſinking cauſe, and reſolved to ſecure himſelf in time. David readily enters into the treaty ; but engages as a preliminary, to have his wife Michal reſtored ; either he ſtill retained affection for her, or he did it in policy to engage Saul's friends to his party. Abner puts him on making application to Iſh-boſheth, which ſucceeds, and Abner conducts her to David, much to the grief of Phaltiel her huſband, who followed her a conſiderable way in tears. Note, (1.) They who act only with a view to their own advantage, are yet made ſometimes uſeful inſtruments to ſerve the cauſe of God. (2.) Separation between huſband and wife ſhould be carefully avoided ; and if unhappy differences, or neceſſity of circumſtances, produce a temporary abſence, the firſt occaſion ſhould be embraced to heal the breach, and come together again in love and peace.

3. Abner, in purſuit of his agreement, ſecretly communes with the elders of Iſrael and the men of Benjamin, and now appears a zealous advocate for David, reminds them of what he had already done for his country, their own preference of him formerly, and the election of God, which ought to determine their choice. Note, (1.) When we have led others into a wrong courſe, 'tis our duty to labour to undeceive them. (2.) The ſame reaſons and arguments which we after acknowledge to be clear and obvious, have no weight with us, as long as pride and prejudice blind the eyes.

4. Abner having ſucceeded in his application, goes publickly to David to Hebron, with twenty men, perhaps a deputation from the tribes ; reports the conſent of the people, vaunts not a little his power and influence, and promiſes, as if it was his work, to make David king. David wiſely overlooks Abner's vanity, confirms their former treaty, nobly entertains him and his attendants, and diſmiſſes them in peace. Note, We may receive much good from the kind offices of a bad man.

22. ¶ And behold, the ſervants of David and Joab came from purſuing a troop, and brought in a great ſpoil with them : (but Abner was not with David in Hebron, for he had ſent him away, and he was gone in peace.) 23. When Joab, and all the hoſt that was with him, were come, they told Joab, ſaying, Abner the ſon of Ner came to the King, and he hath ſent him away, and he is gone in peace. 24. Then Joab came to the king, and ſaid, What haſt thou done? behold, Abner came unto thee, why is it that thou haſt ſent him away, and he is † quite gone? 25. Thou knoweſt Abner the ſon of Ner, that he came to deceive thee, and to know thy going out, and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doſt. 26. And when Joab was come out from David, he ſent meſſengers after Abner, which brought him again from the well of Sirah ; but David knew it not. 27. And when Abner was returned to Hebron, Joab took him [p] aſide in the gate, to ſpeak with him ‡ quietly : and ſmote him there [q] under the fifth rib, that he died, for the blood of Aſahel his brother. 28. ¶ And afterwards when David heard it, he ſaid, [r] I and my kingdom are guiltleſs before the LORD for ever, from the ‖ blood of Abner the ſon of Ner : 29. [s] Let it reſt on the head of Joab, and on all his father's houſe, and let there not fail from the houſe of Joab one [t] that hath an iſſue, or that is a leper, or that leaneth on a ſtaff, or that falleth on a ſword, or that lacketh bread. 30. So Joab and Abiſhai his brother ſlew Abner, becauſe [u] he had ſlain their brother Aſahel at Gibeon in the battle. 31. ¶ And David [x] ſaid to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, Rent your clothes, and gird you with ſackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himſelf followed the bier. 32. And they buried Abner in Hebron : and the king lift up his voice, and [y] wept at the grave of Abner ; and all the people wept. 33. And the king lamented over Abner, and ſaid, Died Abner as a fool dieth? 34. Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters : as a man falleth before § wicked men, ſo felleſt thou. And all the people wept again over him. 35. And when all the people came to cauſe David to eat meat, while it was yet day, David ſware, ſaying, So do God to me, and more alſo, if I taſte bread, or ought elſe, [z] till the ſun be down. 36. And all the people took notice of it, and it pleaſed them : as whatſoever the king did, pleaſed all the people. 37. For all the people, and all Iſrael underſtood that day, that it was not of the king to ſlay Abner the ſon of Ner. 38. And the king ſaid unto his ſervants, Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Iſrael? 39. And I am this day weak, though anointed king, and theſe men the ſons of Zeruiah be [a] too hard for me : [b] the LORD ſhall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedneſs.

v. 22—39. Joab and the army were now in the field, probably againſt the Philiſtines, when Abner came to commune with David at Hebron : but no ſooner was he returned from the expedition, than he is informed of what had paſſed, at which he is greatly enraged.

1. He inſolently expoſtulates with David on what he had done, and not only dares find fault with his conduct, but charges him with folly, to be impoſed upon thus by an enemy. The paſſion Joab appeared in, made it vain to reply, or David perhaps thought it prudent to ſmother his diſpleaſure ; or Joab left him in ſuch haſte, that he gave him no time for an anſwer. Note, They who have done us great ſervices, are too apt to think they have a right to be overbearing.

2. He diſpatched meſſengers immediately in David's name, unknown to him, to fetch Abner back again, under pretence of farther conference ; and taking him aſide when he came, as if to talk with him on the affair, he ſmote him ſecretly under the fifth rib ; inſtigated by revenge, and probably jealous, leſt Abner ſhould rival him in David's favour ; a baſe and cowardly aſſaſſination ! in open defiance of juſtice, and reflecting the greateſt diſhonour on his ſovereign. Abiſhai, Joab's brother, was privy to the deſign, and ſtood involved with him in the guilt of it.

3. David appears exceedingly ſhocked at the deed, and teſtifies every mark of unfeigned grief. He ſolemnly profeſſes his own innocence of the blood that was ſhed ; and though unable, through the great power which Joab and his brother had in the army, to execute them as their king, he, as a prophet, entails a curſe on their family, that ſhould deſcend in diſeaſes and calamities upon their children's children. He commands a ſolemn mourning, and bids Joab teſtify ſome remorſe for his crime : himſelf follows the bier, lamenting that ſo great a man was fallen, who might have lived to ſerve the cauſe of Iſrael ; he weeps at the grave, and bewails the unhappy fall of an innocent man, who died not as one who was a fool, a criminal under ſentence of public juſtice, but betrayed under the cloak of friendſhip, and villainouſly murdered by wicked men ; and the people joined with him, and until even a ſolemn faſt is kept, in token of their ſorrow not only for ſo great a prince, but alſo for the innocent blood wherewith the land was defiled. Note, (1.) The death of a great man, though a bad man, may be a real loſs to the public. (2.) Though innocent blood may long paſs unpuniſhed, yet it will cry, and vengeance, though ſlow, is ſure. (3.) The tribute of a tear is due to the memory of the deceaſed ; eſpecially of thoſe who die not as fools, as wicked men, but fall in the cauſe of God and truth.

4. The King's concern pleaſed the people. He fully exculpated himſelf from all conſent to the murder ; and in this, as in his general conduct, engaged daily the affection and regard of his ſubjects. Note, He is a king indeed that reigns in the hearts as well as over the perſons of his ſubjects.

5. David bitterly complains of his want of power to execute judgment on the offenders ; in the infant unſettled ſtate of his kingdom, it appeared to be dangerous to put ſuch great men to death ; but this ſeems to be David's weakneſs : if inſtead of turning them over to God's ſecret judgments, he had cauſed Joab and Abiſhai, as they deſerved, to be executed as criminals, his kingdom had not been the leſs ſecure. However, the ſword at laſt found out Joab, and Solomon, according to David's dying charge, executed upon him the ſentence he deſerved. Note, (1.) Kings are placed in difficult ſituations, where to ſpare or puniſh is attended with equal danger. (2.) Long impunity makes the ſinner confident ; but the ſword of God's juſtice ſhall ſmite him ſecretly, and he ſhall not go down to the grave in peace.

CHAP. IV.

Iſh-boſheth's death quickly follows Abner's, 1. His ſervants ſlay him, and bring his head to David, ver. 1—8. 2. David, inſtead of rewarding them, puts them to death for it, ver. 9—12.

1. AND when Saul's ſon heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, his hands [a] were feeble, and all the Iſraelites were troubled. 2. And Saul's ſon had two men that were captains of bands : the name of the one was Baanah, and the name of the other Rechab, the ſons of Rimmon a Beerothite, of the children of Benjamin : (for [b] Beeroth alſo was reckoned to Benjamin ; 3. And the Beerothites fled to Gittaim, and were ſojourners there until this day.) 4. And Jonathan, Saul's ſon, had a ſon [c] that was lame of his feet, and was five years old when the tidings came of Saul and Jonathan out of Jezreel, and his nurſe took him up and fled : and it came came to paſs as ſhe made haſte to flee, that he fell and became lame; and his name was † Mephiboſheth. 5. And the ſons of Rimmon the Beerothite, Rechab and Baanah, went, and came about the heat of the day to the houſe of Iſh-boſheth, who lay on a bed at noon. 6. And they came thither into the midſt of the houſe, [d] as though they would have fetched wheat; and they ſmote him under the fifth rib; and Rechab and Baanah his brother eſcaped. 7. For when they came into the houſe, [e] he lay on his bed in his bed-chamber, and they ſmote him and ſlew him, and beheaded him, and took his head, and gat them away through the plain all night. 8. And they brought the head of Iſh-boſheth unto David unto Hebron, and ſaid to the king, Behold, the head of Iſh-boſheth the ſon of Saul, thine enemy, [f] which ſought thy life; and the LORD hath avenged my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his ſeed.

[f] Prov. xxix. 10. Mat. ii. 20.

v. 1—8. Abner, the ſtay of Saul's family, being dead, Iſh-boſheth's affairs ſunk the faſter; and no other of Saul's houſe remained who could pretend to the crown, but a child of Jonathan's, who was lamed by a fall received when his nurſe fled with him on the Philiſtine's victory, fearing leaſt they would utterly cut off her maſter's houſe; and thus was, both by his age and misfortune, unfit to retrieve their ruined circumſtances. Note, (1.) The perils of tender infancy are great; to have eſcaped them unhurt is a ſingular mercy. (2.) When God will accompliſh his deſigns, every obſtacle in the way will be removed.

In this deſperate ſituation of Iſh-boſheth, inſtead of endeavouring to ſupport or comfort him,

1. Two of his ſervants conſpire his death; brothers not only in blood but iniquity; Benjamites, who, with their fellow-citizens, had deſerted Beeroth and fled to Gittaim, on the death of Saul, for fear of the Philiſtines. Pretending buſineſs in ſome of the magazines, which lay near the king's apartments, they took the opportunity, on his lying down at mid-day to repoſe himſelf during the heat, to break into his chamber, and murder him. Note, (1.) The higher a man's ſtation the more dangerous. (2.) Ere we cloſe our eyes let us ever think of our ſouls, as thoſe who know not whether they ever ſhall awake again. (3.) A ſinking cauſe is oftener haſtened to ruin by the treachery of pretended friends, than the attacks of avowed enemies.

2. The murderers fly, and take the head of Iſh-boſheth, as thinking it the moſt acceptable preſent they can bring to David; and pretending zeal not only for his ſervice, but for avenging God's quarrel againſt the houſe of Saul, would cloak their treachery and regicide under the pretext of religion. Note, Religion hath often been made a cloak for ambition; but God will ſtrip the hypocrite, and cover him with confuſion.

9. ¶ And David anſwered Rechab and Baanah his brother, the ſons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and ſaid unto them, As the LORD liveth, who hath redeemed my ſoul out of all adverſity, 10. [g] When one told me, ſaying, Behold, Saul is dead (thinking to have brought good tidings) I took hold of him, and ſlew him in Ziklag, [h] † who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings: 11. How much more, when wicked men have ſlain a righteous perſon, in his own houſe, upon his bed? [i] ſhall I not therefore now require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth? 12. And David commanded his young men, and [k] they ſlew them, and cut off their hands and their feet, and [l] hanged them up over the pool in Hebron: but they took the head of Iſh-boſheth, and buried it in the ſepulchre of Abner in Hebron.

v. 9—12. How greatly were theſe murderers diſappointed! They expected the higheſt honour, and meet with their juſt deſert, a halter. May ſuch rebellious deeds be thus ever recompenſed!

1. David paſſes ſentence upon them on their own evidence. They muſt have heard his former judgment on the Amalekite; and how much more guilty were they, who ſlew a righteous man, who had never injured them: and though he oppoſed David, he might do it in the perſuaſion of a better title to the crown. His blood cried for judgment from David as the chief magiſtrate, and the treachery of the aſſaſſination made the crime more unpardonable; therefore he ſolemnly ſwears they ſhall die, and commands immediate execution of the ſentence. Note, (1.) Charity will put the beſt conſtructions on the conduct even of thoſe who oppoſe us unjuſtly, and rather impute it to ignorance than deſign. (2.) They who bear the ſword of magiſtracy, muſt not bear it in vain.

2. Rechab and Baanah, the conſpirators, are immediately executed, and their hands and feet hung up, in terrorem, to deter others from ſuch rebellious deeds, as well as to expreſs David's abhorrence of ſuch practices, who wiſhed not to wade to a throne in blood, much leſs by baſe aſſaſſination. Iſh-boſheth's head is honourably buried with Abner in Hebron; and thus ended the dominion of the houſe of Saul. Note, Sooner or later every enemy muſt fall before the Son of David, and his cauſe prove triumphant over all the powers of earth and hell.

1. [a] THEN came all the tribes of Iſrael to David unto Hebron, and ſpake, ſaying, Behold, [b] we are thy bone and thy fleſh. 2. Alſo in time paſt, when Saul was king over us, thou waſt he [c] that leddeſt out, and broughteſt in Iſrael: and [d] the LORD ſaid to thee, [e] Thou ſhalt feed my people Iſrael, and thou ſhalt be a captain over Iſrael. 3. So all the elders of Iſrael came to the king to Hebron, and [f] king David made a league with them in Hebron [g] before the LORD: and [h] they anointed David king over Iſrael. 4. ¶ David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned [i] forty years. 5. In Hebron he reigned over Judah ſeven years and ſix months: and in Jeruſalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Iſrael and Judah.

v. 1—5. We have here,

1. The general ſubmiſſion of all the tribes to David; a longer account of which will be given, 1 Chron. xii. 23—40. They addreſs him with great affection, as being their brother in blood, all ſons of Jacob, and from whom therefore they might expect clemency and protection; they mention the former ſervices he had done them, as an obligation they ever remembered, embrace the Divine deſignation, and, ſince God hath ſaid he ſhall rule, ſalute him king. This had been their duty to have done before, but better late than never.

2. David accepts the tender of their allegiance, the heads of the tribes are ſummoned, and in a ſolemn convention of the ſtates, he engages to protect them as their captain, and adminiſter juſtice to them according to God's law; and they anoint him the third time their king, and promiſe all dutiful ſubjection to his government. Note, The duty of kings and ſubjects is reciprocal, and the one as much bound to rule with equity and clemency, as the other to obey with chearfulneſs and fidelity.

3. David began his reign in the prime of life, juſt at thirty, and God bleſt him with long life; he reigned forty years and ſix months; ſeven years and a half in Hebron, and thirty in Jeruſalem; the conqueſt of which he made in the firſt year of his reign over Iſrael.

6. ¶ And the king and his men went to [k] Jeruſalem, unto [l] the Jebuſites, the inhabitants of the land: which ſpake unto David, ſaying, Except thou take away [m] the blind and the lame, thou ſhalt not come in hither: thinking David cannot come in hither. 7. Nevertheleſs, David took the ſtrong hold of Zion: the ſame is the city of David. 8. And David ſaid on that day, Whoſoever getteth up to the gutter, and ſmiteth the Jebuſites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's ſoul, [n] he ſhall be chief and captain: † wherefore they ſaid, The blind and the lame ſhall not come into the houſe. 9. So David dwelt in the fort, and called it, The city of David; and David built round about, from Millo and inward. 10. And David ‡ went on, and grew great, and the LORD God of hoſts was with him.

v. 6—10. David having now united the people under one head, reſolves to improve this acceſſion of ſtrength by the ſiege of Jeruſalem, which though in part poſſeſſed, Judg. i. 8. the fortreſs continued in the hand of the Jebuſites, and was counted impregnable.

1. The Jebuſites treat David's attempt with great deriſion; probably they manned the walls with blind and lame perſons, as if they were ſufficient to defend them againſt any force he could bring, which ſeems a more natural ſenſe than to interpret this of their images, or any taliſmanic ſtatues, placed as guardians of the fort. Note, They who are moſt confident, do not always beſt ſucceed; their ſecurity is their ruin.

2. David makes an aſſault, and to encourage his men, proffers to make him captain of his army who ſhould firſt enter, either by the breach, or through the ditch, or, as ſome conjecture, ſome ſubterraneous cavity, and commands to throw the blind and the lame there, who dared affront him, and ſaid, He ſhall not come into the houſe or fortreſs; or if it be underſtood of the idols, it refers to his command to caſt them down from their pedeſtals, to ſhew the vain confidence of thoſe who truſted that they could keep him out. Note, The dependance of the guilty ſinner, is no better than truſting on the blind and the lame.

3. Having taken the city, he made it his royal reſidence, enlarged and fortified it conſiderably from Millo, as the fortreſs is ſuppoſed to be called. Here the majeſty of his kingdom began to appear, and the proſperity which from God attends him, made him great and reſpectable. Note, (1.) They are great indeed, who have God with them continually. (2.) When Jeſus ſhall have finiſhed his conqueſt of the ſtrong-holds of a ſinner's heart, and the corruptions of it, thoſe blind and lame, are caſt out, then ſhall the glory of his kingdom appear, and he ſhall reign over them in the new Jeruſalem for ever and ever.

11. ¶ And [o] Hyram king of Tire, ſent meſſengers to David, and cedar-trees, and carpenters, and maſons: and [p] they built David an houſe. 12. And David perceived that the LORD had eſtabliſhed him king over Iſrael, and that he had exalted his kingdom [q] for his people Iſrael's ſake. 13. ¶ And David [r] took him more concubines and wives out of Jeruſalem, after he was come from Hebron: and there were yet ſons and daughters born to David. 14. And theſe be the names of thoſe that were born unto him in Jeruſalem; Shammuah, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, 15. Ibhar alſo, and Eliſhua, and Nepheg, and Japhia, 16. And Eliſhama, and Eliada, and Eliphalet.

v. 11—16. Hyram king of Tire ſends to congratulate David on his acceſſion to the throne of Iſrael; and hereupon,

1. David, with his leave, hires Tyrian architects, more converſant than the Jews in theſe works of elegance, to build him a palace at Jeruſalem, ſuitable to the grandeur of his kingdom. Note, It is right that thoſe whom God is pleaſed to make great, ſhould appear ſuch.

2. David, with thankfulneſs perceived the eſtabliſhment of his kingdom, every competitor removed, beloved by his ſubjects, courted by his neighbours, and feared by his enemies; and this he aſcribes to God's love to his people, whom he regards, not as given to be his ſlaves, but as entruſted with him to be made happy under his wiſe and prudent adminiſtration. Happy the nation that hath ſuch a king!

3. Many wives and concubines increaſed his family, and ſeemed to ſtrengthen his kingdom, though it is to be feared they hurt his heart. Having once ſuffered his eye to wander on various objects, his neighbour's wife was not ſafe at laſt: ſo dangerous is the firſt ſtep from the path of duty; we know not then where we ſhall ſtop.

17. ¶ [s] But when the Philiſtines heard that they had anointed David king over Iſrael, [t] all the Philiſtines came up to ſeek David; and David heard of it, and went down to the hold. 18. The Philiſtines alſo came and ſpread themſelves [u] in the valley of Rephaim. 19. And David [x] enquired of the LORD, ſaying, [y] Shall I go up to the Philiſtines? wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD ſaid unto David, Go up: for I will doubtleſs deliver the Philiſtines into thine hand. 20. And David came to Baal-perazim, and David ſmote them there, and ſaid, [z] The LORD hath broken forth upon mine enemies before me, as the breach of waters. Therefore he called the name of that place, † Baal-perazim. 21. And there they left their images, and David and his men [a] burnt them.

v. 17—21. The Philiſtines alarmed with David's ſucceſs, the union of the kingdoms under him, and the friendſhip of Hyram, thought it high time to fall upon him, before he was thoroughly ſettled in his throne, leaſt afterwards they ſhould attempt it too late. They invade Iſrael with a numerous army, and pitch near Jeruſalem, in the valley of Rephaim. David is ready to receive them, and goes down to the hold, ſome fortreſs which was below Jeruſalem, where was probably the general rendezvous of his army. Before he goes forth, however, he enquires of God, and is ſent with aſſurance of ſucceſs. Confidently therefore he attacks and defeats their army, ſeizes their gods, whom they had brought into the field as their protectors, and, according to the Divine command, caſts them into the fire. From this ſignal victory, the place is called Baal-perazim, The Maſter of Breaches; God having broken forth as a reſiſtleſs torrent upon his enemies, and thrown them down before him ſlain. Note, (1.) Though the enemies of God's people think to cruſh them with their numerous forces, they aſſemble only to their own confuſion. (2.) When we enquire of God upon our knees, we may expect an anſwer of peace, and go forth with confidence to oppoſe our ſpiritual enemies, aſſured that God will bruiſe ſin and Satan ſhortly under our feet. (3.) They who put their truſt in creature-ſupports, will find them as vain as the images of the Philiſtines.

22. ¶ And the Philiſtines came yet up again, and ſpread themſelves in the valley of Rephaim. 23. And when David enquired of the LORD, he ſaid, Thou ſhalt not go up: but fetch a compaſs behind them, and come upon them over againſt the mulberry-trees. 24. And let it be when thou heareſt [b] the ſound of a going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that then thou ſhalt beſtir thyſelf: for then [c] ſhall the LORD go out before thee, to ſmite the hoſt of the Philiſtines. 25. v. 22—25. One repulſe abates not their courage, but rather kindles their deſire of revenge. They dare a ſecond time renew their invaſions, and encamp on the very ſpot where they had been before routed: ſo fooliſhly and wilfully do ſinners ruſh on their own deſtruction. David again has recourſe to God for direction; and, as before he was ordered to march and meet them with the drawn ſword, now he muſt fetch a compaſs behind them, and God will fight for him; ſo that he ſhall have nothing to do, but purſue their flying hoſts. A ruſhing noiſe, as of wind in the tops of the mulberry-trees, is to be the ſignal for him to fall on; he obeys, and the Philiſtines are ſmitten and purſued to their borders, as far as Gazer. Note, (1.) When we wait God's motions, our warfare muſt proſper. (2.) The repeated efforts of corruption and temptation, though grievous for the preſent, weaken the root of ſin, and ſtrengthen the graces in the hearts of believers. (3.) On a ſound like a ruſhing mighty wind, the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Apoſtles, and then Satan's kingdom fell before the ſword of the Spirit, the word of God in their mouths.

David having ſubdued the enemies of Iſrael, now reſcues the ark, the glory of Iſrael, from the obſcurity in which it had lain, ver. 1, 2. 1. The firſt attempt failed. (1.) They were guilty of an error in carrying it in a cart, ver. 3—5. (2.) They were puniſhed for that error by the ſudden death of Uzzah, ver. 6, 7. which put a ſtop to their proceedings, ver. 8—11. 2. The great joy with which it was at laſt done, ver. 12—15. And, [1.] The eaſineſs that was between David and his people, ver. 17—19. [2.] The uneaſineſs that was between him and his wife upon that occaſion, ver. 16, 20—23.

1. [a] AGain, David gathered together all the choſen men of Iſrael, thirty thouſand. 2. And David aroſe, and went with all the people that were with him, from [b] Baale of Judah, to bring up from thence the ark of God, † whoſe name is called by the name of the LORD of hoſts, [c] that dwelleth between the cherubims. 3. And they ſet the ark of God [d] upon a new cart, and brought it out of the houſe of Abinadab that was in ‡ Gibeah: and Uzzah and Ahio the ſons of Abinadab, drave the new cart. 4. And they brought it out of the houſe of Abinadab which was at Gibeah, accompanying the ark of God; and Ahio went before the ark. 5. And David, and all the houſe of Iſrael, [e] played before the LORD on all manner of inſtruments made of fir-wood, even on harps, and on pſalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals.

v. 1—5. Long had the ark lain neglected in the houſe of Abinadab; we find but once mention of conſulting God before it during all Saul's reign; but David knew the value of that ſacred treaſure, and therefore prepares to remove it to a place more ſuited for its reception.

1. He ſpeaks highly of the ark, from its relation to God, whoſe preſence made it glorious, and who was pleaſed to dwell between the cherubims. Note, (1.) It is God's preſence in all ordinances that makes them glorious. (2.) They who have high thoughts of God, will therefore reverence all his holy inſtitutions.

2. He makes great preparations to attend it with a magnificent retinue, in ſolemn pomp and holy joy. Thirty thouſand men, the flower of his army, to guard it, or the prime nobility, elders, and great men, out of all the tribes, and inſtruments of muſic of all kinds, himſelf leading the ſacred band; and counting himſelf honoured, though a king, in this employment of praiſe, and humble attendance before the God of Iſrael. Note, (1.) The greateſt kings need think it no diſparagement to their dignity, to join with the meaneſt Iſraelite before that God, who regardeth not the perſons of the rich more than the poor. (2.) Sacred Pſalmody always revives, whenever God revives a ſpirit of religion.

3. They committed a great error in the method they took to remove the ark; becauſe a cart had brought it home from Philiſtia, they therefore concluded it might bring it ſafely up from Kirjath-jearim, called alſo Baale, v. 2. though God had expreſsly commanded the contrary, Numb. vii. 9. Note, Authority and bad precedents, weigh often more than the expreſs word of God.

6. And when they came to Nachon's threſhing-floor, [f] Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it, for the oxen † ſhook it. 7. And the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt Uzzah, and God ſmote him there for his ‡ error, and [g] there he died by the ark of God. 8. And [h] David was diſpleaſed, becauſe the LORD had made a breach upon Uzzah: and he called the name of the place, ‖ Perez-uzzah to this day. 9. And David was afraid of the LORD that day, and ſaid, [i] How ſhall the ark of the LORD come to me? 10. So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David: but David carried it aſide into the houſe of Obed-edom the Gittite. 11. And the ark of the LORD continued in the houſe of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD [k] bleſſed Obed-edom, and all his houſhold.

v. 6—11. Uzzah and Ahio, the ſons of Abinadab, are entruſted with the care of the cart, to drive the oxen which drew it; but an awful providence ſtopped their journey, and turned their mirth into mourning. We have here,

1. Uzzah's raſhneſs and puniſhment. It was contrary to an expreſs command, to carry the ark in a cart; it was enjoined, that none but prieſts might touch it: and if Uzzah were a Levite (which is uncertain) and a Kohathite, yet might he not ſee the ark, much leſs handle it, but only carry the poles on which it was fixed. But perhaps Uzzah's long familiarity with the ark had leſſened his ſacred reverence for it, and therefore when the oxen ſhook it, either they ſtumbled, or the cart was in danger of overturning, Uzzah ſtretched forth his hand to ſupport it, and God immediately ſmote him, that he died. Note, (1.) A good intention will not excuſe a wrong thing. (2.) By our raſhneſs and intemperate zeal, we are apt to give many a wrong touch to the ark of God, and it is of the Lord's mercies we are not conſumed. (3.) In matters of God's worſhip, we muſt carefully adhere to his revealed will, leaſt by human contrivances we die by the ark's ſide.

2. David is both terrified and diſpleaſed with the ſtroke on Uzzah. Diſpleaſed at this interruption of the ſolemnity, ready it ſhould ſeem to entertain hard thoughts of God, as if his judgments were too ſevere, and counting it an ill omen, which his enemies might improve to his diſadvantage. Terrified withal, leaſt God ſhould break forth on him alſo, as conſcious that he could not abide it, if the Lord were ſtrict to mark what was amiſs in him. He reſolves therefore to proceed no farther, but carries the ark to the houſe of Obed-edom, a Levite, that was near; and calls the name of the place, in remembrance of this mournful event, Perez-uzzah, the breach of Uzzah. Note, (1.) We are too apt, under providential afflictions, to entertain diſpleaſure againſt God's diſpenſations, rather than againſt the ſins in ourſelves that provoke them. (2.) Every ſtroke upon others for their ſin, ſhould be a warning to us to repent of our own. (3.) If the breach between the broken law of a holy God, and a ſinful ſoul, be not healed by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, an everlaſting monument will remain upon the ſinner of God's inexorable juſtice.

3. Obed-edom was no loſer by his bleſſed viſitant. He welcomed the ark to his houſe, notwithſtanding the terrible judgments which had overtaken thoſe who irreverently treated it. He knew by avoiding their ſin, he need not fear their puniſhment; and God rewarded him in a remarkable bleſſing on himſelf and houſhold, ſo that in the three months the ark continued with him, every thing proſpered. Note, (1.) None ever loſt by fidelity to God. Godlineſs hath the promiſe of the life which now is, as well as of that which is to come. (2.) It is a bleſſing to dwell under a good man's roof, for all who are about him are the better for him. (3.) All our proſperity muſt be aſcribed to God, and when he adds to all a thankful heart, then we are bleſſed indeed!

12. ¶ [l] And it was told king David, ſaying, The LORD hath bleſſed the houſe of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, becauſe of the ark of God. [m] So David went and brought up the ark of God from the houſe of Obed-edom, into the city of David, with gladneſs. 13. And it was ſo, that when they that [n] bare the ark of the LORD, had gone ſix paces, he ſacrificed oxen and fatlings. 14. And David danced before the LORD with all his might, and David was [o] girded with a linen ephod. 15. So David, and all the houſe of Iſrael, brought up the ark of the LORD [p] with ſhouting, and with the ſound of the trumpet. 16. And as the ark of the LORD came into the city of David, Michal Saul's daughter looked through a window, and ſaw king David leaping and dancing before the LORD; and [q] ſhe deſpiſed him in her heart. 17. ¶ And they brought in the ark of the LORD, and ſet it in his place, in the midſt of the tabernacle that David had † pitched for it: and David offered burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings before the LORD. 18. And as ſoon as David had made an end of offering burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, he [r] bleſſed the people in the name of the LORD of hoſts. 19. And [s] he dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Iſrael, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece of fleſh, and a flagon of wine: ſo all the people departed every one to his houſe.

v. 12—19. The bleſſing of the ark on Obed-edom, and his houſe, ſoon reached the ears of David, and now his fears are removed, and his deſires return to have the ark with him at Jeruſalem. Hereupon once more he attempts to remove it, and through the Divine bleſſing ſucceeds. Note, Though we are ſore lett and hindred in our race, we muſt not deſpair; ſucceſs ſhall at laſt crown our labours.

1. David ſaw and rectified his former miſtake: the Levites, according to Divine preſcription, are appointed to carry the ark, and when they had gone ſix paces, David cauſed oxen and fatlings to be offered, as an atonement for former errors, and in thankfulneſs for preſent help. Note, (1.) When God by his corrections hath led us to repentance, we need not doubt but we ſhall inherit a bleſſing. (2.) The blood of the one great ſacrifice muſt be regarded in all our undertakings, as the alone foundation for our dependance on God's favour and regard.

2. David in all humility, with every demonſtration of joy, preceded the ark. He laid his royal robes aſide, and, in an ephod, like that the miniſters of the ſanctuary wore, with exultation leaped and praiſed God with all his might: his heart was engaged in the bleſſed ſervice, and his body ſpoke the tranſport of his ſoul.

3. The people joined their king in the lively expreſſions of their joy: with ſhouts of triumph, and the trumpet's chearful voice, they brought up the ark to the tabernacle David had provided for it, according to the former uſage; and there before it David offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, expreſſive of his gratitude and thankfulneſs for the ſucceſs he had met with. Michal, Saul's daughter, was the only diſguſted ſpirit among them. She could not bear to ſee her huſband thus, as ſhe apprehended, demean himſelf, and her rebuke we ſhall quickly hear.

4. David diſmiſſed the people. He bleſſed them in the name of God, prayed for them and over them, that they might thus ever delight in God and his ways; and gave each of them a cake, and a good ſlice of meat, probably part of the ſacrifices, which were always eaten as a ſacred feaſt, and a flagon of wine. And thus the people returned to their houſes, highly ſatisfied with the generous treatment. Note, (1.) All God's people are called to feaſt on the one great ſacrifice, and to eat that bread, and drink of that cup, which the Saviour, the Son of David, hath provided for us. (2.) A generous and munificent ſpirit naturally engages our regard. (3.) When we have the bleſſing of the King of kings upon us, then may we well depart in peace.

20. ¶ Then David returned to bleſs [t] his houſhold: and Michal the daughter of Saul came out to meet David, and ſaid, [u] How glorious was the king of Iſrael to day, who uncovered himſelf to day in the eyes of the hand-maids of his ſervants, [x] as one of the vain fellows ſhameleſly uncovereth himſelf! 21. And David ſaid unto Michal, [y] It was before the LORD, [z] which choſe me before thy father, and before all his houſe, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Iſrael: therefore will I play before the LORD. 22. And I will yet be more vile than thus, and [a] will be baſe in mine own ſight: and of the maid-ſervants which thou haſt ſpoken of, of them ſhall I be had in honour.

23. Therefore Michal the daughter of Saul had no child until the day of her death.

v. 20—23. Having happily finiſhed his public ſervice, David returns joyful to bleſs his houſhold, and to finiſh the day with prayer and praiſe at home. No man is too great to be chaplain in his own family.

But here his joy meets with ſome allay from the pride and fretfulneſs of his wife Michal. Clouds will thus obſcure the brighteſt day, and Kings ſometimes feel the uneaſineſs of domeſtic jars.

1. Michal, Saul's daughter, who had beheld the proceſſion, v. 16. deſpiſed David for ſo demeaning himſelf, and therefore goes out to meet him with an ironical commendation, expreſſive of her contempt of his behaviour; and inſinuates, as if his dreſs and geſtures were immodeſt as well as fooliſh, becauſe he had exchanged his royal mantle for an ephod, and danced amidſt his ſubjects before the ark of God. Note, (1.) The exerciſes of religion often provoke the contempt of carnal minds: having no ſenſes exerciſed to reliſh holy joys, they deſpiſe them. (2.) It is no new thing for the enemies of God's people, to charge them with lewdneſs, and to reproach their aſſemblies as indecent. (3.) Ridicule, not reaſon, is the weapon chiefly employed by the enemies of truth.

2. David vindicates himſelf from her reproaches, and ſeeks withal to humble her pride. It was before the Lord he danced, in honour to him, and with a ſingle eye and intention to his glory: it was the tribute of gratitude he owed to that gracious God, who had preferred him before her ungodly father: therefore he would again expreſs his thankfulneſs, and if this were to be vile, would be viler ſtill, nor feared the reproach of which ſhe was ſo liberal. His humiliation before God, would engage the reſpect of thoſe hand-maidens ſhe deſpiſed, and cauſe him to be had in honour by the pious poor, whoſe regard he moſt valued. Note, (1.) We muſt not be laughed out of a religious profeſſion, or be aſhamed of it; but the more we are oppoſed, or inſulted, the more reſolutely perſevere. (2.) If God knows our hearts to be upright before him, the cenſures of others may well lie light upon us. (3.) We can never ſufficiently humble ourſelves before a holy God; there the greateſt king is no better than ſinful duſt and aſhes. (4.) The regard of good men, tho' few or deſpiſed, is more to be valued than the diſregard of the multitude of the great and irreligious is to be feared.

3. Michal ſuffers for her inſolence. God afflicted her with barrenneſs, and brought upon her real reproach for the undeſerved diſreſpect ſhe had ſhewn to her huſband, and her contempt of the ark of God.

v. 1—3. David is now at reſt from all his enemies, enjoying in peace that kingdom he ſo worthily deſerved; yet is not his comfort compleat, whilſt the ark of God dwells under curtains Therefore,

1. He purpoſes to build a houſe, meet for its reception. He could not look upon his own houſe of cedar, without a ſecret reproach. He reſolves therefore to improve the calm he enjoyed in ſo grateful a ſervice to the God who had done ſuch great things for him. Note, A gracious ſoul is ever ſeeking to teſtify its gratitude, and happy to be employed for the glory of God.

2. David conſults with Nathan the prophet about the matter, and as the piety of the deſign was evident, Nathan heſitates not to encourage him to proceed in the good purpoſes which were in his heart; but as they conſulted not God in the matter, his will appeared different, though the good intention was accepted. Note, (1.) We ought to ſtrengthen their hands, who have it at heart to build up the church of Chriſt. (2.) If the Lord is with us, then the deſires of our heart will be to pleaſe him.

4. ¶ And it came to paſs that night, that the word of the LORD came unto Nathan, ſaying, 5. Go and tell my ſervant David, Thus ſaith the LORD, [e] Shalt thou build me an houſe for me to dwell in? 6. Whereas I have not dwelt in any houſe, [f] ſince the time that I brought up the children of Iſrael out of Egypt, even to this day, but have walked in a tent, and in a tabernacle. 7. In all the places wherein I have walked with all the children of Iſrael, ſpake I a word with any of the † tribes of Iſrael, whom I commanded [g] to feed my people Iſrael, ſaying, Why build ye not me an houſe of cedar? 8. Now therefore, ſo ſhalt thou ſay unto my ſervant David, Thus ſaith the LORD of hoſts, [h] I took thee from the ſheep-cote, ‡ from following the ſheep, to be ruler over my people, over Iſrael. 9. And [i] I was with thee whitherſoever thou wenteſt, and [k] have cut off all thine enemies out of thy ſight, and [l] have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth. 10. (Moreover, I will appoint a place for my people Iſrael, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more: [m] neither ſhall the children of wickedneſs afflict them any more, as beforetime. 11. And as ſince the time that [n] I commanded judges to be over my people Iſrael, and have cauſed thee to reſt from all thine enemies. Alſo the LORD telleth thee, that [o] he will make thee an houſe. 12. ¶ And [p] when thy days be fulfilled, and thou ſhalt ſleep with thy fathers, [q] I will ſet up thy ſeed after thee, which ſhall proceed out of thy bowels, and [r] I will eſtabliſh his kingdom. 13. [s] He ſhall build an houſe for my name, and [t] I will eſtabliſh the throne of his kingdom for ever. 14. I will be his father, and [u] he ſhall be my ſon: [x] if he commit iniquity, [y] I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the ſtripes of the children of men: 15. But [z] my mercy ſhall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. 16. And thine houſe, and [a] thy kingdom, ſhall be eſtabliſhed [b] for ever before thee: thy throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever. 17. v. 4—17. David's heart was big with his deſign, but God's time was not yet come; therefore the ſame night, before any preparations had been made, God appeared to Nathan, and ſends him to David with a meſſage concerning it.

1. He enjoins him to deſiſt from his purpoſe. God had hitherto, ſince he delivered his people from Egypt, abode in a tent, moving from place to place, and never yet ſpoke to any of the tribes, or as the word ſignifies, ſceptres, or rulers in Iſrael, to build him a houſe of cedar, chuſing rather thus to walk in the midſt of them; and till farther orders David may not change the manner of his abode. Note, The church of Chriſt, like the ark, is in this world moving from place to place. In heaven alone, it may hope to find a ſure abode, and an abiding reſt.

2. God reminds him of his gracious dealings towards him, in raiſing him from his low eſtate of a poor ſhepherd, to be a great king, famed for conqueſt and valour; not as upbraiding him therewith, but as an aſſurance of his regard, though he accepted not the offer of an houſe which he intended him. Note, (1.) A well-meant deſign, though it be unſucceſsful, is in God's ſight equally acceptable. (2.) A great name is valuable, when it is acquired under the Divine bleſſing, and as the gift of God.

3. Under his government, he promiſes to give reſt to his people. Though ſettled in Canaan, their enemies had often afflicted them before the times of the judges, and in the intervals between theſe divinely appointed Saviours; but now they ſhall be more ſecurely fixed, and the children of wickedneſs, their idolatrous neighbours, be ſuffered to afflict them no longer; and this was a great ſatisfaction to a king like David, to whom God's people were ſo dear.

4. His own houſe ſhould be eſtabliſhed, to reign over this favoured people. His ſeed ſhould ſit upon his throne, when he was gathered to his fathers; and the crown deſcend to a long poſterity: his ſon and immediate ſucceſſor ſhould accompliſh the work he had planned, and build a houſe for God; and ſuch tender regard would he ſhew him, as a father doth to his deareſt child; never, though froward, diſinheriting him, but correcting him in meaſure, and preſerving ſtill his loving-kindneſs towards him. Theſe promiſes immediately and primarily regarded Solomon, in whom they were in many reſpects fulfilled; but they had a further view, and were compleatly accompliſhed in that ſon of David, whoſe kingdom is an everlaſting kingdom, and who ſhall ſit upon the throne of David for ever; to whom, in the moſt diſtinguiſhed ſenſe, Jehovah ſaith, I will be to him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſon, whoſe church is the glorious houſe, where God delights to dwell; and though no iniquity was found in him, to deſerve the ſtripes of men, yet was he chaſtened and afflicted of God, for his people's ſins, which were laid upon him. And the ſame is true of all the ſpiritual ſeed of Chriſt; though corrected for their infirmities, God's covenant of everlaſting love ſtands firm with them; God will not caſt them off in diſpleaſure, but will reſtore and eſtabliſh them in the kingdom of his grace, till they come to the kingdom of his glory, to reign with him for ever and ever. Bleſſed ſurely are the people who are in ſuch a caſe!

18. ¶ Then went king David in, and ſat before the LORD, and he ſaid, [d] Who am I, O LORD God? and what is my houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? 19. And [e] this was yet a ſmall thing in thy ſight, O LORD God: but [f] thou haſt ſpoken alſo of thy ſervant's houſe for a great while to come, and [g] is this the † manner of man, O LORD God? 20. And what can David ſay more unto thee? for [h] thou LORD God, knoweſt thy ſervant. 21. [i] For thy word's ſake, and [k] according to thine own heart haſt thou done all theſe great things, to make thy ſervant know them. 22. Wherefore thou art great, O LORD God: for [l] there is none like thee, neither is there any God beſide thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears. 23. And [m] what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Iſrael, whom God went to redeem for a people to himſelf, and to make him a name, and to do for you great things and terrible, for thy land, before thy people [n] which thou redeemedſt to thee from Egypt, from the nations and their gods? 24. For thou haſt confirmed to thyſelf thy people Iſrael to be a people unto thee for ever: and [o] thou, LORD, art become their God. 25. And now, O LORD God, the word that thou haſt ſpoken concerning thy ſervant, and concerning his houſe, [p] eſtabliſh it for ever, and do as thou haſt ſaid. 26. And [q] let thy name be magnified for ever, ſaying, The LORD of hoſts is the God over Iſrael: and let the houſe of thy ſervant David be eſtabliſhed before thee. 27. For thou, O LORD of hoſts, God of Iſrael, haſt ‡ revealed to thy ſervant, ſaying, I will build thee an houſe: therefore hath thy ſervant [r] found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee. 28. And now, O LORD God, thou art that God, and [s] thy words be true, and thou haſt promiſed this goodneſs unto thy ſervant. 29. Therefore now let it pleaſe thee to bleſs the houſe of thy ſervant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O LORD God, haſt ſpoken it, and with thy bleſſing let the houſe of thy ſervant be bleſſed for ever.

v. 18—29. Overcome with this gracious meſſage from the Lord, though his purpoſes were prevented, theſe great and precious promiſes awaken the livelieſt returns of thankfulneſs. He immediately repairs to the tabernacle, and there pours forth his prayers and praiſes before his covenant God.

1. Abaſed in the duſt, he confeſſes his own vileneſs and unworthineſs of theſe diſtinguiſhed favours; ſpeaking with deep humility of himſelf, though ſo diſtinguiſhed in gifts and graces; and of his family, though ſo nobly deſcended. Note, They whom God honours, will have the lowlieſt opinion of themſelves.

2. He acknowledges with thankfulneſs and admiration, what God had done for him. It was to him alone he was indebted for all that advancement he was arrived at, and God now had added ſtill the promiſe of many days to come. He is overwhelmed with ſuch goodneſs, ſo unlike the manner of men, who do not thus profuſely laviſh their gifts on their inferiors, and thoſe who have nothing to recommend them. Yet thus hath God done; exceeding even his utmoſt wiſhes, and leaving David nothing more to aſk. Note, (1.) God beſtows on his people not only more than they deſerve, but more than they can deſire. (2.) Men are niggards of their gifts, eſpecially to thoſe who have offended them: but God bleſſes them that were his enemies; firſt reconciles them to himſelf, then covers them with mercies and loving kindneſs, and more than all, gives them ſtill greater bleſſings in promiſe, even than thoſe they at preſent enjoy. (3.) God's covenant of grace contains all a ſinner needs; when we plead that before God, and lay hold by faith on Jeſus, in whom this covenant ſtandeth faſt, then all things are ours.

3. He aſcribes the whole to God's ſovereign grace; who for his word's ſake, according to his promiſe by Samuel, or for the ſake of his incarnate Son, the Word made fleſh, thus graciouſly reſpected him, and had alſo made him know theſe mercies yet in ſtore. Note, (1.) All the bleſſings of God's covenant are ſovereign and free. Free, as without deſert; and ſovereign, beſtowed according to the counſel of his own will. (2.) To know and be aſſured of our intereſt in the bleſſings of the covenant, is a diſtinguiſhed mercy.

4. He extols the glorious God, whoſe mercy was ſo great towards him. There is none like unto him, no God beſide him; none that can do as he doth, in works of power and grace towards his favoured people.

5. The people of God, from their relation to him, appear alſo great and diſtinguiſhed in his eyes. God, or, as the original is, Gods went to redeem them, not Moſes and Aaron, though they as magiſtrates may be called Elohim, but the triune God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; to ſave them from the nations, and their Gods, to be a peculiar people to Jehovah, their covenant God, and this not for a ſeaſon, but for ever and ever. Note, More glorious is our ſpiritual redemption from idolatrous affections and ſervitude to ſin, more peculiar our conſecration to him through the blood of Jeſus, than theirs by the blood of bulls and goats: and our relation to God, without a figure, literally immutable and eternal, ſecured to us in that everlaſting covenant ordered in all things and ſure.

6. He concludes with his humble ſupplications for the fulfilment of the promiſes wherein God had cauſed him to put his truſt. Since it had pleaſed him to reveal his great goodneſs to his ſervant, David can aſk nothing greater, nothing better. Let the word be eſtabliſhed; and this he confidently expects from the truth and faithfulneſs of God, and is thence encouraged in his heart to pray, becauſe God hath promiſed. Let God therefore be magnified, his great and glorious name be exalted in mercy, and according as he hath ſaid, Let David's houſe be built and bleſſed, and his throne continue for ever. Note, (1.) We may boldly aſk, when we have God's promiſes to encourage us. (2.) Let us not ſtagger at the greatneſs of the promiſe, but pray in faith, nothing doubting. (3.) Whenever we find in our heart to pray, God will not fail to hear and anſwer us. (4.) This is the conſtant deſire of the faithful ſoul, that God may be glorified; and as this is eſpecially the caſe when the kingdom of his dear Son is enlarged, therefore he prays, thy kingdom come. (5.) All repetition of our prayers is not vain repetition, but rather is often the livelieſt expreſſion of faith and importunity.

CHAP. VIII.

Here is an account, 1. Of David's victories. (1.) Over the Philiſtines, ver. 1. (2.) Over the Moabites, ver. 2. (3.) Over the king of Zobah, ver. 3, 4. (4.) Over the Syrians, ver. 5—8, 13. (5.) Over the Edomites, ver. 14. 2. Of the preſents that were brought him, and the wealth he got from the nations he ſubdued, which he dedicated to God, ver. 9—12. 3. Of his court, the adminiſtration of his government, ver. 15. and his chief officers, ver. 16—18.

About 1041.

1. AND [a] after this it came to paſs, that David ſmote the Philiſtines, and ſubdued them: and David took † Metheg-ammah out of the hand of the Philiſtines. 2. And [b] he ſmote Moab, and meaſured them with a line, caſting them down to the ground: even with two lines meaſured he, to put to death; and with one full line to keep alive: and ſo the Moabites became David's ſervants, and brought gifts. 3. David ſmote alſo Hadadezer the ſon of Rehob, king of [c] Zobah, as he went to recover [d] his border at the river Euphrates. 4. And David took from him a thouſand chariots, and [e] ſeven hundred horſemen, and twenty thouſand footmen: and David [f] houghed all the chariot-horſes, but [g] reſerved of them for an hundred chariots. 5. And when the Syrians of Damaſcus came to [h] ſuccour Hadadezer king of Zobah, David [i] ſlew of the Syrians two and twenty thouſand men. 6. Then David put garriſons in Syria of Damaſcus: and the Syrians became ſervants to David, and brought gifts: and [k] the LORD preſerved David whitherſoever he went. 7. And David took the ſhields of gold that were on the ſervants of Hadadezer, and brought them to Jeruſalem. 8. And from Betah, and from Berothai, cities of Hadadezer, king David took exceeding much braſs.

v. 1—8. David being appointed of God to ſave his people, and to perfect the conqueſt of the country God had promiſed them, begins to enlarge their territory by various conqueſts.

1. Over the Philiſtines; whoſe capital, Gath, is here called Metheg-ammah. Ammah, probably becauſe built on a hill; and Metheg, which ſignifies a bridle, becauſe it ſerved to keep the whole country in ſubjection, which was now entirely ſubdued. Note, Though corruption ſtruggles long, the power of the Son of David ſhall keep it now in ſubjection, and by and by he ſhall utterly root it out.

2. The Moabites next felt his conquering ſword, and now the prophecy of Balaam began to receive its accompliſhments, Numb. xxiv. 17. their army was routed, and their men of war (or perhaps all the men of the country) divided into three parts, laid flat on the ground, and by a line, meaſured out for death: two lines were ſlain, and one whole line more than a third, it ſhould ſeem, kept alive, to dreſs and till the land, and to bring tribute and gifts. Thus Moab for a long while became ſervants to Iſrael.

3. The Syrians ſhared the ſame fate. Firſt, thoſe of Zobah, under Hadadezer their king, who oppoſed David in his expedition towards the Euphrates, to which God had promiſed this empire ſhould extend, Gen. xv. 13. but received a total overthrow, with the loſs of a thouſand chariots, ſeven hundred ſquadrons of horſe (See 1 Chron. xviii. 4.) which with the chariot horſes were houghed or hamſtrung, except a reſerve for one hundred chariots, and twenty thouſand foot. When thoſe of Damaſcus eſpouſed his quarrel, they brought upon themſelves the ſame deſtruction: two and twenty thouſand were ſlain, their country brought into ſubjection, and their cities plundered. Particular notice is taken of the golden ſhields of Hadadezer, and of the vaſt quantities of braſs David brought from Betah and Berothai. Note, (1.) The enemies of God's church may aſſociate themſelves, but they ſhall be broken to pieces. (2.) Better to be relied on than ſhields of gold, is God the ſhield and the defence of every ſpiritual Iſraelite.

4. God bleſſed David wherever he went, made him ſucceſsful, preſerved his life in battle, and crowned him with victory. Note, In the midſt of danger, they are ſafe whom God protects. Every bullet has its billet.

9. ¶ [l] When Toi king of Hamath heard that David had ſmitten all the hoſt of Hadadezer, 10. Then Toi ſent Joram his ſon unto king David to ſalute him, and to bleſs him, becauſe he had fought againſt Hadadezer, and ſmitten him (for Hadadezer † had wars with Toi) and Joram brought with him veſſels of ſilver, and veſſels of gold, and veſſels of braſs; 11. Which alſo king David did dedicate unto the LORD, with the ſilver and gold that he had [m] dedicated of all nations which he ſubdued: 12. Of Syria, and of Moab, and of the children of Ammon, and of the Philiſtines, and of Amalek, and of the ſpoil of Hadadezer ſon of Rehob, king of Zobah. 13. And David gat him a name when he returned from [n] ſmiting of the Syrians in the valley of ſalt, being eighteen thouſand men. 14.
¶ And he put garriſons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garriſons, and [o] all they of Edom became David's ſervants: and the LORD preſerved David whitherſoever he went.

v. 9—14. The fame of David's victories ſpread abroad:

1. The king of Hamath ſends his ſon as ambaſſador, to congratulate him on his ſucceſs againſt Hadadezer, with ſumptuous preſents, as a grateful acknowledgment for his deliverance from ſo great an enemy. Theſe preſents, veſſels of gold and ſilver, David dedicates to God, with all the ſpoils of the conquered nations, in order that his ſucceſſor, ordained to build God's temple, might find abundant proviſion made for the glorious work.

2. He enlarges his kingdom by the conqueſt of Edom, and puts garriſons in all their cities. One remarkable victory he obtains over the Syrians, with whom they were confederates, in the valley of Salt killing eighteen thouſand men; in which action his generalſhip, as well as perſonal valour, got him a great name: and all this was owing to God's preſervation and bleſſing, which David, in Pſalm lx. penned on this occaſion, thankfully acknowledges. Note, (1.) Whatever is great or good in us, let God alone have the praiſe of it. (2.) Theſe conqueſts typify the greater ones of David's Son and Lord. He muſt reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet, ſubdued the power of ſin, and deſtroyed death and hell; when having reſcued his people from all their enemies round about, he ſhall make them princes and kings in glory, where they ſhall reign with him.

15. And David reigned over all Iſrael, and David executed judgment and juſtice unto all his people.
16. And Joab the ſon of Zeruiah was over the hoſt; and Jehoſhaphat the ſon of Ahilud was † recorder; 17.
And Zadok the ſon of Ahitub, and Ahimelech the ſon of Abiathar, were [p] the prieſts; and Seraiah was the

v. 15—18. We have here,

1. David diſpenſing to his ſubjects the bleſſings of an upright government, as well as ſubduing their foes before them. All Iſrael felt and owned his gentle ſway; the meaneſt have acceſs to him, and juſtice without partiality is diſpenſed by him: well may it be ſaid, Happy art thou, O Iſrael! Note, We cannot enough be thankful for the bleſſing of a mild government, and an uncorrupt adminiſtration of juſtice.

Before Christ 1040.

2. David's great officers are mentioned. Joab was generaliſſimo; Jehoſhaphat, recorder, to minute the daily occurrences, and keep the annals of the empire; or to record the caſes which were brought before the king for deciſion. Zadok and Ahimelech, prieſts of diſtinction, and chiefly conſulted by David, under Abiathar the high-prieſt: Seraiah was ſcribe, or ſecretary of ſtate; and Benaiah was captain of the king's life-guards, the Cherethites and Pelethites; who were ſuppoſed by ſome to be Philiſtines, as ſome kings employ foreign mercenaries, others have thought them the deſcendants of two families in Iſrael, but the moſt probable conjecture ſeems to be, that they were thoſe worthies who came to David, whilſt he was in the country of the Philiſtines, and who got thoſe names from their abode there. David's ſons alſo were all advanced at court, and placed in employments ſuited to their high rank, and thus all about him ſhared in his glory and advancement. Note, They who cleave to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, will find him not unmindful of them when he cometh to his kingdom.

CHAP. IX.

David ſhews kindneſs to Jonathan's ſeed for his ſake. 1. He enquires after the remains of the houſe of Saul, and diſcovers Mephiboſheth, ver. 1—4. 2. He receives him kindly, ver. 5—8. And, 3. Provides for him and his, ver. 9—13.

1. AND David ſaid, Is there yet any that is left of [a] the houſe of Saul, that I might ſhew him kindneſs [b] for Jonathan's ſake? 2. And † there was of the houſe of Saul a ſervant whoſe name was Ziba:
and when they had called him unto David, the king ſaid unto him, Art thou Ziba? And he ſaid, Thy ſervant is he. 3. And the king ſaid, Is there not yet any of the houſe of Saul, that I may ſhew [c] the kindneſs of God unto him? And Ziba ſaid unto the king, Jonathan hath yet a ſon [d] which is lame on his feet. 4. And the king ſaid unto him, Where is he? And Ziba ſaid unto the king, Behold, he is in the houſe of Machir, the ſon of Ammiel, in Lo-debar. 5. ¶ Then king David ſent, and fet him out of the houſe of [e] Machir, the ſon of Ammiel, from Lo-debar. 6. Now when Mephiboſheth the ſon of Jonathan the ſon of Saul, was come unto David, he fell on his face, and did reverence.
And David ſaid, Mephiboſheth. And he anſwered, Behold thy ſervant. 7. And David ſaid unto him, [f] Fear not: for I will ſurely ſhew thee kindneſs, for Jonathan thy father's ſake, and will reſtore thee all the land of Saul thy father, and thou ſhalt eat bread at my table continually. 8. And he bowed himſelf, and ſaid,
What is thy ſervant, that thou ſhould'ſt look upon ſuch [g] a dead dog as I am?

v. 1—8. When reſpite from war, and reſt from the multiplicity of his engagements, during the firſt year of his government, gave David opportunity of reflection; he remembered the covenant between Jonathan and himſelf, and ſet himſelf to fulfil it.

1. He enquires if any remained of Saul's houſe, to whom, for Jonathan's ſake, he might ſhew kindneſs. Saul had been his bitter enemy, but he had forgiven and forgotten it: his deſcendants might rather have feared to be cut off, than to be preferred; but he had ſworn to Saul to ſpare them, and for his old friend's ſake, Jonathan, he would do more for them; ſhew them kindneſs and favour; the kindneſs of God for his ſake, and great like that himſelf ſhews. Note, (1.) We muſt be not only ready to do good, when applied to, but ſeek for occaſions, and enquire out the propereſt objects. (2.) It is not enough to forgive thoſe who hate us, but we muſt ſhew kindneſs to them or their families in their diſtreſſes; this is God-like. (3.) No advancement, or change of circumſtances, ſhould make us forget our old friends; they and theirs have a title to our notice, and, according to our power, to our aſſiſtance. (4.) That is the acceptable charity, and no other, which is done with an eye to God's glory, and flows from a ſenſe of God's love to us.

2. Ziba, an old ſervant of Saul, who was at that time at Jeruſalem, is ſent for, and introduced to David; and on his enquiry, informs him of a ſon of Jonathan's, who was lame, Chap. iv. 4. and had been privately brought up at Lo-debar, probably among his mother's relations. Him therefore David without delay ſends for to court. Note, A good old ſervant is a very valuable poſſeſſion to his maſter.

3. Mephiboſheth comes at his command, and with deep reſpect, approaches the king, falling on his face before him; perhaps not without ſome apprehenſions of danger. David ſoon raiſes him up, bids him not fear, but be aſſured of his favour and kindneſs, and as a preſent inſtance of it, aſſigns him all his father and grandfather's eſtates, which on David's acceſſion to the kingdom, in right of his wife he had claimed, or were conſidered as crown-lands, or as forfeited by Iſhboſheth's rebellion. And he adds moreover the ſingular favour of inviting him a conſtant gueſt to his table, where in honour and affluence he might ſpend his days. Mephiboſheth, quite overcome with David's kindneſs, is at a loſs for expreſſion to teſtify his gratitude; and, in the deepeſt acknowledgments of his own unworthineſs, exalts the generoſity of his benefactor. Note, (1.) Reſpect from an inferior, is not only decent, but duty. (2.) Honour ſits beſt on thoſe who have a humble opinion of themſelves.

9. ¶ Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's ſervant, and ſaid unto him, I have given unto thy maſter's ſon [h] all that pertained to Saul, and to all his houſe. 10. Thou therefore and thy ſons and thy ſervants ſhall till the land for him, and thou ſhalt bring in the fruits, that thy maſter's ſon may have food to eat: but Mephiboſheth, thy maſter's ſon, ſhall eat bread alway at my table. Now Ziba had fifteen ſons, and twenty ſervants. 11. Then ſaid Ziba unto the king, According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his ſervant, [i] ſo ſhall thy ſervant do. As for Mephiboſheth, ſaid the king, he ſhall eat at my table, as one of the king's ſons. 12. And Mephiboſheth had a young ſon, whoſe name was [k] Micha: and [l] all that dwelt in the houſe of Ziba, were ſervants unto Mephiboſheth. 13. So Mephiboſheth dwelt in Jeruſalem: for he did eat continually at the king's table; and was lame on both his feet.

v. 9—13. Ziba, who had informed David of Mephiboſheth, is well recompenſed for his trouble. He is made head ſteward to the family: with his ſons and ſervants he is left to occupy the eſtate; and the revenue thence accruing, is to be paid in to Mephiboſheth, for the maintenance of his family as a prince: for though himſelf was daily honoured with a place at the king's table, he had a ſon named Micha, and probably a wife alive, who ſettled with him at Jeruſalem. The lameneſs of Mephiboſheth is again mentioned as an inſtance of the peculiar favour ſhewn him: though a cripple might be an unſeemly ſight at a king's table, love for his father hid all blemiſhes. Note, (1.) Thoſe whom the Lord Jeſus Chriſt chuſes, he loves with all their infirmities. (2.) Our forfeited inheritance in him is reſtored to us; and though utterly undeſerving the leaſt of his regard, he kindly condeſcends to invite us to his table below, and will make us ſit down with him in his kingdom above.

CHAP. X.

1. David ſends a friendly embaſſy to Hanun king of the Ammonites, ver. 1, 2. 2. He, upon a baſe ſurmiſe, abuſes David's ambaſſadors, ver. 3, 4. 3. David reſents it, ver. 5. the Ammonites prepare for war againſt him, ver. 6. 4. David carries the war into their own country, ver. 7—12. 5. The Ammonites, and the Syrians their allies, are totally routed, ver. 13, 14. 6. The forces of the Syrians, which rallied again, are a ſecond time defeated, ver. 15—19.

1. [a] AND it came to paſs after this, that [b] the king of the children of Ammon died, and Hanun his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 2. Then ſaid David, [c] I will ſhew kindneſs unto Hanun, the ſon of Nahaſh, as his father ſhewed kindneſs unto me. And David ſent to comfort him by the hand of his ſervants, for his father. And David's ſervants came into the land of the children of Ammon. 3. And the princes of the children of Ammon ſaid unto Hanun their lord, † Thinkeſt thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath ſent comforters unto thee? [d] Hath not David rather ſent his ſervants unto thee, to ſearch the city, and to ſpy it out, and to overthrow it? 4. Wherefore Hanun took David's ſervants, and ſhaved off the one half of their [e] beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, [f] even to their buttocks, and ſent them away. 5. When they told it unto David, he ſent to meet them, becauſe the men were greatly aſhamed: and the king ſaid, [g] Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

v. 1—5. When David ſits on the throne of his kingdom, no former favours ſhewn him ſhall want a recompenſe.

1. He ſends compliments of condolence to Hanun, the ſon of Nahaſh, king of the Ammonites, on his father's death, as mindful of the kindneſſes that during his ſtate of exile Nahaſh had ſhewn him; not out of love to Iſrael indeed, but out of enmity to Saul: however, at that time they were to David very obliging, and he intended now to make an equal return. Note, (1.) We are not to ſcrutinize the motives on which good is done us; if we are relieved, we are bound to bleſs the friendly hand. (2.) It is kind to mourn with the afflicted, and by partaking to alleviate their ſorrows.

2. The ambaſſadors meet with a very ill reception. Hanun might himſelf have treated them with dignity as they deſerved, but his ſuſpicious courtiers ſuggeſt they came on a baſe deſign, as ſpies: and Hanun, as kings are too often governed by their ſervants, hearkened to their inſinuations, uſed them moſt infamouſly, in violation of the law of nations, and ſent them back with marks of the higheſt inſult and contempt; with half their beards ſhaved, and half their long garments cut off in the middle, ſo that their nakedneſs appeared. Note, (1.) There are never wanting in courts, flatterers who ſeek to inſtil poiſon, inſtead of wholſome council, into the ears of kings. (2.) A baſe mind is ever moſt ſuſpicious. (3.) They who will be ambaſſadors for the Son of David, muſt ſometimes expect the like inſult and ill uſage, and have their meſſages of peace conſtrued to the vileſt meaning.

3. David's concern was as great for his ambaſſadors, as his reſentment for the inſolence againſt himſelf, as affronted in their perſons. He ſends therefore to meet them; and as they could not appear with reſpect in any company, till their beards were grown, it being then the univerſal cuſtom to wear them long, he appoints them a retirement at Jericho. Note, (1.) Patience will wear off many reproaches; and time, the great revealer of truth, reſcue the injured from the cruel and unjuſt aſperſions of their defamers. (2.) It hath been the lot of many an innocent man under calumny, to be driven into obſcurity, whoſe righteouſneſs will by and by ſhine as the light.

6. ¶ And when the children of Ammon ſaw that they [h] ſtank before David, the children of Ammon ſent and [i] hired the Syrians of Bethrehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thouſand footmen and of king Maacah a thouſand men, and of Iſh-tob twelve thouſand men. 7. And when David heard of it, he ſent Joab, and all the hoſt of [k] the mighty men. 8. And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in aray at the entring in of the gate: and the Syrians of Zoba, and of Rehob, and Iſh-tob, and Maacah were by themſelves in the field. 9. When Joab ſaw that the front of the battle was againſt him before and behind, he choſe of all the choice men of Iſrael, and put them in aray againſt the Syrians. 10. And the reſt of the people he delivered into the hand of Abiſhai his brother, that he might put them in aray againſt the children of Ammon. 11. And he ſaid, if the Syrians be too ſtrong for me, then [l] thou ſhalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too ſtrong for thee, then I will come and help thee. 12. [m] Be of good courage, and let us play the men [n] for our people, and for the cities of our God: and the LORD do that which ſeemeth him good. 13. And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle againſt the Syrians: and they fled before him. 14. And when the children of Ammon ſaw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they alſo before Abiſhai, and entred into the city: ſo Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jeruſalem.

v. 6—14. Such an inſult could not paſs without condign puniſhment. Therefore,

1. The Ammonites expecting to feel David's reſentment, prepare for war; and fearing themſelves an unequal match, they ſtrengthen their army, by hiring a numerous body of auxiliaries from the neighbouring princes of Bethrehob, Zoba, Maacah, and Iſh-tob, to the amount of thirty-three thouſand men: the whole was divided into two bodies; the auxiliaries were drawn up without, and the Ammonites under the walls, probably of their capital. Note, The number of their forces will be little ſupport to thoſe who fight againſt God.

2. David's army penetrates into their country, and ſets the battle in array. To make a double front againſt the two bodies of the Ammonites and their confederates, Joab divides his forces into two diviſions: the ſtrongeſt himſelf led againſt the Syrians, where the greateſt reſiſtance was expected; the other he put under the conduct of Abiſhai, to fall upon the Ammonites, and prevent them from taking him in the rear. Note, (1.) It is not unweildy ſtrength, but a wiſe diſpoſition and application of our forces, that in battle uſually prevails. (2.) They who provoke the Son of David by their wickedneſs and obſtinacy, to fight againſt them with the ſword of his mouth, will find infinite wiſdom united with everlaſting ſtrength, and who then can be able to ſtand?

3. Joab encourages his brother and the officers at the council of war, bravely to play their parts. Their enemies were numerous, and advantageouſly poſted, and they muſt divide their forces to make head againſt them: if either therefore were worſted, the other muſt make a detachment to ſupport him. But the battle was the Lord's, and whilſt in dependance on him they fought for their people and the cities of their God, they might confidently expect the victory. Note, (1.) Great dangers call for greater fortitude. (2.) In our ſpiritual warfare, if our brother fall, we muſt be ready to help him up. (3.) The love of God and our country make the braveſt ſoldiers. Foreign mercenaries are an unequal match for ſuch patriots. (4.) Dependance upon God in the uſe of the means, is the ſure way to be crowned with ſucceſs.

4. The iſſue anſwered their hopes. The auxiliary Syrians being quickly routed, the Ammonites took refuge within their walls, and left the field of battle to the conquerors. The ſeaſon not permitting a farther progreſs of his arms, Joab returned to Jeruſalem in triumph, and there made preparations to puſh his conqueſts at the returning ſpring. Note, War is a grievous trade: it is a mercy that inclement ſeaſons prevent the conſtant exerciſe of it, and force the combatants to unwilling reſt.

15. ¶ And when the Syrians ſaw that they were ſmitten before Iſrael, [o] they gathered themſelves together. 16. And Hadarezer ſent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river: and they came to Helam; and [p] Shobach the captain of the hoſt of Hadarezer went before them. 17. And when it was told David, he gathered all Iſrael together, and paſſed over Jordan, and came to Helam: and the Syrians ſet themſelves in aray againſt David, and fought with him. 18. And the Syrians fled before Iſrael, and David ſlew [q] the men of ſeven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and [r] forty thouſand horſemen, and ſmote Shobach the captain of their hoſt, who died there. 19. And when all the kings that were ſervants to Hadarezer ſaw that they were ſmitten before Iſrael, they made peace with Iſrael, and ſerved them. So the Syrians [s] feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

v. 15—19. We have here,

1. A ſecond attempt of the Syrians, more fatal to them than the former. Their routed forces rallied, ſhame for their defeat ſharpened their courage; and to ſtrengthen them, Hadarezer their king ſummons his confederates and tributaries to appear from beyond the Euphrates, and a vaſt army aſſembles at Helam. Thither David in perſon leads his army to meet them, and gives them a total overthrow. Seven hundred chariots, with ſeven thouſand men who fought in them, are deſtroyed and ſlain, (See 1 Chron. xix. 17.) and forty thouſand horſe and foot fall by the ſword, with their famous Captain Shobach, the generaliſſimo of their united forces. Note, though the vanquiſhed powers of hell and corruption rally and return to the charge again, they will only the more exalt the triumphs of Jeſus our king, and make the believers crown of victory more glorious.

2. In conſequence of this victory, the Syrians deſerting the children of Ammon, ſought only to make their own peace with David; and the neighbouring princes who were tributary to Hadarezer, ſince he was no longer able to protect them, changed their maſter, and ſubmitted to the victorious king of Iſrael, and thus was fulfilled the promiſe made to Abraham, Gen. xv. 18. Note, It is wiſe to make peace and alliance with thoſe, whoſe righteous cauſe God eſpouſes.

CHAP. XI.

We have here a foul fall of David recorded, as a warning to others. Many, no doubt, have been emboldened to ſin, and hardened in it, by this ſtory, and to them it is a ſavour of death unto death; but many have by it been awakened to a holy jealouſy over themſelves, and conſtant watchfulneſs againſt ſin, and to them it is a ſavour of life unto life. 1. David commits adultery with Bath-ſheba, the wife of Uriah, ver. 1—5. 2. He contrives to father the child upon him, ver. 6—13. 3. When that project fails, he plots his death by the ſword of the Ammonites, and effects it, ver. 14—25. 4. He marries Bath-ſheba, ver. 26, 27. Let him that readeth, underſtand what the beſt of men are, when God leaves them to themſelves.

About 1036.

1. AND it came to paſs, † that after the year was expired, [a] at the time when kings go forth to battle, that David ſent Joab and his ſervants with him, and all Iſrael; and they deſtroyed the children of Ammon, and beſieged Rabbah: but [b] David tarried at Jeruſalem. 2. ¶ And it came to paſs [c] in an evening-tide, that David aroſe from off his bed, and walked upon the roof of the king's houſe: and from the roof he [d] ſaw a woman [e] waſhing herſelf, and the woman was very beautiful to look upon. 3. And David [f] ſent and enquired after the woman: and one ſaid, Is not this Bath-ſheba the daughter of Eliam, the wife of [g] Uriah the Hittite? 4. And David ſent meſſengers, and [h] took her, and ſhe came in unto him, and he lay with her, ‡ (for ſhe was purified from her uncleanneſs) and ſhe returned unto her houſe. 5. And the woman conceived, and ſent and told David, and ſaid, [i] I am with child.

v. 1—5. Dark and diſmal are the contents of this chapter. David's ſun ſuffers a dreadful eclipſe; and in the midſt of his victories abroad, he is worſe than vanquiſhed at home, fallen a ſlave under brutiſh luſts and paſſions.

1. In purſuit of the former victory, Joab preſſes hard on the deſerted Ammonites, (David being returned in triumph to Jeruſalem) and having ſubdued their country, inveſts their capital. Note, When our enemies are falling, we muſt purſue the blow.

2. David in the mean time is ſeduced into the grievous crimes of adultery and murder. Whilſt other kings are heading their forces in the field, he was indulging himſelf ingloriouſly in eaſe at home; whilſt they endured the hardſhip of a camp, he roſe from his downy bed, idly to ſaunter on the roof, and enjoy the evening's breeze: there his wandring eye rolled around; and, as ſloth had prepared the fuel, a ſpark of luſt entered, that kindled it into a flame. A beautiful woman in her garden retired, or in her chamber overlooked by the king's palace, waſhed herſelf, from her natural ceremonial impurity, and thus innocently became a ſnare to the unguarded monarch. At the ſight, unhallowed deſires kindle in his boſom; he turns not away from the inflaming object, but urged by lawleſs appetite, contrives how to enjoy her. He enquires her name and condition, and not deterred by her belonging to another man, invites her to his houſe, and tempts her to his bed; to which, with too eaſy compliance, ſhe conſents. See now the deadly gloom that covers this great character! For one moment's baſe indulgence, he is as much loſt to all ſenſe of ſhame, honour, and the fear of God, as the moſt abandoned atheiſt. Lord what is man! Every circumſtance ſerved to aggravate his crime: a king that ſhould have puniſhed with death the adulterer, one who wanted not numerous wives of his own; an aged man, in whom theſe youthful luſts were doubly brutiſh; the perſon injured, his friend and ſervant, now fighting for him in the field; and an accompliſhed woman, before innocent and reſpectable, prevailed upon perhaps, not more by the glare of his crown, than the fame of his piety, as though that could not be criminal which David propoſed. Note, (1.) On this ſide the grave, no man is ſecure from preſumptuous ſins. (2.) The luſts of the fleſh are the moſt beſetting evils, and the laſt to be ſubdued. (3.) They who make proviſion for the fleſh, by ſloth and ſenſuality, are prepared for every temptation. (4.) When we are out of the way of duty, we can no longer expect Divine protection. (5.) If the eye be ſuffered to wander, the heart will not be long reſtrained from ſin. (6.) Every indulgence given to carnal appetite, leaves us more unable to reſiſt its cravings, and hurries body and ſoul headlong into perdition, (7.) When once the heart is given up to lewdneſs, then men can ſacrifice honour, intereſt, friends, yea God himſelf, to the idol of their hateful paſſions.

6. ¶ And David ſent to Joab, ſaying, Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab ſent Uriah to David. 7. And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him † how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war proſpered. 8. And David ſaid to Uriah, [k] Go down to thy houſe, and waſh thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the king's houſe, and there followed him a meſs of meat from the king. 9. But Uriah ſlept at the door of the king's houſe, with all the ſervants of his lord, and went not down to his houſe. 10. And when they had told David, ſaying, Uriah went not down unto his houſe, David ſaid unto Uriah, Cameſt thou not from thy journey? why then didſt thou not go down unto thine houſe? 11. And Uriah ſaid unto David, The ark, and Iſrael, and Judah abide in tents, and [l] my lord Joab, and the ſervants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields; ſhall I then go into mine houſe, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? As thou liveſt, and as thy ſoul liveth, I will not do this thing. 12. And David ſaid to Uriah, Tarry here to day alſo, and to-morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah riah abode in Jeruſalem, that day and the morrow. 13. And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him, and he made him drunk: and at even he went out to lie on his bed with the ſervants of his lord, but went not down to his houſe.

v. 6—13. We have here,

1. The fruit of this illicit commerce. David had ſent her home, and all ſeemed to be huſhed up, but God will bring to light theſe hidden works of darkneſs. Bathſheba conceived; and juſtly apprehenſive of the danger ſhe ſtood in from an enraged huſband, acquaints the king, who no doubt had not ſtuck to promiſe her an infamous protection. Note, Promiſes of ſecreſy and impunity, are the great emboldeners to impurity.

2. David is alarmed for his own character, as well as Bathſheba's honour and ſafety, and contrives to ſave both by ſending for Uriah, concluding he would readily go home to his wife, and then the child would be regarded as his. He bids Joab ſend him, under pretext of enquiring how the ſiege advanced, receives him graciouſly, entertains him, and ſends him down to his houſe, to refreſh himſelf after his journey. And now David probably ſlept quieter than he had done before, and ſaid in his fooliſh heart, I ſhall have peace, the darkneſs ſhall cover me. Thus often do men deceive themſelves, till their abominable ſin be found out.

3. Uriah went not home, but lay down in the guard-chamber. David no doubt made enquiry about him, and was greatly diſappointed to find his plot not ſucceed. Another day he makes a viler attempt upon him; he calls him, expreſſes his wonder at his not going home, and hears the generous warrior expreſs that noble reſolution, ver. 11. which ſhould have awakened up every remaining ſentiment of gratitude and ſhame in his perfidious boſom. But David had loſt ſhame when he forſook God, and therefore ſeeks to effect that by making him drunk, which he could not obtain from him when he was ſober: but God's over-ruling providence defeated his purpoſe; and Uriah, though inflamed with wine and mirth, forgets not his oath, perſeveres in his noble ſentiments, and lies down again with David's ſervants at the palace-gate. Note, (1.) One ſin ſeldom comes alone, but uſually requires others to conceal it. (2.) The greateſt cruelty we can do our neighbour, is to lead him into ſin; the loſs of his wife's affection, and the attempt to father on him a ſpurious brood, were not ſo great injuries to Uriah, as to bring the guilt of drunkenneſs on his conſcience. (3.) When ſin hath hardened the heart, the ſtrongeſt warnings and notices are diſregarded.

14. ¶ And it came to paſs in the morning, that David wrote a letter to Joab, and ſent it by the hand of Uriah. 15. And [m] he wrote in the letter, ſaying, [n] Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the † hotteſt battle, and retire ye from him, that he may be ſmitten and die. 16. And it came to paſs, when Joab obſerved the city, that [o] he aſſigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were. 17. And the men of the city went out, and fought with Joab: and there fell ſome of the people of the ſervants of David, and Uriah the Hittite died alſo. 18. ¶ Then Joab ſent, and told David all the things concerning the war: 19. And charged the meſſenger, ſaying, When thou haſt made an end of telling the matters of the war unto the king, 20. And if ſo be that the king's wrath ariſe, and he ſay unto thee, Wherefore approached ye ſo nigh unto the city when ye did fight? knew ye not that they would ſhoot from the wall? 21. Who ſmote [p] Abimelech the ſon of Jerubbeſheth? did not a woman caſt a piece of a milſtone upon him from the wall, that he died in Thebez? why went ye nigh the wall? Then ſay thou, Thy ſervant Uriah the Hittite is dead alſo. 22. ¶ So the meſſenger went, and came and ſhewed David all that Joab had ſent him for. 23. And the meſſenger ſaid unto David, Surely the men prevailed againſt us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the entring of the gate. 24. And the ſhooters ſhot from off the wall upon thy ſervants, and ſome of the king's ſervants be dead, and thy ſervant Uriah the Hittite is dead alſo. 25. Then David ſaid unto the meſſenger, Thus ſhalt thou ſay unto Joab, Let not this thing ‡ diſpleaſe thee: for the ſword devoureth one as well as another: make thy battle more ſtrong againſt the city, and [q] overthrow it; and encourage thou him. 26. ¶ And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her huſband was dead, ſhe mourned for her huſband. 27. And when the mourning was paſt, David ſent, and fet her to his houſe, and ſhe became his wife, and bare him a ſon: but the thing that David had done diſpleaſed the LORD.

v. 14—27. When once the devil hath entangled us, we know not whither he will lead us. David little intended the murder of Uriah, when firſt he caſt his eyes upon his wife; but the way of wickedneſs is ſteep, and when nothing but this he thinks can conceal his ſhame, he heſitates not at the crime.

1. Uriah is himſelf made the meſſenger of his execution. He ſeems to have entertained no ſuſpicion of what had paſſed, and leſs of what was meditating againſt him; whilſt David, covered with crimes and dark deſigns, plots his ruin, and in ſuch a way, as might moſt effectually remove him without ſuſpicion of his being acceſſary to his death. With deliberate malice therefore he dictates the fatal letter, takes advantage of Uriah's known courage, to place him in the poſt of danger, and with baſeſt ingratitude thus repays his fidelity: many muſt neceſſarily be involved in his fall; but now David is laviſh of the blood of his ſubjects, and dares to tempt, nay command Joab to be an accomplice in the crime; bringing guilt upon his cauſe, giving the Ammonites courage, and endangering thereby the loſs of his army, and perhaps of his crown withal: well may it be ſaid, that they who are given up to their luſts, are led captive by the devil at his will. Note, (1.) Sin blinds the eyes, then hardens the heart. (2.) Deliberate malice and murder is the ſummit of human wickedneſs. (3.) Many dare do what they dare not own. Such atheiſts are ſinners that no fear of God reſtrains them, if they can but conceal their ſhame from the eyes of men.

2. Joab failed not to execute the king's orders; perhaps pleaſed to find his king no longer able to reproach him with innocent blood, as involved in the ſame guilt, or, it may be, concluding that Uriah was guilty of ſome crime, for which David thus choſe to puniſh him, rather than by a public execution. He ſets him therefore on an aſſault, where the greateſt oppoſition was expected, and not ſupporting him properly, he fell with other brave ſoldiers, advancing to the breach. Note, (1.) It is a pleaſure to the ſinful world, to find thoſe in any particular like themſelves, who are high in a religious profeſſion, and nothing tends more to harden them in their iniquities. (2.) Obedience to the king's orders are not always a ſufficient warrant of excuſe.

3. An expreſs brings David the welcome tidings of Uriah's death; and Joab bids him cloſe his narrative of their loſs in the attack with this article, as what would prevent all upbraiding. The meſſenger makes an exact report, and carefully inſerts the laſt particular; as what, from Joab's manner of ordering him, he might well ſuſpect the king deſired to hear. Note, God often leaves ſinners to run to the end of their line, and proſper in their iniquities, but the time of recompenſe is at hand.

4. David is perfectly ſatisfied with the relation; counts nothing of the loſs of ſo many brave men, and bids Joab not be diſheartned, but carry on the ſiege with vigour, and encourage himſelf and the army to continue their approaches.

5. Without delay, he acquaints Bath-ſheba with the death of her huſband, and after the ſhorteſt mourning, probably not more than ſeven days, (See 1 Sam. xxxi. 7.) ſhe becomes his wife: thus all the matter ſeemed huſhed up, and the child, tho' ſomewhat before the time, would not come ſo much out of ſeaſon, but that it might paſs without ſuſpicion of evil; but there was an eye, from which theſe vain coverings could not conceal his guilt and ſhame. God marked his dark and winding way; and, with juſt indignation, regards the various ſteps of this infamous procedure, from the firſt riſing of concupiſcence till the ſword was bathed in Uriah's blood, and his adulterous wife was taken to his bed. Note, (1.) Let men promiſe themſelves what ſecreſy they will, there is an eye from which no darkneſs, or ſhadow of death, can hide the works of iniquity. (2.) The ſins of God's people have a peculiar aggravation in his ſight; and though his eternal deſignation cannot be made void, he will make them feel that ſeverity of correction, which will bring them to bitter anguiſh over the iniquities which provoked it.

were two men in one city; the one rich, and the other poor. 2. The rich man had exceeding [d] many flocks and herds: 3. But the poor man had nothing ſave one little ewe-lamb, which he had bought and nouriſhed up: and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay on his own boſom, and [e] was unto him as a daughter. 4. And [f] there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he ſpared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dreſs for the way-faring man that was come unto him, but took the poor man's lamb, and dreſſed it for the man that was come to him. 5. And David's anger was greatly kindled againſt the man, and he ſaid to Nathan, As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing ſhall † ſurely die. 6. And he ſhall reſtore the lamb [g] four-fold, becauſe he did this thing, and becauſe he had no pity. 7. ¶ And Nathan ſaid to David, [h] Thou art the man. Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, I [i] anointed thee king over Iſrael, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul: 8. And I gave thee thy maſter's houſe, and thy maſter's wives into thy boſom, and gave thee the houſe of Iſrael and of Judah; and [k] if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee ſuch and ſuch things. 9. Wherefore haſt thou deſpiſed [l] the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his ſight? [m] thou haſt killed Uriah the Hittite with the ſword, and haſt taken his wife to be thy wife, and haſt ſlain him with the ſword of the children of Ammon. 10. Now therefore [n] the ſword ſhall never depart from thine houſe; becauſe thou haſt deſpiſed me, and haſt taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife. 11. Thus ſaith the LORD, Behold, I will raiſe up evil againſt thee out of thine own houſe, and [o] I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, and he ſhall lie with thy wives in the ſight of this ſun. 12. For thou didſt it ſecretly: but [p] I will do this thing before all Iſrael, and before the ſun. 13. And David ſaid unto Nathan, [q] I have ſinned againſt the LORD. And Nathan ſaid unto David, [r] The LORD alſo hath put away thy ſin; thou ſhalt not die. 14. Howbeit, becauſe by this deed thou haſt given great occaſion to the enemies of the LORD [s] to blaſpheme, the child alſo that is born unto thee, ſhall ſurely die.

v. 1—14. If God were not to reſtore us in our vile and ſinful departures from him, every iniquity would iſſue in apoſtacy; but he hateth putting away, therefore he delivers our ſouls, when we ſeem appointed unto death.

Nine long months, or more, had David now exchanged communion with his gracious God, for indulgence of his baſe deſires; and though, no doubt, pangs of remorſe ſometimes ſtung his ſpirit, no evidences of his repentance yet appeared, and he ſeemed in peace to enjoy the fruits of his iniquity. But now,

1. God ſends Nathan the prophet to awaken him from his lethargy. David had not caſt off probably the form of religion, though ſo degenerated from the power of it, but ſtill retained and honoured the prophets and prieſts of the Lord, and continued a profeſſion of godlineſs. Nathan inſtantly obeys the command, and whilſt prepared to reprove him ſharply, yet introduces his meſſage in ſuch a way, as to inſinuate deeper into David's conſcience, and leave him ſelf-condemned. Note, A reproof wiſely adminiſtered, is doubly effectual.

2. Nathan appears a poor man's advocate to the king againſt a rich oppreſſor, and, under this fictitious character, repreſents the circumſtances of David's guilt, and draws from him his own condemnation. He repreſents the caſe as lately happening between two men, (David and Uriah), the one rich in flocks and herds, (for David had many wives); the other poſſeſſing but one ewe lamb, (Bathſheba), which lay in his boſom, and was treated with the greateſt tenderneſs: a traveller coming to the rich man, (Satan, who goeth to and fro in the earth to tempt, or his own inordinate concupiſcence, that craved indulgence), he ſpared his own flocks and herds, (his own wives, which he might have gone in to), and robbed the poor man of his lamb (even Uriah's wife), to dreſs for the traveller, (his own corrupt luſt and appetite). So tender a ſtory awakened David's anger; and, little ſuſpecting how nearly he was concerned, he ſwears the offender ſhall die for his inhumanity, as well as his oppreſſion. Note, (1.) Every wife hath a title to her huſband's ſingular and endeared affection. (2.) Multiplying wives never cures concupiſcence, but inflames it. He who is not ſatisfied with one, will never be ſatisfied with more. (3.) They are often ſevereſt in their cenſures on others, who are themſelves moſt deſerving of that ſeverity. (4.) They who pronounce ſentence in anger, will, it is to be feared, exceed the boundaries of juſtice as well as mercy.

3. Nathan unmaſks his battery againſt David's conſcience, and plainly charges him home with the guilt he had condemned. Thou art the man; thou haſt not only robbed the poor man of his lamb, but of his life too. In the name of the God of Iſrael, that ſacred name before which he uſed to tremble, Nathan upbraids him with his deep ingratitude: God had delivered him from Saul, had given him a kingdom, and his maſter's wives into his boſom; filled his houſe with riches, and would have done for him more, if that had not ſufficed him. Moſt ungrateful therefore were theſe returns. He boldly charges his crimes upon him; high contempt of God, and the greateſt baſeneſs and cruelty to man. He had deſpiſed God's government by the moſt open violation of his commands; had murdered Uriah, with the deepeſt treachery, by the ſword of the uncircumciſed, after plunging him into the guilt of drunkenneſs, and had taken his wife, firſt to the bed of adultery, and then, to conſecrate his villainy, had covered with an honourable name ſo foul a deed, and married her whom he had debauched. Therefore he denounces the ſentence of terrible but moſt juſt judgment againſt him. The ſword he had ſo wickedly uſed, ſhould ſmite his own houſe, and never depart from it; beginning in the ſlaughter of his ſons Amnon and Abſolom, and, after long wars, compleating the ruin of his kingdom, and at laſt of his poſterity. The adultery he had committed ſecretly, ſhould be viſited upon him in his own wives, proſtituted in the ſight of the ſun; and this evil, for its greater aggravation, ſhould ariſe out of his own houſe; a houſe he would live to ſee defiled with murder, inceſt, rebellion, and full of miſery and wretchedneſs. Note, (1.) We muſt deal plainly and freely with the ſinner's conſcience. (2.) The root of all ſin is unbelief of the divine threatnings, making men count light of the divine law. (3.) The poiſoned chalice returns juſtly to the lips of him that mingled it. (4.) They muſt pay dear for their luſts, who dare indulge them, either in preſent puniſhment, or ſhortly in eternal torment.

4. David, thunderſtruck with the application, confounded with guilt, and ſelf-condemned, confeſſes the charge, owns the heinouſneſs of his guilt againſt God, and is ready to ſink under deſpair on the black review. But God, though correcting him, will not give him over unto death. He revives his failing heart with hope; Thou ſhalt not die, as a murderer and adulterer deſerves; thy ſin is put away, is forgiven, ſo far as relates to eternal puniſhment. But let him not think all was over; no, dire marks of God's diſpleaſure he ſhould receive, becauſe God will vindicate his honour, which was by this wicked conduct blaſphemed among the people; and, as a preſent ſtriking inſtance of God's anger, he denounces the death of the new-born babe: though he ſhall not die in his ſin, he ſhall not enjoy the fruit of it. Note, (1.) The only way to avoid the judgments we have provoked, is by returning to God, through Jeſus Chriſt, with humble acknowledgment of our guilt. (2.) They ſhall not die eternally, whoſe iniquity God in his dear Son hath put away and forgiven. (3.) Nothing cauſes more reproach on God and his cauſe, than theſe ſcandalous falls of profeſſors. (4.) God will make thoſe ſins bitter to his people, in which they fooliſhly and wickedly ſought enjoyment, and by dire experience cauſe them to feel how evil and bitter a thing it is to tranſgreſs againſt him.

15. ¶ And Nathan departed unto his houſe: and the LORD ſtruck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very ſick. 16. David therefore [t] beſought God for the child, and David † faſted, and went in, and [u] lay all night upon the earth. 17. And the elders of his houſe aroſe and went to him, to raiſe him up from the earth: but he would not, neither did he eat bread with them. 18. And it came to paſs on the ſeventh day, that the child died; and the ſervants of David feared to tell him that the child was dead: for they ſaid, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we ſpake unto him, and he would not hearken unto our voice: how will he then vex himſelf, if we tell him that the child is dead? 19. But when David ſaw that his ſervants whiſpered, David perceived that the child was dead: therefore David ſaid unto his ſervants, Is the child dead? And they ſaid, He is dead. 20. Then David aroſe from the earth, and waſhed, and anointed himſelf, and changed his apparel, and came into the houſe of the LORD, and [x] worſhipped: then he came to his own houſe, and when he required, they ſet bread before him, and he did eat. 21. I faſted and wept: for I ſaid, [y] Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live? 23. But now he is dead, wherefore ſhould I faſt? Can I bring him back again? I ſhall go to him, but he ſhall not return to me. 24. ¶ And David [z] comforted Bath-ſheba his wife, and went in unto her, and lay with her: and [a] ſhe bare a ſon, and [b] he called his name ‡ Solomon; and the LORD loved him. 25. And he ſent by the hand of Nathan the prophet; and he called his name § Jedidiah, becauſe of the LORD.

v. 15—25. Nathan, having delivered his meſſage, leaves David to ruminate over it, and to expect the threatened afflictions.

1. The child was inſtantly ſmitten with a diſeaſe no phyſicians could cure. David beheld with bitter anguiſh its ſickneſs, and every groan of the babe pierced his heart with the remembrance of his ſin. He fell down before the Lord in prayer, and faſted, and paſſed the night on the ground, diſconſolate, and bitter in ſoul, beſeeching God for the child, if he might yet be ſpared. In vain the elders of his houſe attempt to comfort him; his anguiſh made him loathe his food, and in the duſt he poured forth his penitential tears. Note, When a ſoul is brought to an awakened ſenſe of ſin, and outward afflictions at the ſame time lie heavy upon it, the bitterneſs of ſuch a wounded ſpirit none can conceive, that have not taſted it. Then the pains of hell overtook him, and the ſorrows of death came about him.

2. The ſeventh day from his birth, and the next probably from his ſeizure, the child died. David's ſervants, who had been witneſſes of his deep concern, were afraid to tell him: to them he ſeemed before to lie half dead on the earth through ſorrow; they were therefore apprehenſive, that ſuch a ſtroke might quite overwhelm him. David obſerved their whiſpers, and gueſſed at the cauſe. He aſked, and was informed of the death of his child. Calmly he then aroſe, his countenance compoſed from ſorrow, in ſilent ſubmiſſion to the holy will of God; he waſhed, anointed, changed his mournful garments, went to the tabernacle to worſhip, acknowledging God's juſtice, and humbling his ſoul before him; then returned, and called for meat, and was no more ſad. His ſervants wondered at this change of his behaviour, till he informed them of the cauſe. While there was life, he hoped prayer might prevail, and God might yet graciouſly hear and ſpare the child; but when the child was dead, to mourn was fruitleſs, and prayer in vain. Submiſſion now was the path of duty, and his conſolation, the hope of meeting the dear babe in a better world. Note, (1.) Whilſt our dear relatives are within the reach of prayer, we are permitted to be importunate: when death determines God's decree, it becomes us humbly to be reſigned to the good will of God. (2.) The death of others ſhould remind us of our own. (3.) A pious parent may with comfort part from the infant, ſnatched from the womb almoſt to the grave; for as it hath known no actual ſin, we may comfortably hope through Chriſt it ſhall know no ſorrow; for the promiſe is to us and to our children. (4.) It is pleaſing to look to that bleſſed time, when we ſhall meet again thoſe our dear friends, who have fallen aſleep in Chriſt before us, and whom he ſhall bring with him in a reſurrection day.

3. David, by faith reſtored again to the joys of God's ſalvation, comforted the companion of his ſin, now the wife of his boſom. God had forgiven them; and though he took one ſon, he gave them another. Bathſheba again conceived, and Solomon is born. His name was given him, as being the ſeal of God's peace with his parents, and as the type of the Eternal Prince of Peace. God's favour was towards him, and Nathan is ſent to ſignify it by a new name, Jedidiah, the beloved of the Lord. Note, (1.) Submiſſion to God's afflictions is the way to obtain the reſtoration of our loſt comforts. (2.) Every child of grace, though ſprung like Solomon from evil doers, through divine mercy obtains a new nature, as well as a new name, and is a Jedidiah, the beloved of the Lord.

v. 26—31. The conqueſt of Rabbah and the Ammonites is here inſerted, to compleat the narrative, interrupted with the account of David's ſin and repentance, and ſeems to have happened ſoon after the death of Uriah.

1. Joab having cut off the ſupplies of water from the beſieged, and ſeeing them reduced to extremities, ſends to inform his prince, that he may come in perſon and compleat the conqueſt, that ſo the honour may be his, which ſhewed a noble ſpirit in Joab, who could thus prefer his ſovereign's glory to his own.

2. David with his forces arrives in the camp; they give a general aſſault, and carry the city. The king is made priſoner, his crown taken from his head, and transferred to the conqueror. Vaſt it was, and precious with gold and jewels, a talent in weight, or, as ſome have thought, becauſe of the weight being inſupportable, a talent of gold in value; or perhaps a Syriac talent, which was but a fourth of the Hebrew, and ſomewhat above three and twenty pounds. Abundance of other rich ſpoil was taken, and the people, as the text intimates, treated with the greateſt ſeverity, of which we have inſtances before, Judg. iii. 6, 7. and, no doubt, a juſt retaliation to a cruel nation; though ſome have ſuggeſted, that David's hardened ſtate of mind at this time made him cruel, and cauſed him to inflict theſe tortures on the vanquiſhed. A learned man hath given us another ſenſe, however, which the words may bear, and will greatly ſoften the apparent ſeverity. That David put them not under ſaws, but to ſaws, to cut wood and ſtone; and to iron mines to dig; and to axes of iron, to fell timber, after he had made them paſs with their king, as captives before him. Note, Woe to the ſoul that the ſpiritual David, the Lord Jeſus, ſeizes in anger, and torments for his ſins: worſe than theſe tortures will be his lot in that burning furnace, where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

And Amnon was ſo vexed, that [a] he fell ſick for his ſiſter Tamar; for ſhe was a virgin: and Amnon thought it hard for him to do any thing to her. 3. But Amnon had [b] a friend, whoſe name was Jonadab, the ſon of Shimeah, David's brother: and Jonadab was [c] a very ſubtil man. 4. And he ſaid unto him, Why art thou, being the king's ſon, lean from day to day; wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon ſaid unto him, [d] I love Tamar, my brother Abſalom's ſiſter. 5. § Heb. Amnon ſpoke out of contempt.

v. 1—20. The bad example of David's ſins ſeems to have been much more imitated by his ſons, than the repentance and piety towards God, which he had teſtified.

1. Amnon, David's eldeſt ſon, falls in love with his beautiful ſiſter Tamar, born of the ſame mother with Abſalom. Tho' ſhocking and unnatural the deſire, he indulged it; and, as there was no hope of his ever ſeducing her, he fell ſick with vexation. Note, (1.) Near relatives ſhould be cautious, that the love of fraternal affection degenerates not into the raging of lawleſs luſt. (2.) Sin brings its curſe along with it, and the body often ſuffers for the indulgence of vile affections.

2. Amnon's friend Jonadab, his couſin-german, obſerved the ſtrange alteration in his countenance, and perceived there was ſome ſecret uneaſineſs which preyed upon him. He therefore enquires into the cauſe, why he, a king's ſon, and heir apparent, who wanted nothing that power or wealth could give, ſhould be lean from day to day, pine amidſt the pleaſures of a court, unable to reliſh any of the joys round him. Note, (1.) The greateſt are not the happieſt. The palace hath often miſeries and diſcontent unknown in a cottage. (2.) The ſons of wickedneſs may well be wretched; but why ſhould the children of the heavenly king, and heirs of glory, thus go mourning all the day long? It is highly unſeemly and diſhonourable to their profeſſion.

3. Amnon dares reveal his guilty paſſion; no doubt they had been companions before in iniquity, and this emboldened him. The cauſe of his leanneſs is love for his ſiſter; for with this honourable name he cloathes his infamous paſſion. The crafty Jonadab, far from rebuking his wickedneſs as a true friend, puts him in a way to gratify his luſt, v. 5. and thus brings him to his ruin. The advice is quickly followed. Amnon, who had long looked ill, now pretends to be unable to riſe or eat: the king his father tenderly viſits him, to enquire if he could do any thing for him, and entertains not the leaſt ſuſpicion, when he requeſts his ſiſter Tamar to make him a cake, as if his ſtomach loathed other food. Tamar is ſent for, and willingly obeys. Unſuſpicious of danger, and ready to nurſe her ſick brother, as well as to ſhew her duty to her honoured father, ſhe kneads the cakes before Amnon, and thinks it not beneath her dignity to tend him. Note, (1.) A wicked man's friendſhip is a great curſe, as tending to lead us to ſin, and flatter us to our ruin. (2.) They who harbour no ill deſigns themſelves, are moſt unſuſpicious of others. (3.) No office is beneath us, which charity calls us to. (4.) Though a great lady may not be called to exerciſe herſelf in ſervile employments, yet it is a valuable accompliſhment to know how their family concerns ought to be done.

4. The deceit having ſucceeded, Amnon contrives to execute his wicked purpoſe. He diſmiſſes his attendants, and begs his ſiſter to bring the cakes into his chamber. There, where no eye ſaw him, he ſeizes her as his prey, and entices her to conſent to his infamous deſign. Note, (1.) It is dangerous for thoſe who have youth and beauty to be alone with their tempter. (2.) Deeds of darkneſs ſeek the covert; but where ſhall the workers of iniquity hide themſelves from the eye of God?

5. Shocked at the propoſal, and ſtruggling to get free from his embraces, ſhe remonſtrates againſt his deſign. He had called her ſiſter; ſhe calls him brother: the very mention of their relation were enough to ſilence the propoſal. She intreats him not to uſe violence, for conſent ſhe could not; repreſents the great wickedneſs of ſuch an attempt; the ſhame with which ſhe muſt be covered, and the everlaſting reproach wherewith his name would be branded. But that ſhe might not drive him to deſpair, ſhe ſuggeſts, that if he aſked her of her father in an honourable way, he might not deny his requeſt. Not that ſhe wiſhed, orthought this would be the caſe; but if ſhe now could amuſe him by hope, ſhe might eaſily ſecure herſelf from any future danger. Note, (1.) It is great folly indeed, for a momentary gratification, to ruſh into everlaſting miſery. (2.) If to be put to ſhame among men is ſo confounding, how much more, when before God and angels, and the aſſembled world, the ſinner's abominable deeds ſhall be brought to light?

Before Chriſt 1034.

6. No intreaties prevail, and reſiſtance is vain. His brutal rage urges him to perpetrate the horrid deed, and Tamar is undone. Note, Where luſt reigns, men are inſenſible of fear or ſhame, and deaf to all the remonſtrances of reaſon and religion.

7. No ſooner was his lawleſs paſſion ſatiated with enjoyment, than his loathing was greater than his love. He cannot bear her in his preſence; he hates the very ſight of her, and bids her be gone. In vain ſhe upbraids him with his cruelty, and expoſtulates on the barbarity and diſgrace to which he expoſed her. He adds inſult to his hatred; bids his ſervants drag her out of doors in all her diſorder and confuſion, and bolt the door, to prevent her return. There is ſomething ſo inhuman and ſhocking in the whole tranſaction, that we cannot read it without horror and indignation. Note, The pleaſures of luſt often here turn into loathing of the perſon which miniſtred to them; and in hell it will be a part of the ſinner's torment, to hear the bitter upbraidings of the deluded, and to be condemned to dwell, where every object excites his hatred, and aggravates his pangs.

8. Unhappy Tamar, miſerable without guilt, rends her princely garments, puts aſhes on her head, and with bitter weeping retires to her brother Abſalom's houſe. Her diſtreſs beſpoke her ſituation, and Abſalom, from her being with Amnon, knowing his villainy, gueſſes what Tamar dares not tell. He bids her hold her peace: to ſpeak of her diſgrace, would only be her own ſhame; and Amnon being her brother, it would reflect diſhonour on the whole family; and by ſuch ſilence he intended, I preſume, to lull Amnon into ſecurity, the more eaſily to take by and by the revenge he meditated. Thus Tamar abode deſolate in her brother's houſe. Note, (1.) A woman's virtue once loſt, nothing can reſtore it; the mark is indelible. (2.) How cruel, for a moment's pleaſure, to expoſe a beautiful and accompliſhed woman, who might have lived to be the ornament of her ſex and family, to a life of contempt, wretchedneſs, and ſolitude, or worſe, abandoned licentiouſneſs!

21. ¶ But when king David heard of all theſe things [q] he was very wroth. 22. And Abſalom ſpake unto his brother Amnon neither good nor bad: for [r] Abſalom hated Amnon, becauſe he had forced his ſiſter Tamar.
23. ¶ And it came to paſs after two full years, that Abſalom [s] had ſheep-ſhearers in Baal-hazor, which is beſide Ephraim: and Abſalom invited all the king's ſons. 24. And Abſalom came to the king, and ſaid, Behold now thy ſervant hath ſheep-ſhearers, [t] let the king, I beſeech thee, and his ſervants, go with thy ſervant. 25. And the king ſaid to Abſalom, Nay, my ſon, let us not all now go, leſt we be chargeable unto thee. And he preſſed him: howbeit he would not go, but bleſſed him. 26. Then ſaid Abſalom, If not, I pray thee, [u] let my brother Amnon go with us.
And the king ſaid unto him, Why ſhould he go with thee? 27. But Abſalom preſſed him, that he let Amnon and all the king's ſons go with him. 28. ¶ Now Abſalom had [x] commanded his ſervants, ſaying, Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and when I ſay unto you, Smite Amnon, [y] then kill him, fear not: have not I commanded you? be courageous, and be † valiant. 29. And the ſervants of Abſalom did unto Amnon as Abſalom had commanded: then all the king's ſons aroſe, and every man ‡ gat him upon his

v. 21—29, Such a tranſaction as this could not be concealed.

1. David hears of it, and very wroth he was; but inſtead of puniſhing this rape and inceſt with death, as it deſerved, he ſpared his ſon; but God will not; vengeance ſhall overtake him. Note, Over-indulgent parents, by their ſinful lenity, make a ſevere ſcourge for themſelves.

2. Abſalom, though ſilent, entertains deep-rooted vengeance in his boſom. He ſaw probably, that to ſeek for juſtice were vain; or he deſired the malicious gratification of being his own avenger. Two long years he waited opportunity, whilſt the civility of his carriage, and his taking no notice of the rape, had had now removed all ſuſpicion of the bloody revenge he meditated in his heart. But now the day approaches for the accompliſhment of his dark deſign, a feſtal day, when, on ſhearing his ſheep, he invited the king and his family to grace his entertainment at Baal-hazor; and when his father, fearing it would be too expenſive and burdenſome to him if they all went, excuſed himſelf, thanked him for his kindneſs, and gave him his paternal benediction, he preſſes him at leaſt to ſend his brethren, and Amnon in particular, as the moſt honourable. David with reluctance, at his importunity, complies; and Amnon, unſuſpicious of the plot, goes with his brethren to the feaſt. Note, (1.) The longer hatred is ſmothered, the fiercer it burns; and when it finds the moment for revenge, the deeper it ſtrikes. (2.) Many are over-generous in their invitations, and conſider not the expence of their entertainments, till the preſſures of poverty make them ſmart for their extravagance.

3. The feſtal board is ſpread, the glaſs goes round, and Amnon, fluſhed with wine, little ſuſpects the ſword which hangs over him. The ſignal is given, which had before been concerted between Abſalom and his ſervants; they ſuddenly ruſh into the room, and lay Amnon dead at their feet. Such were their maſter's guilty commands, and they judge this ſufficient to authoriſe them; whilſt he, who, as next heir to the crown, would be able to protect them, encourages them not to ſtartle at the bloody work, but courageouſly execute his orders. Hereupon all the king's ſons fled, fearing leaſt the ſame fate ſhould overtake them. Note, (1.) To die drunk is very terrible. (2.) The fear of man is uſually ſtronger than the fear of God; and many dare not diſpute the commands of a maſter, though at the hazard of their eternal damnation. (3.) It was juſt in God to permit the death of Amnon, though wicked in Abſalom to aſſaſſinate him. When ſinners execute God's deſigns, they mean no ſuch thing; and, whilſt inſtruments of his vengeance, fill up the meaſure of their own iniquities.

30. ¶ And it came to paſs, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, ſaying, Abſalom hath ſlain all the king's ſons, and there is not one of them left. 31. Then the king aroſe, and [z] tare his garments, and [a] lay on the earth; and all his ſervants ſtood by [b] with their clothes rent. 32. And Jonadab the ſon of Shimeah, David's brother, anſwered and ſaid, Let not my lord ſuppoſe that they have ſlain all the young men the king's ſons; for Amnon only is dead: [c] for by the appointment of [d] Abſalom this hath been determined, from the day that he forced his ſiſter Tamar. 33. Now therefore, let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's ſons are dead: for Amnon only is dead. 34. But Abſalom [e] fled. And the young man that kept the watch, lift up his eyes, and looked, and behold, there came much people by the way of the hill-ſide behind him. 35. And Jonadab ſaid unto the king, Behold, the king's ſons come: as thy ſervant ſaid, ſo it is. 36. And it came to paſs, as ſoon as he had made an end of ſpeaking, that behold, the king's ſons came, and lift up their voice and wept: and the king alſo, and all his ſervants wept † very ſore. 37. ¶ But Abſalom fled, and went to [f] Talmai, the ſon of Ammihud, king of Geſhur: and David mourned for his ſon every day. 38. So Abſalom fled, and went to Geſhur, and was there three years. 39. And the ſoul of king David longed to go forth unto Abſalom: for [g] he was comforted concerning Amnon, ſeeing he was dead.

v. 30—39. Bad news flies apace, and never loſes in the relation.

1. David is alarmed with the death of all his ſons; ſuch were the firſt flying reports; and, ready to fear the worſt, in remembrance of his paſt doings, and the threatenings againſt his family, he rends his cloaths, and falls proſtrate on the earth in an agony of grief, whilſt his ſervants, with their cloaths rent, ſtood round him. Note, It becomes us to ſympathize with the afflicted.

2. Jonadab, who ſuſpected the truth from reflecting on former circumſtances, though it can hardly be thought privy to the deſign, ſuggeſts, that Amnon only is dead, in revenge for his rape of Tamar; and the event verified his concluſion, for the king's ſons now appeared in ſight from the watch-tower, and haſte to his preſence. There with tears they report the ſad cataſtrophe; and though it was ſome alleviation that they were not all ſlain, yet Amnon's death awakened the king's bitter ſorrow. Note, (1.) In all our calamities we have to thank God they are no worſe. (2.) The loſs of a ſon, and a wicked ſon too, is a deep wound in a godly parent's heart.

3. Abſalom fled immediately from juſtice, and ſought an aſylum with his grandfather Talmai, where three years he lived an exile. Note, One raſh action often makes the whole life miſerable.

Before Christ 1029.

4. As time wore off the grief for the dead Amnon, the love of the living Abſalom revived. His ſin was overlooked, and his return ardently longed for; though how to reſtore him, in oppoſition to honour and juſtice, David knew not. The next chapter will inform us how it was brought about. Note, (1.) It is a mercy time blunts the edge of ſorrow, elſe all our days would be embittered with mourning. (2.) The greateſt provocations cannot extinguiſh parental affection.

CHAP. XIV.

Abſalom's return is here brought about by a contrivance of Joab. 1. He ſoborns a widow of Tekoah to make a feigned complaint, and draw from the king a promiſe of pardon for her ſon, who had ſlain his brother, ver. 1—20. 2. This applied to Abſalom's caſe, on which he is brought back, but forbidden the court, ver. 21—24. 3. His perfect reconciliation at laſt, with an account of his perſon and family, ver. 25—33.

1. NOW Joab the ſon of Zeruiah perceived that [a] the king's heart was towards Abſalom. 2. And Joab ſent to Tekoah, and fetcht thence [b] a wiſe woman, and ſaid unto her, I pray thee, feign thyſelf to be a mourner, and put on now mourning-apparel, and [c] anoint not thyſelf with oil, but be as a woman that had a long time mourned for the dead: 3. And come to the king, and ſpeak on this manner unto him: [d] So Joab put the words in her mouth. 4. ¶ And when the woman of Tekoah ſpake to the king, ſhe fell on her face to the ground, and did obeiſance, and ſaid, Help, O king. 5. And [e] the king ſaid unto her, What aileth thee? And ſhe anſwered, I am indeed a widow woman, and mine huſband is dead. 6. And thy handmaid had two ſons, and they two [f] ſtrove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one ſmote the other, and ſlew him. 7. And behold, the whole family is riſen againſt thine handmaid, and they ſaid, [g] Deliver him that ſmote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he ſlew, and we will deſtroy the heir alſo: and [h] ſo they ſhall quench my coal which is left, and [i] ſhall not leave to my huſband neither name nor remainder upon the earth. 8. And the king ſaid unto the woman, Go to thine houſe, and [k] I will give charge concerning thee. 9. And the woman of Tekoah ſaid unto the king, My lord, O king, [l] the iniquity be on me, and on my father's houſe: and [m] the king and his throne be guiltleſs. 10. And the king ſaid, Whoſoever ſaith ought unto thee, bring him to me, and he ſhall not touch thee any more. 11. Then ſaid ſhe, I pray thee, let the king remember the LORD thy God, † that thou wouldeſt not ſuffer the revengers of blood to deſtroy any more, leſt they deſtroy my ſon. And he ſaid, As the LORD liveth, [n] there ſhall not one hair of thy ſon fall to the earth. 12. Then the woman ſaid, Let thine handmaid, I pray thee, ſpeak one word unto my lord the king. And he ſaid, Say on. 13. And the woman ſaid, Wherefore then haſt thou thought ſuch a thing againſt the people of God? for the king doth ſpeak this thing, as one which is faulty, in that the king doth not fetch home again his baniſhed. 14. For we muſt needs die, and are as water ſpilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again: ‡ neither doth God [o] reſpect any perſon, yet doth he [p] deviſe means, that his baniſhed be not expelled from him. 15. Now therefore that I am come to ſpeak of this thing unto my lord the king; it is becauſe the people have made me afraid: and thy handmaid ſaid, I will now ſpeak unto the king; it may be that the king will perform the requeſt of his handmaid. 16. For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the man that would deſtroy me and my ſon together out of the inheritance of God: 17. Then thine handmaid ſaid, The word of my lord the king ſhall now be § comfortable: [q] for as an angel of God, ſo is my lord the king, to diſcern good and bad: therefore the LORD thy God will be with thee. 18. Then the king anſwered and ſaid unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I ſhall aſk thee. And the woman ſaid, Let my lord the king now ſpeak. 19. And the king ſaid, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman anſwered and ſaid, As thy ſoul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath ſpoken: for thy ſervant Joab he bade me, and he put all theſe words in the mouth of thine handmaid. 20. To fetch about this form of ſpeech hath thy ſervant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wiſe, according to the wiſdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth.

v. 1—20. Joab obſerved the inclinations of the king, and concludes he cannot do him a more acceptable ſervice, than to bring about that event which David himſelf dared not propoſe; whilſt nothing could more ingratiate him with Abſalom, who, as heir apparent to the throne, would not fail to remember the obligation, and reward ſuch an act of kindneſs; and nothing would more eſtabliſh his reputation alſo among the people, who greatly admired Abſalom.

1. The method he takes is by ſuborning a wiſe woman of Tekoah, a place at ſome diſtance from the court, to bring a feigned caſe before the king, which might intereſt his compaſſion for her, and engage him to pardon a murderer. She therefore dreſſes herſelf as a mourner, appears before the king, and begs an audience of her afflicting ſtory. Her huſband died, and left two ſons: by an unhappy quarrel one was killed; the other was now proſecuted by her family, more from a view to the inheritance when the heir was dead, than from the love of juſtice; and without the royal clemency, ſhe muſt be a childleſs mother, as well as a diſconſolate widow: ſhe muſt ſee the laſt coal of her houſe extinguiſhed; her only ſon periſh before her eyes, the comfort of her widowhood, and the prop of her ſinking family.

2. The contrivance ſucceeds; the king melts at the relation; and, not aware of the deſign, promiſes to enquire into the circumſtances, and, if they were ſo, he would protect her ſon. Having gained ſo far, ſhe preſſes an immediate decree in her favour, and offers to bear any puniſhment, if ſhe had not truly repreſented the caſe; or, as the ſenſe will bear, inſinuates, though offering to bear the blame herſelf; that, ſhould he be ſlain in the mean time, the king and his throne would be involved in guilt. David confirms his promiſe to ſtop further proceedings, with an aſſurance of protection. She, as a tender ſollicitous mother, is earneſt to obtain the fulleſt ſecurity; humbly reminds him of the compaſſions of God, which he would thus imitate; and intimates her deſire, that he would iſſue a proclamation in her favour, or perhaps, meaning he ſhould confirm his promiſe by an oath. David, to give her the fulleſt ſatisfaction, ſwears her ſon ſhall not die. Note, (1.) The rigour of the law deſerves ſometimes to be ſoftened by the interpoſition of the royal clemency. (2.) No argument ſo powerful to excite our pity and compaſſion to others, as the mercy we ourſelves have found from God. (3.) Every believing ſinner, tho' virtually a murderer, even of the Son of God, hath yet the oath of the Moſt High to comfort him, in the aſſurance that the avenging ſword of divine juſtice ſhall not come nigh him.

3. Judgment being thus given in the caſe, ſhe takes off the maſk, and with great deference begs pardon for the liberty of applying this decree to the king's own caſe; where, though the circumſtances in many inſtances indeed were not parallel, the king was ſo diſpoſed to comply, as not ſtrictly to ſcrutinize the diſparity. She intimates, the king's ſeverity againſt his ſon was diſpleaſing to the people of God, and contradictory to his own deciſions in her caſe. She names not Abſalom, but with a periphraſis expreſſive of his unhappy ſtate, and ſuited to awaken the tendereſt feelings of a father, calls him his baniſhed, and inſinuates, that after ſuch an exile, where he had ſufficiently ſuffered, it was time to bring him home. She pleads our preſent mortal ſtate: ſhould David die, the ſucceſſion might now be diſputed. Amnon muſt have died ſhortly, if he had not met that untimely end; and Abſalom, without the ſword of juſtice, muſt follow him. She urges God's mercy towards ſinners, who doth not take away their life, (as it may be better rendered, than by the common verſion, doth not reſpect any perſon,) but is patient to bear with them, and graciouſly contrives the means to bring them to repentance, that baniſhed ſinners may return to him. He delights not in their eternal exile from his preſence and favour: how much more then ſhould the king's mercy extend to his own ſon, nor ſuffer him to live expelled from the worſhip, word, and ordinances of God, amidſt the uncircumciſed. She ſuggeſts, that concern for the king's ſafety emboldened her addreſs, as the people's love for Abſalom might now or hereafter be dangerous to the king and his houſe; mentions her confidence of the king's compaſſion in her caſe, and which would more abundantly extend to his own; and concludes with a fine compliment on David's wiſdom and uprightneſs, profeſſing the ſtrongeſt aſſurance, that God would continue ever to direct and proſper him in all his ways. Note, (1.) God's patience towards ſinners is truly aſtoniſhing! How unwilling is he they ſhould periſh! (2.) He hath deviſed a method of reſtoring them, wherein his juſtice is magnified as well as his mercy, thro' the blood of atonement. (3.) If ſinners now die in exile, it is becauſe they refuſe to return. (4.) Confidence in a man lays an obligation on him to ſerve us; how much more confidence in God, whoſe promiſes then become an everlaſting ſecurity to us.

4. David ſuſpected the contrivance was Joab's, and enjoins the woman to confeſs the truth, which ſhe ingenuouſly does, with a compliment on the king's penetration; not taking the merit to herſelf, but acknowledging the author of the apologue. Note, Truth will never ſhame its author.

21. ¶ And the king ſaid unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing: go therefore, bring the young man Abſalom again. 22. And Joab fell to the ground on his face, and bowed himſelf, and † thanked the king: and Joab ſaid, To-day thy ſervant knoweth that I have found grace in thy ſight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the requeſt of his ſervant. 23. So Joab aroſe and went to Geſhur, and brought Abſalom to Jeruſalem. 24. And the king ſaid, Let him turn to his own houſe, and let him not ſee my face. So Abſalom returned to his own houſe, and ſaw not the king's face. 25. ¶ But in all Iſrael ‡ there was none to be ſo much praiſed as Abſalom, for his beauty: [r] from the ſole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemiſh in him. 26. And when he polled his head (for it was at every year's end that he polled it: becauſe the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it) [s] he weighed the hair of his head at two hundred ſhekels after the king's weight. 27. And unto Abſalom there were born [t] three ſons and one daughter, whoſe name was Tamar: ſhe was a woman of a fair countenance.

v. 21—27. Joab was preſent, trembling probably for the iſſue, and is delighted to find the ſcheme ſucceed, and much more to hear the king's command to go and be the meſſenger of Abſalom's reſtoration.

1. According to his orders he haſtes to Abſalom, having thanked the king for his kind acceptance of his petition, and receiving it as a token of his favour towards himſelf. Abſalom returns hereupon; but, not to countenance ſo great a criminal, to leave ſome mark of diſpleaſure upon him, and to bring him to humiliation by ſuch a mortifying denial, he is not ſuffered to appear at court, but is ordered to his own houſe. Note, (1.) It is through the merit of our great Advocate, ſinners find grace in the ſight of God. (2.) They who are forgiven their ſin, continue frequently to ſuffer under it for their deeper abaſement.

2. On his return, his perſonal accompliſhments and family are taken notice of. He was the handſomeſt man in Iſrael, which might account for the regard of the people, and the affection of his father; for beauty hath a ſtrange attraction, and prejudices us greatly in favour of the poſſeſſor; though too often the ſyren's face covers the ſerpent's venom, as was the caſe with Abſalom. The moſt valuable beauties are the internal accompliſhments of grace. His hair was remarkably fine, and vaſt in quantity; it grew ſo faſt, that he polled it yearly, and the weight was two hundred ſhekels, above ſix pounds, which might well be, if, as Joſephus ſays, it was powdered with gold-duſt, or if only wet with oil, and thickened with powder. He little thought this ornament, on which he prided himſelf, would ſhortly prove his ruin. His family alſo was increaſed with three ſons, and one fair daughter, whom he named after his beloved ſiſter; but his ſons ſeem to have died young, See chap. xviii. 18. and therefore their names are not recorded.

28. ¶ So Abſalom dwelt two full years in Jeruſalem, and ſaw not the king's face. 29. Therefore Abſalom ſent for Joab, to have ſent him to the king, but he would not come to him: and when he ſent again the ſecond time, he would not come. 30. Therefore he ſaid unto his ſervants, See, Joab's field is near mine, and he hath barley there; go and [u] ſet it on fire: And Abſalom's ſervants ſet the field on fire. 31. Then Joab aroſe and came to Abſalom unto his houſe, and ſaid, unto him, Wherefore have thy ſervants ſet my field on fire? 32. And Abſalom anſwered Joab, Behold, I ſent unto thee, ſaying, Come hither, that I may ſend thee to the king, to ſay, Wherefore am I come from Geſhur? it had been good for me to have been there ſtill: now therefore let me ſee the king's face; and [x] if there be any iniquity in me, let him kill me. 33. v. 28—33. Abſalom, though reſtored to Jeruſalem, is impatient of the reſtraint laid upon him. He cannot bear to live in this ſtate of diſgrace; his unhumbled heart counts his ſufferings injurious, though ſo much leſs than he deſerved; and he reſolves, by fair means or foul, once more to be reinſtated at court. For this purpoſe, after two years waiting,

1. He ſollicits Joab to be his friend again, who, by his repeated refuſals, ſeems to have taken ſome juſt diſguſt at his behaviour, or feared to offend the king by farther ſollicitation. But when intreaty was vain, Abſalom reſolves to try another experiment, and bids his ſervants to ſet Joab's field of corn on fire. Joab, incenſed, comes to know the reaſon, and Abſalom thus anſwers his end.

2. Abſalom ſeeks not to excuſe the injury, but, with utter unthankfulneſs for the kindneſs ſhewn him, inſolently demands, that he may be reſtored to his former dignity at court; declaring it had been preferable to have continued at Geſhur, rather than live thus; and, as if innocent, he offers to die, if there was iniquity found in him, being ſure enough that no ſuch ſentence would paſs upon him. He pretends to long to ſee his father's face, as if it were intolerable to live under his diſpleaſure; but no ſooner is he cheriſhed in his father's boſom, than he meditates a deſign on his throne and his life. Note, (1.) Unhumbled minds will never ceaſe to vindicate themſelves. (2.) Fair ſpeeches often cloak foul deſigns.

3. Joab is prevailed upon to intercede with David, and he at laſt conſents to receive him. Abſalom is introduced; the king with paternal tenderneſs ſeals with a kiſs his reconciliation; and believing his ſon's profeſſions real, reinſtates him in all his former honours. Note, (1.) A parent's fondneſs often makes him blind to his children's ill deſigns: he fain would hope the beſt, even againſt hope. (2.) How much tenderer will be the reception of the returning prodigal from his heavenly Father, when by the Spirit his everlaſting pardon ſhall be ſealed!

v. 1—6. No ſooner is Abſalom reſtored to favour, than we find him plotting to dethrone his father, and ſeeking, for that purpoſe, to alienate from him the love of his ſubjects, and attach them to himſelf. For this purpoſe,

1. He prepares a grand equipage and retinue. His chariots, his horſemen, and fifty footmen to clear the way, were magnificence Iſrael had not ſeen before, and which dazzled vain minds, as ſome great thing. Probably David himſelf was proud of the figure his ſon made, and, by connivance, encouraged his ambitious views. Note, (1.) Parents who indulge their children in pomp and pride, know not the injury they do them and themſelves. (2.) The vanity of making a figure in the world, is the rock on which more young perſons ſplit, than on any other.

2. He pretends great zeal for Iſrael's good; is ſeen conſtant and early at the gate, as if longing to have buſineſs diſpatched; and kindly inquires into every man's cauſe, as if ſollicitous to do them juſtice. On a ſlight hearing, where one party only preſented his caſe, he flattered him with certain ſucceſs in his cauſe, if there were but any one deputed to hear him; but inſinuates the negligent adminiſtration of juſtice, and how much the land ſuffered for want of an active and upright magiſtrate; intimating how happy it would be for the people, if he were judge, when every man might expect ſpeedy redreſs, and equitable deciſions. Such pretenſions eaſily ſunk down into unthinking minds, and flattered them with halcyon days under his adminiſtration: and his familiarity and condeſcenſion to the loweſt of the people, ſoon won their hearts; for he ſhook them by the hand, embraced them as if a friend or a brother, and ſtuck not to ſtoop, however low, in order to climb into the throne. Note, (1.) Zeal for the public good, and redreſs of grievances, are often the duſt thrown into the eyes of the populace, to conceal the projects of ambition. (2.) The beſt of kings, and the moſt upright adminiſtration, muſt never expect to eſcape the malignant aſperſions of a diſcontented faction. (3.) They who are moſt eager to get into the ſeat of judgment, are often leaſt qualified for the truſt: the deſerving know the difficulty, and modeſtly decline it. (4.) They who court popularity by low condeſcenſions, are no ſooner in power, than they throw off the maſk, and play the tyrant over a deluded people.

v. 7—12. The conſpiracy being ripe for action, Abſalom ſeeks an occaſion to declare himſelf; the text ſays, after forty years, not of David's reign, but from the time the kingly government commenced; or, as ſome conjecture it ſhould be read, after four years, according to the Syriac and Arabic verſions, from his reconciliation to his father.

1. He pitches upon Hebron, as the rendezvous, the place of his birth, and once the metropolis of Judah, where David reigned ſeven years: thither he begs leave of his father to go, under pretence of fulfilling a vow made during his exile; and David, without ſuſpicion of a plot, ſends him away with his benediction, pleaſed perhaps to ſee his ſon ſo religiouſly inclined, and reſolved, according to his vow, to ſerve the Lord. Note, (1.) It is a great comfort to godly parents, when their perverſe children promiſe reformation, and they would fain perſuade themſelves, what they wiſh to believe, that it is ſincere. (2.) There are few unnatural parents, but many rebellious ſons: affection deſcends oftener than it returns. (3.) Pretexts of religion have, ſince the days of Abſalom, opened the door for rebellion.

2. To cover his deſign, and to gain credit to his cauſe, he invites two hundred from Jeruſalem with him, the chief men probably in the city, who were not at all privy to his intentions, yet whoſe preſence would make it ſuppoſed they were of his party. Note, When religion is made the tool of ambitious men, many an honeſt citizen, and pious miniſter, hath been led to lend his countenance to that, which, if he ſaw the black intentions which lurk under the cloak of hypocriſy, his very ſoul would abhor.

3. Abſalom contrives to make a general riſing of the country in his favour, by means of conſpirators diſperſed throughout all the tribes, who, on the ſignal given by ſound of trumpet, ſhould proclaim him king. This ſudden news would not only draw in thoſe who were in the ſecret, but many who might conclude David was dead, or Abſalom proclaimed by his conſent; but who, once engaged, would not be able to retreat. Note, (1.) Worldly cunning, and diabolical wiſdom, they ſhall not want, who have Satan at their elbow. (2.) We muſt not be raſhly credulous, leſt we diſcover too late our folly.

4. Ahithophel was his chief counſellor, a man of deep politics, who on diſguſt had retired from court, incenſed, it may be, at David's adultery with Bathſheba, whoſe grandfather he is ſuppoſed to be, See chap. xi. 3. xxiii. 34. and glad to embrace an opportunity to revenge ſuch diſhonour. Him Abſalom ſent for during the ſacrifice; the fire of ambition in his heart burning fiercer than the coals on the altar.

5. The conſpiracy grew ſtrong by continual acceſſion. Thoſe, to whom he had ſpoken ſo fair in the gates, readily joined his ſtandard, and gave him their intereſt, and the populace ſwam with the ſtream. Note, The giddy multitude are eaſily led; but numbers are no proof of a good cauſe.

13. ¶ And there came a meſſenger to David, ſaying, The hearts of the men of Iſrael are after Abſalom. 14. And David ſaid unto all his ſervants that were with him at Jeruſalem, Ariſe, and let us [s] flee; for we ſhall not elſe eſcape from Abſalom: make ſpeed to depart, leſt he overtake us ſuddenly, and bring evil upon us, and ſmite the city with the edge of the ſword. 15. And the king's ſervants ſaid unto the king, [t] Behold, thy ſervants are ready to do whatſoever my lord the king ſhall appoint. 16. And the king went forth, and all his houſhold after him: and the king left [u] ten women, which were concubines, to keep the houſe. 17. And [x] the king went forth, and all the people † after him, and tarried in a place that was far off. 18. And all his ſervants paſſed on beſide him; and all the Cherethites, and all the Pelethites, and all the Gittites, ſix hundred men, [y] which came after him from Gath, paſſed on before the king. 19. ¶ Then ſaid the king to Ittai, the Gittite, Wherefore goeſt thou alſo with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king: for thou art a ſtranger, and alſo an exile. 20. Whereas thou cameſt but yeſterday, ſhould I this day make thee ‡ go up and down with us? ſeeing I go whither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren: [z] mercy and truth be with thee. 21. And Ittai anſwered the king, and ſaid, As the LORD liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, ſurely [a] in what place my lord the king ſhall be, whether in death or life, even there alſo will thy ſervant be. 22. And David ſaid to Ittai, Go and paſs over. And Ittai the Gittite paſſed over, and all his men, and all the little ones that were with him. 23. And all the country wept with a loud voice, and all the people paſſed over: the king alſo himſelf paſſed over [b] the brook Kidron, and all the people paſſed over, towards the way of [c] the wilderneſs.

v. 13—23. Soon are tidings brought of this unnatural rebellion; and as fear exaggerates danger, the hearts of all the men of Iſrael are ſaid to be with Abſalom.

1. David, exceedingly terrified, thinks of nothing but flight. His courage either forſakes him, or, ſeeing God's hand in the conſpiracy, he is afraid to reſiſt, and, however wicked the inſtrument, ſubmits to it as a divine judgment upon him; or, as his forces were unequal to the conſpirators, he endeavours to gain time, leſt if they beſieged him in Jeruſalem, his caſe ſhould appear deſperate, and all the people give him up as loſt. Note, (1.) Our ſevereſt ſtrokes come from hands we leaſt ſuſpected. (2.) Fear of God's anger in our ſufferings, is the cauſe of deepeſt dejection under them.

2. He leaves Jeruſalem to his rebel ſon, and with his few faithful adherents on foot paſſes over the brook Kidron, the place afterwards more diſtinguiſhed by the Son of David, when he went the ſame way to the garden, the ſcene of his agony. His wives and houſholds attended him, ten of his concubines excepted, whom he imprudently left behind, to keep the palace, God ſo over-ruling it, to fulfil his threatnings. The Cherethites and Pelethites ſtuck to him, with the Gittites under the command of Ittai, either a corps of Philiſtine proſelytes from Gath, or a body of Iſraelites, ſo called from their joining him whilſt he made his abode there. Theſe, with as many of the people as choſe to ſhare his lot, compoſed his little army. Note, (1.) It becomes us to humble ourſelves under the afflicting hand of God. (2.) In times of ſuffering, a large family is a great incumbrance; domeſtic comforts and croſſes thus balance each other. (3.) Greater fidelity is often found in ſtrangers, than in our kinsfolk and countrymen. (4.) They who follow Chriſt, muſt be volunteers, and firmly cleave to his cauſe when it appears moſt in danger.

3. David, more kindly ſollicitous for Ittai and his men, than concerned to ſecure ſuch an help in his diſtreſſed ſituation, nobly preſſes him to return, and not think of ſharing his deſperate affairs; wiſhing him the beſt of bleſſings, and diſmiſſing him as a friend, whoſe kindneſs he had experienced, and thankfully acknowledged. But Ittai bravely adheres to him, cannot bear the thought of leaving him in his diſtreſs, reſolved in life or death to ſhare his lot, and never to deſert him. Note, (1.) A generous heart is unwilling to involve others in his ſufferings. (2.) A faithful friend no ſituation can affect; nay, the more diſtreſſing our caſe, the more ſuch an one delights to approve his fidelity. (3.) Neither the trials of life, nor any torments of death, can ſeparate the believing ſoul from its attachment to Jeſus.

4. The people, as he paſſed towards Jordan, tenderly ſympathized in his ſufferings, to ſee ſo good a king ſunk ſo low, ſo good a father dethroned by an unnatural child. Note, There is not a greater object of compaſſion, than a father ſuffering under the wickedneſs of a rebellious ſon.

24. ¶ And lo, Zadok alſo, and all the Levites were with him, bearing the ark of the covenant of God, and they ſet down the ark of God; and Abiathar went up, until all the people had done paſſing out of the city. 25. And the king ſaid unto Zadok, [d] Carry back the ark of God into the city: if I ſhall find favour in the eyes of the LORD, he will bring me again, and ſhew me both it, and [e] his habitation. 26. But if he thus ſay, I have no delight in thee: behold here am I, [f] Let him do to me as ſeemeth good unto him. 27. The king ſaid alſo unto Zadok the prieſt, [g] Art not thou a ſeer? return into the city in peace, and your two ſons with you, Ahimaaz thy ſon, and Jonathan the ſon of Abiathar. 28. See, I will tarry in the plain of the wilderneſs, until there come word from you to certify me. 29. Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jeruſalem, and [h] they tarried there. 30. ¶ And David went up by the aſcent of mount Olivet, and [i] wept as he went up, and [k] had his head covered, and he went [l] bare-foot; and all the people that was with him covered every man his head, and they went up, [m] weeping as they went up.

v. 24—30. The prieſts and Levites follow the king with the ark, as men of conſcience, and not to be ſhaken in their loyalty under the deepeſt ſufferings. But David will not permit them to go with him: he had ſought a reſt for the ark, and he will not have it again wander in the wilderneſs.

1. He bids Zadok carry it back: at leaſt Abſalom will ſpare this ſacred treaſure. If the Lord be pleaſed to ſhow him favour in his reſtoration, then, according to the longings of his heart, he ſhall enjoy the comfort of the ark again: if not, with holy ſubmiſſion to his righteous will, he humbly acquieſces, acknowledging his deſerts, and the goodneſs as well as juſtice of God, whoſe ways are all mercy and truth. Note, (1.) Abſence from God's ordinances is the grief of the gracious heart, and his ſoul longs ſore to appear before God in the aſſembly of his ſaints. (2.) Reſignation to God's will in ſuffering, ſhews real humiliation under ſin. (3.) They who truſt on God, may aſſuredly conclude, that, whatever be the iſſue, all ſhall be well.

2. He expreſſes his confidence in Zadok and his brethren, that they will take care of his intereſt, and do him more eſſential ſervice at Jeruſalem than in the wilderneſs. Zadok being a ſeer, a man of penetration and diſcernment, might by his ſons ſend him intelligence how affairs went on, and how it would be moſt adviſeable for him to proceed; and we ſhall quickly ſee the prudence of this determination.

3. David began his melancholy march with an act of deep humiliation. As he went up the aſcent of the mount of Olives, his capital in view, from whence ſo miſerably he was driven, in token of the bittereſt mourning, he covered his head and his feet, weeping as he aſcended the hill, not more over his unhappy circumſtances, than over his ungrateful ſon, but moſt of all in the remembrance of the ſins that had provoked God thus ſeverely to afflict him. His ſervants felt his ſorrows, and cloſed the mournful proceſſion with groans and tears. Note, (1.) It becomes us under afflictions to mourn more for our ſins than our ſufferings. (2.) Children's vile conduct is the bitter grief of their aged parents. (3.) It is our duty to weep with thoſe that weep.

31. ¶ And one told David, ſaying, Ahithophel is among the conſpirators with Abſalom. And David ſaid, O LORD, I pray thee, [n] turn the counſel of Ahithophel into fooliſhneſs. 32. ¶ And it came to paſs, that when David was come to the top of the mount, where [o] he worſhipped God, behold, Huſhai the Archite came to meet him, with his coat rent, and earth upon his head: 33. Unto whom David ſaid, If thou paſſeſt on with me, then thou ſhalt be a burden unto me. 34. But if thou [p] return to the city, and ſay unto Abſalom, I will be thy ſervant, O king, as I have been thy father's ſervant hitherto, ſo will I now alſo be thy ſervant: then [q] mayeſt thou for me defeat the counſel of Ahithophel. 35. And haſt thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the prieſts? therefore it ſhall be, that what thing ſoever thou ſhalt hear out of the king's houſe, thou ſhalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the prieſts. 36. Behold, they have there with them [r] their two ſons, ſon, Ahimaaz Zadok's ſon, and Jonathan Abiathar's ſon: and by them ye ſhall ſend unto me every thing that ye can hear. 37. So Huſhai David's [a] friend came into the city, and Abſalom came into Jeruſalem.

[a] Prov. xvii. 17.

v. 31—37. On his march farther particulars arrive of the conſpirators.

1. Athithophel is among them; whoſe craft and politics were more dangerous than all the other forces of Abſalom. David therefore oppoſes his prayers againſt Ahithophel's counſels, and begs God to make fooliſh the wiſdom of the wiſe. Note, (1.) Let not the wiſe man glory in his wiſdom, God can quickly turn it into fooliſhneſs. (2.) We may ſafely pray for the confuſion of their devices that mean to deſtroy the cauſe of God and truth.

2. David ſeeks to countermine the wiſdom of Ahithophel by the prudence of Huſhai. God, in anſwer to his prayers, ſends him a friend; Huſhai met him on the top of the hill, with expreſſive ſigns of ſympathetic ſorrow, willing to join his ſuffering king: but David has more uſeful employment for him at Jeruſalem; by pretending to ſerve Abſalom he might defeat the advice of Ahithophel, and getting into the ſecrets of the cabinet, by Zadok's ſons inform David of them. The diſſimulation of Huſhai, and the advice of David, in this caſe, will hardly admit of excuſe. Note, (1.) They who themſelves are perfidious and baſe, can expect no better than to be betrayed. (2.) It is a point of deep wiſdom to guard againſt the dangers we foreſee.

And the king ſaid unto Ziba, What meaneſt thou by theſe? And Ziba ſaid, [c] The aſſes be for the king's houſhold to ride on, and the bread and ſummer-fruit for the young men to eat, and the wine, that ſuch as be faint in the wilderneſs may drink. 3. And the king ſaid, And where is thy maſter's ſon? And Ziba ſaid unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jeruſalem: for [d] he ſaid, To-day ſhall the houſe of Iſrael reſtore me the kingdom of my father. 4. Then ſaid the king to Ziba, Behold, [e] thine are all that pertained unto Mephiboſheth. And Ziba ſaid, † I humbly beſeech thee that I may find grace in thy ſight, my lord, O king.

v. 1—4. David is now haſting on his journey, when he is met with refreſhment by Ziba, whom he had entruſted as ſteward for Mephiboſheth; an acceptable preſent indeed, but brought with a very ill deſign. On his enquiry after his maſter, this lying villain raiſes a ſcandalous report upon him, as if he now aſpired at the crown; and having incenſed David too haſtily againſt Mephiboſheth, as well as conciliated his favour by this gift, he gains his end, and hath a grant made to him of the whole eſtate that pertained to his maſter; at which, highly pleaſed, he departs, with profeſſion of deep acknowledgments for the favour. Note, (1.) Many, like Ziba, affect to be very generous of what is not their own. (2.) A ſervant's lying tongue is the frequent cauſe of ſad diſcord in families. (3.) The preſents of a knave are to be regarded as ſnares. (4.) An ill-intended deſign God can over-rule, to anſwer a good purpoſe. (5.) Raſh judgment opens a door for after-ſhame and repentance. (6.) To turn a deaf ear to ſlander is always wiſe, and to hear at leaſt both parties before we condemn.

5. ¶ And when king David came to Bahurim, behold, thence came out a man of the family of the houſe of Saul, whoſe name was Shimei the ſon of Gera: [f] he came forth, and curſed ſtill as he came. 6. And he caſt ſtones at David, and at all the ſervants of king David: and all the people, and all the mighty men were on his right hand, and on his left. 7. And thus ſaid Shimei when [g] he curſed, Come out, come out, thou † bloody man, and thou man of Belial. 8. The LORD hath [h] returned upon thee all the blood of the houſe of Saul, in whoſe ſtead thou haſt reigned, and [i] the LORD hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Abſalom thy ſon: and behold thou art taken in thy miſchief, becauſe thou art a bloody man. 9. ¶ Then ſaid Abiſhai the ſon of Zeruiah unto the king, Why ſhould [k] this dead dog curſe my lord the king? let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his head. 10. And the king ſaid, [l] What have I to do with you, ye ſons of Zeruiah? ſo let him curſe, becauſe [m] the LORD hath ſaid unto him, Curſe David. [n] Who ſhall then ſay, Wherefore haſt thou done ſo? 11. And David ſaid to Abiſhai, and to all his ſervants, Behold, my ſon, which came forth of my bowels, ſeeketh my ‡ life: how much more now may this Benjamite do it? let him alone, and let him curſe: for the LORD hath bidden him. 12. It may be that the LORD will look on mine affliction, and that [o] the LORD will requite me good for his curſing this day. 13. And as David and his men went by the way, Shimei went along on the hills ſide over-againſt him, and curſed as he went, and threw ſtones at him, and ‖ caſt duſt. 14. And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary, and refreſhed themſelves there.

v. 5—14. When a man is ſinking, he may expect to be inſulted.

1. Shimei, a relation of Saul, takes advantage of David's ſituation to pour out his invenomed malice on him in outragious abuſe, on an oppoſite hill, near Bahurim, from whence he might be heard: he follows him with curſes, and threw ſtones at him, and duſt, as if he was a miſcreant that deſerved not to live; exults in his miſery, confident that his ſon would dethrone him; brands him with every opprobrious name, as a man of miſchief, wickedneſs and murder, and conſtrues his preſent ſuffering a judgment from God for the blood of the houſe of Saul, wholly innocent as he was of it. Note, (1.) Though impotent malice rage, and ſhew its will to hurt us, 'tis a mercy power is wanting. (2.) God's corrections are often miſconſtrued into judgments, and when their enemy ſuffers, wicked men would fain bring in God as patronizing their cauſe. (3.) If we do ill we may expect to hear of it, well aggravated in the report of an enemy. (4.) Innocence is no protection from a lying tongue. (5.) The curſes of the wicked return upon their own heads.

2. David's reſignation is as exemplary as Shimei's inſolence is outragious. Far from deſiring to avenge himſelf, he ſtays the ſpirit of Abiſhai, unable with patience to bear ſuch reproach, and forbids him to hurt Shimei. He received it as a reproof from God; though the charge was untrue in part, he knew enough to humble him, and to reproach himſelf for: nor could he wonder at his enemy's virulence, when his own ſon thirſted for his blood; patiently therefore he commits his cauſe to God, and humbly waits that he may turn theſe curſes into a bleſſing. Note, (1.) We muſt not avenge ourſelves, nor return evil for evil, even under the bittereſt provocations. (2.) Though the charge laid againſt us be falſe, we may know enough to condemn ourſelves for, which ſhould make us patient under it. (3.) To ſee God's hand in every trial is the way to be reconciled to bear it. (4.) Patience, under reproaches, will not fail of its recompenſe; God will make our righteouſneſs as the light.

3. At Bahurim David halted to refreſh his men, fatigued with the march, and more weary with grief of heart. And here, for a moment, we leave him to breath, whilſt we return to obſerve the motions of his rebel ſon.

15. ¶ And Abſalom and all the people, the men of Iſrael, came to Jeruſalem, and Ahithophel with him. 16. And it came to paſs when Huſhai the Archite, David's friend, was come unto Abſalom, that Huſhai ſaid unto Abſalom, God ſave the king, God ſave the king. 17. And Abſalom ſaid to Huſhai, Is this thy kindneſs to thy friend? why wenteſt thou not with thy friend? 18. And Huſhai ſaid unto Abſalom, Nay, but whom [p] the LORD and this people, and all the men of Iſrael chooſe, his will I be, and with him will I abide. 19. And again, whom ſhould I ſerve? ſhould I not ſerve in the preſence of his ſon? as I have ſerved in thy father's preſence, ſo will I be in thy preſence. 20. ¶ Then ſaid Abſalom to Ahithophel, Give counſel among you what we ſhall do. 21. And Ahithophel ſaid unto Abſalom, [q] Go in unto thy father's concubines, which he hath left to keep the houſe, and all Iſrael ſhall hear that thou art abhorred of thy father, then ſhall the hands of all that are with thee be ſtrong. 22. So they ſpread Abſalom a tent upon [r] the top of the houſe, and Abſalom [s] went in unto his father's concubines, [t] in the ſight of all Iſrael.

v. 15—23. Abſalom and his forces haſte to Jeruſalem, juſt deſerted by the exile king; ſo graciouſly does God time his providences for our reſcue: and now ſanguine, in poſſeſſion of the royal city, a numerous army, and ſuch wiſe counſellors, concludes no doubt the day is his own and David undone. But the triumphing of the wicked is ſhort.

1. We have here the interview of Huſhai with Abſalom; with deep diſſimulation he is the firſt to welcome his arrival, and ſalute him king in Zion. Abſalom, pleaſingly ſurprized to meet him, enquires how he came to ſtay; and creduloufly falls into the ſnare, which Huſhai's profeſſion of loyalty ſpreads for him, ſuppoſing his father's friends ſaw his caſe deſperate, and that all courted now the riſing ſun. Note, (1.) The proud are the eaſy prey of every flatterer. (2.) Though it is no excuſe for evil, that we mean well, yet God may permit that deceit to ſucceed, and his purpoſes to be ſerved thereby, whilſt he moſt juſtly condemns the author.

2. A counſel is held on the proper method of procedure, and Ahithophel, as preſident, propoſes a deed ſhocking and infamous, yet highly politic, as it muſt tend to make the breach between Abſalom and David irreparable, and thereby confirm all thoſe who cleaved to his cauſe, in the aſſurance that there could be no reconciliation. Ahithophel's wiſdom is hereupon noted; ſo highly was he famed, that his advice was eſteemed as oracular by David as well as Abſalom; which accounts for the ready compliance which it at preſent met with. Note, (1.) Great wiſe men are uſually great wicked men. (2.) They who conſult only their ambition, never think of the crimes they commit in order to advance the cauſe they eſpouſe.

3. Abſalom inſtantly puts the advice in practice, and exceeds it; he not only goes in to his father's concubines, but publickly, in the eyes of all Iſrael; a tent is ſpread in open view, on the top of the houſe, and there, as void of ſhame as conſcience, he avows the inceſtuous deed. Thus was the threatning, chap. xii. 11. fulfilled; and though horrid the crime, yet it was a juſt retaliation for David's paſt adultery. Note, God puniſhes men often in kind, that they may be made to ſee and confeſs his righteous judgments.

1. MOreover, Ahithophel ſaid unto Abſalom, Let me now chooſe out twelve thouſand men, and I will ariſe and purſue after David [a] this night. 2. And I will come upon him [b] while he is weary and weak-handed, and will make him afraid: and all the people that are with him ſhall flee, and [c] I will ſmite the king only. 3. And I will bring back all the people unto thee: the man whom thou ſeekeſt, is as if all returned: ſo [d] all the people ſhall be in peace. 4. And the ſaying [e] pleaſed Abſalom well, and all the elders of Iſrael. 5. Then ſaid Abſalom, Call now Huſhai the Archite alſo, and let us hear likewiſe what he ſaith. 6. And when Huſhai was come to Abſalom, Abſalom ſpake unto him, ſaying, Ahithophel hath ſpoken after this manner: ſhall we do after his ſaying? If not, ſpeak thou. 7. And Huſhai ſaid unto Abſalom, The counſel that Ahithophel hath given [f] is not good at this time. 8. For (ſaid Huſhai) thou knoweſt thy father and his men, that they be mighty men, and they † be chafed in their minds, as a bear robbed of her whelps in the field: and thy father is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people. 9. Behold, he is hid now [g] in ſome pit, or in ſome other place: and it will come to paſs, [h] when ſome of them be overthrown at the firſt, that whoſoever heareth it, will ſay, there is a ſlaughter among the people that follow Abſalom. 10. And he alſo that is valiant, whoſe heart is as the heart of a lion, ſhall utterly melt: for all Iſrael knoweth that [i] thy father is a mighty man, and they which be with him are valiant men. 11. Therefore I counſel, that all Iſrael be generally gathered unto thee, from Dan even to Beerſheba, [k] as the ſand that is by the ſea for multitude, and that ‡ thou go to battle in thine own perſon. 12. So ſhall we come upon him in ſome place where he ſhall be found, and we will light upon him as the dew falleth on the ground: and of him, and of all the men that are with him, there ſhall not be left ſo much as one. 13. Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then ſhall all Iſrael [l] bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river, until there be not one ſmall ſtone found there. 14. And Abſalom and all the men of Iſrael ſaid, The counſel of Huſhai the Archite is better than the counſel of Ahithophel: for [m] the LORD had appointed to defeat the good counſel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Abſalom.

v. 1—14. Abſalom, in triumph, being entered into his father's deſerted palace, ſuch changes do theſe ſublunary kingdoms undergo, conſults next how to finiſh what ſeemed ſo happily begun. A counſel is ſummoned the ſame day, after the above-mentioned abomination was over, and David's ruin being reſolved, the queſtion is how to accompliſh it.

1. Ahithophel ſpeaks according to his place, and with his wonted ſagacity, and wiſer and wickeder counſel could not be given. He is for an immediate purſuit, falling upon the fugitives, weary and diſpirited, and making an eaſy conqueſt; he offers himſelf to be the leader, and aſks only twelve thouſand men to execute his deſign, nor doubts but with one ſtroke to put an end to the conteſt, by ſmiting the king and letting the people go, who would then peaceably ſubmit to Abſalom's government. Thus the man (ſo he calls him, neither king nor father) whom he ſought would be removed, and his throne eſtabliſhed without a rival. The ſcheme is ſo feaſible and deſireable, that this bloody ſon is delighted with it, and, aſtoniſhing to tell! not one of the elders of Iſrael expreſs their diſapprobation, but adviſe, according to Ahithophel's counſel, its immediate execution. Note, (1.) The beſt of kings, and beſt of fathers, may be unhappy enough to find rebellious ſubjects, and unnatural children. (2.) They who are once involved in ſin, are driven deeper and deeper, till the moſt horrid crimes become neceſſary, as it were, to enſure their own ſafety. (3). Delays are dangerous in every cauſe, whilſt expedition uſually enſures ſucceſs.

2. Before this advice is put in execution, Abſalom moves to call for Huſhai, and hear his opinion, or rather, have his concurrence in the matter; thus God, by the ſecret working of his providence, in the critical moment wards off the imminent danger, and, as it ſeems, inevitable ruin. Huſhai appears, and Abſalom bids him ſpeak his opinion on Ahithophel's advice, which, with great appearance of argument and zeal for the cauſe, he gives; he opens with the admiſſion of Ahithophel's wiſdom; but though in general he muſt pay ſubmiſſion and deference to his ſagacity, he at preſent is obliged to differ from him, and that on the following plauſible reaſons; David was not ſo eaſily to be ſmitten as Ahithophel ſeemed to ſuggeſt; he was well known to be a mighty man, and when, if not now, would he exert himſelf. Nor were his forces ſo few or deſpicable as were repreſented; they were a conſiderable body, and all men of approved valour, not to be daunted at danger, and much more enured to war than their raw undiſciplined troops; and in their preſent ſituation fired with reſentment, nay, armed with deſpair, would fight like bears robbed of their whelps: nor was it at all probable that David would be ſurpriſed; provident againſt danger, he, with ſome choſen body acquainted with every cave and hold, was ſafe from ſurprize, and ready to ſally out as from an ambuſh. Such an attack might make even Ahithophel's lion-like heart to fail, at leaſt his ſmall body of troops to flee, and the conſequence of ſuch a repulſe might be fatal to the cauſe; for ſhould it be noiſed that Abſalom's forces were routed, the people would be diſpirited and in danger of deſerting him. His advice therefore is to gather all the forces from Dan to Beerſheba, and put himſelf at the head of them; with ſuch an army, and under ſuch a leader, nothing could be hazarded. If David and his men were in the field, thick as the drops of dew they would light upon him, and not a man could eſcape; or if he took refuge in a walled city, ſuch an hoſt would in an inſtant ſcale the walls, or even with ropes draw the battlements into the ditch, or the adjoining river, as eaſily as a log of wood. Thus Abſalom's pride was flattered, and his ſucceſs enſured, not without a ſecret reflection on Ahithophel's raſhneſs; the advice eaſily took, God having infatuated their minds, and Abſalom and his council gave it for Huſhai, impolitic and improbable as his ſuggeſtions were. Note, (1.) They take counſel in vain who aim the ruin of God's church and people. (2.) God hath ſecret ways of diverting the fatal blows, aimed by our ſpiritual enemies at our helpleſs ſouls.

15. ¶ Then [n] ſaid Huſhai unto Zadok, and to Abiathar the prieſts, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counſel [n] Chap. xv. 35.

Abſalom and the elders of Iſrael; and thus and thus have I counſelled. 16. Now therefore ſend quickly, and tell David, ſaying, Lodge not this night in the plains of the wilderneſs, but ſpeedily paſs over; leſt the king be ſwallowed up, and all the people that are with him. 17. Now [o] Jonathan and Ahimaaz ſtayed by En-rogel, (for they might not be ſeen to come into the city) and a wench went and told them: and they went and told king David. 18. Nevertheleſs a lad ſaw them, and told Abſalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's houſe in Bahurim, which had a well in his court, whither they went down. 19. And [p] the woman took and ſpread a covering over the well's mouth, and ſpread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known. 20. And when Abſalom's ſervants came to the woman to the houſe, they ſaid, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And the woman ſaid unto them, [q] They be gone over the brook of water. And when they had ſought and could not find them, they returned to Jeruſalem. 21. And it came to paſs after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and ſaid unto David, Ariſe, and paſs quickly over the water: for thus hath Ahithophel counſelled againſt you.

v. 15—21. Huſhai is no ſooner diſmiſſed from the council-board, than, fearful leaſt his advice ſhould not be followed, or, that they would change their reſolution, he is in haſte to let the king know his danger, that he might eſcape without delay; yet how to do it was difficult, the avenues being every where carefully guarded, and none came in or out without notice. Zadok and Abiathar therefore procure a young woman to go, as for water, to the well of En-rogel, near which their ſons lay concealed, not daring to come into the city, and thence they are diſpatched to haſten the king over Jordan inſtantly; ſecret as the meſſage was delivered, they are diſcovered, information is conveyed to Abſalom, and immediate purſuit made after them. Hard preſſed, they are ready to be taken, when God, who is a refuge in every time of trial, providentially interpoſes; a woman at Bahurim, at whoſe houſe they ſought concealment, hid them in a well that was dry, and ſpreading a cloth, with ſome parched corn over it, the place is not ſearched, and with a lie ſhe deceives the purſuers, who now haſten on, and give the ſons of Zadok and Abiathar an opportunity to deliver their meſſage. Note, (1.) The weakeſt inſtruments in God's hand can anſwer the greateſt purpoſes. (2.) A lie to ſerve a good cauſe, ceaſes not therefore to be a bad thing.

22. Then David aroſe, and all the people that were with him, and they paſſed over Jordan: by the morning light [r] there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan. 23. ¶ And when Ahithophel † ſaw that his counſel was not followed, he ſaddled his aſs, and aroſe, and gat him home to his houſe, [s] to his city, and ‡ put his houſhold in order, and [t] hanged himſelf, and died, and was buried in the ſepulchre of his father. 24. Then David came to Mahanaim: and Abſalom paſſed over Jordan, he and all the men of Iſrael with him. 25. ¶ And Abſalom made Amaſa captain of the hoſt inſtead of Joab: which Amaſa was a man's ſon whoſe name was Ithra [u] an Iſraelite, that went in to Abigail the daughter of Nahaſh, ſiſter to Zeruiah, Joab's mother. 26. So Iſrael and Abſalom pitched in the land of Gilead. 27. And it came to paſs when David was come to Mahanaim, that Shobi the ſon of Nahaſh of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and [x] Machir the ſon of Ammiel of Lodebar, and Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim, 28. Brought beds, and baſons, and earthen veſſels, and wheat, and barley, and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulſe, 29. And honey, and butter, and ſheep, and cheeſe of kine [y] for David, and for the people that were with him, to eat: for they ſaid, The people is hungry, and weary, and thirſty, in the wilderneſs.

v. 22—29. 1. No ſooner does David underſtand the imminence of his danger, than he inſtantly puts his troops in motion, and after a forced march that night, by day-break he paſſes Jordan without the loſs of a man, and continuing on his rout to Mahanaim, in the tribe of Gad, there reſolves to make a ſtand and collect his forces. Note, (1.) Whilſt we depend on divine protection, we muſt uſe all diligence to ſave ourſelves. (2.) Not one ſhall be loſt in the paſſage at death of thoſe ſpiritual followers, whom the Son of David leads as the captain of their ſalvation.

2. Ahithophel brings himſelf to a miſerable end. Unable to ſupport this mortification of his pride, that another's advice ſhould be preferred before his, or foreſeeing now the opportunity was loſt, that Abſalom would ruin himſelf, and conſequently that he would be firſt expoſed to the king's reſentment, he reſolves to prevent the ignominious death he feared; with deliberation therefore he prepares for ſelf-murder, ſettles his family, and then hangs himſelf. Note, (1.) Diſappointed pride often produces ſelf-murder. (2.) They who fly into the arms of death to avoid preſent ſhame, will find a terrible diſappointment, when everlaſting ſhame ſhall cover them.

3. Abſalom, having aſſembled his forces, purſues his father into the land of Gilead. Amaſa is appointed captain of the hoſt, a couſin-german of Joab's, and a nephew of David, being ſon of his ſiſter Abigail, the daughter of Nahaſh, another name for Jeſſe, or his wife, 1 Chron. xi. 16. See the miſeries of a civil war, where neareſt relatives, eſpouſing different parties, ſeek to ſhed each other's blood.

4. David, whilſt he halts at Mahanaim, meets with great kindneſs from ſome faithful friends, who were able to aſſiſt him. Shobi a younger ſon, whom David might have advanced in Hanun's ſtead at Rabbah, when he ſubdued the Ammonites; and Machir, whoſe kindneſs to Mephiboſheth was before obſerved, and Barzillai of Rogelim, theſe all liberally contributed to the ſupplying David and his men with beds, utenſils, and the neceſſaries which they wanted, after their fatiguing march, having in their pricipitate flight left all behind. Note, (1.) We meet often with greater kindneſs from ſtrangers than our own relations. (2.) The beſt uſe we can make of our affluence, is the employment of it in the ſupport of the ſuffering cauſe of the Son of David.

And David ſent forth a third part of the people under the hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abiſhai the ſon of Zeruiah Joab's brother, and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite: and the king ſaid unto the people, [a] I will ſurely go forth with you myſelf alſo. 3. But the people anſwered, Thou ſhalt not go forth: for if we flee away, [b] they will not care for us: neither if half of us die, will they care for us; but now thou art † worth ten thouſand of us: therefore now it is better that thou ſuccour us out of the city. 4. And the king ſaid unto them, What ſeemeth you beſt, I will do. And the king ſtood by the gate-ſide, and all the people came out by hundreds, and by thouſands. 5. And the king commanded Joab, and Abiſhai, and Ittai, ſaying, [c] Deal gently for my ſake with the young man, even with Abſalom. And all the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Abſalom. 6. ¶ So the people went out into the field againſt Iſrael: and the battle was in the wood of Ephraim; 7. v. 1—8. Abſalom having croſſed Jordan, in purſuit of his father, David is neceſſitated to prepare for the battle; his troops indeed ſeem to be much inferior to his ſon's, but then their valour, and the excellent officers who led them on, make up what they want in numbers.

1. David reſolves to ſet himſelf at the head of his troops, and ſhare the danger with them, but is with-held at the earneſt requeſt of the people. His life was the life of the cauſe; at him Abſalom's forces would chiefly aim, and they counted him worth ten thouſand of them, therefore preſs him to ſtay in the city and ſuccour them, if need were, from thence. Note, (1.) Great men and wiſe men ought not to diſdain the advice of their inferiors. (2.) Faithful ſubjects are jealous over the life of their king, and ready to lay down theirs chearfully in his cauſe.

2. He gives the generals charge to deal gently with Abſalom, whom he calls the young man, fooliſh, and raſh, and therefore to be pitied and ſpared; ſo tender was he of that unnatural ſon, who who not content with his kingdom, ſought alſo his life. But there is ſomething in a parent's heart that no undutifulneſs can obliterate; and how much more in our great father of mercies, whoſe bowels yearn over his children, yet living in rebellion againſt him, and his compaſſions are more effectual than David's, for they ſecure the life of our ſouls.

3. As David, in his charge, expreſſed a confidence of the battle's ending in his favour, the iſſue correſponds thereunto. Though the conteſt is bloody, yet victory declares againſt the rebels, and the battle being near the wood of Ephraim, ſo called not becauſe in that tribe, but probably from the ſlaughter of the Ephraimites there made, Judg. xii. 4—6. as it was full of bogs and thickets, the routed army, taking refuge there, were the more eaſily put to the ſword, or, as ſome ſuggeſt, devoured of wild beaſts, ſo that twenty thouſand men of Abſalom's party fell. A juſt execution for ſuch a wicked and unprovoked rebellion. May every rebel receive thus the reward of his deeds!

9. ¶ And Abſalom met the ſervants of David; and Abſalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and [e] his head caught hold of the oak, and [f] he was taken up between the heaven and the earth, and the mule that was under him went away. 10. And a certain man ſaw it, and told Joab, and ſaid, Behold, I ſaw Abſalom hanged in an oak. 11. And Joab ſaid unto the man that told him, And behold, thou ſaweſt him, and why didſt thou not ſmite him there to the ground, and I would have given thee ten ſhekels of ſilver, and a girdle? 12. And the man ſaid unto Joab, Though I ſhould receive a thouſand ſhekels of ſilver in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand againſt the king's ſon: for in our hearing the king charged thee, and Abiſhai, and Ittai, ſaying, Beware that none touch the young man Abſalom. 13. Otherwiſe, [g] I ſhould have wrought falſhood againſt mine own life: for there is no matter hid from the king, and thou thyſelf wouldſt have ſet thyſelf againſt me. 14. Then ſaid Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee. And he took three darts in his hand, and [h] thruſt them through the heart of Abſalom [i] while he was yet alive in the † midſt of the oak. 15. And ten young men that bare Joab's armour, compaſſed about and ſmote Abſalom, and ſlew him. 16. And Joab blew the trumpet, and the people returned from purſuing after Iſrael: for Joab held back the people. 17. And they took Abſalom, and [k] caſt him into a great pit in the wood, and [l] laid a very great heap of ſtones upon him: and all Iſrael fled every one to his tent. 18. ¶ Now Abſalom in his lifetime had taken and [m] reared up for himſelf a pillar, which is in the king's dale: for he ſaid, [n] I have no ſon to keep my name in remembrance: and he called the pillar after his own name, and it is called unto this day, Abſalom's place.

v. 9—18. We have here Abſalom among the fugitives, no longer exulting in confidence of ſucceſs, but ſeeking by flight to eſcape the devouring ſword; but divine vengeance ſuffereth him not to live; for though David's ſervants, whom he met, offered not to moleſt him, and his ſwift beaſt would quickly carry him out of danger; yet,

1. He is arreſted in his flight by the thick boughs of an oak, under which he furiouſly drove, and his flying locks either caught hold of the branches, or rather his neck was jammed in between them, and though not dead, yet ſo ſtunned as to be unable to diſengage himſelf, whilſt his mule, on full ſpeed, left him thus hanging. Note, (1.) They who fly from God's arm only ruſh into the toil. (2.) If his hair was his halter, we ſee that what was his pride proved at laſt his ſhame. (3.) Let diſobedient children look to this rebellious ſon, and tremble at God's vengeance.

2. Joab is informed of the accident, and chides the meſſenger for not immediately diſpatching Abſalom; for which he would have nobly rewarded him, ver. 11. but the man pleads the king's commandment, which, for a thouſand ſhekels, he would not tranſgreſs; nay he knew it were as much as his life were worth, and dares tell Joab he himſelf would then have been the firſt to execute him as a traitor. Joab does not controvert the man's aſſertion, but in haſte to be gone enquires the place, and takes his attendants with him; there, beholding the fair mark expoſed, with three darts he ſtrikes him through his heart, as he was yet alive, though hung; and to make ſure work, his ten attendants pierce him with many a mortal wound, and leave him dead on the ſpot. Note, Many find fault with others for not doing that, which had they done, they would have been the firſt to condemn them.

3. The arch rebel being diſpatched, a retreat is ſounded, as the reſt would return to their allegiance; and enough blood had been ſpilt, ſo that there needed no priſoners to be executed. Note, In rebellion ſeverity muſt be tempered with clemency; every ſubject that bleeds is a loſs to the ſtate itſelf.

4. Abſalom's body is caſt into a pit, and covered with a heap of ſtones, diſgraced even in the duſt, and thus terminates his aſpiring courſe in the deepeſt ignominy. He had erected near Jeruſalem a noble ſepulchral monument, to perpetuate his memory, his ſons, it ſeems, being now dead, chap. xiv. 27. This, we are told, is to this day a noble piece of ruins, but a monument of his ſhame and folly, and which bears the marks of univerſal deteſtation; for every perſon, Turk or Jew, who paſſes by it, conſtantly caſts a ſtone at it, in abhorrence of this rebellion, and pronounces withal a ſolemn curſe on all diſobedient children. Note, (1.) To be ſollicitous about a tomb for our bodies, whilſt we are living in neglect of our ſouls, is the height of folly. (2.) To perpetuate the remembrance of a great wicked name, is only to perpetuate infamy. (3.) Of all characters, a diſobedient child is among the moſt abhorred.

19. ¶ Then ſaid Ahimaaz the ſon of Zadok, Let me now run, and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath † avenged him of his enemies. 20. And Joab ſaid unto him, Thou ſhalt not ‡ bear tidings this day, but thou ſhalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou ſhalt bear no tidings, becauſe the king's ſon is dead. 21. Then ſaid Joab to Cuſhi, Go tell the king what thou haſt ſeen. And Cuſhi bowed himſelf unto Joab, and ran. 22. Then ſaid Ahimaaz the ſon of Zadok yet again to Joab, But howſoever, let me, I pray thee, alſo run after Cuſhi. And Joab ſaid, Wherefore wilt thou run, my ſon, ſeeing that thou haſt no tidings ready? 23. But howſoever (ſaid he) let me run. And he ſaid unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and over-ran Cuſhi. 24. And David ſat [o] between the two gates: and the watchman went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall, and lift up his eyes, and looked, and behold, a man running alone. 25. And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king ſaid, If he be alone, there is tidings in his mouth. And he came apace, and drew near. 26. And the watchman ſaw another man running, and the watchman called unto the porter, and ſaid, Behold, another man running alone. And the king ſaid, He alſo bringeth tidings. 27. And the watchman ſaid, ‖ Methinketh the running of the foremoſt is like the running of Ahimaaz the ſon of Zadok. And the king ſaid, He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings. 28. And Ahimaaz called, and ſaid unto the king, § All is well. And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the king, and ſaid, Bleſſed be the LORD thy God, [p] which hath delivered up the men that lift up their hand againſt my lord the king. 29. And the king ſaid unto Cuſhi, Is the young man Abſalom ſafe? And Cuſhi anſwered, The enemies of my lord the king, and all that riſe againſt thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man is. 33. ¶ And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept: and as he went, thus he ſaid, [q] O my ſon, Abſalom, my ſon, my ſon Abſalom: would God I had died for thee, O Abſalom, my ſon, my ſon.

v. 19—33. David, with anxious ſollicitude in the gate, waits to receive the tidings which muſt determine his crown, and perhaps his life, yet at the ſame time diſtreſſed for fear leaſt his ſon ſhould fall, dreads even to hear of victory.

1. Joab prepares to diſpatch an expreſs, and Ahimaaz, the ſon of Zadok, is eager for the office; but Joab, who knew how unacceptable the tidings of Abſalom's death would be, diſſuades him from being the meſſenger, and diſpatches Cuſhi, or the Ethiopean, ſo called as being a proſelyte of that country in Joab's ſervice, or from his ſwarthy complexion. Ahimaaz perceiving Cuſhi ſlow of foot, and taking the worſt, though the neareſt way, and being much the better runner, though a prieſt, is eager to carry the tidings of their ſucceſs, and perhaps ſollicitous to prepare David, by degrees, for the terrible blow that would follow on Cuſhi's arrival. Though Joab is very unwilling, his importunity prevails, he runs after Cuſhi, and taking a plainer road, though a little about, gets the ſtart of him. Note, Sudden diſcoveries are dangerous, the ſtring wound up by degrees is prevented from breaking.

2. The watchman from the gate diſcovers the runners, Ahimaaz firſt, and afterward Cuſhi, and the king concludes they come with tidings, which, with a trembling heart, he prepares to hear; the foremoſt being diſcovered to be the ſon of Zadok, David concludes the tidings are good, becauſe ſo good a man brought them, and no ſooner is he within hearing, than he cries with triumph, All is well, the day our own; and when he is come into the king's preſence, falls down before him, with lowly obeiſance, bleſſes God for the ſucceſs of his majeſty's arms, and reports the victory to be compleat over the rebels. The king, ſollicitous for Abſalom, inſtantly enquires if he be ſafe; to this he carefully gives no direct anſwer, but refers him to Cuſhi, who was coming, that could give a better account of the cauſe of the tumult which at his departing he obſerved. Note, (1.) The goſpel is good tidings of a better victory: how welcome then to us ſhould the feet of the meſſengers of it be! (2.) Every ſucceſs ſhould be aſcribed wholly to the Lord.

3. Cuſhi comes with the ſhout of triumph; but David is more eager to enquire of Abſalom than to be informed of the battle, and now the dreadful news comes out. Cuſhi loyally wiſhes all the king's enemies as unable to hurt him as this young man, which tacitly implies his fall, though the circumſtances of it he waves. Note, When we muſt carry meſſages of evil, they cannot be too tenderly delivered.

4. David, in an agony of grief, forgets the joys of victory, and his grateful acknowledgments to God. One object ſwallows up all other concerns; his dead Abſalom alone engroſſes his heart, and abandoning himſelf to deſpair and ſorrow, he burſts into a flood of tears, cries out in the moſt inconſolable anguiſh on his departed ſon, and longs to have died in his ſtead. Such was his fondneſs for this unnatural ſon, or perhaps his apprehenſion of his death in ſo terrible a ſtate of guilt and rebellion, aggravated the bitterneſs of his loſs. Note, (1.) Inconſolable ſorrow is a great ſin againſt God. (2.) The loſs of a darling child is apt to ſhake the conſtancy even of truly godly parents. (3.) The death of an impenitent child is a moſt heart-breaking affliction.

1. AND it was told Joab, Behold the king weepeth and mourneth for Abſalom. 2. And the † victory that day was turned into [a] mourning unto all the people: for the people heard ſay that day, how the king was grieved for his ſon. 3. And the people gat them by ſtealth that day into the city, as people being aſhamed ſteal away when they flee in battle. 4. But the king covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, [b] O my ſon Abſalom, O Abſalom, my ſon, my ſon. 5. And Joab came into the houſe to the king, and ſaid, Thou haſt ſhamed this day the faces of all thy ſervants, which this day have ſaved thy life, and the lives of thy ſons, and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines: 6. In that thou loveſt thine enemies, and hateſt thy friends; for thou haſt declared this day, ‡ that thou regardeſt neither princes, nor ſervants: for this day I perceive, that if Abſalom had lived, and all we had died this day, then [c] it had pleaſed thee well. 7. Now therefore ariſe, go forth, and ſpeak ‖ comfortably unto thy ſervants: for I ſwear by the LORD, if thou go not forth, there will not tarry one with thee this night; and [d] that will be worſe unto thee than all the evil that befel thee from thy youth until now. 8. Then the king aroſe, and ſat in the gate: And they told unto all the people, ſaying, Behold, the king doth ſit in the gate: and all the people came before the king: for Iſrael had fled every man to his tent.

v. 1—8. Deep was the gloom that obſcured this day of victory.

1. The king's unutterable diſtreſs was noiſed in the camp, and damped the joy of the returning conquerors; with his face covered he refuſes to ſee his generals, and with the moſt paſſionate exclamations bewailing his ſon, ſeems inſenſible to every other emotion, but inconſolable grief. Diſcouraged with ſuch a reception, the ſoldiers, inſtead of a triumphant entry, ſteal into the city as if from a defeat, and ſeem ready to deſert a cauſe where they met ſo ill a reception for having hazarded their lives. Note, They who are exalted above others, ſhould, in their deepeſt afflictions, put on a good countenance, leaſt they communicate their deſpondence, and ruin thereby their affairs.

2. Joab, vexed at the king's indiſcreet behaviour, with real zeal for his cauſe, though with an unbecoming diſreſpect, goes in to expoſtulate with him on the wrongneſs and danger of his conduct; he remonſtrates how ungrateful it was to ſhew ſuch neglect of thoſe who, at the hazard of their own, had ſaved his life and the lives of all his family, which Abſalom would have murdered; that it appeared as if he had ſo loved the traitor, as to hate his beſt friends for his ſake, and could have been pleaſed if they had all periſhed ſo Abſalom had lived. He therefore urges him to appear in public inſtantly, and ſpeak comfortably to the people, thanking them for their fidelity, and congratulating their victory; with a ſolemn oath declaring, if he did not, that every ſoldier would deſert him, himſelf give him up, and a worſe rebellion ariſe than had juſt been quaſhed. Note, If by our own folly we bring ourſelves into danger, we ſhall juſtly be upbraided with it.

3. David is convinced of the neceſſity of ſubmitting to the advice, and reſtraining his anguiſh, waſhes, anoints, and ſits in public, to the great joy of his army, who approach his throne, and congratulate him on the ſucceſs of his arms. Note, Good counſel, though bluntly given, ſhould be thankfully received.

9. ¶ And all [e] the people were at ſtrife throughout all the tribes of Iſrael, ſaying, The king ſaved us out of the hand of our enemies, and he delivered us out of the hand of the Philiſtines, and now he is fled out of the land for Abſalom. 10. And Abſalom whom [f] we anointed over us is dead in battle: now therefore why † ſpeak ye not a word of bringing the king back? 11. ¶ And king David ſent to Zadok and to Abiathar the prieſts, ſaying, [g] Speak unto the elders of Judah, ſaying, [h] Why are ye the laſt to bring the king back to his houſe? (ſeeing the ſpeech of all Iſrael is come to the king, even to his houſe.) 12. Ye are my brethren, [i] ye are my bones and my fleſh: wherefore then are ye the laſt to bring back the king? 13. And ſay ye to Amaſa, [k] Art thou not of my bone, and of my fleſh? God do ſo to me, and more alſo, if thou be not captain of the hoſt before me continually [l] in the room of Joab. 14. And he bowed the heart of all the men of Judah, [m] even as the heart of one man, ſo that they ſent this word unto the king, Return thou and all thy ſervants. 15. So the king returned, and came to Jordan: and Judah came to Gilgal, to go to meet the king, to conduct the king over Jordan.

v. 9—15. David, with a victorious army at his beck, had no more to do than to march and ſeize the capital, and execute condign puniſhment on all who had appeared in arms againſt him; but as he choſe to rule by love, not force, he waited to return amidſt the congratulations of his ſubjects, rather than amidſt the ſhouts of his warriors.

1. The tribes of Iſrael, before in rebellion, now caſt the blame of their ill conduct one upon another, and mutually upbraid each other that they are not more eager in returning to their allegiance, and in bringing back their king. His former high deſerts are now remembered, and their folly in truſting to Abſalom evidenced by the event; therefore, though there were perhaps ſome rebellious ſpirits averſe to it, his reſtoration is reſolved, and notice given him of their reſolution. Note, (1.) When we have done ill, we cannot too ſoon ſeek to amend it. (2.) We naturally deſire to exculpate ourſelves, by caſting the blame on our neighbour.

2. Judah, which might be expected the firſt, is laſt in their application, fearing perhaps, as deepeſt involved in guilt, they ſhould ſuffer for it. But David, to ſilence their fears and engage them in his cauſe, ſends to Zadok and Abiathar a very kind meſſage, for them to report to the elders, that he looked upon himſelf as their brother, and hoped for a like affection from them, and that it was highly unbecoming them to be the laſt; and to Amaſa he ſends a particularly gracious meſſage, with the promiſe not only of pardon but the beſt preferment, even to be his captain in Joab's room, whoſe haughtineſs was no longer to be born. Such a kind meſſage, or Amaſa's influence, who exerted himſelf on this occaſion, gained the unanimous ſuffrage, and meſſengers are inſtantly diſpatched, with an invitation to him to return, whilſt in a body the elders and people come to Gilgal to welcome him. Note, (1). No argument ſo effectual to gain the ſinner's heart, as the love of his Lord. He is become our bone and our fleſh.

16. ¶ And [n] Shimei the ſon of Gera, a Benjamite, which was of Bahurim, [o] haſted and came down with the men of Judah, to meet king David. 17. And there were a thouſand men of Benjamin with him, and [p] Ziba the ſervant of the houſe of Saul, and his fifteen ſons and his twenty ſervants with him; and they went over Jordan before the king. 18. And there went over a ferry-boat to carry over the king's houſhold, and to do † what he thought good: And Shimei the ſon of Gera fell down before the king as he was come over Jordan; 19. And ſaid unto the king, Let not my lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou remember that which thy ſervant did [q] perverſly the day that my lord the king went out of Jeruſalem, that the king ſhould take it to his heart. 20. For thy ſervant doth know that I have ſinned: therefore behold, [r] I am come the firſt this day of all the houſe of Joſeph, to go down to meet my lord the king. 21. But Abiſhai the ſon of Zeruiah anſwered and ſaid, [s] Shall not Shimei be put to death for this, becauſe he curſed the LORD's anointed? 22. And David ſaid, [t] What have I to do with you, ye ſons of Zeruiah, that ye ſhould this day be ‡ adverſaries unto me? ſhall there any man be put to death this day in Iſrael? for do not I know, that I am this day king over Iſrael? 23. Therefore the king ſaid unto Shimei, [u] Thou ſhalt not die: And the king ſware unto him.

v. 16—23. David, now happily returning to be reinſtated in his throne, paſſes the Jordan. There, the firſt to welcome his return, he meets two men, whoſe provocations were moſt likely to endanger their excluſion from the act of indemnity.

1. Ziba appears with a great retinue, whoſe lying tongue would now be ſoon detected, and therefore he would engage the king's favour before-hand.

2. Shimei comes with a band of Benjamites, among the men of Judah, and falls down on his face before the king, as ſoon as he lands, imploring his pardon, and confeſſing the vileneſs of his conduct, and his repentance of it; as a teſtimony of which, he is come the firſt of the houſe of Iſrael, and with his men, either his ſoldiers or his tenants, to profeſs his allegiance, and thereby to ſet others an example, whilſt the king's clemency extended to him would remove the fears of thoſe who might be diſcouraged from returning to their duty. Abiſhai, fired with indignation at his traiterous conduct, moves for immediate execution; but David wiſely rejects the motion with diſpleaſure, as if the advice of an adverſary: that day of triumph, when his kingdom was eſtabliſhed, muſt not be ſtained with blood; his royal clemency inclined him to pardon, and his intereſt engaged him to it. Acts of ſeverity might have exaſperated thoſe whoſe very fear would drive them into a new rebellion; therefore, with an oath, the king confirms Shimei's pardon. Note, (1.) Clemency is one of the nobleſt qualities of a prince. (2.) When rebel ſinners appear at the feet of Divine Mercy, though Satan ſtand to accuſe them, there ſhall be no condemnation.

24. ¶ And Mephiboſheth the ſon of Saul came down to meet the king: and [x] had neither dreſſed his feet, nor trimmed his beard, nor waſhed his clothes, from the day the king departed, until the day he came again in peace. 25. And it came to paſs when he was come to Jeruſalem to meet the king, that the king ſaid unto him, Wherefore wenteſt not thou with me, Mephiboſheth? 26. And he anſwered, My lord, O king, my ſervant deceived me; for thy ſervant ſaid, I will ſaddle me an aſs, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king, becauſe thy ſervant is lame. 27. And [y] he hath ſlandered thy ſervant unto my lord the king; but [z] my lord the king is as an angel of God: do therefore what is good in thine eyes. 28. For all of my father's houſe were but dead men before my lord the king: yet [a] didſt thou ſet thy ſervant among them that did eat at thine own table: [b] what right therefore have I yet to cry any more unto the king? 29. And the king ſaid unto him, Why ſpeakeſt thou any more of thy matters? I have ſaid, [c] Thou and Ziba divide the land. 30. And Mephiboſheth ſaid unto the king, Yea, let him take all, foraſmuch as my lord the king is come again in peace unto his own houſe.

v. 24—30. David now enters Jeruſalem in triumph, and there Mephiboſheth comes to congratulate him, who, during the king's exile, had ſpent his time in mourning, neglecting his perſon, and neither trimming nor dreſſing himſelf for ſo long a time. David, who, from Ziba's miſrepreſentation, ſuſpected Mephiboſheth not only of great ingratitude but of baſe deſigns, is ſurpriſed, in anſwer to his enquiry, why he had not followed him, to find how blameleſs he was, and how vilely he had been impoſed upon; yet Mephiboſheth is ſo ſenſible of David's goodneſs, in his paſt favours towards him, and ſo rejoiced in his preſent return, that he preſumes not to controvert the royal grant to Ziba, but refers the matter wholly to the king's wiſdom. David hereupon ſettles the eſtate on the former footing; not puniſhing Ziba as he deſerved, becauſe that was a day of mercy, or in return for the real ſervice done him, though with ſo wicked a purpoſe; and thus Mephiboſheth is again reinſtated in his inheritance. Note, (1.) In times of public diſtreſs we are called to weeping and mourning. (2.) Wicked ſervants do their maſters unutterable injuries. (3.) A good man ſits looſe to his own intereſt, compared with the intereſts of God's church and people.

31. ¶ And Barzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan. 32. Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even fourſcore years old, and [d] he had provided the king of ſuſtenance while he lay at Mahanaim: for he was a very great man. 33. And the king ſaid unto Barzillai, Come thou over with me, and [e] I will feed thee with me in Jeruſalem. 34. And Barzillai ſaid unto the king, † How [f] long have I to live, that I ſhould go up with the king unto Jeruſalem? 35. [g] I am this day fourſcore years old: and [h] can I diſcern between good and evil? can thy ſervant taſte what I eat, or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of ſinging-men and ſinging-women? wherefore then ſhould thy ſervant be yet a burden unto my lord the king? 36. Thy ſervant will go a little way over Jordan with the king: and [i] why ſhould the king recompenſe it me with ſuch a reward? 37. Let thy ſervant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father, and of my mother: but behold thy ſervant Chimham, let him go over with my lord the king, and [k] do to him what ſhall ſeem good unto thee. 38. And the king anſwered, Chimham ſhall go over with me, and I will do to him that which ſhall ſeem good unto thee: and whatſoever thou ſhalt ‡ require of me, that will I do for thee. 39. And all the people went over Jordan: and when the king was come over, the king kiſſed Barzillai, and bleſſed him; and he returned unto his own place.

v. 31—39. The aged and good Barzillai, after all the kindneſſes ſhewed to the king at Mahanaim, comes to pay his laſt reſpects to him, and accompany him as far as Jordan in his return.

1. David had been greatly indebted to him during his exile; for being a man of vaſt eſtate, and generous as he was great, he had liberally miniſtered to the wants of the king and his ſervants, during their encampment at Mahanaim. Note, Riches are then truly bleſſings when poſſeſſed by men of generous minds, and liberally miniſtered to the ſupport of oppreſſed innocence, and the deſerving indigent.

2. David, ſenſible of his kindneſs, reſolves now to make him ample amends, invites him with him to Jeruſalem, with the kindeſt aſſurances that he ſhould want no comfort which his palace could afford, and be a conſtant and welcome gueſt at his table. Note, A grateful heart is happy to have it in his power to recompenſe his kind friends.

3. Barzillai profeſſes the deepeſt acknowledgments for the king's generous offer; a recompenſe ſo far exceeding his poor ſervices: but, ſinking now under age and infirmities, begs the king to excuſe his not accepting the kind invitation; he ſhould be but a uſeleſs burden on the king; the time for reliſhing the delights of a court with him was paſt; at fourſcore, dainties had loſt their flavour, and the ſongs of melody were no longer enchanting: it became him now not to ſet out in life, but prepare for death, and to be gathered to the ſepulchre of his fathers. But not to ſlight the king's favours, if he chuſes that his ſon Chimham ſhall attend his majeſty to court, he will commend him to his regard. Note, (1.) Noble minds count all they do to ſerve their friends but little. (2.) In the day when the ſon of David ſhall appear in his kingdom, his ſaints will be filled with wonder at the ſurpaſſing recompenſe beſtowed on their worthleſs ſervices. (3.) It is time for the aged to have done with courts, and the delights of ſenſe; they who are ſo near the grave, have but one proper buſineſs, to retire and provide for it. (4.) The concerts of a court, and the elegancies of a king's table, may be perfectly conſiſtent with the trueſt piety of heart.

4. David embraces the propoſal gladly, and aſſures his aged friend, that he can aſk nothing he will not do for him; and with a kiſs of affection diſmiſſes him with his bleſſing, thanking him for paſt kindneſs, and praying that God would be with him. On which the good Barzillai returns to his happy retirement at Rogelim.

40. Then the king went on to Gilgal, and Chimham went on with him: and all the people of Judah conducted the king, and alſo half the people of Iſrael. 41. ¶ And behold, all the men of Iſrael came to the king, and ſaid unto the king, Why have our brethren the men of Judah, ſtolen thee away, and have brought the king and his houſhold, and all David's men with him over Jordan? 42. And all the men of Judah anſwered the men of Iſrael, Becauſe the king is near of kin to us: wherefore then be ye angry for this matter? have we eaten at all of the king's coſt? or hath he given us any gift? 43. And the men of Iſrael anſwered the men of Judah, and ſaid, We have ten parts in the king, and we have alſo more right in David than ye: why then did ye † deſpiſe us that our advice ſhould not be firſt had in bringing back our king? And the words of the men of Judah were ‡ fiercer than the words of the men of Iſrael.

v. 40—43. David now is peacefully advancing to take poſſeſſion of his kingdom, when an unexpected incident interrupts and damps his comfort.

1. The men of Judah and part of the men of Iſrael were advanced to Gilgal, when the reſt of the tribes met them returning, and think themſelves ſlighted; and jealous withal, that they intended to ingroſs the king's favour, they angrily objected to their conduct. Note, Only from pride cometh contention.

2. The men of Judah reply with warmth to the charge, that as the king was near of kin to them, and his home in their tribe, they were eſpecially bound to conduct him: and far from the inſinuation of ſelf-ſeeking, they had neither eaten at the king's coſt, nor received any preſent from him. Note, True patriots deteſt a mercenary ſpirit.

3. The men of Iſrael reply to this vindication, that they had ten parts in the king, Simeon being reckoned with Judah; and as being more numerous, had more right to be conſulted, and looked upon it as a deſigned contempt thus to be neglected. The men of Judah exaſperated, reply, and one high word brought on another; but the men of Judah were fierceſt, and the end of their hot diſpute proved a new rebellion. Note, (1.) Even when we are in the right, we ſhould rather yield than contend. (2.) Leave off meddling betimes, leaſt miſchief enſue. (3.) They who are in a paſſion, are ſure to ſpeak wrong, even though they have truth on their ſide.

So [d] every man of Iſrael went up from after David, and followed Sheba the ſon of Bichri: but [e] the men of Judah clave unto their king, from Jordan even to Jeruſalem. 3. ¶ And David came to his houſe at Jeruſalem, and the king took [f] the ten women his concubines, whom he had left to keep the houſe, and put them in † ward, and fed them, but went not in unto them: ſo they were ſhut up unto the day of their death, ‡ living in widowhood.

1. Sheba the ſon of Bichri, a Benjamite, a man of Belial, thinking he might now ſtep into the throne, widens the breach into rebellion. Since Judah ſeemed to engroſs the king, he adviſes the men of Iſrael to renounce the ten parts they claimed, and to have no part in David. The trumpet is blown, and Sheba now is their leader. Note, (1.) We muſt not promiſe ourſelves long peace here below. Whilſt the old enmity reigns in the heart of the ſinner, new ſtorms will ariſe. (2.) Fooliſh quarrels have dangerous conſequences. (3.) We are apt to be ſwinging to extremes; thoſe who ſeemed the moſt zealous friends, turn the bittereſt enemies.

2. David proceeds to Jeruſalem, and his firſt care is to ſhut up his concubines, whom Abſalom hath defiled: as a puniſhment for their eaſy compliance, and as by their unhappy caſe unfit for the royal bed, they are condemned to perpetual privacy and widowhood. Note, Obſcure retirement is the fitteſt place for thoſe who have made themſelves publicly ſcandalous.

4. ¶ Then ſaid the king to [g] Amaſa, Aſſemble me the men of Judah within three days, and be thou here preſent. 5. So Amaſa went to aſſemble the men of Judah; but he tarried longer than the ſet time which he had appointed him. 6. And David ſaid to Abiſhai, Now ſhall Sheba the ſon of Bichri do us more harm than did Abſalom: take thou thy lord's ſervants and purſue after him, leſt he get him fenced cities, and eſcape us. 7. And there went out after him Joab's men, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and all the mighty men: and they went out of Jeruſalem, to purſue after Sheba the ſon of Bichri. 8. When they were at the great ſtone which is in Gibeon, Amaſa went before them: and Joab's garment that he had put on was girded unto him, and upon it a girdle with a ſword faſtened upon his loins in the ſheath thereof, and as he went forth, it fell out. 9. And Joab ſaid to Amaſa, Art thou in health, my brother? And Joab took Amaſa by the beard with the right hand [h] to kiſs him. 10. But Amaſa took no heed to the ſword that was in Joab's hand: ſo he ſmote him therewith [i] in the fifth rib, and ſhed out his bowels to the ground, and † ſtruck him not again, and he died: ſo Joab and Abiſhai his brother purſued after Sheba the ſon of Bichri. 11. And one of Joab's men ſtood by him, and ſaid, [k] He that favoureth Joab, and he that is for David, let him go after Joab. 12. And Amaſa wallowed in blood in the midſt of the highway: and when the man ſaw that all the people ſtood ſtill, he removed Amaſa out of the highway into the field, and caſt a cloth upon him, when he ſaw that every one that came by him, ſtood ſtill. 13. When he was removed out of the highway, all the people went on after Joab, to purſue after Sheba the ſon of Bichri.

v. 4—13. David is in haſte to cruſh this rebellion in the bud, and therefore diſpatches Amaſa, advanced now in Joab's ſtead, to raiſe the men of Judah, and purſue after Sheba.

1. Amaſa is either tardy in his proceedings, or the people unwilling to follow the general, who had been ſo lately in rebellion, or perhaps the three days were not ſufficient to collect the needful forces. David expreſſes his great uneaſineſs hereupon, leaſt this ſhould be a worſe affair than the former; and therefore reſolved to diſgrace Joab for what he did to Abſalom, he diſpatches Abiſhai with the guards, in order to give the rebel no time to ſtrengthen himſelf; and Joab, though without a commiſſion, accompanies his brother. Note, (1.) Delays are dangerous. (2.) They who depend upon the favour of kings, ſtand daily in jeopardy of diſgrace; but they who truſt on the King of kings, ſhall know no ſhame.

2. At Gibeon, the rendezvous, Amaſa meets the forces under Abiſhai, and there Joab plots againſt and murders him. As he approached Amaſa, by way of civility, he contrived to hang his ſword ſo as to fall out of its ſcabbard, as it were accidentally, juſt as he ſtooped to ſalute him; and taking him by the beard with his right hand, Amaſa heeded not the ſword he had taken up in his left, till too late he felt it in his body. Thus fell the brave general at the head of his troops, baſely aſſaſſinated out of jealouſy and pride, by the bloody ſon of Zeruiah, hardened in murders, contemning all laws human and divine; and ſo his revenge was gratified, hazarding the ſafety of king and country. Note, (1.) Impunity hardens and emboldens the ſinner. (2.) They who are too great for human laws, though they eſcape puniſhment below, will find an avenging God.

3. Joab now takes the command of the forces, and leads them againſt Sheba; hoping, no doubt, the ſucceſs of the enterprize would make ſome atonement for his crime, and get him off with impunity. He appoints a man to ſtand by the corpſe, and bid the people follow Joab; and when they ſtopped at the place, he removed the body, and covered it with a cloth, and then all the people followed Joab, their old and ſucceſsful general, and probably promiſed themſelves better ſpeed under his guidance, than under Amaſa, the general of the late rebellion, and unſucceſsful withal. Note, Blood may be covered, but it hath a voice that will cry againſt the murderer, though it be never ſo concealed.

14. ¶ And he went through all the tribes of Iſrael unto Abel, and to Beth-maachah, and all the Berites, and they were gathered together, and went alſo after him. 15. And they came and beſieged him in Abel of Beth-maachah, and they caſt up a bank againſt the city, and it ſtood in the trench: and all the people that were with Joab † battered the wall, to throw it down. 16. ¶ Then cried [l] a wiſe woman out of the city, Hear, hear, ſay, I pray you, unto Joab, Come near hither that I may ſpeak with thee. 17. And when he was come near unto her, the woman ſaid, Art thou Joab? And he anſwered, I am he. Then ſhe ſaid unto him, Hear the words of thine handmaid. And he anſwered, I do hear. 18. Then ſhe ſpake, ſaying, They ‡ were wont to ſpeak in old time, ſaying, They ſhall ſurely aſk counſel at Abel: and ſo they ended the matter. 19. ‖ I am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Iſrael: thou ſeekeſt to deſtroy a city, and a mother in Iſrael: [m] why wilt thou ſwallow up the inheritance of the LORD? 20. And Joab anſwered and ſaid, Far be it, far be it from me, that I ſhould ſwallow up or deſtroy. 21. The matter is not ſo: but a man of mount Ephraim (Sheba the ſon of Bichri by name) hath lift up his hand againſt the king, even againſt David: deliver him only, and I will depart from the city. And the woman ſaid unto Joab, Behold, his head ſhall be thrown to thee over the wall. 22. Then the woman went unto all the people [n] in her wiſdom, and they cut off the head of Sheba the ſon of Bichri, and caſt it out to Joab: and he blew a trumpet, and they § retired from the city, every man to his tent: and Joab returned to Jeruſalem unto the king.

v. 14—22. The men of Iſrael ſeem to have quickly repented of their choice of Sheba, and to have deſerted him. His own countrymen of Beeroth, in Benjamin, cleaved to him, and after having in vain attempted to raiſe the country in his favour, he is forced to take refuge in a fortified city, called Abel-Beth-maacah, in the north, whither Joab and Abiſhai quickly follow him.

1. Joab beſieges the city, fills the ditch, batters the wall, and is ready to give a general aſſault. Note, (1.) One wicked man often involves many in his ruin. (2.) Every ſtrong-hold of ſin in the heart, whither our traitor luſts retire, muſt be thus battered down by Almighty grace.

2. A wiſe woman ſaves the city from ruin by her interpoſition. (1.) She aſks from the wall, and obtains a perſonal conference with Joab. (2.) She expoſtulates with him upon the evil of deſtroying a city ſo famed for wiſdom, ſo great and populous, a mother in Iſrael, that deſired nothing but peace, and was a part of the Lord's inheritance that ſhould be preſerved unhurt; and as ver. 18. may be rendered, ye ſhall ſurely aſk peace at Abel, propoſe it, and ſo the matter had been ended, but this Joab had neglected. (3.) Joab declares his intentions were as peaceable as her's, that he abhorred the thoughts of deſtroying them, but they muſt blame their own obſtinacy in ſupporting Sheba; deliver him up, and the ſiege ſhall be raiſed. (4.) This ſhe promiſes to do, and for that purpoſe aſſembles the elders of the city; they embrace the propoſal, and Sheba's head is cut off, and caſt over the wall to Joab, who immediately raiſes the ſiege, and returns to Jeruſalem. Note, (1.) Women's wits are often keeneſt. (2.) They who are peaceable in the land, ſurely ought not to be diſturbed. (3.) Sin is the traitor; whilſt that is wilfully harboured, peace with God is impoſſible. (4.) God hath no pleaſure in our deſtruction; if we by faith yield up our rebel luſts to him, he will ſave us from the ruin we ſhould otherwiſe provoke.

23. ¶ Now [o] Joab was over all the hoſt of Iſrael: and Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites, and over the Pelethites: 24. And [p] Adoram was over the tribute: and Jehoſhaphat the ſon of Ahilud was recorder: 25. And Sheva was ſcribe: and Zadok and Abiathar were prieſts: 26. And Ira alſo the Jarite was a chief ruler about David.

v. 23—26. We have here an account of David's officers. Joab, who had by cruſhing this rebellion done ſo ſeaſonable a ſervice, and was ſo beloved by the ſoldiers, is too great to be diſplaced from his uſurped office, or to be puniſhed as he deſerved for his crimes now, though judgment at laſt overtook him. The other officers are the ſame as before, chap. viii. 16. only Adoram was over the tribute, which was levied from the conquered nations, or raiſed for the ſupport of the ſtate at home.

CHAP. XXI.

We have here, 1. The Gibeonites revenged, (1.) By a famine in the land, ver. 1. 2. By the putting of ſeven of Saul's poſterity to death, ver. 2—9. and the care that was taken of their dead bodies, and of the bones of Saul, ver. 10—14. (2.) The giants of the Philiſtines ſlain in ſeveral battles, ver. 15—22.

1. THEN [a] there was a famine in the days of David, three years, year after year; and David † [b] enquired of the LORD. And the LORD anſwered, It is for Saul, and for his bloody houſe, [c] becauſe he ſlew the Gibeonites. 2. And the king called the Gibeonites, and ſaid unto them, (now the Gibeonites were not of the children of Iſrael, but of the remnant of the Amorites, and [d] the children of Iſrael had ſworn unto them: and Saul ſought to ſlay them, [e] in his zeal to the children of Iſrael and Judah.) 3. Wherefore David ſaid unto the Gibeonites, What ſhall I do for you? and wherewith ſhall I make the atonement, that ye may bleſs the inheritance of the LORD? 4. And the Gibeonites ſaid unto him, We will have [f] no ſilver nor gold of Saul, nor of his houſe, neither for us ſhalt thou kill any man in Iſrael. And he ſaid, What you ſhall ſay, that will I do for you. 5. And they anſwered the king, The man that conſumed us, and [g] that deviſed againſt us, that we ſhould be deſtroyed from remaining in any of the coaſts of Iſrael: 6. [h] Let ſeven men of his ſons be delivered unto us, and we will hang them up unto the LORD in Gibeah of Saul, [i] whom the LORD did chooſe. And the king ſaid, I will give them. 7. But the king ſpared Mephiboſheth the ſon of Jonathan, the ſon of Saul, becauſe of [k] the LORD's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the ſon of Saul. 8. But the king took [l] the two ſons of Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom ſhe bare unto Saul, Armoni and Mephiboſheth, and the five ſons of Michal the daughter of Saul, whom ſhe ‡ brought up for Adriel the ſon of Barzillai the Meholathite. 9. And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and [m] they hanged them in the hill before the LORD: and they fell all ſeven together, and were put to death in the days of harveſt, in the firſt days, in the beginning of barley-harveſt.

v. 1—9. The time of this famine is by ſome ſuppoſed to have been in the beginning of David's reign; but others, with greater probability, conjecture it happened towards the end of it, and that it ſtands in its order here.

1. The cauſe of this famine was the ſin of Saul. In pretended zeal for Iſrael, he wanted to root out the Gibeonites, who had fraudulently obtained peace of Joſhua: See Joſh. ix. Three years the famine had been, before David enquired of the Lord. At laſt, the continuance of it awakens his ſollicitude to examine into the cauſe, and God informs him, ver. 1. Note, (1.) Sin ſoon makes a fruitful land barren. (2.) God's judgments ſhould bring us to our knees, that we may find why he contendeth with us. (3.) Old ſins are not forgotten of God: though not immediately viſited, the time of recompenſe will come.

2. The methods taken to make the Gibeonites ſatisfaction, and to turn away wrath from the land. David, probably by Divine direction, referred the matter to the injured party, ready to do whatever they required, that they might bleſs the inheritance of the Lord. They aſked no money in ſatisfaction for damages, nor required other blood for the blood which was ſhed, than that of Saul's houſe, who had oppreſſed them. If ſeven of his ſons be given as a ſacrifice to juſtice, not to private revenge, they will hang them up before the Lord, that his wrath againſt the land may ceaſe. Note, (1.) Though the poor oppreſſed may be without power to relieve themſelves, God will plead their injured cauſe. (2.) Satisfaction muſt be made them before we can hope for a bleſſing from God. (3.) The ſin of parents often entails miſery on their poſterity. (4.) No execution muſt be purſued under the ſpirit of private revenge; for then though the ſentence be juſt on the offender, it would be murder in the proſecutor.

Before Christ 1019.

3. David complies with their requeſt, and gives them two ſons, which Saul had by a concubine, Rizpah, and five grandſons, the children of Merab; whom after her death, Michal brought up for Adriel, her ſiſter's huſband, ſparing Mephiboſheth the ſon of Jonathan, for his ſake. Theſe the Gibeonites hanged together, in Gibeah of Saul, the place where he uſed to reſide, to expiate the blood he and his bloody houſe had ſhed. They fell together in the beginning of the harveſt, that the Lord might be intreated for the fruits of the earth, and remove the famine from the land. Note, (1.) They who maliciouſly deſign the ruin of others, often bring themſelves and families into the pit they have digged. (2.) A murderer, tho' of the blood royal, ought not to be ſpared. (3.) Severe executions for the public good, are ſometimes a needful ſeverity.

10. ¶ And Rizpah the daughter of Aiah took ſackcloth, and ſpread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of harveſt, [s] until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and ſuffered neither the birds of the air to reſt on them by day, nor the beaſts of the field by night. 11. And it was told David what Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, the concubine of Saul had done. 12. And David went and took the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his ſon, from the men of Jabeſh-gilead, [t] which had ſtolen them from the ſtreet of Bethſhan, where the Philiſtines had hanged them, when the Philiſtines had ſlain Saul in Gilboa. 13. And he brought up from thence the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his ſon; and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged. 14. And the bones of Saul and Jonathan his ſon buried they in the country of Benjamin in Zelah, in the ſepulchre of Kiſh his father: and they performed all that the king commanded; and [u] after that God was intreated for the land.

v. 10—14. The bodies, contrary to the precept, Deut. xxi. 23. were left hanging on the tree. The caſe was extraordinary, and as it was a national crime, thus to violate the ſolemn oath made to the Gibeonites, it was no doubt, by Divine command enjoined for the expiation of it, till the long withheld rain ſhould be ſent.

1. Rizpah in this bitter affliction, with anguiſh ſuch as tender mothers feel, ſpreads a tent of ſackcloth on the rock, near the place, to keep the bodies from being devoured by birds or beaſts, till the rain fell, and the bodies might be taken down and buried. Note, (1.) None know what ſorrows are in ſtore for them. (2.) To indulge our anguiſh, by taking pains to revive the memory of our loſs, is fooliſhly and uſeleſsly to turn ſelf-tormentors.

2. Rizpah's uncommon tenderneſs is told David, and far from being diſpleaſed at the deed, no ſooner doth God, by the gift of rain, manifeſt the removal of his judgment, than David honourably inters their bones, with thoſe of Saul and Jonathan, which he fetched from under the oak in Jabeſh-gilead, where they had been obſcurely buried, and laid them together in the ſepulchre of Kiſh their anceſtor. Note, Thus was the ſon of God crucified for ſins not his own, ſuffering for the curſe which lay upon our ſinful ſouls; and having by an ignominious death expiated our guilt, the wrath of God was appeaſed, and he was taken down from the tree.

15. ¶ Moreover the Philiſtines had yet war again with Iſrael, and David went down, and his ſervants with him, and fought againſt the Philiſtines; and David waxed faint. 16. And Iſhbi-benob, which was of the ſons of † the giant, (the weight of whoſe ‡ ſpear weighed three hundred ſhekels of braſs in weight) he being girded with a new ſword, thought to have ſlain David. 17. But Abiſhai the ſon of Zeruiah [x] ſuccoured him, and ſmote the Philiſtine, and killed him. Then the men of David ſware unto him, ſaying, [y] Thou ſhalt go no more out with us to battle, that thou quench not the ‖ light of Iſrael. 18. And it came to paſs after this, that there was again a battle with the Philiſtines at [z] Gob; then Sibbechai the Huſhathite ſlew Saph, which was of the ſons of the giant. 19. And there was again a battle in Gob with the Philiſtines, where Elhanan the ſon of Jaare-oregim a Bethlehemite, ſlew the brother of Goliath the Gittite, the ſtaff of whoſe ſpear was like a weaver's beam. 20. And there was yet a battle in Gath, where was a man of great ſtature, that had on every hand ſix fingers, and on every foot ſix toes, four and twenty in number; and he alſo was born to the giant. 21. And when he [a] defied Iſrael, Jonathan the ſon of Shimea the brother of David ſlew him. 22. Theſe four were born to † the giant in Gath, and [b] fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his ſervants.

v. 15—22. The Philiſtines, though ſubdued for a ſeaſon, yet now towards the latter end of David's reign attempt to ſhake off their yoke, and recover their liberty; emboldened in the attempt by thoſe giants, whoſe fall is here recorded.

1. David, though old, would himſelf lead his troops to battle; being ſingled out by Iſhbi-benob the giant, and not now, as in the days of youth and vigour, able to weild the ſhield and ſpear, he is in imminent danger of being ſlain, when Abiſhai bravely ſuccours him, and enables him to ſlay the giant, or ſmote him himſelf; the text will bear either ſenſe. Struck with the danger their king had eſcaped, the great officers and people about David reſolve he ſhall no more expoſe a life ſo valuable, leaſt, by any accident, this light of Iſrael ſhould be quenched. Note, (1.) Age creeps upon us ſo ſilently, that we do not perceive it, till experience proves us unequal to our former undertakings. (2.) The enemies of God's people, confident of their power, think nothing can reſiſt them; but they learn, to their coſt, that it is in vain to fight againſt God. (3.) When we are ready to faint in our ſpiritual conflicts, Jeſus, our captain, is near to ſuccour us, and through his help, we ſhall come off conquerors.

2. Three other battles ſoon followed. The Philiſtines making a deſperate puſh to recover their loſſes, but in each they are defeated, and the mighty warriors who led them ſlain. Saph, by Sibbechai; the brother of Goliath, by Elhanan; and the laſt prodigy of a man, with ſix fingers on each hand, and ſix toes on each foot, and whoſe inſolence was as great as his ſtrength, by Jonathan, David's nephew: thus the race of the ſons of Anak was rooted out, by David and his ſervants. Note, (1.) Whilſt we are in this world, we muſt expect continual conflicts with the enemies of our ſouls. (2.) The giantlike corruptions of our heart ſhall fall before the victorious grace of Jeſus; and at laſt in death theſe ſons of Anak will be for ever deſtroyed.

CHAP. XXII.

This chapter is a pſalm of praiſe, which we find afterwards inſerted among David's pſalms, N°. 18. with ſome little variation. Here is, 1. The title of the pſalm, ver. 1. 2. The pſalm itſelf: In which (1.) He gives glory to God. (2.) He takes comfort in him, and finds matter for both. 1. In the experiences he had had of God's former mercies. 2. In the expectations he had of his future favours.

1. AND David ſpake unto the LORD the words of [a] this ſong, in the day that [b] the LORD had delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul.

v. 1. Concerning the time when this pſalm was compoſed, commentators differ; ſome think it was in the decline of life, when all his paſt mercies, from firſt to laſt, awakened up his gratitude, and tuned his harp to praiſe: others, that it was compoſed by him early in life, on his firſt deliverances from Saul, and ſung on experience of every freſh deliverance from his other enemies, which may account for the variations of it, from Pſal. xviii. The matter of it is exultation in the confidence of God's protection, and praiſe for the mercies he had already received. Saul had hated and perſecuted him, and numerous enemies beſet him, but out of all their hands the Lord had delivered him. Note, (1.) They whom God calls to his kingdom, muſt expect the world's enmity and oppoſition. (2.) The deliverance of God's people from the power of their enemies, is promiſed as the object of their faith, and will be fulfilled as matter for their praiſe. (3.) Praiſe is a welcome tribute, and as acceptable to God, as it is comfortable to ourſelves.

2. And he ſaid, [c] The LORD is [d] my rock and my fortreſs, and [e] my deliverer, 3. The God of my rock, [f] in him will I truſt: he is [g] my ſhield, and [h] the horn of my ſalvation, my high tower, and my refuge, [i] my ſaviour; thou ſaveſt me from violence. 4. coals were kindled by it. 10. [s] He bowed the heavens alſo and came down: and darkneſs was under his feet. 11. For [o] by thee I have run through a troop: by my God have I leaped over a wall. 31. As for God, [p] his way is perfect; [q] the word of the LORD is tried: he is a buckler to all them that truſt in him. 32. For [r] who is God, ſave the LORD? and who is a rock, ſave our God? 33. God is my ſtrength and power: and he maketh my way perfect. 34. [s] He maketh my feet like hind's feet: and [t] ſetteth me upon my high places. 35. [u] He teacheth my hands to war; ſo that a bow of ſteel is broken by mine arms. 36. Thou haſt alſo given me [x] the ſhield of thy ſalvation: and thy gentleneſs hath § made me great. 37. Thou haſt enlarged my ſteps under me: ſo that my feet did not ſlip. 38. I have purſued mine enemies, and deſtroyed them: and turned not again until I had conſumed them. 39. And I have conſumed them, and wounded them, that they could not ariſe: yea, [y] they are fallen under my feet. 40. For thou haſt girded me with ſtrength to battle: them that roſe up againſt me, haſt thou ſubdued under me. 41. Thou haſt alſo given me [z] the necks of mine enemies, that I might deſtroy them that hate me. 42. They looked, but there was none to ſave: [a] even unto the LORD, but he anſwered them not. 43. [b] Then did I beat them as ſmall as the duſt of the earth, I did ſtamp them as the mire of the ſtreet, and did ſpread them abroad. 44. Thou alſo haſt delivered me from the ſtrivings of my people, thou haſt kept me to be [c] head of the heathen: a people which I knew not, ſhall ſerve me. 45. Strangers ſhall † ſubmit themſelves unto me, as ſoon as they hear, they ſhall be obedient to me. 46. Strangers ſhall fade away, and they ſhall be afraid out of their cloſe places. 47. The LORD liveth, and bleſſed be my rock: and exalted be the God of the rock of my ſalvation. 48. [d] It is God that avengeth me, and that bringeth down the people under me. 49. And that bringeth me forth from mine enemies: thou alſo haſt lifted me up on high above them that roſe up againſt me: thou haſt delivered me from the violent man. 50. Therefore [e] I will give thanks unto thee, O LORD, among the heathen, and I will ſing praiſes unto thy name. 51. He is the tower of ſalvation for his king: and ſheweth mercy to [f] his anointed, unto David, and to [g] his ſeed for evermore.

v. 2—51. The Pſalmiſt opens this euchariſtic ſong,

1. With exulting profeſſions of confidence in God, v. 1—4. and with a variety of epithets deſcribes the glory and all-ſufficiency of God; the ſafety and ſecurity of thoſe who truſt in him, and the encouragement every faithful ſoul hath to call upon him, from the experience himſelf had, that he is a God who heareth prayer. He is a rock, ſtrong to defend and ſupport thoſe who cleave to him; a fortreſs, againſt which no power can prevail; a deliverer from every enemy; a ſhield, to ward off every fiery dart; a horn of ſalvation, to puſh our foes till they be conſumed; a high tower, where we are ſafe from evil; a refuge, where no avenging ſword can reach us; a Saviour, from whoſe arms none can pluck us; a lamp to guide, and a buckler to defend us: ſuch a God is no where to be found. He is one, and there is no other; his promiſes never fail, his power never abates, and his love never changes.

2. This God deſerves David's praiſes; and experience of his mercies awakens his thankfulneſs, v. 50. [1.] In perils he had delivered him, v. 3, 4, 5, 7, 18, &c. Though the dangers were great and threatning, v. 5, 6, 40, 41, 49, &c. and ſuch as he was utterly unable to cope with, v. 18. for he was at death's door; ſaw the ſhadows of night ſpreading over him, and was juſt ready to ſink under the floods of thoſe ungodly men's perſecutions, v. 5. yet when he cried importunately, v. 7. God heard, and wonderfully interpoſed; with haſte, v. 11. and in terrible majeſty arrayed, v. 8, 9, &c. like in its effects to the former immediate interpoſition of God, in the times of Samuel and Deborah, he drew him out of the deep waters of affliction, v. 17. and delivered him, becauſe he had a delight in him. Note, (1.) God's people are often reduced to the deepeſt diſtreſſes, in order to awaken their importunity, and to magnify God's power and love in their deliverances. (2.) The more we are beſet with trials, the more earneſtly let us call upon God. (3.) Thoſe whom God moſt delights in, have often the ſevereſt exerciſes of their faith and patience. (4.) Perſeverence in prayer will aſſuredly be crowned with deliverance from the power of evil. [2.] To honour he had advanced him. Though by profeſſion a ſhepherd, yet raiſed to be a mighty warrior, ſtrong to attack, ſwift to purſue, v. 34, 35, &c. his enemies were an unequal match; ſince God girded him with ſtrength, victories, ſpeedy as compleat, crowned his arms, v. 38, &c. and none was able to withſtand him, or dared to aſſiſt thoſe, whom he attacked. In conſequence of which ſucceſſes, he had reached the ſummit of glory, v. 34. obtained not only the kingdom of Iſrael, but greatly enlarged their border, v. 30, 37, &c. by ſubduing the neighbouring ſtates; the fame of his victories had brought the remoter nations to court his favour, and make their ſubmiſſions to him, v. 44, 45, &c. Note, (1.) Whatever ſtrength, ſucceſs, or honour we are bleſſed with, let God have the glory of it. (2.) They who here below were moſt deſpicable, and counted the off-ſcouring of all things, when God ſhall bring them to his kingdom, ſhall appear great indeed, anointed to be kings unto God for ever and ever.

3. David's own integrity and ſimplicity before God, gave him great conſolation on the review, v. 21—25. Though ſome dark ſpots had brightened his fair character, yet in every matter, except that of Uriah, he had approved himſelf a man after God's own heart, attentive to his word, v. 23. averſe to the ways of ſin, v. 22. and, ſave in one unhappy fall, keeping himſelf from his own iniquity; and though it was of God's grace that he was enabled thus to walk, yet he regards the mercies he had received as a recompenſe, not indeed of debt, but of promiſe. Note, (1.) Every man hath his own iniquity, not only his general apoſtate nature, but his particularly beſetting ſin, which needs peculiar watchfulneſs. (2.) The teſtimony of a good conſcience is a bleſſed ground of rejoicing. (3.) Though we can deſerve nothing at God's hand, yet as he hath promiſed to reward his own Spirit's work in our heart, we may confidently expect the recompenſe, yet not as of debt but of grace.

4. He encourages others and himſelf, from his own paſt experience, to truſt ſtill in God, for his mercy endureth for ever. The merciful man, who like David ſpared his enemy, the upright, and the pure in heart, though for a ſeaſon an afflicted people, yet God will ſave them, ſhew them the mercy they have ſhewn, and, as faithful to his promiſes, manifeſt to them his uprightneſs. But the proud, and thoſe who walk in the frowardneſs of their heart, vengeance will overtake them to the uttermoſt, v. 26, 28. Paſt mercies encourage David to hope for future ſucceſs: nations farther and wider ſhall bow down to him; and not only God's mercy follow him all his days, but his ſeed for evermore; particularly that Meſſiah, the glorious hope of Iſrael, who ſhould deſcend from him; who was then, and is for ever, the hope and joy of all God's faithful people.

CHAP. XXIII.

We have here an account, 1. Of ſome of the laſt words of David, ver. 1—7. 2. Of the great men that were employed under him, the firſt three, ver. 8—17. Two of the next three, ver. 18—23. And then the thirty, ver. 24—39.

1. NOW theſe be [a] the laſt words of David: David the ſon of Jeſſe ſaid, and the man who was raiſed up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the ſweet pſalmiſt of Iſrael, ſaid, 2. [b] The ſpirit of the LORD ſpake by me, and his word was in my tongue. 3. The God of Iſrael ſaid, [c] the Rock of Iſrael ſpake to me, † He that ruleth over men muſt be juſt, [d] ruling in the fear of God: 4. And he ſhall be [e] as the light of the morning, when the ſun riſeth, even a morning without clouds; [f] as the tender graſs ſpringing out of the earth by clear ſhining after rain. 5. Although my houſe be not ſo with God; yet [g] he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, ordered in all things and [h] ſure: for this is all my ſalvation, and [i] all my deſire, although he make it not to grow. 6. ¶ But the ſons of Belial [k] ſhall be all of them as thorns thruſt away, becauſe they cannot be taken with hands. 7. But the man that ſhall touch them, muſt be fenced with iron, and the ſtaff of a ſpear, and they ſhall be utterly burnt with fire in the ſame place.

v. 1—7. David is now haſting to the grave; and, as is fabled of the dying ſwan, takes his farewell of the world with a ſong of triumph. Note, Dying chriſtians are bound to bear teſtimony to the mercy they have taſted, and to commend with their parting breath, theſe good ways of the Lord wherein they have walked.

1. The ſpeaker deſcribes himſelf; or they may be the words of the hiſtorian: He begins with the meanneſs of his original, the ſon of Jeſſe. Humility is the ornament of greatneſs. He was now exalted very high, through Divine favour, to be king of Iſrael; and yet among his chief honours, places his being Iſrael's ſweet Pſalmiſt, the compoſer of their hymns, the director of their choir, the inventor of their muſic, and thereby their aſſiſtant in that moſt pleaſing part of worſhip. Note, (1.) The greateſt honour is to be made ſerviceable to the church of God, and the edification of his redeemed. (2.) Pſalmody is a needful, and a delightful part of worſhip. (3.) They who would after death join the ſongs of angels, muſt have their ſouls harmonized for the ſervice here below.

2. The inſpiration by which theſe words, as well as his other pſalms and ſongs of praiſe were dictated, is mentioned. David was an eminent prophet, and ſpake as the ſpirit gave him utterance. When we read his writings, we muſt look up for the ſame inſpiring Spirit to open our underſtandings, and to guide us into all truth.

3. The words themſelves; and they have a temporal and ſpiritual reſpect: (1.) Temporally, they reſpect Solomon and his poſterity, conveying to them direction, comfort, and warning. The God of Iſrael, their covenant God and rock of their ſalvation, ſpeaks; let every ear attend. Kings muſt be juſt, ruling in the fear of God, making his law their guide, adminiſtring juſtice with impartiality, and ſtrenuous to inculcate the fear of God: ſuch a ruler is the light and glory of the people, chearing them as the beams of the morning, when the ſun without a cloud ariſes to diſpel the ſhadows of the night; and his government flouriſhing and proſperous as the graſs watered with vernal ſhowers, and quickened by the returning ſun. And although David's houſe hath not been ſo flouriſhing hitherto, nor hath God made it thus to grow, but rather laid it waſte by the death of one ſon, and rebellion of another; yet he is comforted with the confidence that God had made with him an everlaſting covenant, wherein he had provided for the fulfilment of his promiſe to his lateſt poſterity; on this his own and family's ſafety depended, and on it all his deſires were fixed. But the ſons of Belial, the mutinous and rebellious ſpirits that oppoſed his government, though ſharp as thorns, and not to be ſubdued but by ſword and ſpear, ſhould be deſtroyed; and, like thorns fit only for the fuel, ſhould be burnt up, and have left neither root nor branch. (2.) Spiritually, they are applicable to the Meſſiah, and contain a glorious prophecy, highly ſuited in a dying hour to refreſh the faith of David, rejoicing to ſee his day. He is the righteous king, on whoſe ſhoulders the government reſts, and whoſe rule is according to the moſt perfect will of the Rock of Iſrael, doing always the things which pleaſe him. He, as the Son of righteouſneſs, ariſing with healing in his wings, ſhines with refreſhing beams of light and love on his choſen, and no ſpot or cloud obſcures his glory. And though in his humiliation, he ſeemed as a root out of a dry ground withered; and we did eſteem him ſtricken and afflicted of God, yet with him did God eſtabliſh his covenant, and with us in him: ſo that however low, diſtreſſed, or deſperate our ſituation appears, like David's troubled houſe, yet in this covenant of grace, through Jeſus, we may well comfort ourſelves; for it is everlaſting, contrived from eternity of God's good pleaſure, and enduring to eternity, by God's unchangeable purpoſe; ordered in all things, ſo as moſt glorioufly to diſplay the wiſdom, holineſs, and love of God, to exalt the grace and all-ſufficiency of the Redeemer, and to confirm the faith, and ſecure the obedience of every believer: and ſure, becauſe not depending on any conditions to be performed by us, nor to be forfeited by our infirmities, or the prevalence of temptation, but ſecured to all the ſeed, by the immaculate righteouſneſs of our ſurety, and the inviolable promiſe of the unchangeable God. This is all my ſalvation, will every believer ſay, becauſe no other hope ſupports his guilty ſoul, and all his deſire, becauſe compared with this, every thing beſide appears to him dung and loſs. But whilſt the children of grace triumph in the God of their ſalvation, a dreadful doom awaits the ſons of wickedneſs. The rod of iron ſhall bruiſe them as a potter's veſſel; and as thorns before the devouring fire, they ſhall burn, and none ſhall quench them.

8. ¶ Theſe be the names of the mighty men whom David had; The Tachmonite that ſat in the ſeat, chief among the captains (the ſame was Adino the Eznite) he lift up his ſpear againſt eight hundred, whom he ſlew at one time. 9. And [l] after him was Eleazar the ſon of Dodo the Ahohite, one of the three mighty men with David, when they defied the Philiſtines that were there gathered together to battle, and [m] the men of Iſrael were gone away. 10. [n] He aroſe, and ſmote the Philiſtines until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the ſword: and the LORD wrought a great victory that day; and the people [o] returned after him only to ſpoil. 11. And after him was Shammah the ſon of Agee the Hararite, and the Philiſtines were gathered together into a troop, where was a piece of ground full of lentiles: and [p] the people fled from the Philiſtines. 12. But he ſtood in the midſt of the ground and defended it, and ſlew the Philiſtines: And [q] the LORD wrought a great victory. 13. And three of the thirty chief went down and came to David in the harveſt-time, [r] unto the cave of Adullam: and the troop of the Philiſtines pitched in the valley of Rephaim. 14. And David was then in an hold, and the garriſon of the Philiſtines was then in Beth-lehem. 15. And David longed, and ſaid, Oh that one would give me drink of [s] the water of the well of Beth-lehem, which is by the gate! 16. And the three mighty men [t] brake through the hoſt of the Philiſtines, and [u] drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: neverthleſs he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the LORD. 17. And he ſaid, Be it far from me, O LORD, that I ſhould do this: [x] Is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. Theſe things did theſe three mighty men. 18. And Abiſhai the brother of Joab, the ſon of Zeruiah, was chief among three; and he lift up his ſpear againſt [y] three hundred, and ſlew them, and had the name among three. 19. Was he not moſt honourable of three? Therefore he was their captain: howbeit, [z] he attained not unto the firſt three. 20. And Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, the ſon of a valiant man, of Kabzeel, † who had done many acts, [a] he ſlew two lionlike men of Moab: he went down alſo and ſlew a lion in the midſt of a pit in time of ſnow. 21. And he ſlew an Egyptian, ‡ a goodly man: and the Egyptian had a ſpear in his hand; but he went down to him with a ſtaff, and plucked the ſpear out of the Egyptian's hand, and [b] ſlew him with his own ſpear. 22. Theſe things did Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men. 23. He was more honourable than the thirty, but he attained not to the firſt three: and David ſet him over his ‖ guard. 24. [c] Aſahel [d] the brother of Joab was one of the thirty; Elhanan the ſon of Dodo of Beth-lehem, 25. Shammah the Harodite, Elika the Harodite, 26. Helez the Paltite, Ira the ſon of Ikkeſh the Tekoite, 27. Abiezer the Anethothite, Mebunnai the Huſhathite, 28. Zalmon the Ahohite, Maharai the Netophathite, 29. [e] Chap. xii. 9. 1 Kings xv. 5.

v. 8—39. We have here a catalogue of David's worthies: men deſerving to live in the annals of fame. Public virtue and and generous actions a grateful poſterity ſhould long remember. They are divided into three claſſes:

1. In the firſt claſs, and the moſt honourable, ſtood Jaſhabeam the Tachmonite (See 1 Chron. xi.) called alſo Adino the Eznite. More names than one being common, and the place of his birth, or education, might gain him theſe ſeveral appellations. He performed an aſtoniſhing exploit, having ſlain three hundred men with his own hand at once. Eleazar was next him, who, in a pitched battle with the Philiſtines, whom he had defied, though the troops under his command fled, alone withſtood them, and made ſuch havock, that his hand with graſping it ſo long and vehemently, clave to his ſword, and the Lord gave him the victory; ſo that his men returned after him only to ſpoil. Note, (1.) In our ſpiritual warfare, though forſaken of every help, we muſt not quit our ground, but boldly ſtand dependant on God. (2.) When we do ſo, God will ſtrengthen us; and we, as bound, muſt give him the glory. (3.) They who are cowards to fight for Chriſt in danger, are ready enough to follow him when it is only to ſpoil. Shammah was the laſt of the three firſt worthies, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by oppoſing an irruption of the Philiſtines, and routing them with a great ſlaughter. Eleazar in another part of the field (See 1 Chron. xi. 13.) ſeems to have at the ſame time diſtinguiſhed himſelf. Another great exploit alſo in concert they performed: when David was in the cave of Adullam, where they joined him, in the ſultry days of harveſt, he expreſſed his longing for a cooling draught of the water of Beth-lehem, where the Philiſtines had then a garriſon. They no ſooner heard his wiſh, than, unknown to him, they ſet off; and though oppoſed by the Philiſtines, broke through the hoſt, drew the water, and returned with it to David; who, ſtruck with their zeal to ſerve him, thought the water too dear a purchaſe, bought at the peril of their lives, and with holy ſelf-denial poured it out as a libation before the Lord. Note, (1.) We ſhould check the fooliſh and unreaſonable longings of our appetite. (2.) To ſerve an earthly king in his mere humour, ſhall men thus hazard their lives? To ſerve the king of heaven in his moſt reaſonable ſervice, ſhall we decline any duties becauſe they are difficult? (3.) There is a living water that flows from Jeſus, who was born at Beth-lehem, which our ſouls do well to long for; and to obtain which, no danger ſhould be feared, or toil avoided.

2. The ſecond claſs compriſed Abiſhai, Benaiah and Aſahel. The firſt at once ſlew three hundred men, yet reached not to the glory of the firſt three: even of the ſtars in glory, one ſtar differeth from another. Benaiah ſtood next famed, for the ſlaughter of two men of Moab, ſtrong and fierce as lions; for his bold attack on a lion, in a pit of ſnow, when moſt fierce with cold and hunger; and for his dexterity, as well as valour, againſt a vaſt Egyptian, whom, with only a ſtaff, he diſarmed and ſlew: and for theſe deeds of martial prowefs, David advanced him to the command of his life-guards. Aſahel, Joab's brother, was the third, over the thirty next mentioned.

3. The laſt claſs conſiſted of thirty; whoſe deeds, though not particularly recorded, yet gained them a diſtinguiſhed honour. Their names and places of abode only are mentioned. Among them we find a ſon of Ahitophel, a faithful ſon of a rebel father. Happy it is, when children ſee and ſhun their father's ill examples. And Uriah, whoſe bravery and worthy deſerts aggravated the baſeneſs of his murder. Joab is not mentioned: either he was generaliſſimo, and above them; or a brand of oblivion is put on the memory of ſo bad a man. Note, Every true believer is one of theſe worthies, fighting under the banners of Jeſus, ſtrong in the Lord and the power of his might, victorious over the powers of ſin and Satan; and written great, not in the annals of time indeed, but in the annals of eternity, in the book of life of the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world. Lord, may my name be found written there!

1. AND [a] again the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt Iſrael, and † he moved David againſt them, to ſay, Go number Iſrael and Judah. 2. For the king ſaid to Joab the captain of the hoſt, which was with him, [b] Go now through all the tribes of Iſrael, from Dan even to Beer-ſheba, and number ye the people, [c] that I may know the number of the people. 3. And Joab ſaid unto the king, Now the LORD thy God add unto the people (how many ſoever they be) an hundred-fold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may ſee it: but why doth my lord the king delight in this thing? 4. Notwithſtanding, the king's word prevailed againſt Joab, and againſt the captains of the hoſt: and Joab and the captains of the hoſt went out from the preſence of the king, to number the people of Iſrael. 5. ¶ And they paſſed over Jordan, and pitched in Aroer, on the right ſide of the city that lieth in the midſt of the river of Gad, and toward Jazer. 6. Then they came to Gilead, and to the land of Tahtim-hodſhi; and they came to Dan-jaan, and about to Zidon. 7. And came to the ſtrong-hold of Tyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites: and they went out to the ſouth of Judah, even to Beer-ſheba. 8. So when they had gone through all the land, they came to Jeruſalem at the end of nine months and twenty days. 9. And Joab gave up the ſum of the number of the people unto the king: and [d] there were in Iſrael eight hundred thouſand valiant men that drew the ſword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thouſand men.

v. 1—9. Sin and puniſhment are as inſeparable as the body and the ſhadow. Iſrael's iniquities and rebellions provoked God, and he permitted Satan to ſtir up David againſt them.

1. David now at reſt from war, after ſuch a ſeries of ſucceſſes, is too much elated with the greatneſs of his kingdom; and in the pride of his heart is curious to know the number of his warriors, as if the arm of fleſh inſtead of the arm of God had gotten him the victory. Note, He that ſearches the heart, knows the pride of it, and that is an abomination in his ſight.

2. Joab, with the captains, humbly diſſuades the king from his deſign; and whilſt he loyally wiſhes they might increaſe an hundred fold, yet fain would divert him from a proceeding, uſeleſs, burdenſome to the people, and which might be, as it proved, of dangerous conſequences. Note, When inferiors behold the errors into which their ſuperiors are hurrying, humbly to remonſtrate, is to act the part of a faithful friend.

3. David's commands are peremptory; and Joab and the captains, though againſt their better judgment, obey. It becomes ſubjects and ſervants to obey not only the reaſonable commands of their maſters or magiſtrates, but, rather than rebel, to ſubmit to thoſe that are oppreſſive or unreaſonable. Nine months the ſurvey laſted, employing much time, trouble, and expence; and at laſt the return is made, eight hundred thouſand fighting men in Iſrael, and five hundred thouſand men in Judah, beſides the tribes of Levi and Benjamin, which Joab numbered not. The difference of numbers in 1 Chron. xxi. 5. may be reconciled, by ſuppoſing that David's regular army came not into this account, which conſiſting of twenty-four thouſand in monthly waiting, amounted to two hundred and eighty-eight thouſand; to which if twelve thouſand officers be added, the ſums will correſpond: and the men of Judah are there counted thirty thouſand leſs than here, the thirty companies of one thouſand men each, mentioned in the preceding chapter, not being there taken into the account.

10. ¶ And David's heart [e] ſmote him, after that he had numbred the people: and David ſaid unto the LORD, [f] I have ſinned greatly in that I have done: and now I beſeech thee, O LORD, [g] take away the iniquity of thy ſervant; for I have done very fooliſhly. 11. For when David was up in the morning, the word of the LORD came unto the prophet Gad, David's ſeer, ſaying, 12. Go and ſay unto David, Thus ſaith the LORD, [h] I offer thee three things; chooſe thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee. 13. So Gad came to David, and told him, and ſaid unto him, Shall ſeven years of famine come unto thee and thy land? or wilt thou flee three months before thine enemies, while they purſue thee? or that there be three days peſtilence in thy land? now adviſe, and ſee what anſwer I ſhall return to him that ſent me. 14. And David ſaid unto Gad, I am in a great ſtrait: [i] let us fall now into the hand of the LORD, (for [k] his mercies are great) and [l] let me not fall into the hand of man. 15. So the LORD ſent a peſtilence upon Iſrael, from the morning even to the time appointed: and there died of the people from Dan

And when the angel ſtretched out his hand upon Jeruſalem to deſtroy it, the LORD repented him of the evil, and ſaid to the angel that deſtroyed the people, [n] It is enough: ſtay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD was by the threſhing-place of Araunah the Jebuſite. 17. And David ſpake unto the LORD when he ſaw the angel that ſmote the people, and ſaid, [o] Lo, I have ſinned, and I have done wickedly: but theſe ſheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee, be againſt me, and againſt my father's houſe.

v. 10—17. During nine months David waited for the gratification of his pride; and now he no ſooner receives the return, than conviction of his ſin daſhes the ſweet draught he was lifting to his lips. So often are the pleaſures of ſin turned into the poiſon of aſps.

1. His heart ſmites him: reflecting in the evening on what he had done, the good Spirit opens his eyes to a ſenſe of his guilt, and awakens his conſcience to a ſenſibility of his danger. Inſtantly his penitent confeſſions ſpeak his contrite ſpirit, and he begs earneſtly the forgiveneſs of his great ſin and folly. Note, (1.) Though we have played the fool, and ſinned exceedingly, yet if our heart ſmite us, and we are brought to our tears and our knees, there is yet hope. (2.) A ſenſe of guilt upon the conſcience, will put an edge on the importunity of our prayers, and the groanings which cannot be uttered, God can hear. (3.) It is the greateſt folly for a momentary pleaſure, to incur never-ending pain.

2. When David aroſe in the morning, expecting from the bitter night he had paſt to meet no glad tidings, Gad the ſeer is ſent to him with his ſentence: Three things are propoſed to his choice; famine, peſtilence, or war. He ſhall rue his folly, and the people ſuffer for their ſins. Note, (1.) God often ſeverely chaſtiſes thoſe he never means to deſtroy. (2.) All his judgments are juſt; and thoſe who walk in pride he is able to abaſe, by ſmiting their idol, or laying their honour in the duſt.

3. David is in a dreadful ſtrait: yet ſince it muſt be ſo, he chuſes rather to fall into the hands of God than of man; and to ſtand on a level with the meaneſt ſubject, as the mark of the devouring peſtilence: knowing the greatneſs of the mercies of God, he caſts himſelf upon them, hoping the ſtroke in his hand would be lightened, or the time of ſuffering ſhortened. Note, Thoſe mercies which we muſt for ever deſpair of obtaining from men, whom we have ſo highly offended, we may hope, (though ſo much more aggravated our guilt) to find with God, for he is God and not man.

4. Inſtant as the choice is made, the ſword is drawn; and Iſrael's land (ſo changed is the ſcene!) inſtead of peace and joy, reſounds with the ſhrieks of the mourners, and the groans of the dying. Seventy thouſand fell before the deſtroying angel; ſuch dreadful havock can theſe glorious ſpirits make, when ſent to execute God's judgments. The time was ſhort, but the ſlaughter was prodigious. Some think it continued till the third day; others, that it was the ſame day, at the time of the evening-ſacrifice, when the angel with the drawn ſword appeared, viſibly in the air over Jeruſalem, as ready to ſmite that city of David. Then God repented of his fierce anger; he looked upon their deſolations, and remembred the ark of his covenant; therefore he bids the angel ſheathe the ſword, it is enough. Note, (1.) God mingles mercy ſtill with judgment, elſe would the ſons of Jacob be utterly conſumed. (2.) Whilſt we tremble at his viſitations, let us fear to provoke them by our ſins.

5. David's eyes were now opened, to behold this mighty angel, as he ſtood with the ſword of vengeance yet unſheathed, by or over the threſhing-floor of Araunah, which was on mount Moriah, the place whither Abraham went, according to the Jewiſh tradition, to offer up his ſon. There David fell down before the angel, and directing his prayer to God, confeſſed his guilt, and opened his boſom, to receive the ſtroke he had provoked, begging that he might bleed, as the author of the judgment; and that his people, whom as a good ſhepherd he loved, might eſcape, tho' at the expenſe of his own blood. His prayer is accepted, and himſelf alſo ſpared. Note, (1.) Thus the ſon of David not only offered, but actually laid down his life for his ſheep. (2.) Real penitents cannot bear others ſhould ſmart for their ſins; and care not what themſelves ſuffer, ſo they may go free.

18. ¶ And Gad came that day to David, and ſaid unto him, [p] Go up, rear an altar unto the LORD, in the threſhing-floor of Araunah the Jebuſite. 19. And David, according to the ſaying of Gad, went up, as the LORD commanded. 20. And Araunah looked, and ſaw the king and his ſervants coming on toward him: and Araunah went out and bowed himſelf before the king on his face upon the ground. 21. And Araunah ſaid, Wherefore is my lord the king come to his ſervant? And David ſaid, To buy the threſhing-floor of thee to build an altar unto the LORD, that [q] the plague may be ſtayed from the people. 22. And Araunah ſaid unto David, Let my lord the king take and offer up what ſeemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt-ſacrifice, and threſhing inſtruments, and other inſtruments of the oxen for wood. 23. All theſe things did Araunah, † as a king, give unto the king: and Araunah ſaid unto the king, [r] The LORD thy God [s] accept thee. 24. And the king ſaid unto Araunah, Nay; but I will ſurely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD my God, of that which doth coſt me nothing. So David bought the threſhing-floor and the oxen, for [t] fifty ſhekels of ſilver. 25. And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings, and peace offerings: [u] ſo the LORD was intreated for the land, and the plague was ſtayed from Iſrael.

v. 18—25. Gad, the meſſenger of the judgment. is ſent again to David, as the miniſter of reconciliation.

1. He enjoins him to erect an altar for ſacrifice in the threſhing-floor of Araunah, in token that God now had accepted him in mercy; and that by the blood of atonement, he might ſeal his pardon, and receive the tribute of his thankfulneſs. Note, (1.) But for the blood of Jeſus, the deſtroying angel would utterly conſume this guilty world. (2.) The ſacrifice of praiſe is the bounden duty of the pardoned ſinner.

2. David haſtes to the threſhing-floor, and being met by Araunah, declares his deſire to purchaſe the threſhing-floor, in order to build an altar, that the plague might be ſtayed. Araunah, with the munificence of a king, offers to make him a preſent of it, with hearty prayer for God's bleſſing on his deſign: or Araunah the king, as it is in the original, being, as ſome conjecture, of the ſeed royal of the Jebuſites, perhaps heir to the former king, and now become a proſelyte. But David cannot think of ſerving God with that which coſt him nothing, or taking any advantage of ſuch a generous ſpirit, when he was in ſo little need of the obligation; therefore inſiſts on purchaſing the place, and the oxen for ſacrifice, at their full value, fifty ſhekels of ſilver for the floor and the oxen, and afterwards ſix hundred ſhekels of gold, 1 Chron. xxi. 25. for the adjacent lands, on which the temple was afterwards built. Note, (1.) A noble generoſity makes a man appear great as a king. (2.) Needleſs obligations are to be avoided. (3.) They who deſire to ſerve God without expence, have little of David's ſpirit.

3. The purchaſe being agreed, and the altar built, David ſacrifices burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, and God declares his acceptance, perhaps by fire from heaven conſuming them; and the ſin of the land being pardoned, the plague is ſtayed. Note, Chriſt the living altar, and the acceptable ſacrifice, having once offered himſelf for a propitiation, we may rejoice in the returning favour of a reconciled God, and fear no more danger or death.

OR, A

Theſe Annals are called the Books of Kings, becauſe they treat of the affairs of the kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael. They are ſuppoſed to be compiled by Ezra, during the captivity in Babylon. The frequent quotations from them in the New Teſtament, vouch for their Divine Authority. They contain the beſt leſſons for government, and the trueſt politics; and prove that godlineſs among a people is their great ſecurity, and apoſtacy from God uſually their ruin. There is in theſe books ſpecial regard had to the houſe and lineage of David, from which Chriſt came. Some of his ſons trod in his ſteps, others did not. The number of the good and bad is pretty near equal, but the reigns of the good were generally long, and thoſe of the bad ſhort. The conſideration of which will make the ſtate of Iſrael not altogether ſo bad in this period as at firſt it ſeems. In this firſt book we have, 1. The death of David, chap. i. and ii. 2. The glorious reign of Solomon, and his building the temple, chap. iii. x. but his ſun ſets under a cloud, chap. xi. 3. The diviſion of the kingdoms in Rehoboam, and his reign and Jeroboam's, chap. xii---xiv. 4. The reigns of Abijah and Aſa over Judah, Baaſa and Omri over Iſrael, chap. xv. and xvi. 5. Elijah's miracles, chap. xvii, xviii, xix. 6. Ahab's ſucceſs againſt Benhadad, his wickedneſs and fall, chap. xx---xxii. And in all this hiſtory it appears, that kings, though gods to us, are men to God, mortal and accountable.

1. NOW king David [a] was old, and ſtricken in years; and they covered him with clothes, but he got no heat. 2. Wherefore his ſervants ſaid unto him, Let there be ſought for my lord the king, a young virgin, and let her ſtand before the king, and let her cheriſh him, and let her lie in thy boſom, [b] that my lord the king may get heat. 3. So they ſought for a fair damſel throughout all the coaſts of Iſrael, and found Abiſhag a Shunammite, and brought her to the king. 4. And the damſel was very fair, and cheriſhed the king, and miniſtred to him: but the king [c] knew her not.

v. 1—4. David is now ſinking under years and infirmities. His frozen blood is ready to ſtagnate as it flows, and cloaths no longer are capable of recovering the vital warmth. His phyſicians therefore preſcribe to him a virgin, in the bloom of youth and beauty, that her preſence might be agreeable, and that lying in his boſom, ſhe might cheriſh him. Probably he married her, See chap. xi. 22. though his enfeebled ſtate prevented all conjugal knowledge of her as a wife. Note, (1.) They who come to old age, muſt expect the burden of infirmities that attend it. (2.) Though the candle of life eſcape the furious blaſts of diſeaſe or accident, it muſt ſhortly burn out of itſelf. (3.) The view of approaching old age and death ſhould enliven our diligence to work for God, whilſt life and ſtrength are with us.

But Zadok the prieſt, and Benaiah the ſon of Johoiada, and Nathan the prophet, and [m] Shimei, and Rei, and [n] the mighty men which belonged to David, were not with Adonijah. 9. And Adonijah [o] ſlew ſheep, and oxen, and fat cattle, by the ſtone of Zoheleth, which is by En-rogel, and called all his brethren the king's ſons, and all the men of Judah the king's ſervants. 10. But Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, and the mighty men, and Solomon his brother he called not.

v. 5—10. David's troubles laſt almoſt to his laſt gaſp. One ſon is dead by fratricide, another ſlain in rebellion againſt him, and now a third following his example.

1. Adonijah, even whilſt his father lives, aſpires to the throne. He was the ſon of Haggith, and next in birth to Abſalom; ſo that Chileab the ſecond, as is ſuppoſed, being dead, he, as eldeſt, conſidered himſelf as preſumptive heir to the crown; though the deſignation of Solomon, by the expreſs command of God, and the intention of his father, was well known. He was a comely

a comely perſon, and, like Abſalom, had been too much indulged by his father; and now David again ſmarts for his fooliſh fondneſs. Deſpiſing his old and infirm parent and king, he thinks Iſrael wants a more active governor, and he will be the man. Note, (1.) An indulged ſon uſually proves a ſpoiled child. (2.) The ambition of reigning lead's men to trample on the ordinances of God and man. (3.) To deſpiſe our aged parents for their infirmities, ſhews an ungrateful and wicked ſpirit.

2. The means he uſed to accompliſh his deſigns were nearly the ſame which his brother Abſalom had taught him. He made a great figure, to engage the people's admiration, with his equipages, horſemen, and running footmen; ſecured the general and high-prieſt in his party; and, when his intereſt ſeemed ſtrengthened by ſuch an acceſſion, he began to take off the maſk, and at a ſolemn feaſt, or perhaps a ſacrifice, at Enrogel near Jeruſalem, to which his friends were invited, and, among them, all the king's ſons, who ſeem to have conſented to his deſign, they ſalute him king, and he receives their congratulations on his advancement. Solomon was not invited, nor Zadok, Benaiah, Nathan, or the mighty men. Their known fidelity to David, and adherence to the ſucceſſor of God's appointment, made it in vain to tamper with them, or invite them to this ſeditious aſſembly. Note, (1.) They who make their belly their god, will ſide with any party that will but entertain them in eating and drinking. (2.) When the ſucceſs of a wicked enterprize ſeems moſt ſecured, the greater confuſion and diſappointment doth God bring on its projectors by blaſting it.

11. ¶ Wherefore Nathan ſpake unto Bath-ſheba the mother of Solomon, ſaying, Haſt thou not heard that Adonijah the ſon of Haggith doth reign, and David our lord knoweth it not? 12. Now therefore come, let me, I pray thee, [p] give thee counſel, that thou mayeſt ſave thine own life, and the life of thy ſon Solomon. 13. Go, and get thee unto king David, and ſay unto him, Didſt not thou, my lord, O king, [q] ſwear unto thine handmaid, ſaying, Aſſuredly Solomon thy ſon ſhall reign after me, and he ſhall ſit upon my throne? why then doth Adonijah reign? 14. Behold, while thou yet talkeſt there with the king, I will alſo come in after thee, and † confirm thy words. 15. ¶ And Bath-ſheba went in unto the king, into the chamber: and the king was very old; and Abiſhag the Shunamite miniſtred unto the king. 16. And Bath-ſheba bowed, and did obeiſance unto the king: and the king ſaid, What wouldeſt thou? 17. And ſhe ſaid unto him, My lord, [r] thou ſwareſt by the LORD thy God unto thine handmaid, ſaying, [s] Aſſuredly, Solomon thy ſon ſhall reign after me, and he ſhall ſit upon my throne. 18. And now behold, Adonijah reigneth; and now, my lord the king, thou knoweſt it not: 19. And he hath ſlain oxen and fat cattle, and ſheep in abundance, and hath called all the ſons of the king, and Abiathar the prieſt, and Joab the captain of the hoſt; but Solomon thy ſervant hath he not called. 20. And thou, my lord, O king, [t] the eyes of all Iſrael are upon thee, that thou ſhouldſt tell them who ſhall ſit on the throne of my lord the king after him. 21. Otherwiſe it ſhall come to paſs, when my lord the king ſhall † ſleep with his fathers, that I and my ſon Solomon ſhall be counted ‡ offenders. 22. ¶ And lo, while ſhe yet talked with the king, Nathan the prophet alſo came in. 23. And they told the king, ſaying, Behold, Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in before the king, he bowed himſelf before the king with his face to the ground. 24. And Nathan ſaid, My lord, O king, haſt thou ſaid, Adonijah ſhall reign after me, and he ſhall ſit upon my throne? 25. For he is gone down this day, and hath ſlain oxen, and fat cattle, and ſheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's ſons, and the captains of the hoſt, and Abiathar the prieſt; and behold, they eat and drink before him, and ſay, § God ſave king Adonijah. 26. But me, even me thy ſervant, and Zadok the prieſt, and Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, and thy ſervant Solomon hath he not called. 27. Is this thing done by my lord the king, and thou haſt not ſhewed it unto thy ſervant, who ſhould ſit on the throne of my lord the king after him? 28. ¶ Then king David anſwered and ſaid, Call me Bath-ſheba: and ſhe came into the king's preſence, and ſtood before the king. 29. And the king ſware, and ſaid, [u] As the LORD liveth, [x] that hath redeemed my ſoul out of all diſtreſs, 30. Even as I ſware unto thee by the LORD God of Iſrael, ſaying, Aſſuredly Solomon thy ſon ſhall reign after me, and he ſhall ſit upon my throne in my ſtead; even ſo will I certainly do this day. 31. Then Bath-ſheba bowed with her face to the earth, and did reverence to the king, and ſaid, [y] Let my lord king David live for ever.

v. 11—31. An attempt ſo dangerous to them, if it ſucceeded, alarmed Nathan the prophet and Bath-ſheba.

1. Nathan hears of the aſſembly of Adonijah, and carries the news to the queen, that ſhe might impart it to the king, who knew nothing of theſe proceedings, ſo contrary to his will, and the appointment of God. No time was to be loſt, as her life and her ſon's were in danger, ſince Adonijah, to ſecure his throne, would be ſure to diſpatch his rival, and thoſe who cleaved to him. Nathan engages to ſecond her petition by dropping in as it were undeſignedly, juſt at the time when ſhe had ſpoken to the king of his oath to her, in behalf of Solomon for his ſucceſſor. Note, (1.) In times of danger, every prudent means is to be uſed for our own ſecurity. (2.) They who know God's will, ſhould be zealouſly affected to comply with it.

2. Bath-ſheba without delay goes to the king into his chamber, where Abiſhag miniſtered to him, as he lay decrepit on his bed, and approaching with all reſpect, in anſwer to the king's enquiry of her deſire, reminds him of his oath to her, to leave his crown to Solomon; informs him of the ambitious project of Adonijah, of which ſhe knew he was unacquainted; the avowed diſlike expreſſed to Solomon, whom he had not invited to his feaſt; the danger ſhe and her ſon ſhould be expoſed to, who would be regarded as traitors, if David did not immediately interpoſe, to confirm the ſucceſſion according to his promiſe; and expreſſes her confidence, that as the eyes of all Iſrael were upon him, ſuch deference would be paid to his public proclamation, that none would dare diſpute his appointment. Note, (1.) Kings are often kept in ignorance of matters that moſt nearly relate to their kingdom and intereſt. A faithful friend in a palace is rare. (2.) He who uſurps a throne, will ſtick at no cruelty to fix himſelf ſafe in it.

3. Nathan, who probably went with Bath-ſheba, and waited without till ſhe had done ſpeaking, is introduced to the king, and having made his due obeiſance, as one ſurprized at the late event, expreſſes his aſtoniſhment, by a pointed interrogation, if this deed of Adonijah's was with the king's privity or conſent, which Nathan conceives impoſſible, conſidering both David's oath, and God's deſignation of Solomon, as well as his never mentioning it to ſo faithful a ſervant as himſelf. Therefore he intimates the daring inſolence of Adonijah, even in David's life-time, thus to uſurp the throne; and the neceſſity of immediately placing Solomon thereon, who, with himſelf, Zadok, and Benaiah, had not been invited to Adonijah's feaſt, becauſe their well-known fidelity to the king would not ſuffer them to be companions with traitors. Note, (1.) When the enemies of God's people are ſo alert and vigorous, ſhall their friends be leſs active and vigilant? (2.) They who, though well-meaning, are weak through infirmity, ſhould be ſtirred up and encouraged for the duty to which they are called.

4. Bath-ſheba having retired when Nathan came, David bids her return, and with an oath confirms his former ſolemn appointment of Solomon for his ſucceſſor; and that day his reign ſhould begin, as ſure as the Lord lived, who had redeemed his ſoul out of all diſtreſs; the remembrance of which mercy would engage him to adhere to the divine appointment of his ſucceſſor. Bath-ſheba, perfectly ſatisfied in the king's declaration, expreſſes her thankfulneſs, and with low obeiſance adds, May the king live for ever. Though ſhe ſollicited the ſucceſſion for her ſon, the king's life and happineſs had her warmeſt wiſhes. Note, (1.) Our oaths ſhould ever be remembered, and bind our conſciences to fulfil them. (2.) A grateful heart never forgets the divine mercies, or miſſes an opportunity to make thankful mention of them. (3.) Good children deſire not, for the ſake of their eſtates, the death of their aged parents, but wiſh they may live long and happily to enjoy them.

32. ¶ And king David ſaid, Call me Zadok the prieſt, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada. And they came before the king. 33. The king alſo ſaid unto them, Take with you the ſervants of your lord, and [z] cauſe Solomon my ſon to ride upon mine own mule, and bring him down to Gihon. 34. And let Zadok the prieſt, and Nathan the prophet, [a] anoint him there king over Iſrael: and [b] blow ye with the trumpet, and ſay, [c] God ſave king Solomon. 35. Then ye ſhall come up after him, that he may come and ſit upon my throne; for he ſhall be king in my ſtead: and I have appointed him to be ruler over Iſrael, and over Judah. 36. And Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada anſwered the king, and ſaid, Amen: the

As the LORD hath been with my lord the king, even ſo be he with Solomon, and make his throne [e] greater than the throne of my lord king David. 38. So Zadok the prieſt, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, went down, and cauſed Solomon to ride upon king David's mule, and brought him to Gihon. 39. And Zadok the prieſt took an horn of [f] oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon: and they blew the trumpet, and all the people ſaid, God ſave king Solomon. 40. [g] And all the people came up after him, and the people piped with pipes, and [h] rejoiced with great joy, ſo that [i] the earth rent with the ſound of them.

v. 32—40. David having expreſſed his ſolemn reſolution, takes care it ſhall be immediately executed.

1. He calls for Zadok, Nathan, Benaiah, and the great officers civil and military; commands the guards to be drawn out to grace the ſolemnity; his own mule with the regal trappings to be prepared for Solomon; and out of the ſanctuary an horn of oil to be taken for his conſecration, which was to be performed at Gihon, a place perhaps of public concourſe. There, by ſound of trumpet, and joyful acclamations, they ſhould proclaim his acceſſion to the throne; wiſh him long life and proſperity; and bringing him amidſt the ſhouts of the people, place him upon the royal throne, as king; either as aſſociated with his father, or as his viceroy under him, and to be his ſucceſſor. Note, (1.) That which is right to be done, ſhould be diſpatched. What thine hand findeth to do, do quickly. (2.) The King of Peace, whom Solomon repreſented, was anointed not with the oil of the ſanctuary, but with the oil of gladneſs above his fellows, and appointed and qualified for the adminiſtration of that kingdom which is an everlaſting kingdom, by the Spirit, which the Father gave not by meaſure unto him.

2. Benaiah, in the name of all the king's faithful ſervants, cries Amen, to the reſolution, highly ſatisfied in the choice, and praying God to give his bleſſing thereon; wiſhing loyally the divine benediction on the king elect, and that his throne might be greater than even David's; a wiſh, in which David himſelf heartily concurred. Note, That is likely to proſper, that is begun with prayer for the divine bleſſing, and performed in dependance on his providence.

3. The king's commands are inſtantly executed. Nathan and Zadok, the prieſt and prophet, perform the ceremony of the king's conſecration, and the people, with muſick and loyal acclamations, ſhout after them, God ſave king Solomon. Note, (1.) They are kings indeed, who reign in the affections of their ſubjects. (2.) When the believer ſhall aſcend to his throne of glory, it ſhall be amidſt the joyful acclamations of angels, and with the trump of God.

41. ¶ And Adonijah, and all the gueſts that were with him, heard it [k] as they had made an end of eating: and when Joab heard the ſound of the trumpet, he ſaid, Wherefore is this noiſe of the city being in an uproar? 42. And while he yet ſpake, behold, Jonathan the ſon of Abiathar the prieſt came, and Adonijah ſaid unto him, Come in, for thou art a valiant man, and bringeſt good tidings. 43. And Jonathan anſwered and ſaid, to Adonijah, Verily our lord king David hath made Solomon king. 44. And the king hath ſent with him Zadok the prieſt, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and they have cauſed him to ride upon the king's mule. 45. And Zadok the prieſt, and Nathan the prophet, have anointed him king in Gihon: and they are come up from thence rejoicing, ſo that the city rang again: this is the noiſe that ye have heard. 46. And alſo Solomon ſitteth on the throne of the kingdom. 47. And moreover, the king's ſervants came to bleſs our lord king David, ſaying, God make the name of Solomon [l] better than thy name, and make his throne greater than thy throne: and the king [m] bowed himſelf upon the bed. 48. And alſo thus ſaid the king, [n] Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael, which hath given one to ſit on my throne this day, mine eyes even ſeeing it. 49. And all the gueſts that were with Adonijah, [o] were afraid, and roſe up, and went every man his way. 50. ¶ And Adonijah feared becauſe of Solomon, and aroſe, and went and [p] caught hold of the horns of the altar. 51. And it was told Solomon, ſaying, Behold, Adonijah feareth king Solomon; for lo, he hath caught hold on the horns of the altar, ſaying, Let king Solomon ſwear unto me to-day, that he will not ſlay his ſervant with the ſword. 52. And Solomon ſaid, If he will ſhew himſelf a worthy man, there ſhall not an hair of him fall to the earth: but if wickedneſs ſhall be found in him, [q] he ſhall die. 53. So king Solomon ſent, and they brought him down from the altar; and he came and bowed himſelf to king Solomon: and Solomon ſaid unto him, [r] Go to thine houſe.

v. 41—53. When ſin ſpreads the table of riotous feaſting, the end of that mirth will be heavineſs.

1. Tidings are brought to Adonijah and his gueſts, in the midſt of their entertainment, of what had paſſed in Jeruſalem. At firſt he promiſes himſelf, becauſe the meſſenger Jonathan was a valiant man, that he brought good news for his party; but he is quickly undeceived. They who do ill, muſt not expect meſſages of peace. Jonathan, who had been preſent at what had paſſed, relates the coronation of Solomon, the perſons employed in it, v. 44. the zeal of the king's ſervants for him, the univerſal ſatisfaction of the people, and eſpecially David's own great joy and thankfulneſs in ſeeing his ſon on his throne, and his hearty conſent and approbation of the loyal wiſhes of his ſervants, that Solomon's throne might be greater than his own. Note, The greateſt ſatisfaction an aged Chriſtian knows, is to ſee the peace of God's Iſrael eſtabliſhed, and his own children happily ſettled, and walking in the fear of God.

2. Adonijah and his company are thunderſtruck with the news: every man inſtantly ſhifts for himſelf, afraid to be caught in ſo treaſonable an aſſembly; and Adonijah, that juſt now ſat as a king, flies to the horns of the altar to ſecure his life, which was forfeited by his treaſon. Note, (1.) There is yet hope for the ſinner, even after his deepeſt provocation, if he flies to Jeſus Chriſt for refuge, who is the true altar, on the horns of which that atoning blood is ſprinkled, which cleanſeth from all ſin. (2.) Traitors are generally cowards, from the conſciouſneſs of a bad cauſe.

3. He humbly ſues to Solomon, as his king, for pardon, which he as graciouſly grants; and requiring an oath for his ſecurity, Solomon aſſures him, if he approves himſelf for the future a loyal ſubject, his paſt attempt ſhall not be his death; but if he ſhould be found turbulent or ſeditious, then he muſt no longer expect the clemency he had abuſed. Note, (1.) They who cry earneſtly to the Prince of Peace for pardon, may hope to find an anſwer of peace. (2.) We are, by our loyalty to our king, to prove the reality of our ſubjection to him. If we ſtill retain the love of ſin in our hearts, or indulge it in our practice, it is not ſaying Lord, Lord, will ſecure us from eternal death.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter we have, 1. The charge David gives to Solomon upon his death-bed, (1.) To ſerve God, ver. 1—4. (2.) How to act to Joab, Barzillai, and Shimei, ver. 5—9. 2. His death, burial, and the years of his reign, ver. 10, 11. 3. The beginning of Solomon's reign, ver. 12. (3.) Joab executed for his late treaſon and former murders, ver. 28—35. (4.) Shimei, for curſing David, is confined to Jeruſalem, ver. 36—38. then ſlain for leaving it, ver. 39—46.

1. NOW the Days of David drew nigh, [a] that he ſhould die; and [b] he charged Solomon his ſon, ſaying, 2. I go the way of all the earth, be thou ſtrong therefore, and [c] ſhew thyſelf a man. 3. And [d] keep the charge of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his ſtatutes and his commandments, and his judgments and his teſtimonies, as it is written in the law of Moſes, that thou mayeſt proſper in all that thou doſt, and whitherſoever thou turneſt thyſelf: 4. That [e] the LORD may continue his word which he ſpake concerning me, ſaying, If thy children [f] take heed to their way, [g] to walk before me in truth, [h] with all their heart and with all their ſoul, [i] there ſhall not fail thee (ſaid he) a man on the throne of Iſrael. 5. Moreover, thou knoweſt alſo what Joab the ſon of Zeruiah did [k] to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hoſts of Iſrael, [l] unto Abner the ſon of Ner, and [m] unto Amaſa the ſon of Jether, whom he ſlew, and ſhed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his ſhoes that were on his feet. 6. [n] Do therefore according to thy wiſdom, and [o] let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace. 7. But [p] ſhew kindneſs unto the ſons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of thoſe that eat at thy table: for

v. 1—11. David, the great, the good, now feels the approaches of death, and improves the moment which remains in inſtructions to his ſon.

1. He prefaces his charge to him with the mortality of his condition; and, whilſt he mentions his own death, reminds him that it was the way of all fleſh. Kings muſt die, and after death is judgment, where they muſt anſwer for their adminiſtration before the King of kings.

2. He urges him to a ſtrict adherence to God and his bleſſed ſervice, and not to be diſcouraged by any difficulties, but approve himſelf a man of God, faithful and true, and then he might be aſſured of proſperity, and the continuance of the Divine bleſſing upon himſelf and his poſterity, according to the promiſe God had made him. Note, (1.) They who would be faithful to God, have need of courage; and a king, who would be a man of God, needs a tenfold portion of ſtrength and grace. (2.) If we are obedient to God's commands, we may confidently expect the fulfilment of his promiſes. (3.) The beſt advice dying parents can give their children, and the ſureſt to promote their happineſs, is to charge them to walk in God's ways, the end of which will be peace and joy.

3. He gives him particular directions concerning Joab, Barzillai's ſons, and Shimei. Joab, though too big for David to puniſh, is referred to Solomon's wiſdom and juſtice. His treacherous murders, and his inſolence, ought not to be forgotten; and though his head was hoary, the blood which ſtained it forbad it ſhould go down to the grave in peace. Shimei's crime alſo, though during David's life, for his oath's ſake, paſſed by, muſt not be forgotten. His very grievous curſe ſhewed what ſpirit he was of, and his turbulent ſpirit would not fail to provoke the judgment he had once eſcaped. The death he had deſerved therefore would overtake him, and his gray locks muſt be no protection from his guilt. Note, (1.) Though long impunity may make the ſinner vainly think the bitterneſs of death is paſt, yet the day of recompence is at hand. (2.) The cry of blood, tho' long ſtifled, after many years ſtrangely breaks out at laſt.—Barzillai's kindneſs is never to be forgotten, and his ſon muſt ſtudy to make his children an ample return, and place them among his beſt friends at his table. Note, A grateful heart never forgets old kindneſſes: even the children of our friends, for their ſakes, will ſhare our regard.

4. When he had finiſhed his charge, David cloſed his eyes, and ſlept with his fathers, and was buried in the city where he dwelt, after a reign of forty years, the odd ſix months not being reckoned. He died, according to Biſhop Uſher, A. M. 2990, and before Chriſt's birth 1014. Note, (1.) The ſweeteſt ſleep of a good man is the ſleep of death, where all his troubles are for ever forgotten. (2.) Kings who build their palaces, ſhould not forget their tombs; a ſmall ſpace muſt ſhortly contain all their greatneſs.

12. ¶ Then [y] ſat Solomon upon the throne of David his father, and his kingdom was eſtabliſhed greatly. 13. ¶ And Adonijah the ſon of Haggith came to Bath-ſheba the mother of Solomon, and ſhe ſaid, [z] Comeſt thou peaceably? And he ſaid, Peaceably. 14. He ſaid moreover, I have ſomewhat to ſay unto thee. And ſhe ſaid, Say on. 15. And he ſaid, Thou knoweſt that [a] the kingdom was mine, and that all Iſrael ſet their faces on me, that I ſhould reign: howbeit, [b] the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's: for [c] it was his from the LORD. 16. And now I aſk one petition of thee, † deny me not. And ſhe ſaid unto him, Say on. 17. And he ſaid, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king (for he will not ſay thee nay) that he give me Abiſhag the Shunammite to wife. 18. And Bath-ſheba ſaid, [d] Well, I will ſpeak for thee unto the king. 19. ¶ Bath-ſheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to ſpeak unto him for Adonijah: and the king roſe up to meet her, and [e] bowed himſelf unto her, and ſat down on his throne, and cauſed a ſeat to be ſet for the king's mother; and [f] ſhe ſat on his right hand. 20. Then ſhe ſaid, I deſire one ſmall petition of thee, I pray thee ſay me not nay. And the king ſaid unto her, Aſk on, my mother, for I will not ſay thee nay. 21. And ſhe ſaid, [g] Let Abiſhag the Shunammite be given to Adonijah thy brother to wife. 22. And king Solomon anſwered, and ſaid unto his mother, And why doſt thou aſk Abiſhag the Shunammite for Adonijah? [h] aſk for him the kingdom alſo; (for he is mine elder brother) even for him, and [i] for Abiathar the prieſt, and for Joab the ſon of Zeruiah. 23. Then king Solomon ſware by the LORD, ſaying, God do ſo to me, and more alſo, if Adonijah have not ſpoken this word againſt his own life. 24. Now therefore, as the LORD liveth, which hath eſtabliſhed me, and ſet me on the throne of David my father, and [k] who hath made me an houſe, as he promiſed, Adonijah ſhall be [m] put to death this day. 25. And king Solomon ſent by the hand of Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, and he fell upon him that he died.

v. 12—25. David being dead, Solomon is ſettled upon his throne, and finds general ſubmiſſion from his ſubjects; but his rival brother brings on himſelf ruin.

1. Adonijah, ſtill entertaining his ambitious views, endeavours to obtain Abiſhag for his wife, hoping from his father's bed to ſtep more eaſily into his throne; but the difficulty was, how to obtain her from Solomon, at whoſe diſpoſal alone ſhe was. He reſolves therefore to make Bath-ſheba his friend, who is ſurpriſed at his viſit, and at firſt afraid, leſt it was with ſome revengeful deſign. He aſſures her he was in peace and friendſhip; has a ſmall requeſt to make; which, to engage her compaſſion and aſſiſtance, he prefaces with his late diſappointment: The kingdom he thought he had a right to by heirſhip, and, as he flattered himſelf, by the general ſuffrage of the people; but ſince the Lord determined otherwiſe, he ſubmitted to neceſſity; it would however be ſome alleviation of his loſs, if he could obtain Abiſhag his father's concubine, which he, as well as Bath-ſheba, might ſuppoſe not unlawful, when it was known the marriage with his father had never been conſummated. Bath-ſheba conſents to be his advocate with her ſon. Note, (1.) They who mean no ill themſelves, are unſuſpicious of others. (2.) Dangerous deſigns have often fair pretences.

2. Bathſheba is as good as her word, goes to the king, and is received with all the honour due from a dutiful ſon, and to the king's mother, and eaſily gets a promiſe of conſent to her requeſt, preſuming it to be, as ſhe ſaid, a ſmall thing, and reaſonable to be granted. But how aſtoniſhed is he to hear nothing leſs required for his rival brother, than his father's concubine, and, as he ſharply inſinuates in his reply, except the kingdom itſelf, a greater requeſt could not be made. Far therefore from complying, he juſtly thinks this not within the reach of his promiſe, and ſuch an overt act of treaſon, concerted, as perhaps he had been informed, with Joab and Abiathar, that he ſolemnly reſolves Adonijah ſhall ſuffer for it, and Benaiah is charged to ſee the death-warrant executed upon him. Note, (1.) They who have the ear of princes, ſhould well weigh their requeſts, leſt they abuſe their influence to the injury of their benefactor. (2.) A general promiſe, though exceptions may not have been inſerted, ought to be conſtrued as extending only to things neither ſinful nor unreaſonable. (3.) They who cannot be eaſy when they are well, meddle to their harm. (4.) Ambition hath brought many a head to the block.

26. ¶ And unto Abiathar the prieſt ſaid the king, [n] Get thee to Anathoth, unto thine own fields, for thou art worthy of death: but I will not at this time put thee to death, becauſe thou bareſt the ark of the LORD God before David my father, and becauſe [o] thou haſt been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted. 27. So Solomon thruſt out Abiathar from being prieſt unto the LORD, that he might fulfil the word of the LORD, [p] which he ſpake concerning the houſe of Eli in Shiloh. 28. ¶ Then tidings came to Joab, (for [q] Joab had turned after Adonijah, [r] though he turned not after Abſalom) and Joab fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and caught hold on [s] the horns of the altar. 29. And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and behold he is by the altar: then Solomon ſent Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, ſaying, Go fall upon him. 30. And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the king, Come forth. And he ſaid, Nay, but I will die here. And Benaiah brought the king word again, ſaying, Thus ſaid Joab, and thus he anſwered me. 31. And the the king ſaid unto him, Do as he hath ſaid, and [t] fall upon him, and bury him; [u] that thou mayeſt take away the innocent blood which Joab ſhed, from me, and from the houſe of my father. 32. And [x] the LORD ſhall return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon two men more righteous and better than he, and ſlew them with the ſword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, Abner the ſon of Ner, captain of the hoſt of Iſrael, and Amaſa the ſon of Jether, captain of the hoſt of Judah. 33. Their blood ſhall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his ſeed for ever: but [y] upon David, and upon his ſeed, and upon his houſe, and upon his throne, ſhall there be peace for ever from the LORD. 34. So Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and ſlew him; and he was buried in his own houſe in the wilderneſs.

v. 26—34. Abiathar and Joab had both been aſſiſting to Adonijah's firſt attempt, and ſeem, v. 22. to have been privy to this; they therefore are next to be puniſhed. Note, Let no ſinner, little or great, think to eſcape in the day of recompenſe.

1. Abiathar is degraded, though deſerving death, for his treaſon and oppoſition to the declared will of that God, at whoſe altar he ſerved; yet, in conſideration of his holy office, and the ſufferings he had endured for David's ſake, Solomon changes his ſentence into baniſhment to his own eſtate at Anathoth, removing him from his office, and forbidding him the court. Thus at laſt was the threatning againſt the houſe of Eli fulfilled, and the prieſthood tranſlated from his family into the line of Eleazar. Note, (1.) God's word will be fulfilled in its ſeaſon, though ſometimes he bears long. (2.) Rebellion in a prieſt, who ſhould teach loyalty, is doubly culpable. (3.) Kindneſs ſhewn to God's ſuffering ſaints ſhall ſurely be recompenſed.

2. Joab is executed. Juſtly expecting his lot would fall next, he ſeeks to ſave his life by flying to the horns of the altar. Thither Benaiah is ordered to follow him, and becauſe Joab refuſed to depart thence, is at firſt afraid to ſlay him there, and returns to Solomon; but he knew, from Exod. xxi. 14. that they were never deſigned to afford an aſylum to a murderer, and therefore bids him put him to death, as the juſt puniſhment for his complicated crimes, which brought not only his hoary head with ignominy to the grave, but entailed a curſe alſo on his poſterity: whilſt ſuch an exemplary piece of juſtice Solomon well concludes would be the removal of the guilt of blood from his own houſe, which, if unpuniſhed, would cry againſt the negligent ſword of the magiſtrate; and the removal of ſo turbulent a ſpirit as Joab's, would conduce alſo to the peace of the kingdom. Thus fell Joab, according to David's orders, and was buried at his country ſeat, which lay in the wilderneſs. Note, (1.) Nothing can appeaſe the cries of innocent blood, but the blood of the murderer. (2.) Wicked men entail a curſe on their poſterity. (3.) A negligent magiſtrate will bear the ſin of the blood he is not careful to avenge. (4.) Though human laws cannot be ſatisfied with any thing leſs than blood for blood, yet if the greateſt ſinner, if even a murderer, fly to the horns of the true altar, to the atoning blood of the bleeding lamb of God, he ſhall never be dragged thence.

35. ¶ And the king [z] put Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada in his room over the hoſt; and [a] Zadok the prieſt did the king put in the room of Abiathar. 36. ¶ And the king ſent and called for Shimei, and ſaid unto him, Build thee an houſe in Jeruſalem, and [b] dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither. 37. For it ſhall be that on the day thou goeſt out, and paſſeſt over [c] the brook Kidron, thou ſhalt know for certain, that thou ſhalt ſurely die: [d] thy blood ſhall be upon thine own head. 38. And Shimei ſaid unto the king, The ſaying is good; as my lord the king hath ſaid, ſo will thy ſervant do. And Shimei dwelt in Jeruſalem many days. 39. And it came to paſs at the end of three years, that two of the ſervants of Shimei ran away unto Achiſh ſon of Maachah king of Gath: and they told Shimei, ſaying, Behold, thy ſervants be in Gath. 40. And Shimei aroſe and ſaddled his aſs, and [e] went to Gath to Achiſh to ſeek his ſervants: and Shimei went and brought his ſervants from Gath. 41. And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone from Jeruſalem to Gath, and was come again. 42. And the king ſent and called for Shimei, and ſaid unto him, Did I not make thee to [f] ſwear by the LORD, and proteſted unto thee, ſaying, Know for a certain, that on the day thou goeſt out, and walkeſt abroad any whither, that thou ſhalt ſurely die? and thou ſaidſt unto me, The word that I have heard is good. 43. Why then haſt thou not kept [g] the oath of the LORD, and the commandment that I have charged thee with? 44. The king ſaid moreover to Shimei, [h] Thou knoweſt all the wickedneſs which thine heart is privy to, that thou didſt [i] to David my father: therefore [k] the LORD ſhall return thy wickedneſs upon thine own head; 45. And king Solomon ſhall be [l] bleſſed, and the throne of David ſhall be eſtabliſhed before the LORD for ever. 46. So the king commanded Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, [m] which went out and fell upon him, that he died: and [n] the kingdom was eſtabliſhed in the hand of Solomon.

v. 35—46. Abiathar being depoſed, and Joab executed, Zadok is advanced to the prieſthood, and Benaiah to the poſt of captain-general. Shimei yet remained alive; but his day is coming.

1. Solomon cites Shimei to appear before him, and though he deſerved, and probably expected, to ſhare Joab's fate, the king puts him on his good behaviour, confines him to Jeruſalem, and forbids him on pain of death to depart. Whilſt under his eye, he cannot do that miſchief that he might have plotted in the country. Shimei acknowledges, that the condition is much better than he had reaſon to hope for, thanks the king for his lenity and goodneſs, and ſolemnly ſwears to conform to his injunctions. Note, (1.) The ſoul that periſhes will be made to own, he ſinned againſt his own mercies. (2.) They who wilfully diſobey the commands of the heavenly king, can expect only to meet with the juſt reward of their deeds.

2. Three years Shimei ſubmitted to his confinement, and might have lived long and happily at Jeruſalem; but God had decreed he ſhould not come to the ſepulchre of his fathers in peace. Two fugitive ſervants having taken refuge at Gath, truſting probably upon his reſtraint from following them; urged by covetouſneſs, and ſupported with hopes of ſecreſy or impunity, Shimei goes after them, and brings them back to Jeruſalem. But information is laid before the king, Shimei is cited to appear, convicted, and condemned, not only for his diſobedience to the king, but for his perjury before God, and his former crime againſt David. He knew the wickedneſs of his heart, and might have read in his preſent ſentence the righteous judgment of God; and whilſt his impotent curſes now return on his own head, Solomon humbly concludes the bleſſing of God will be upon himſelf, and the throne of David be eſtabliſhed. Benaiah executes the ſentence, and Shimei is ſlain. Thus all Solomon's enemies being removed, his kingdom was the more confirmed. Note, (1.) Perjury is a crime for which the avenging God will viſit. (2.) The heart is privy to much more wickedneſs than ever appeared without. (3.) God knoweth the ſecrets of the heart, and will call men to account for their ſecret ſins. (4.) The execution of the wicked is the eſtabliſhment of the king's throne. (5.) When the Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhall ariſe to judgment, he will remember the hard ſpeeches which ungodly ſinners have ſpoken againſt himſelf, his cauſe, and people, and their own tongues ſhall fall on them to their eternal ruin.

CHAP. III.

Though Solomon's reign began with blood, he is deſigned to be a prince of peace. We have here, 1. His marriage to Pharaoh's daughter, ver. 1. 2. A view of his religion, ver. 2—4. 3. His prayer to God for wiſdom, and the anſwer to it, ver. 5—15. 4. His deciſion between two harlots, ver. 16—28.

1. AND Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh king of Egypt, and [a] took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the city of David, [b] until he had made an end of building his own houſe, and the houſe of the LORD, and [c] the wall of Jeruſalem round about. 2. Only the people ſacrificed in high places, [d] becauſe there was no houſe built unto the name of the LORD, until thoſe days. 3. And [e] Solomon loved the LORD, walking in the ſtatutes of David his father: only he ſacrificed and burnt incenſe in high places. 4. And the king went to Gibeon to ſacrifice there; [g] for that was the great high place: [h] a thouſand burnt-offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar.

v. 1—4. Solomon being now eſtabliſhed in his kingdom, ſeeks to confirm it by an alliance with the moſt potent of the neighbouring princes.

1. He takes the daughter of Pharaoh to wife, who is generally ſuppoſed to have been a proſelyte, as it was only towards the latter end of his reign that his taking ſtrange wives is cenſured; and we find none of the idols of Egypt among the gods of his wives. Note, The Lord Jeſus hath thus eſpouſed his church, once an alien, but drawn by the cords of his love, and converted unto him, a glorious church, more beautifully arrayed in divine grace, than the daughter of Pharaoh in cloth of gold, and garments of needle-work.

2. The manner of ſacrificing in thoſe days was in the high places. Gibeon, where the old tabernacle ſtood, was moſt frequented; thither Solomon repaired, and at one time offered a thouſand ſacrifices. He counted no expence too great, which was deſigned for the honour of God. Some have cenſured this practice as evil in Solomon; but the intimation given, that as yet God's houſe was not built, ſeems to plead its lawfulneſs, and the appearance of God to him in Gibeon, proves the acceptance of his offerings.

3. A bleſſed teſtimony is borne to the uprightneſs of his heart and ways before God. He loved the Lord, delighted in his worſhip, and obſerved his ſtatutes, walking as his father had done before him, in holy obedience to the revealed will of God. Note, (1.) It is a bleſſed thing to ſee children walking in the ſteps of their pious parents. (2.) The greateſt character man can poſſeſs, is to have God bear teſtimony to the unfeigned faith and love that is in him.

5. ¶ [i] In Gibeon the LORD appeared unto Solomon [k] in a dream [l] by night: and God ſaid, [m] Aſk what I ſhall give thee. 6. And Solomon ſaid, Thou haſt ſhewed unto thy ſervant David my father great mercy, according as he [n] walked before thee in truth and in righteouſneſs, and in uprightneſs of heart with thee, and [o] thou haſt kept for him this great kindneſs, that thou haſt given him a ſon to ſit on his throne, as it is this day.
7. And now, O LORD my God, [p] thou haſt made thy ſervant king inſtead of David my father, and [q] I am but a little child: I know not how to go out, or come in.
8. And thy ſervant is in the midſt of thy people [r] which thou haſt choſen, [s] a great people that cannot be numbred nor counted for multitude. 9. [t] Give therefore thy ſervant [u] an † underſtanding heart, [x] to judge thy people, [y] that I may diſcern between good and bad: for [z] who is able to judge this thy ſo great a people? 10. And the ſpeech pleaſed the LORD, that Solomon had aſked this thing. 11. And God ſaid unto him, Becauſe thou haſt aſked this thing, and haſt not aſked for thyſelf long life, neither haſt aſked riches for thyſelf, nor haſt aſked the life of thine enemies, but haſt aſked for thyſelf underſtanding to diſcern judgment; 12. Behold, [a] I have done according to thy words: lo, I have given thee [b] a wiſe and an underſtanding heart, [c] ſo that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee ſhall any ariſe like unto thee. 13. And [d] I have alſo given thee that which thou haſt not aſked, both riches and honour:
ſo that there ſhall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days. 14. And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my ſtatutes and my commandments, [e] as thy father David did walk, [f] then I will lengthen thy days. 15. And Solomon [g] awoke, and behold it was a dream: and he came to Jeruſalem, and ſtood before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and [h] offered up burnt-offerings, and offered peace-offerings, and made a feaſt to all his ſervants.

v. 5—15. Solomon having waited upon God, he mercifully viſits him in return.

1. The ſame night after he had ſpent his day with him, in a viſion, by a ſupernatural dream, God reveals himſelf to him, and makes him a gracious offer of whatever he ſhould requeſt. Note, (1.) They who wait upon God in prayer and praiſe, will find him ſpeedy in his returns of benediction. (2.) When the outward ſenſes are locked up in ſleep, the ſouls of God's people are ſtill capable of divine manifeſtations, and may, and ſometimes do, receive gracious communications from him. (3.) God ſtill ſays to every praying believer, What is thy requeſt, and it ſhall be given thee.

2. Solomon's pious choice is recorded. Though aſleep to the eyes of men, yet awake to God, he pours out his grateful acknowledgments, and puts up his fervent prayer. Note, That which engages us moſt when we are awake, even in ſleep will ſtill be our employment. Many a fervent prayer the ſpirit hath breathed, when the body hath been wrapped in ſlumbers. He mentions with deep gratitude God's mercy to his father David whilſt alive, and now after his death, in bringing himſelf his ſon to the throne. His father's piety he ſpeaks of honourably, as what he wiſhed to imitate; his own inſufficiency for the high ſtation in which God had placed him, he humbly confeſſes, being but a child in his own eyes in wiſdom and underſtanding, and his vaſt kingdom requiring the deepeſt judgment to govern it aright; therefore he requeſts an underſtanding heart, that he might be enabled to adminiſter impartial juſtice, and to reign in uprightneſs to God's glory, and for his people's good. Note, (1.) A good child will remember his father's excellencies to imitate them, and draw a veil over his ſins. (2.) The wiſeſt men are moſt ſenſible of their own ignorance. (3.) They who feel moſt the weight and difficulty of their office, will be beſt enabled to fulfil it, becauſe they will be looking for ſtrength and wiſdom from above. (4.) An underſtanding heart is the gift of God.

3. God favourably accepted his requeſt. He was pleaſed with the wiſdom of his choice, in preferring ſpiritual bleſſings beyond temporal, the glory of God before his own advantage; therefore he not only beſtows the wiſdom he aſked, but superadds riches and honour; and promiſes farther, long life to enjoy them, on condition he approved himſelf faithful. Note, (1.) When we ſeek God's kingdom in the firſt place, he hath promiſed to add all other things unto us. (2.) Riches and honours are then truly bleſſings, when God beſtows the wiſdom and grace to improve them aright. (3.) If any man lack ſpiritual wiſdom, let him aſk of God, who giveth liberally, beyond all we can aſk or think.

4. Solomon awoke, and behold it was a dream; yet not as theſe uſually are, empty and vain, but followed with the real communication of the wiſdom then promiſed him. On his return therefore to Jeruſalem, he offers a great and grateful ſacrifice, and rejoices before the ark of the covenant, with all his ſervants, who partook in his joy, and ſhared in his entertainment.

16. ¶ Then came there two women that were [i] harlots, unto the king, and ſtood before him. 17. And the one woman ſaid, O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one houſe, and I was delivered of a child, with her in the houſe. 18. And it came to paſs the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered alſo: and we were together; there was no ſtranger with us in the houſe, ſave we two in the houſe. 19. And this woman's child died in the night; becauſe ſhe overlaid it. 20.
And ſhe aroſe at midnight, and took my ſon from beſide me, while thine handmaid ſlept, and laid it in her boſom, and laid her dead child in my boſom. 21. And when I roſe in the morning [k] to give my child ſuck, behold it was dead: but when I had conſidered it in the morning, behold, it was not my ſon which I did bear.
22. And the other woman ſaid, Nay; but the living is my ſon, and the dead is thy ſon: and this ſaid, No; but the dead is thy ſon, and the living is my ſon. Thus they ſpake before the king. 23. Then ſaid the king, The one ſaith, This is my ſon that liveth, and thy ſon is the dead: and the other ſaith, Nay: but thy ſon is the dead, and my ſon is the living. 24. And the king ſaid, Bring me a ſword. And they brought a ſword before the king. 25. And the king ſaid, [l] Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other. 26. Then ſpake the woman whoſe the living child was, unto the king (for [m] her bowels † yerned upon her ſon) and ſhe ſaid, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wiſe ſlay it: but the other ſaid, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it. 27. Then the king anſwered, and ſaid, Give her the living child, and in no wiſe ſlay it; ſhe is the mother thereof. 28. And all Iſrael heard of the judgment which the king had judged, and [n] they feared the king: for they ſaw that [o] the wiſdom of God was in him, to do judgment.

v. 16—28. Soon the ſurpaſſing wiſdom of Solomon begins to appear; a ſingular inſtance of which is here recorded, as happening, ſome think, on the very day of his return to Jeruſalem.

1. A very difficult caſe comes before him for his deciſion. Two women, ſuppoſed to be harlots, living in one houſe together, were each of them alone delivered of a ſon, within three days of each other. One of them having overlaid her child in the night, whilſt the other ſlept, laid her dead ſon in the place of the living one. This occaſioned, the next morning, a fierce diſpute about the living child, each claiming it as their own; and it ſeems the matter had been carried to ſome inferior court, and is referred to the king's deciſion, before whom the plaintiff opens her caſe, and the defendant as ſolemnly denies the allegation. The queſtion then was, how to diſcover the truth, where there could be no evidence but the parties, and theſe ſwore directly contrary to each other. Note, (1.) The perils of helpleſs infancy are ſo many, that it is wondrous how we eſcape them. (2.) The tendereſt nurſe may ſometimes, by accidents, be unhappy, where ſhe is without blame. (3.) Many a harlot, it is to be feared now, would rather contend for the dead child, than the living; ſo loſt are proſtitutes uſually to natural affection. (4.) They who ſit on the ſeat of judgment, need deep penetration to ſever truth from falſhood.

2. A very wiſe determination is made on the trial. Solomon calls for a ſword, and, ſince the diſputants ſeemed ſo eager in their claims, bids the living child be divided between them: a verdict that appeared ſtrangely inhuman, and a ſport of their miſery; but the event ſhewed how judicious. The real mother, whoſe bowels yearned for her ſon, cannot bear to ſee the glittering ſword, ſtays the executioner's arms, and eagerly quits her claim, rather than her ſon ſhould bleed; whilſt the pretended mother, by acquieſcing in the judgment, evidenced her fraud by her inhumanity. The caſe now was plain, and Solomon wiſely decrees the living child to the tender and affectionate parent. Note, An inhuman mother is a monſter! and if but to conſent to divide a diſputed child was ſhocking, how much more dreadful is many a harlot's abandoned practice, that by abortion ſeeks to deſtroy the fruit of her womb, or murder the babe, when born, to conceal her ſhame.

3. The wiſdom of the deciſion ſtruck the hearers with reverence and awe, and the fame of it ſpread abroad; ſo that none dared do an unjuſt thing, however difficult to detect; for they ſaw the God of wiſdom had given their king ſuch penetration, that nothing could be concealed from his piercing eye. Note, (1.) They who have the greateſt natural talents, muſt remember to whom they are indebted for them. (2.) Fear of detection and puniſhment from man, is a greater reſtraint upon evil doers, than all the terrors of God's threatned wrath.

§ Heb. There was one officer in the land.

v. 1—19. In greatneſs as wiſdom diſtinguiſhed, Solomon's magnificence begins to appear. His kingdom now was firmly eſtabliſhed, and his court and houſhold are here deſcribed.

1. His chief officers. They are, for the moſt part, ſuch as his father had appointed, or their children. Solomon was ſo well ſatiſfied in their abilities and integrity, that he deſired no better ſervants. Zadok had now the precedence of Abiathar, who had been degraded, yet perhaps not totally excluded from the prieſt's office. Note, Old ſervants in a family, if proved faithful, are valuable poſſeſſions, and not to be parted with.

2. His purveyors: twelve, diſperſed through the land, each in his month to ſupply the king's court and family; by which regulation no part was burdened, and plenty of all things provided. Geber, the laſt of thoſe mentioned, who was in the country of Sihon and Og, is ſaid to be the only officer in the land, becauſe his ſon and Ahinadab were ſubordinate to him; or, as it may be rendered, there was one officer in the land. The Jews interpret it of the officer, who, in the intercalated month, provided, and was not limited to any place. Note, (1.) They who are great, may appear great. He who allotted men their ſtations, allows they ſhould live according to them. (2.) Wiſe management, and good œconomy, is needful even for kings: the greateſt revenues without it are eaſily ſquandered.

20. ¶ Judah and Iſrael [d] were many, as the ſand, which is by the ſea in multitude, [e] eating and drinking, and making merry. 21. And Solomon [f] reigned over all kingdoms, from the river unto the land of the Philiſtines, and unto the border of Egypt: [g] they brought preſents, and ſerved Solomon all the days of his life. 22. ¶ And Solomon's † proviſion for one day was thirty meaſures of [h] fine flour, and threeſcore meaſures of meal, 23. Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the paſtures, and an hundred ſheep, beſides harts and roe-bucks, and fallow-deer, and fatted fowl. 24. For he had dominion over all the region on this ſide the river, from Tiphſah even to Azzah, [i] over all the kings on this ſide the river: and he had peace on all ſides round about him. 25. And Judah and Iſrael [k] dwelt ſafely, every man [l] under his vine, and under his fig-tree, from Dan even to Beer-ſheba, all the days of Solomon. 26. ¶ And Solomon had [m] forty thouſand ſtalls of horſes for his chariots, and twelve thouſand horſemen. 27. And thoſe officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his month: they lacked nothing. 28. Barley alſo and ſtraw for the horſes, and dromedaries, brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.

v. 20—28. Happy art thou, O Iſrael, may we ſay, under ſuch a king, and bleſſed with ſuch proſperity.

1. Solomon's kingdom was prodigiouſly extenſive: not only Iſrael ſubmitted to his gentle ſway, but the nations, which his father had conquered by arms, from Egypt to Euphrates, chearfully ſerved the ſon, and brought him preſents in token of their ſubjection; nor thought of ſtruggling under an adminiſtration ſo wiſe and equitable. Note, More extenſive is the dominion of the Prince of Peace, even from pole to pole; and they who know the bleſſings of his government, count their ſervice perfect freedom.

2. The people of Iſrael and Judah were immenſely numerous, and lived in affluence. Their families grew like flocks, according to the promiſe, Gen. xxii. 17. Safe and ſecure from all their enemies, they ſat every man under his vine and his fig-tree, their property ſecure, their plenty abundant, and their hearts filled with joy and gladneſs, in the enjoyment of the bleſſings God had beſtowed upon them. Note, More numerous far are God's ſpiritual Iſrael, more ſecure their portion, more ſubſtantially abiding their joys; their kingdom is not meat and drink, but righteouſneſs, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

3. Vaſt was the daily proviſion for Solomon's table, ſufficient to ſerve, at two pounds of bread each, beſides meat, no leſs than 29,160 men. Our greater Solomon ſupplies a more numerous family with daily bread, and this not that bread which periſheth, but which endureth to everlaſting life.

4. His chariots, horſes, and horſemen, were ſuch as became his other magnificence, and theſe all amply and regularly ſupplied by the ſame purveyors as furniſhed his table.

29. ¶ And [n] God gave Solomon wiſdom and underſtanding, exceeding much, and [o] largeneſs of heart, even as the ſand that is on the ſea-ſhore. 30. And Solomon's wiſdom excelled the wiſdom of all the children of [p] the eaſt country, and all the wiſdom of Egypt. 31. For [q] he was wiſer than all men; than Ethan the Ezrahite, and [r] Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the ſons of Mahol: and his fame was in all nations round about. 32. And he ſpake three thouſand [s] proverbs: and his [t] ſongs were a thouſand and five. 33. And he ſpake of trees, from the cedar-tree that is in Lebanon, even unto the hyſſop that ſpringeth out of the wall: he ſpake alſo of beaſts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fiſhes. 34. And there came of [u] all people to hear the wiſdom of Solomon,

v. 29—34. Vaſt were his dominions, prodigious his revenues, but greater than both were his treaſures of wiſdom.

1. God gave him an underſtanding deep as the great abyſs of waters, and large as the ſand on the ſhore, capacious, diſtinct, and comprehenſive. Chaldea and Egypt afforded none equal or like him, and the wiſeſt of his cotemporaries acknowledged his ſuperiority. Note, (1.) Every good gift cometh from above. God teacheth man knowledge. (2.) Uncommon abilities are a greater obligation to uſe them with uncommon diligence to the glory of the giver.

2. His productions were a proof of the wiſdom he poſſeſſed. As a ſage, he ſpake three thouſand proverbs, wiſe ſayings, and obſervations, for moral conduct. As a poet, his compoſitions were numerous as exquiſite, amounting to a thouſand and five. As a philoſopher, he dived into the ſecrets of nature, deſcribed all herbs, birds, beaſts, with their nature, uſe, and qualities. Note, (1.) That is valuable wiſdom which communicates its diſcoveries for general uſefulneſs. (2.) A poetic genius is a bleſſing, when, like Solomon's, our ſongs ſpeak of the beauties of our Immanuel.

3. The fame of ſuch wiſdom could not but ſpread abroad, and, curious to hear, or deſirous to learn, people from all regions flocked to his court; and diſtant kings ſent their embaſſadors, by perſonal converſe to bring them ſpecimens of his ſuperlative underſtanding. Note, They who would be wiſe to ſalvation, muſt go to Jeſus to learn, and they will find a greater than Solomon is here.

CHAP. V.

In this chapter we have an account of the preparations Solomon made for the temple and his other buildings. 1. Hiram congratulates Solomon's acceſſion to the throne, ver. 1. 2. He ſignifies to him his deſign to build the temple, and deſires him to furniſh him with workmen, ver. 2—6. 3. Hiram agrees to do it, ver. 7—9. 4. Solomon's work is accordingly well done, and Hiram's workmen well paid, ver. 10—18.

1. AND Hiram king of Tyre ſent his ſervants unto Solomon (for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father) for [a] Hiram was ever a lover of David. 2. And [b] Solomon ſent to Hiram, ſaying, 3. Thou knoweſt how that David my father could not build an houſe unto the name of the LORD his God, [c] for the wars which were about him on every ſide, until [d] the LORD put them under the ſoles of his feet. 4. But [e] now the LORD my God hath given me reſt on every ſide, ſo that there is † neither adverſary nor evil occurrent. 5. And behold I purpoſe to build an houſe unto the name of the LORD my God, [f] as the LORD ſpake unto David my father, ſaying, Thy ſon, whom I will ſet upon thy throne in thy room, he ſhall build an houſe unto my name. 6. Now therefore command thou, that they hew me cedar-trees out of Lebanon, and my ſervants ſhall be with thy ſervants: and unto thee will I give hire for thy ſervants, according to all that thou ſhalt appoint: for thou knoweſt that there is not among us any that can ſkill to hew timber like unto the Sidonians. 7. ¶ And it came to paſs, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and ſaid, [g] Bleſſed be the LORD this day, which hath given unto David a wiſe ſon over this great people. 8. And Hiram ſent to Solomon, ſaying, I have conſidered the things which thou ſenteſt unto me for: and I will do all thy deſire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning timber of fir. 9. My ſervants ſhall bring them down from Lebanon unto the ſea: and I will convey them by ſea in flotes, unto the place that thou ſhalt appoint me, and will cauſe them to be diſcharged there, and thou ſhalt receive them: and thou ſhalt accompliſh my deſire, in giving food for my houſhold.

v. 1—9. Hiram king of Tyre had ever been a friend to David, and therefore no ſooner hears of his death, than he ſends ambaſſadors to condole with Solomon, and to congratulate him on his acceſſion. Note, (1.) Condolance with the afflicted is kind. (2.) A faithful friend loves the children for the ſake of the father.

1. Solomon takes occaſion from Hiram's civility to cement the union between them; and being now about to build the temple, he ſends to beg his Tyrian workmen to prepare the materials. Hiram knew it had been his father's deſign, but frequent wars prevented him; now Solomon is in peace, he reſolves to proſecute the work, for which David had provided, and according to the divine promiſe concerning him, v. 5. He offers therefore to pay handſomely for the aſſiſtance, the Tyrians being the moſt ingenious artiſts, and to ſend his own ſervants to aſſiſt Hiram's, in the felling and preparing the timber at Lebanon. Note, (1.) When we are at reſt from outward trials, we ſhould give greater diligence to build up the ſpiritual temple within. (2.) We may put our hands comfortably to that work, in which we have the Divine promiſe to encourage us. (3.) They have often moſt of this world's ingenuity, who have no knowledge of Iſrael's God. (4.) God can employ thoſe in building his church, who have themſelves no part nor lot in it.

2. Hiram readily conſents to the propoſal, rejoiced to find his friend David had left ſo wiſe a ſon behind him, and bleſſing God for the mercy. He ſtipulates to fell the timber, and tranſport it by floats to the neareſt port, which was Joppa, 2 Chron. ii. 16. and deſires to be repaid in corn, of which the Tyrians were deſtitute, and in which Canaan abounded. Note, (1.) In every bargain let the conditions be clear, and diſputes will be prevented. (2.) Every country hath its ſtaple commodity, by exchange of which, intercourſe is maintained with its neighbours. It is our happineſs, that with the corn of Canaan we poſſeſs alſo the ſhipping of Tyre.

10. So Hiram gave Solomon cedar-trees, and fir-trees, according to all his deſire. 11. And Solomon [h] gave Hiram twenty thouſand meaſures of wheat for food to his houſhold, and twenty meaſures of pure oil: thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year. 12. And the LORD gave Solomon wiſdom, [i] as he promiſed him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon, and they two made a league together. 13. ¶ And king Solomon raiſed a † levy out of all Iſrael; and the levy was thirty thouſand men. 14. And he ſent them to Lebanon, ten thouſand a month by courſes: a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home: and [k] Adoniram was over the levy. 15. And Solomon had threeſcore and ten thouſand that bare burdens, and fourſcore thouſand hewers in the mountains: 16. Beſides the chief of Solomon's officers which were over the work, three thouſand and three hundred, which ruled over the people that wrought in the work. 17. And the king commanded, and they brought [l] great ſtones, coſtly ſtones, and hewed ſtones, to lay the foundation of the houſe. 18. And Solomon's builders, and [m] Hiram's builders did hew them, and the ſtone-ſquarers: ſo they prepared timber and ſtones to build the houſe.

v. 10—18. The bargain being made, each party ſet about the fulfilment of it.

1. Hiram felled the cedar and fir in Lebanon, and Solomon ſent him yearly the promiſed ſupply of corn and oil. Note, Fair reckonings make firm friendſhips.

2. Solomon's wiſdom is again obſerved on this occaſion, both in the preparations he made for this great work, and his prudent cultivation of Hiram's friendſhip, which was of ſo great uſe to him; and it ſubſiſted all their days. Note, True friends only part in death.

3. Solomon, to haſten the work, ſent a number of labourers with Hiram's ſervants. Thirty thouſand Iſraelites were employed, ten thouſand of which wrought alternately every three months, and were then relieved. Three thouſand three hundred overſeers, with Adoniram at their head, directed the work; and a hundred and fifty thouſand ſlaves conſtantly laboured in hewing and carrying the ſtones and timber. Note, (1.) Where the heart is ſet upon the work of building up God's church, we ſhall do it with our might. (2.) In Chriſt's ſervice all have their ſeveral allotments; and it is not ſo much what place we fill, as what fidelity we ſhew, which he will regard and reward.

4. The ſtones being prepared, the foundation is laid: they were rich and coſtly, to ſupport the glorious ſuperſtructure. Note, Chriſt is this precious foundation; built upon him, every believer's ſoul exceeds even Solomon's temple in all his glory, as being the everlaſting habitation of God through the Spirit.

CHAP. VI.

The temple was one of the wonders of the world, and, taking in its ſpiritual ſignificancy, one of the glories of the church. Here is, 1. The time when it was built, ver. 1. 2. The dimenſions of it, ver. 2, 3. 3. The ſeveral parts of it, ver. 4—36. 4. The ſilence

1. AND it came to paſs in the four hundred and fourſcore year after the children of Iſrael were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Iſrael, in the month of Zif, which is the ſecond month, that [a] he began to build the houſe of the LORD. 2. And the houſe which king Solomon built for the LORD, [b] the length thereof was threeſcore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits. 3. And [c] the porch before the temple of the houſe, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the houſe; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof, before the houſe. 4. And for the houſe he made [d] windows of † narrow lights. 5. ¶ And againſt the wall of the houſe he built ‡ chambers round about, againſt the walls of the houſe round about, both of the temple, and of the oracle: and he made chambers round about. 6. The nethermoſt chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was ſix cubits broad, and the third was ſeven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the houſe he made narrowed reſts round about, that the beams ſhould not be faſtned in the walls of the houſe. 7. And the houſe, when it was in building, [e] was built of ſtone, made ready before it was brought thither: [f] ſo that there was neither hammer, nor ax, nor any tool of iron heard in the houſe while it was building. 8. The door for the middle chamber was in the right ſide of the houſe: and they went up with winding ſtairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third. 9. So he built the houſe, and finiſhed it; and covered the houſe with [g] beams and boards of cedar. 10. And then he built chambers againſt all the houſe, five cubits high: and they reſted on the houſe with timber of cedar.

v. 1—10. Long had the Lord taken up his abode within the curtains of the tabernacle, now a glorious building riſes to his honour, planned by himſelf, and dedicated to his ſervice.

1. The time when it was begun. In the fourth year of Solomon, when the materials were prepared, and four hundred and eighty years after their coming from Egypt, allowing forty to Moſes, ſeventeen to Joſhua, two hundred and ninety-nine to the Judges, forty to Eli, forty to Samuel and Saul, forty to David, and four to Solomon.

2. The ſilence obſerved in the building. No iron tool was heard; the materials were exactly fitted before they were brought to the ſpot, and nothing remained but to cement them together. Note, (1.) Thoſe whom God honours as lively ſtones in his temple, he ſquares and faſhions for their place. (2.) They who build the ſpiritual temple ſhould be men of peace; clamour and fierce diſpute disjoint the ſtones inſtead of cementing them.

3. The dimenſions were juſt double the tabernacle in length and breadth, and treble in heighth; the windows narrow without and wide within; and chambers built round it, for the prieſts who were in waiting, three ſtories each, increaſing a cubit in width the higher they roſe, ſo much of the thickneſs of the wall being abated, for the beams to reſt on without entering the ſide walls. Note, (1.) When we look at others faults, we cannot be too indulgent, nor when on our own too ſevere. (2.) The more enlarged our hearts are in divine graces, the nearer we ſhall riſe to heaven.

11. ¶ And [g] the word of the LORD came to Solomon, ſaying, 12. Concerning this houſe which thou art in building, [h] if thou wilt walk in my ſtatutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them: then will I perform my word with thee, [i] which I ſpake unto David thy father. 13. And [k] I will dwell among the children of Iſrael, and will not forſake my people Iſrael. 14. So Solomon built the houſe, and finiſhed it.

v. 11—14. 1. God ſends a gracious meſſage to encourage Solomon in the work, and to ſignify his pleaſure in it; aſſuring him that if he continued faithful, then he would ſecure to himſelf and his kingdom, the perpetuity of his bleſſings. Note, (1.) Heart obedience to God's law is more valuable than the moſt expenſive donations to his church. (2.) They who go forth with a deſire to God's glory, may confidently expect ſome tokens of his approbation.

2. Solomon finiſhes the work. Animated with this meſſage, he grudged neither the trouble nor expence, and ſaw at laſt the top ſtone laid with ſhouting. Note, Wherever God, by his grace, begins the ſpiritual building in the heart, he will not ceaſe miniſtring ſupplies of his grace, till the top ſtone be laid in glory.

15. And he built the walls of the houſe within with boards of cedar, † both the floor of the houſe, and the walls of the cieling: and he covered them on the inſide with wood, and covered the floor of the houſe with planks of fir. 16. And he built twenty cubits on the ſides of the houſe, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar: he even built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for the ‡ moſt holy place. 17. And the houſe, that is, the temple before it, was forty cubits long. 18. And the cedar of the houſe within was carved with || knops, and open flowers: all was cedar, there was no ſtone ſeen. 19. And the oracle he prepared in the houſe within, to ſet there the ark of the covenant of the LORD. 20. And the oracle in the fore-part was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof: and he overlaid it with pure gold, and ſo covered the altar which was of cedar. 21. So Solomon overlaid the houſe within with pure gold: and he made a partition, by the chains of gold before the oracle, and he overlaid it with gold. 22. And the whole houſe he overlaid with gold, until he had finiſhed all the houſe: alſo [l] the whole altar that was by the oracle, he overlaid with gold. 23. ¶ And within the oracle he made two cherubims of § olive-tree, each ten cubits high. 24. And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other wing of the cherub: from the uttermoſt part of the one wing, unto the uttermoſt part of the other, were ten cubits. 25. And the other cherub was ten cubits: both the cherubims were of one meaſure, and one ſize. 26. The height of the one cherub was ten cubits, and ſo was it of the other cherub. 27. And he ſet the cherubims within the inner houſe; and [m] they ſtretched forth the wings of the cherubims, ſo that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall: and their wings touched one another in the midſt of the houſe. 28. And he overlaid the cherubims with gold. 29. And he carved all the walls of the houſe round about with carved figures of cherubims, and palm-trees, and † open flowers, within and without. 30. And the floor of the houſe he overlaid with gold within and without. 31. ¶ And for the entring of the oracle he made doors of olive-tree: the lintel and ſide-poſts were ‡ a fifth part of the wall. 32. The || two doors alſo were of olive-tree; and he carved upon them carvings of cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers, and overlaid them with gold, and ſpread gold upon the cherubims, and upon the palm-trees. 33. So alſo made he for the door of the temple, poſts of olive-tree, a fourth part of the wall. 34. And the two doors were of fir-tree; [n] the two leaves of the one door were folding, and the two leaves of the other door were folding. 35. And he carved thereon cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers: and covered them with gold, fitted upon the carved work. 36. ¶ And he built the inner court with three rows of hewed ſtones, and a row of cedar-beams. 37. ¶ In the fourth year was the foundation of the houſe of the LORD laid, in the month Zif. 38. And in the eleventh year, in the month Bul (which is the eighth month) was the houſe [o] finiſhed throughout all the parts thereof, and according to all the faſhion of it: So was he ſeven years in building it.

v. 15—38. The length of the temple was ſixty cubits; the oracle, or ſpeaking-place, whence God delivered his anſwers, was twenty cubits, ver. 16. and the holy place before it forty; theſe were ſeparated by a partition, ver. 21. with folding doors in it, ver. 31. The whole was cieled with cedar wood finely carved, and entirely even to the floors, over-laid with plates of gold. In the moſt holy place, beſide the ark of the covenant, and the mercy-ſeat, with the golden cherubims of Moſes, were two others of vaſt ſize, of olive-wood overlaid with gold, whoſe wings reached from wall to wall, and touched each other in the midſt over the mercy-ſeat. Without the temple was the court of the prieſts, where ſtood the brazen altar and the laver, ſeparated from the court of the people by a low wall, who, though they might not come into it, could ſee all the ſervice there performing, and hear what was ſaid. Seven years and ſix months the temple took in building, and conſidering the vaſt ſize, and various work, great diligence muſt have been uſed. This temple was typical; 1. Of the body of Jeſus, in which the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt, and by whom alone our ſervices come before God with acceptance. 2. Of the chriſtian, who, by the power of divine grace prepared and ſanctified, becomes an habitation for God, and more gloriouſly adorned with faith and holineſs than this temple with wrought gold. 3. Of the goſpel church, in which every conſecrated ſoul daily miniſters as a prieſt before God, where cherubic ſpirits wait on the heirs of ſalvation, and God manifeſts his preſence and power in a manner thoſe who are without know not of. 4. Of heaven, the eternal temple, where the ſervice will be uninterrupted, the glory infinitely ſurpaſſing, the worſhippers innumerable, and no vail any longer concealing from us the brighteſt beams of our divine Shechinah.

1. BUT Solomon was building [a] his own houſe † thirteen years, and [b] he finiſhed all his houſe. 2. ¶ He built alſo the houſe of the foreſt of Lebanon; the length whereof was a hundred cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits, upon four rows of cedar pillars, with cedar beams upon the pillars. 3. And it was covered with cedar above upon the beams, that lay on forty-five pillars, fifteen in a row. 4. And there were windows in three rows, and light was againſt light in three ranks. 5. And all the ‡ doors and poſts were ſquare, with the windows: and light was againſt light in three ranks. 6. ¶ And he made a porch of pillars; the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth thereof thirty cubits: and the porch was before them: and the other pillars and the thick beam were before them. 7. ¶ Then he made a porch for [c] the throne, where he might judge, even the porch of judgment: and it was covered with cedar || from one ſide of the floor to the other. 8. And his houſe where he dwelt, had another court within the porch, which was of the like work. Solomon made alſo an houſe for [d] Pharaoh's daughter (whom he had taken to wife) like unto this porch. 9. All theſe were of [e] coſtly ſtones, according to the meaſures of hewed ſtones, ſawed with ſaws, within and without, even from the foundation unto the coping, and ſo on the outſide toward the great court. 10. And the foundation was of coſtly ſtones, even great ſtones; ſtones of ten cubits, and ſtones of eight cubits. 11. And [f] above were coſtly ſtones (after the meaſure of hewed ſtones) and cedars. 12. And the great court round about was with three rows of hewed ſtones, and a row of cedar beams, both for the inner court of the houſe of the LORD, and for the porch of the houſe.

v. 1—12. Having finiſhed God's houſe, he proceeds with his own. Let him that is beſt be firſt ſerved, and with the beſt, and then we may ſafely and comfortably enjoy the remainder. For his own reſidence he built a noble palace, which took him thirteen years to finiſh. The houſe of the foreſt of Lebanon, ſo called from its ſituation in a grove, or perhaps from the quantity of cedar from Lebanon employed in it, ſeems to have been a magazine of arms in one part, and a hall or portico for judgment on the other, with grand colonnades; here himſelf ſat to decide appeals, and here was placed the ivory throne, chap. x. 18. Beſides theſe he built a palace for Pharaoh's daughter, like his own in the exquiſiteneſs of the ſtructure and materials, of vaſt ſtones, nicely wrought with prodigious labour and expence. Note, (1.) They who are great may appear ſo; it is as fit a king ſhould dwell in a palace as a peaſant in a cottage. (2.) They who are occupied in building ſhould take care not to loſe in the ſtone and mortar their ſollicitude to ſecure a better houſe, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

13. ¶ And king Solomon ſent and fet [g] Hiram out of Tyre. 14. He was a widow's ſon of the tribe of Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in braſs: and [h] he was filled with wiſdom and underſtanding, and cunning to work all works in braſs; and he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work. 15. For he † caſt [i] two pillars of braſs of eighteen cubits high apiece: and a line of twelve cubits did compaſs either of them about. 16. And he made two chapiters of molten braſs, to ſet upon the tops of the pillars; the height of the one chapiter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapiter was five cubits: 17. And nets of checker work, and wreaths of chain-work, for the chapiters which were upon the top of the pillars; ſeven for the one chapiter, and ſeven for the other chapiter. 18. And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one net-work, to cover the chapiters that were upon the top, with pomegranates: and ſo did he for the other chapiter. 19. And the chapiters that were upon the top of the pillars, were of lily-work in the porch, four cubits. 20. And the chapiters upon the two pillars had pomegranates alſo above, over-againſt the belly which was by the net-work: and the pomegranates were two hundred, in rows round about upon the other chapiter. 21. And he ſet up [k] the pillars in the porch of the temple: and he ſet up the right pillar, and called the name thereof ‡ Jachin: and he ſet up the left pillar, and called the name thereof || Boaz. 22. And upon the top of the pillars was lily-work: ſo was the work of the pillars finiſhed. 23. ¶ And he made a molten ſea, ten cubits from the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits: and a line of thirty cubits did compaſs it round about. 24. And under the brim of it round about there were [l] knops compaſſing it, ten in a cubit, compaſſing the ſea about: the knops were caſt in two rows, when it was caſt. 25. [m] It ſtood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the weſt, and three looking toward the ſouth, and three looking toward the eaſt: and the ſea was ſet above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward. 26. And it was an hand-breadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies: it contained two thouſand baths. 27. ¶ And he made ten baſes of braſs; four cubits was the length of one baſe, and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it. 28. And the work of the baſes was on this manner: They had borders, and the borders were between the ledges: 29. And on the borders that were between the ledges, were lions, oxen, and cherubims: and upon the ledges there was a baſe above: and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions made of thin work. 30. And every baſe had four braſen wheels, and plates of braſs: and the four corners thereof had underſetters: under the laver were underſetters molten, at the ſide of every addition. 31. And the mouth of it within the chapiter, and above, was a cubit: but the mouth thereof was round, after the work of the baſe, a cubit and an half: and alſo upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders, four-ſquare, not round. 32. And under the borders were four wheels: and the axle-trees of the wheels were § joined to the baſe, and the height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit. 33. And the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot-wheel: their axle-trees, and their naves, and their felloes, and their ſpokes were all molten. 34. And there were four underſetters to the four corners of one baſe: and the underſetters were of the very baſe itſelf. 35. And in the top of the baſe was there a round compaſs of half a cubit high: and on the top of the baſe, the ledges thereof, and the borders thereof were of the ſame. 36. For on the plates of the † ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved [n] cherubims, lions, and palm-trees, according to the ‡ proportion of every one, and additions round about. 37. After this manner he made the ten baſes: all of them had one caſting, one meaſure, and one ſize. 38. all the work that he made king Solomon for the houſe of the LORD. 41. And the pots, and the ſhovels, and the baſons: and all theſe veſſels which Hiram made to king Solomon, for the houſe of the LORD, were of bright braſs. 46. [p] In the plain of Jordan did the king caſt them in the clay-ground, between Succoth and Zarthan. 47. And Solomon left all the veſſels unweighed, § becauſe they were exceeding many: neither was the weight of the braſs found out.

v. 13—47. We have here an account of the braſen veſſels made for the ſervice of the temple.

1. The workman was a Tyrian by his father's ſide, but by his mother an Iſraelite; 'tis to be hoped he followed the better parent, as children ſhould do, and cleaved to his mother's God. The clay ground near Jordan was well ſuited for a foundery, and the braſs prepared was ſo immenſe in quantity, as well as the workmen's integrity ſo tried, that it neither could nor needed be weighed out to them. Note, It is happy to find ſuch truſty ſervants, in days like theſe, when honeſt men are ſo ſcarce.

2. The chief work was, (1.) Two pillars vaſt and high, placed as you entered the porch of the temple, richly adorned with chapiters finely wrought; their names were Jachin, he will eſtabliſh, and Boaz, ſtrength is in him, intimating that though we are weak and feeble, and ready to faint in the worſhip and ſervice of God, yet our Divine Redeemer will eſtabliſh his work in our hearts, and help being laid on one mighty to ſave, we may confidently expect to receive out of his fulneſs. Theſe pillars alſo ſignified the ſtability of God's promiſes: whilſt they continued faithfully attendant before the porch of his temple, he would continue to bleſs, preſerve, and protect them. (2.) The molten ſea, ſo called from the vaſt quantity of water it contained; it ſtood on twelve oxen of braſs, whoſe faces looked to the four cardinal points, and their mouths ſerved as cocks to let the water out. This typified the Lord Jeſus, whoſe blood ſhed for the cleanſing his people, flows out to the four corners of the earth, and whoſoever will may come, and in this fountain opened for ſin, waſh away every ſpot of guilt and pollution. (3.) Ten braſen vaſes, moveable on wheels, ſtood, five on each ſide the court, for the conveniency of the prieſts, to waſh themſelves, the veſſels and ſacrifices. Note, They who appear before God muſt waſh, not only once but daily, in the Redeemer's blood, that their perſons may be accepted, and their ſacrifices a favour of a ſweet ſmell. (4.) All the neceſſary utenſils, for the ſervice of the altar, were made of braſs, ſhovels, baſons, &c. that nothing might be wanting. A concern for God's honour deſcends to the moſt minute particulars.

48. And Solomon made all the veſſels that pertained unto the houſe of the LORD: [q] the altar of gold, and [r] the table of gold, whereupon [s] the ſhew-bread was, 49. And the candleſticks of pure gold, five on the right ſide, and five on the left, before the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs of gold, 50. And the bowls, and the ſnuffers, and the baſons, and the ſpoons, and the cenſers of pure gold; and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner houſe, the moſt holy place, and for the doors of the houſe, to wit, of the temple. 51. So was ended all the work which king Solomon made for the houſe of the LORD: and Solomon brought in the things which David his father [t] had dedicated; even the ſilver, and the gold, and the veſſels did he put among the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD.

v. 48—51. As all the veſſels for the court were of the fineſt braſs, all the veſſels within the temple were of pureſt gold. Note, Though all chriſtians are alike conſecrated to God, ſome are more excellent than others, and more highly diſtinguiſhed.

1. The veſſels of the tabernacle, except the ark, mercy-ſeat, and cherubims, were either new made, or the old new caſt, and multitudes added to them. As the temple was larger it needed more light, and ten candleſticks are made, perhaps beſide that grand one which conſiſted of the ſeven branches. Ten tables of gold alſo were placed in the holy place, beſide the table of ſhew-bread; and 'tis ſuppoſed they ſtood oppoſite to the golden candleſticks, ranged on the other ſide of the houſe. The bowls, ſnuffers, and every veſſel, were of pure gold, and the very hinges of the ſame precious materials. Note, When God's glory requires it, we cannot be too liberal.

2. The dedicated things of David were placed in the treaſury of the temple, for its future repairs or exigencies; Solomon dared not, like many, ſacrilegiouſly alienate to his own uſe what was deſigned for the ſervice of the ſanctuary.

CHAP. VIII.

The building and furniture of the temple were very glorious, but the dedication of it exceeds in glory. 1. The ark introduced into the temple, ver. 1—9. 2. The glory of God fills the houſe, ver. 10, 11. 3. Solomon's ſpeech to the aſſembly of Iſrael, ver. 12—21. 4. His prayer to God, ver. 22—53. 5. His parting benediction, ver. 54—61. 6. The ſacrifices he offered, and the feaſt he held, ver. 62—66.

1. THEN [a] Solomon aſſembled the elders of Iſrael, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Iſrael, unto king Solomon, in Jeruſalem, that they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD, [b] out of the city of David, which is Zion. 2. And all the men of Iſrael aſſembled themſelves unto king Solomon, [c] at the feaſt in the month Ethanim, which is the ſeventh month. 3. And all the elders of Iſrael came, and the prieſts took up the ark. 4. And they brought up the ark of the LORD, and [d] the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy veſſels that were in the tabernacle, [e] even thoſe did the prieſts and the Levites bring up. 5. And king Solomon, and all the congregation of Iſrael, that were aſſembled unto him, were with him before the ark, [f] ſacrificing ſheep and oxen, [g] that could not be told nor numbred for multitude. 6. And the prieſts brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD [h] unto his place, into the oracle of the houſe to the moſt holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims. 7. For the cherubims ſpread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark, and the ſtaves thereof above. 8. And [i] they drew out the ſtaves, that the ends of the ſtaves were ſeen out in the holy † place before the oracle, and they were not ſeen without: and there they are unto this day. 9. There was nothing in the ark ſave [k] the two tables of ſtone, which Moſes put there at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Iſrael, when they came out of the land of Egypt. 10. And it came to paſs when the prieſts were come out of the holy place, that [l] the cloud filled the houſe of the LORD, 11. So that the prieſts could not ſtand to miniſter, becauſe of the cloud: [m] for the glory of the LORD had filled the houſe of the LORD.

v. 1—11. The work being compleated, nothing remained but the ſolemn dedication of the place to the ſervice of Jehovah. For this purpoſe,

1. An aſſembly of the elders of Iſrael is convoked by the king, in the month Ethanim, to bring up the ark to the place provided for it: they met ſeven days before the feaſt of tabernacles, which began on the fifteenth, and the congregation was diſmiſſed on the twenty-third, having kept the feaſt fourteen days. It was a matter of general joy and exultation, and vaſt ſacrifices were offered on the occaſion. Note, (1.) When religion proſpers, it is the ſubject of general joy to God's people. (2.) When kings become nurſing fathers to the church, courtiers, whether they poſſeſs it or not, will pretend zeal for its intereſts.

2. The prieſts took up the ark, containing that precious and ineſtimable jewel of God's law, and with it the pot of manna and Aaron's rod. The Levites, their aſſiſtants, brought alſo the old tabernacle from Gibeon, with all its utenſils, and probably that alſo from the city of David, to be laid up in the treaſury of the temple, and now no more to be uſed. The ark is fixed in his place, under the wings of the cherubim, and the ſtaves drawn forward, not to be ſeen without in the holy place, for that is denied in the next clauſe, but before the oracle, from under the ſhadow of the wings of the cherubim, as a direction to the high-prieſt in the day of atonement, to go to the mercy-ſeat between them. Note, God will ſhortly take down our old tabernacle of the body, and lodge our ſouls, like the ark, in that houſe, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

3. No ſooner is the ark ſafely lodged between the cherubim, and the prieſts withdrawn from the moſt holy place, than the glory of God filled the houſe, either like the pillar of a cloud ſpreading thick darkneſs around, or in a blaze of light, ſo inſufferable that the prieſts could not ſtand to miniſter. Thus

God teſtified his approbation of the work, confirmed their faith in the former manifeſtations they had read in the book of Moſes, and henceforth taking up his viſible abode between the cherubims, gave them aſſurance of his readineſs to hear and anſwer them, whenever before that temple they poured out their ſupplications. Note, Though our eyes behold not this viſible luſtre, yet whilſt by faith we are enabled to look to Jeſus, all our requeſts will be granted, and at laſt, with open face, we ſhall behold his brighter glory.

12. ¶ Then ſpake Solomon, [n] The LORD ſaid that he would dwell in the thick darkneſs. 13. [o] I have ſurely built thee an houſe to dwell in, a ſettled place for thee to abide in for ever. 14. And the king turned his face about, and [p] bleſſed all the congregation of Iſrael: (and all the congregation of Iſrael ſtood.) 15. And he ſaid, [q] Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael, which ſpake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand fulfilled it, ſaying, 16. Since the day that I brought forth my people Iſrael out of Egypt, I choſe no city out of all the tribes of Iſrael to build an houſe, [r] that my name might be therein; but I choſe David to be over my people Iſrael. 17. And [s] it was in the heart of David my father to build an houſe for the name of the LORD God of Iſrael. 18. And the LORD ſaid unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an houſe unto my name, [t] thou didſt well that it was in thine heart: 19. Nevertheleſs, [u] thou ſhalt not build the houſe, but thy ſon that ſhall come forth out of thy loins, he ſhall build the houſe unto my name. 20. And the LORD hath performed his word that he ſpake, and I am riſen up in the room of David my father, and ſit on the throne of Iſrael, [x] as the LORD promiſed, and have built an houſe for the name of the LORD God of Iſrael. 21. And I have ſet there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

v. 12—21. The prieſts and people appearing in conſternation at the ſight, Solomon encourages them.

1. He reminds them that this is the fulfilment of God's promiſe, Lev. xvi. 6. and a gracious mark of his favour and approbation. The houſe now being built, the Divine inhabitant comes to take up his reſidence therein, and Solomon cannot but pray it may be for ever. Note, (1.) If we enter, at any time, the dark cloud of affliction or temptation, let us not be diſmayed, for there alſo God dwelleth. (2.) If we have found, at any time, God's comfortable preſence, it cannot but excite us to pray, that he may take up his abode with us continually.

2. He pronounced a ſolemn benediction on the people, who reverently ſtood up to receive it.

3. He, with thankful acknowledgments to God, recites the deſign of his building this houſe. God had promiſed to chuſe the place of his abode, and David his father had planned the fabric; but God ſtayed him from proceeding, though he graciouſly accepted his intentions, and fixed on his ſon for the glorious work. Now then the promiſe is accompliſhed, the fixed abode for God's ark provided, and the ſtructure for ever devoted to the ſervice of their covenant God. Note, (1.) The fulfilment of God's precious promiſes engages more the tongues of the faithful, than their own unworthy performances. (2.) A good deſire is not forgotten of God.

22. ¶ And [y] Solomon ſtood before the altar of the LORD, in the preſence of all the congregation of Iſrael, and [z] ſpread forth his hands toward heaven: 23. And he ſaid, LORD God of Iſrael, [a] there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, [b] who keepeſt covenant and mercy with thy ſervants, [c] that walk before thee with all their heart: 24. Who haſt kept with thy ſervant David my father that thou promiſedſt him: thou ſpakeſt alſo with thy mouth, and [d] haſt fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. 25. Therefore now, LORD God of Iſrael, keep with thy ſervant David my father that thou promiſedſt him, ſaying, [e] There ſhall not fail thee a man in my ſight, to ſit on the throne of Iſrael; ſo that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me, as thou haſt walked before me: 26. And now, O God of Iſrael, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou ſpakeſt unto thy ſervant David my father. 27. But [f] will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, [g] the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, how much leſs this houſe that I have builded? 28. Yet have thou reſpect unto the prayer of thy ſervant, and to his ſupplication, O LORD my God, to [h] hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which thy ſervant prayeth before thee to-day: 29. That [i] thine eyes may be opened toward this houſe night and day, even toward the place of which thou haſt ſaid, [k] My name ſhall be there: that thou mayſt hearken unto the prayer which thy ſervants ſhall make [l] towards this place. 30. And hearken thou to the ſupplication of thy ſervant, and of thy people Iſrael, when they ſhall pray † towards this place: and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and when thou heareſt, [m] forgive. 31. ¶ If any man treſpaſs againſt his neighbour, and an oath be laid upon him to cauſe him to ſwear, and the oath come before [n] thine altar in this houſe: 32. Then hear thou in heaven, and do, and judge thy ſervants, [o] condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head, and juſtifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteouſneſs. 33. ¶ When thy people Iſrael be ſmitten down before the enemy, [p] becauſe they have ſinned againſt thee, and ſhall turn again to thee, and confeſs thy name, and pray, and make ſupplication unto thee in this houſe: 34. [q] Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the ſin of thy people Iſrael, and bring them again unto the land, which thou gaveſt unto their fathers. 35. ¶ [r] When heaven is ſhut up, and there is no rain, becauſe they have ſinned againſt thee; if they pray towards this place, and confeſs thy name, and turn from their ſin, [s] when thou afflicteſt them: 36. Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the ſin of thy ſervants, and of thy people Iſrael, [t] that thou teach them [u] the good way wherein they ſhould walk, and give rain upon thy land which thou haſt given to thy people for an inheritance. 37. ¶ If there be in the land famine, if there be peſtilence, blaſting, mildew, locuſt, or if there be caterpillar; if their enemy beſiege them in the land of their cities, whatſoever plague, whatſoever ſickneſs there be; 38. What prayer and ſupplication ſoever be made [x] by any man, or by all thy people Iſrael, [y] which ſhall know every man the plague of his own heart, and ſpread forth his hands towards this houſe: 39. Then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and do, and give to every man according to his ways, whoſe heart thou knoweſt (for [z] thou, even thou only knoweſt the hearts of all the children of men) 40. That they may fear thee all the days that they live in the land which thou gaveſt unto our fathers. 41. Moreover, concerning a [a] ſtranger that is not of thy people Iſrael, but [b] cometh out of a far country, [c] for thy names ſake; 42. (For [d] they ſhall hear of thy great name, and of thy ſtrong hand, and of thy ſtretched out arm) when he ſhall come and pray towards this houſe: 43. Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the ſtranger calleth to thee for: [e] that all the people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Iſrael, and that they may know that this houſe which I have builded, is called by thy name. 44. ¶ If thy people go out to battle againſt their enemy, whitherſoever thou ſhalt ſend them, and ſhall pray unto the LORD toward the city which thou haſt choſen, and toward the houſe that I have built for thy name: 45. Then hear thou in heaven their prayer and their ſupplication, and [f] maintain their cauſe. 46. If they ſin againſt thee [g] (for there is no man that ſinneth not) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, ſo that they carry them away captives unto the land of the enemy, far or near; 47. Yet [h] if they ſhall bethink themſelves, in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make ſupplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, ſaying, [i] We have ſinned, and have done perverſly, we have committed wickedneſs; 48. And ſo [k] return unto thee with all their heart, and with all their ſoul, in the land of their enemies, which led them away captive, and pray unto thee toward their land, which thou gaveſt unto their fathers, the city which thou haſt choſen, and the houſe which I have built for thy name: 49. Then hear thou their prayer and their ſupplication in heaven thy dwelling-place, and [l] maintain their cauſe, 50. And forgive thy

v. 22—53. We have here Solomon appearing in greater glory on his knees before the altar, than when ſeated on his ivory throne, and crowned with gold. Having comforted the people with his benediction, he lifts up his heart and hands to God in prayer, that this houſe, ſo glorioully opened, might be for ever diſtinguiſhed with God's preſence, grace, and merciful regard to thoſe who there ſhould pour out their ſupplications.

1. Solomon himſelf began the ſervice, and ſhewed the people the way to the throne of grace, where, on their behalf, he is interceſſor for the ſettling a bleſſed intercourſe between God and them. He did not think himſelf too great to bow before his Lord, nor was at a loſs how to addreſs him; but before the altar, as depending on the blood ſhed there for the ſucceſs of his petitions, he ſpread abroad his hands to heaven, and bent the ſuppliant knee. Note, (1.) Let great men imitate ſo noble a pattern, nor think it unbecoming them to pray with their houſholds; and if their hearts be right as Solomon's with God, though they poſſeſs not his wiſdom or gifts, they ſhall not want that ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication which will help their infirmities, and teach them how and what to pray for as they ought. (2.) Every prayer which would find acceptance with God, muſt be preſented through the blood and interceſſion of Jeſus. (3.) Fervency in prayer, whether in word or geſture, may provoke the cenſure of the careleſs or the lukewarm; but God will not deſpiſe the hands lifted up to heaven.

2. The prayer of Solomon:

[1.] He opens, with aſcribing to God the glory due unto his name, acknowledges his tranſcendant greatneſs, and his faithfulneſs in his promiſes to thoſe who walk before him in ſimplicity and truth. Note, (1.) To praiſe God for paſt mercies, is not only the tribute we owe him, but a comfortable encouragement to our own faith. (2.) They who deſire to ſerve God from their hearts, will find his ears ever open to their prayers.

[2.] He ſupplicates for himſelf and people the fulfilment of God's promiſes, with admiration and aſtoniſhment at the condeſcenſions of God, who, though the heaven, and the heaven of heavens cannot contain him, vouchſafes to viſit this ſinful earth, and to dwell with worms of the duſt, v. 27. he prays, that according to the promiſe made to David, his ſeed might never fail, or his throne be removed; that God would ever regard this temple, where he had ſo glorioully manifeſted his preſence; and that his prayers, and the prayers of the people there preſented unto him, or offered with their faces turned thitherward, might ever meet an anſwer of peace. Note, (1.) The word of promiſe is the ground of prayer. (2.) God ſtill condeſcends to dwell on earth, not indeed in temples made with hands, but in the more glorious temple of the believer's heart. (3.) Every accepted prayer muſt be through him whom the temple prefigured, even Jeſus Chriſt, and whilſt the eye of faith is turned to him, we may be aſſured God will hear and anſwer us. (4.) Forgiveneſs of ſin is the conſtant prayer of the enlightened mind, and among the moſt invaluable bleſſings it ſeeks from God.

[3.] He inſtances a variety of circumſtances, in which he begs, that God on their humble application would regard them. (1.) In caſe of an oath in any conteſted matter, that he would appear for the vindication of the righteous, and the condemnation of the perjured. Note, God is an avenging God, and will not at his tribunal ſuffer falſhood and wrong to paſs with Impunity. (2.) In caſe of national calamities, occaſioned by their ſins, whether the ſword of their enemies, drought, famine, peſtilence, or any other plague, on their repentance and return to God, he beſeeches they may be again reſtored to his favour, delivered from the evil, and inſtructed and led in the way of truth. Note, [1.] Sin is the cauſe of every calamity. [2.] There is no hope of deliverance from ſuffering, without repentance for ſin. [3.] They who through Jeſus Chriſt return humbly to God, he will return to them in mercy. [4.] Unleſs God teach and uphold us, our repentance would be ſhort, and our relapſe ſudden. (3.) When a man convinced of the plague of his own heart, v. 38. his natural corruption, or beſetting ſin, in ſhame and confuſion of face, applies for pardon and healing; he begs the Lord, who knoweth the heart, would hear and forgive, and by ſuch goodneſs engage the ſinner to love and fear him for ever, v. 40. Note, [1.] Of all plagues, heart-plagues are the worſt. [2.] No man who truly knows his own heart but muſt groan, being burdened, and cry, O wretched man that I am. [3.] God trieth our heart, and ſeeth much more evil in us, than ever we beheld in ourſelves. [4.] Nothing engages a ſinner's ſoul towards God, ſo much as a ſenſe of his pardoning grace. (4.) If a ſtranger, engaged by the fame of Iſrael's God, joined in ſupplication before him, Solomon intreats he may ſpeed alike with the true Iſraelites themſelves, that God may be glorified even among the moſt diſtant nations, who ſhould be thus convinced of his grace and power, and that none ſought his face in vain. (5.) When they went to battle, and in prayer lifted up their hearts to God, and their eyes to his ſanctuary, he intreats they may ſucceed, and that God would crown them with victory. Note, They who put their life in their hand, have eſpecial need to ſeek God's care and protection over them. (6.) In the time of their captivity, which their inquities might bring upon them, and when God in anger ſhould ſell them into their enemies hands, he intreats they may not utterly be caſt off; but on their penitent return, and their prayer towards his holy temple, that he would forgive them, incline their enemies to pity them, and reſtore them to their deſolate heritage. Note, [1.] When our troubles drive us to our knees, they anſwer the end for which God ſends them. [2.] God hath in his hands the hearts of all men, and can turn our bittereſt enemies into friends. (7.) He concludes with a general requeſt in favour of the people, that whatever they ſhould aſk of God might be granted them; and pleads, as an argument, the peculiar and endeared relation in which they ſtood, as ſeparated from all nations, to be a peculiar people, and for whom God had already ſhewn ſuch wonders of providence and grace. Note, (1.) Our relation to God, as our covenant God, is a prevailing ground of prayer. (2.) Whatever we aſk in the name of Jeſus, believing, we are ſure to receive.

54. And it was ſo, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and ſupplication unto the LORD, he aroſe from before the altar of the LORD, from [q] kneeling on his knees, with his hands ſpread up to heaven. 55. And he ſtood and [r] bleſſed all the congregation of Iſrael, with a loud voice, ſaying, 56. Bleſſed be the LORD, that hath given reſt unto his people Iſrael, [s] according to all that he promiſed: [t] there hath not failed one word of all his good promiſe, which he promiſed by the hand of Moſes his ſervant. 57. [u] The LORD our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us, nor forſake us: 58. That [x] he may incline our hearts unto him, to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his ſtatutes, and his judgments, which he commanded our fathers. 59. And [y] let theſe my words wherewith I have made ſupplication before the LORD, be nigh unto the LORD our God day and night, that he maintain the cauſe of his ſervant, and the cauſe of his people Iſrael at all times, as the matter ſhall require: 60. [z] That all the people of the earth may know that [a] the LORD is God, and that there is none elſe. 61. [b] Let your heart therefore be perfect with the LORD our God, to walk in his ſtatutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

We ought to praiſe God for the reſt we enjoy, ſpiritual or temporal; and eſpecially for the eternal reſt the word of promiſe hath ſecured to us. (2.) God's preſence with us is the greateſt bleſſing we can enjoy in this world, and the earneſt of our inheritance in a better. (3.) When his rich grace ſweetly influences and inclines our hearts, then and only then ſhall we be enabled to run the way of God's commandments. (4.) Whilſt Jeſus our high-prieſt is our advocate, we cannot fail of the Divine benediction. (5.) Though our ſalvation is ſecured to us, not by any ſtrength of our own, but by the unchangeable counſel and free grace of God; yet doth not this, as many think, looſen the bond of obedience, but encourage to fidelity, from the conſtrainings of Divine love, and the confidence and ſupport in every time of need.

62. ¶ And the king, and all Iſrael with him, [c] offered ſacrifice before the LORD. 63. And Solomon offered a ſacrifice of peace-offerings, which he offered unto the LORD, [d] two and twenty thouſand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thouſand ſheep: ſo the king and all the children of Iſrael, dedicated the houſe of the LORD. 64. The ſame day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the houſe of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings: becauſe the braſen altar that was before the LORD, was too little to receive the burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings. 65. And at that time Solomon held [e] a feaſt, and all Iſrael with him, a great congregation, from the entring in of Hamath, unto the river of Egypt, before the LORD our God, ſeven days and ſeven days, even fourteen days. 66. On the eighth day he ſent the people away: and they bleſſed the king, and went unto their tents [f] joyful and glad of heart, for all the goodneſs that the LORD had done for David his ſervant, and for Iſrael his people.

1. Vaſt ſacrifices are offered, on which the congregation, v. 65. feaſted during fourteen days; and the brazen altar not being ſufficient to conſume what was devoted to the fire, the middle of the court was extraordinarily conſecrated to the ſervice. As the day of atonement muſt have intervened on the 10th day of the month, though it was a day to afflict their ſouls, it might be numbered among their joyous days. The tears of godly ſorrow, are the ſweeteſt feaſt for the ſoul.

2. On the eighth day, when the feaſt of tabernacles ended, after the former ſeven days of the feaſt of dedication, the people returned happy in the ſervice, bleſſing the king, praying for the continuance and increaſe of his proſperity and greatneſs; and thanking him for their noble entertainment, and God for all the great kindneſs ſhewn to David, in giving him ſuch a ſon, and them ſuch a monarch. Note, (1.) When we return from God's ordinances, it becomes us to rejoice in the God of our ſalvation. (2.) A good king is the joy of his ſubjects. (3.) When we ſhall return to our eternal home, then ſhall our joy never end; and Jeſus, our king, be the ſubject of our everlaſting praiſes.

That the LORD † appeared to Solomon [a] the ſecond time, [b] as he had appeared unto him at Gibeon. 3. And the LORD ſaid unto him, [c] I have heard thy prayer and thy ſupplication that thou haſt made before me: I have hallowed this houſe which thou haſt built, to put my name there for ever, and [d] mine eyes and mine heart ſhall be there perpetually. 4. And if thou wilt walk before me as David thy father walked, [e] in integrity of heart and in uprightneſs, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my ſtatutes and my judgments: 5. Then I will eſtabliſh the throne of thy kingdom upon Iſrael for ever: [f] as I promiſed to David thy father, ſaying, There ſhall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Iſrael. 6. But [g] if you ſhall at all turn from following me, you or your children, and will not keep my commandments, and my ſtatutes, which I have ſet before you, but go and ſerve other gods, and worſhip them: 7. [h] Then will I cut off Iſrael out of the land which I have given them; and [i] this houſe which I have hallowed for my name, will I caſt out of my ſight, and [k] Iſrael ſhall be a proverb, and a by-word among all people: 8. And at this houſe which is high, every one that paſſeth by it ſhall be aſtoniſhed, and [l] ſhall hiſs; and they ſhall ſay, [m] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this houſe? 9. And they ſhall anſwer, [n] Becauſe they forſook the LORD their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worſhipped them, and ſerved them: therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.

v. 1—9. Solomon receives from God a gracious viſit, ſuch as he had been favoured with at Gibeon; probably the ſame night when the congregation was diſmiſſed, and not thirteen years afterwards, as the foregoing verſe ſeems to intimate: therefore ſome read, v. 2. The Lord had appeared, &c.

1. God declares his acceptance of his prayer, and promiſes to anſwer it. As he had manifeſted his preſence in his temple, his eye and heart ſhall be always upon it, and his ear attentive to the prayers of all that come thither for help. Note, God's eyes are now in every place over the righteous, and his ears open to their prayers.

2. He promiſes him, on his obedience, the eſtabliſhment of his houſe and throne, to the lateſt poſterity, v. 4, 5. Note, They who would ſecure to their children the entail of God's bleſſings, muſt leave them the examples of their fidelity.

3. He warns him of the dreadful conſequence of his and the people's, and their poſterity's departure and apoſtacy from God, v. 6—9. which would cauſe the deſtruction of his family, the ruin of his kingdom, the demolition of this glorious temple, the contempt of the heathen, and the mournful reflection of thoſe that remained on the ſins that brought down ſuch deſolating judgments. Thus Solomon and the people were admoniſhed not to pride themſelves on their outward privileges, or reſt on the glory of the temple, ſeeing its greateſt beauty was the holineſs of the worſhippers; and that once loſt, the fine gold would become dim, and this lofty fabric be laid in the duſt. Note, (1.) If our growth in grace does not correſpond with our privileges, our boaſt of the temple, and the beſt form of worſhip, will but delude and deſtroy us. (2.) Whenever we ſee or read the deſolations God hath wrought in the earth, we ſhould reflect on the dreadful evil and malignity of ſin, and take warning.

10. ¶ And it came to paſs at the end of † twenty years, [o] when Solomon had built the two houſes, the houſe of the LORD, and the king's houſe. 11. (Now Hiram the king of Tyre had furniſhed Solomon with cedar-trees, and fir-trees, and with gold according to all his deſire) that then king Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee. 12. And Hiram came out from Tyre to ſee the cities which Solomon had given him, and they ‡ pleaſed him not. 13. And he ſaid, What cities are theſe which thou haſt given me, my brother? And he called them the land of ‖ Cabul unto this day. 14. And Hiram ſent to the king ſixſcore talents of gold.

v. 10—14. Solomon having now finiſhed all his building, generouſly makes an offering to Hiram of twenty cities in Galilee, or on the borders of it, Joſh. xix. 27. over and above the contract ſubſiſting between them, chap. v. not willing to be behind in generoſity with the king of Tyre, to whoſe aſſiſtance he was ſo greatly indebted. Hiram, on viewing theſe cities, which not being in the lot of any particular tribe, were yet unoccupied by Iſrael, finds them not ſuited to the genius of his mercantile Tyrians, and therefore declines accepting them, calling them Cabul, not pleaſing; which name they afterwards bore, or they were ſo called when this book was written. No doubt Solomon took care to gratify him with ſome other preſent, See v. 27. and that not the inſignificance of the offer, but the unſuitableneſs of their ſituation, occaſioned Hiram's refuſal. Note, (1.) A generous mind will not chuſe to lie under obligations it is in his power to repay. (2.) Various are the ſentiments of men: the richeſt ſoil hath no charms to him, who delights to plough the main; whilſt the lover of the rural ſcene, with wonder ſees the ſailor tempt the boiſterous waves, and counts the gain too dearly earned amidſt the dangers of the deep.

15. ¶ And this is the reaſon of [p] the levy, which king Solomon raiſed, for to build the houſe of the LORD, and his own houſe, and Millo, and the wall of Jeruſalem, and Hazor, and Megiddo, and Gezer. 16. For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and ſlain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a preſent unto his daughter, Solomon's wife. 17. And Solomon built Gezer, and Beth-horon the nether, 18. And Baalath, and Tadmor in the wilderneſs, in the land, 19. And all the cities of ſtore that Solomon had, and cities for his chariots, and cities for his horſemen, and that which Solomon [q] deſired to build in Jeruſalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion. 20. And all the people [r] that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebuſites, which were not of the children of Iſrael, 21. Their children that were left after them in the land, whom the children of Iſrael alſo were not able utterly to deſtroy, [s] upon thoſe did Solomon levy a tribute of [t] bond-ſervice unto this day. 22. But of the children of Iſrael did Solomon make [u] no bond-men: but they were men of war, and his ſervants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horſemen. 23. Theſe were the chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work. 24. ¶ But Pharaoh's daughter came up [x] out of the city of David, [y] unto her houſe which Solomon had built for her: then did he build Millo. 25. ¶ And three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings, upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and he burnt incenſe upon the altar that was before the LORD: ſo he finiſhed the houſe. 26. ¶ And [z] king Solomon made a navy of ſhips in Ezion-geber, which is beſide Eloth, on the ſhore of the Red ſea, in the land of Edom. 27. And Hiram ſent in the navy his ſervants, ſhip-men that had knowledge of the ſea, with the ſervants of Solomon. 28. And they came to Ophir, and fet from thence [a] gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to king Solomon.

v. 15—28. Though Solomon had no wars to engage him, his buildings were vaſt and expenſive, and occaſioned him to levy a tribute on the people.

1. The Lord's houſe was his great concern; there his chief coſt was employed, and when this was finiſhed, his own palace, the ſtrengthening and beautifying his capital, the repairing ſome cities which were decayed, and the building others, gave opportunity of diſplaying his own taſte and magnificence, and ſtrengthening his kingdom, v. 19. Gezer among the reſt, till now unconquered, Pharaoh had taken from the old Canaanites, and having made a preſent of it to his daughter Solomon's wife, he repaired and fortified it. Note, They who make God's glory their firſt concern, may expect his bleſſing upon all the labour of their hands.

2. The old inhabitants of the land were reduced to ſervitude by him, v. 20, 21. proſelyted perhaps, and therefore not to be extirpated; theſe therefore he employed in the more laborious works, whilſt the Iſraelites were all diſcharged from meaner ſervices, and made officers in his court, or ſuperintendants of his works, v. 22. Note, In the court of Jeſus, our king, every ſpiritual Iſraelite ſhall be advanced to ſit among the princes.

3. Pharaoh's daughter, when her palace was finiſhed, came up to it, from the city of David.

4. Solomon, in the midſt of all his vaſt undertakings, neglected not the regular returns of worſhip, v. 25. he could only take comfort in the labour of his hands, when his heart continued ſtedfaſtly cleaving unto God. The altar he built, he frequented. Note, We muſt carefully obſerve that our worldly engagements draw not off our hearts, or indiſpoſe them for the ſervice of the bleſſed God.

5. To enrich his kingdom, and to carry on his expenſive works, by means of the port of Ezion Geber on the Red ſea, which David had conquered from the Edomites, he fitted out a fleet, manned chiefly with Tyrians, under the command of his ſervants, and trafficked to Ophir: in what part of the Indies this was ſituated is uncertain; whether Ceylon, Malacca, or perhaps nearer, on what is now called the coaſt of Coromandel, the return of the voyage was very advantageous, amounting to four hundred and twenty talents of gold, about one million, eight hundred and ninety thouſand pounds. Note, (1.) Nothing enriches a ſtate like traffic. (2.) Even the gold of Ophir periſhes in the uſing, but the treaſures of grace never wax old, or decay. He that is poſſeſſed of theſe, hath that fine gold which conſtitutes the true riches, Rev. iii. 18.

v. 1—13. The ſpreading fame of Solomon brought to his court a vaſt reſort of ſtrangers. Among the moſt diſtinguiſhed of which, we muſt reckon the queen of Sheba.

1. She came with a vaſt retinue, and the richeſt preſents, to converſe with a perſon of whom ſhe had heard ſuch wonders, to prove him by hard queſtions, to gain information in her difficulties, and eſpecially to enquire concerning the name of the Lord, who had beſtowed on Solomon ſuch uncommon wiſdom. Her country, Mat. xii. is ſaid to be ſouth, and the utmoſt parts of the earth, which ſeems to make it moſt probable, that it was the ſouthern part of Arabia, bordering on the ſea, whither the fleets of Solomon might have conveyed the report of his wiſdom and greatneſs. Note, (1.) Wiſdom can never be too dearly bought, or too far fetched. (2.) If her ſollicitude to enquire after God was ſo commendable, how will it upbraid their neglect, who, when the greater than Solomon is here, to teach them by his word and ſpirit, refuſe inſtruction, and will not hear the wiſdom of God.

2. Solomon entertained her with the dignity becoming her rank, communed with her of all ſhe had in her heart, anſwered every queſtion, and ſolved all her difficulties to her entire ſatisfaction. Note, They who have the gift of knowledge, ſhould delight in the communication of it.

3. What ſhe heard and ſaw quite aſtoniſhed her. His diſcourſes ſo deep and clear; his buildings ſo vaſt and magnificent; his table ſo richly and regularly ſupplied; his ſervants ſo exact, orderly, and numerous; his liveries ſo grand; his cup-bearers ſo ſtately; and his aſcent by ſteps to the houſe of the Lord ſo nobly contrived, ſo exquiſitely finiſhed; or as it may be rendered, the burnt-offerings in the houſe of the Lord, which as proſelyted, ſhe might now be admitted to behold: theſe were all ſuch an evidence of Solomon's tranſcendant wiſdom, that ſhe was loſt in admiration, v. 5.

4. When ſhe had recovered from her amazement, ſhe could not with-hold expreſſing her high ſatisfaction, and how much the event exceeded her expectation. Fame is uſually too liberal, but here had been unjuſt, half had not been told her. She pronounces them happy, who enjoyed the conſtant opportunity of hearing ſuch a prodigy of wiſdom; and could be tempted to wiſh her lot among his ſervants, rather than on the throne of Sheba. And concludes with bleſſing God for his diſtinguiſhed gifts and greatneſs, and for his goodneſs to Iſrael in giving them ſuch a king, v. 9. Note, (1.) To enjoy the converſe of thoſe who are wiſe in the things of God, is a moſt valuable mercy. (2.) God, as the author of all our bleſſings, deſerves the praiſe of all. (3.) When we ſhall come to the preſence of our Solomon, the Prince of Peace, we ſhall own how much the glory he hath prepared for his people exceeds all that eye hath ſeen or ear heard, or it hath entered into the heart of man to conceive.

5. They parted with mutual magnificent preſents: ſhe gave him gold, and ſpices, and jewels; and he made her a like return, preſenting her beſides with every thing curious, which ſhe deſired. Note, (1.) Mutual tokens are the pledges of friendſhip. (2.) Though we have nothing valuable to offer to the Lord Jeſus, yet if we have the willing heart, he will ſend us away loaded with his good things, and we can aſk him nothing he will not delight to beſtow on us.

6. We have an account of Hiram's voyage, See 2 Chron. ix. 10. in which Solomon was partner, and the produce of it, particularly the almug-trees, probably ebony, of which that aſcent was made, the baluſtrade at leaſt of it, which the queen of Sheba ſo admired, v. 5. A vaſt number of muſical inſtruments alſo were made of this wood, v. 12. no ſuch had before been ſeen in Iſrael, nor to the day in which the hiſtory was written.

14. ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year, was ſix hundred threeſcore and ſix talents of gold. 15. Beſides that he had of the merchant-men, and of the traffic of the ſpice-merchants, and of all the kings of Arabia, and of the governors of the country. 16. ¶ And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: ſix hundred ſhekels of gold went to one target. 17. And he made three hundred [r] ſhields of beaten gold; three pound of gold went to one ſhield: and the king put them in the houſe of the foreſt of Lebanon. 18. ¶ Moreover, the king made a great [s] throne of † ivory, and overlaid it with the beſt of gold. 19. The throne had ſix ſteps, and the top of the throne was round behind: and there were ‡ ſtays on either ſide on the place of the ſeat, and two lions ſtood beſide the ſtays. 20. And twelve lions ſtood there on the one ſide and on the other upon the ſix ſteps: there was not the like made in any kingdom. 21. ¶ And all king Solomon's drinking-veſſels were of gold, and all the veſſels of the houſe of the foreſt of Lebanon, were of pure gold, ‖ none were of ſilver; it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon. 22. For the king had at ſea a navy of Tharſhiſh, with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharſhiſh, bringing gold and ſilver, ivory, and apes, and § peacocks. 23. So king Solomon [t] exceeded all the kings of the earth, for riches and for wiſdom. 24. ¶ And all the earth ſought to Solomon to hear his wiſdom, which God had put in his heart. 25. And they brought every man his preſent, veſſels of ſilver, and veſſels of gold, and garments, and armour, and ſpices, horſes, and mules, a rate year by year. 26. And [u] Solomon gathered together chariots and horſemen: and he had a thouſand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thouſand horſemen, whom he beſtowed in the cities for chariots, and with the king at Jeruſalem. 27. And [x] the king made ſilver to be in Jeruſalem as ſtones, and cedars made he to be as the ſycamore-trees, that are in the vale, for abundance. 28. ¶ And Solomon had horſes brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price. 29. And a chariot came up and went out of Egypt for ſix hundred ſhekels of ſilver, and an horſe for an hundred and fifty: and ſo for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, did they bring them out by their † means.

v. 14—29. Solomon went on, increaſing his wealth and magnificence.

1. The great ſources from whence he drew his immenſe revenues, were the tribute of the conquered countries, the cuſtoms paid by the merchants, the preſents which were continually made to him by the neighbouring potentates, who conſulted him; but eſpecially his vaſt traffic by land and ſea. Every three years his ſhips, in conſort with Hiram, returned from Tharſhiſh, ſuppoſed to be ſome part of the Eaſt Indies, from the commodities they imported, gold, ſilver, ivory, apes, and peacocks or parrots. His trade to Egypt alſo was moſt advantageous: probably by his alliance with Pharaoh, he obtained the ſole purchaſe of the ſtaple commodities of the country, horſes, chariots, and linen cloths, at a fixed price, which he again ſold at a vaſt profit to the nations around him, v. 29. The clear produce of all which in one year amounted to ſix hundred and ſixty-ſix talents, near three million of money, an immenſe ſum in thoſe days. Note, Traffic is the great ſource of wealth: the empire of the ſea enriches a nation more than the mines of Peru or Golconda.

2. He ſpent liberally what he received ſo abundantly. For he made two hundred large ſhields of gold, and three hundred of a leſſer ſize, for ſtate, to be carried before him: he erected a moſt magnificent throne of ivory, overlaid, or rather inlaid, with gold, ſupported by golden lions, and aſcended by ſix ſteps, on each of which a lion was placed, of pure gold; here he received ambaſſadors, and ſat in judgment. All his ſervice for his table was plate of gold, and his forces were increaſed proportionably to his grandeur: he maintained a ſtanding army of fourteen hundred chariots, and twelve thouſand horſemen; and far from oppreſſing his ſubjects to maintain ſuch ſtate and dignity, by the trade he introduced among them, ſilver is figuratively ſaid to be as plenty as ſtones, and cedars as ſycamore-trees. Thus did Solomon exceed all kings in riches and wiſdom, and his people ſhared his glory, happy and proſperous under his ſafe and gentle government. Note, (1.) Whatever God giveth, it is deſigned that we ſhould richly enjoy it. (2.) Solomon, on this throne of ivory, was typical of his greater Son, ſeated on the great white throne of Judgment, and pronouncing ſentence on the eternal ſtate of men and angels: See Rev. xx. ii. (3.) That king is truly glorious, who makes his ſubjects affluent and happy under his wiſe adminiſtration. (4.) If we ſhall be found citizens of the new Jeruſalem, and our lot be caſt among the ſubjects of Jeſus, then the very ſtreets of our city ſhall be pure gold, and the walls the richeſt jewels; ſo much will our eternal conſolations and bleſſedneſs exceed all earthly joy and felicity.

CHAP. XI.

This chapter begins with as melancholy a but as almoſt any we find in all the Bible: Hitherto we have read nothing of Solomon but what was great and good; but his ſun ſets under a cloud. 1. By multiplying ſtrange wives, he turned after ſtrange gods, ver. 4—8. 2. God's anger ſignified to him thereupon, ver. 9—13. 3. Enemies foreign and domeſtic raiſed up againſt him, ver. 14—40. 4. His death and burial, ver. 41—43.

1. BUT king Solomon [a] loved [b] many ſtrange women (together with the daughter of Pharaoh) women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites: 2. Of the nations concerning which the LORD ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, [c] Ye ſhall not go in to them, neither ſhall they come in unto you, for ſurely [d] they will turn away your heart after their gods: Solomon clave unto theſe in love. 3. And he had ſeven hundred wives, princeſſes, and three hundred concubines: and his wives turned away his heart. 4. For it came to paſs when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father. 5. For Solomon went after Aſhtoreth the goddeſs of the Zidonians, and after [e] Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites. 6. And Solomon did evil in the ſight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father. 7. Then did Solomon build an high place for Chemoſh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jeruſalem: and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon. 8. And likewiſe did he for all his ſtrange wives, which burnt incenſe, and ſacrificed unto their gods.

v. 1—8. Lord, what is man! Is this Solomon the wiſe? Is this Jedediah, the beloved of the Lord? Is this the man of prayer, the builder of God's temple? How art thou fallen, Son of the Morning!

1. The cauſe of Solomon's ſad departure from God is here mentioned. The love of women ſtole away his heart; inſatiate luſt led him to multiply his wives and concubines; and when the women of Iſrael no longer pleaſed his vitiated taſte, or piouſly refuſed to miniſter to his guilty pleaſures, he ſought for others, leſs ſcrupulous, from the forbidden nations around him, v. 2. On theſe his heart doated; and as he grew old, grew fonder ſtill, and could refuſe them nothing. Note, (1.) No paſſion ſo dangerous to the ſoul, as the love of women. (2.) Every indulgence given to lewd deſire, only makes thoſe deſires more inſatiate.

2. The ſad effects produced by his inordinate affections. His heart was drawn aſide to idolatry; to which David in his moſt lamented days never inclined. His wives taking advantage of his fondneſs and age, ſeduced him firſt to grant them the worſhip of their own gods, and then engaged him to join with them in the abominable ſervice. To ſuch a pitch of impiety it grew at laſt, that the high place of Chemoſh confronted the very temple of God, v. 8. Note, (1.) They who give way to one wilful ſin, never know when or where they ſhall ſtop. (2.) The indulgence of fleſhly luſts makes the heart brutiſh, and ſtupifies the conſcience. (3.) Outward proſperity is a dangerous ſtate: they who fare ſumptuouſly every day, often find their their table a ſnare, and pampered appetite their ruin. (4.) The greateſt attainments, without continued watchfulneſs and jealouſy, may be quickly loſt; and, like Solomon, the higheſt in profeſſion of godlineſs, become the fouleſt in their falls. (5.) Solomon's ſin ſhould be our warning: a buſy devil, and a body of fleſh will never ceaſe tempting. Let us never turn into an argument to embolden us, what is left on record as an admonition, to deter us from the like ſins.

9. ¶ And the LORD was angry with Solomon, becauſe [f] his heart was turned from the LORD God of Iſrael, [g] which had appeared unto him twice. 10. And [h] had commanded him concerning this thing, that he ſhould not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded. 11. Wherefore the LORD ſaid unto Solomon, Foraſmuch as this is done of thee, and thou haſt not kept my covenant and my ſtatutes which I have commanded thee, [i] I will ſurely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy ſervant. 12. Notwithſtanding, in thy days I will not do it, [k] for David thy father's ſake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy ſon. 13. Howbeit, I will not rend away all the kingdom: but will give one tribe to thy ſon, for David my ſervant's ſake, and for Jeruſalem's ſake, which I have choſen.

v. 9—13. Juſtly provoked at ſuch baſe ingratitude and wilful diſobedience, after ſuch repeated inſtances of his kindneſs, God ſends a terrible meſſage to awaken him from his ſhameful backſliding. Since he had revolted from God, the kingdom ſhall revolt from him, that is, from his poſterity in the next reign; and though for the ſake of the promiſe made to David, he would leave him one tribe, that is Judah, with which Benjamin, as adjacent, was reckoned: the other ten tribes ſhould be given to his ſervant. In mercy God deferred the execution of his ſentence till his ſon's reign, but left him to lament the approaching deſolations, when all the glory he hoped to tranſmit to his poſterity, would be ſo eclipſed. God had given him fair warning before; he hath now only his own wickedneſs to blame. What effect this meſſage had, we are not told; yet have reaſon to hope it was, like Nathan's, the means of bringing him to repentance; and that the book of Eccleſiaſtes contains his repentance, and acknowledgment of his ſin and folly. Note, (1.) When God's people ſin againſt him, they may expect ſevere rebukes. (2.) Every ſin receives peculiar aggravations from the light and mercies againſt which it is committed. (3.) Though God does not diſinherit his choſen, they will tarniſh greatly the luſtre of their crown by their backſlidings. (4.) It is for Jeſus' ſake, and the covenant eſtabliſhed in him, that we are not utterly conſumed: if any man ſin, we have yet an advocate with the Father.

14. ¶ And [l] the LORD ſtirred up an adverſary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite; he was of the king's ſeed in Edom. 15. For it came to paſs [m] when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the hoſt was gone up to bury the ſlain, [n] after he had ſmitten every male in Edom: 16. (For ſix months did Joab remain there with all Iſrael, until he had cut off every male in Edom) 17. That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's ſervants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child. 18. And they aroſe out of Midian, and came to Paran, and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, which gave him an houſe, and appointed him † victuals, and gave him land. 19. And Hadad found great favour in the ſight of Pharaoh, ſo that he gave him to wife the ſiſter of his own wife, the ſiſter of Tahpenes the queen. 20. And the ſiſter of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his ſon, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's houſe: and Genubath was in Pharaoh's houſhold, among the ſons of Pharaoh. 21. And when Hadad heard in Egypt that David ſlept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the hoſt was dead, Hadad ſaid to Pharaoh, Let me depart, that I may go to mine own country. 22. Then Pharaoh ſaid unto him, But what haſt thou lacked with me, that behold, thou ſeekeſt to go to thine own country? And he anſwered, Nothing: Howbeit let me go in any wiſe. 23. ¶ And God ſtirred him up another adverſary, Rezon, the ſon of Eliadah, which fled from his lord Hadadezer king of Zobah. 24. And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, [o] when David ſlew them of Zobah: and they went to Damaſcus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damaſcus. 25. And [p] he was an adverſary to Iſrael all the days of Solomon, beſide the miſchief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Iſrael, and reigned over Syria.

v. 14—25. Peace and plenty had for a time, with uninterrupted ſtreams, flowed in upon the pious Solomon: but when he exchanged his wiſdom for folly, and his piety for profaneneſs, then the current of his mercies was ſtayed, and God began to afflict him. Sin and ſuffering go uſually linked together.

God ſtirred up adverſaries againſt him, foreign and domeſtic, to avenge his quarrel, and to be a ſcourge for his ſins. Note, The inſtruments God uſes, often mean only their own ambition, but he directs them to fulfil his purpoſes, and makes them ſubſervient to his glory.

1. Hadad, an Edomite. He was of the ſeed royal, and had eſcaped from the general extirpation of Moab; which Joab, under David's reign, had attempted, v. 15, 16. Hadad was then a child, and a few of his ſervants reſcued him by flight; and with guides, or fugitives, like themſelves, from Paran, took refuge in Egypt; where, being kindly entertained by Pharaoh, he was in proceſs of time, married to his wife's ſiſter, greatly careſs'd, v. 20. and nobly provided for. At the beginning of Solomon's reign, he longed to return to his native country, which Pharaoh, though with great reluctance, granted; there he ſeems to have continued in ſecret, engaging the people in his favour, till now Solomon's ſin gave him an opportunity to declare himſelf; and though the miſchief he did is not mentioned, he became, it is clear, a very troubleſome neighbour, v. 25. Note, (1.) The weakeſt inſtruments in God's hands can ſoon grow ſtrong enough to be our bitter ſcourge. (2.) Like Hadad, the believer, though enjoying every thing on earth his heart can wiſh, yet ſighs for home, and ſaith, O that I had wings like a dove, for then would I flee away to my eternal reſt, in the boſom of Jeſus.

2. Rezon was another enemy; he eſcaped from the ruins of Zobah, when Hadadezer fell by the ſword of David; and having collected as many as he could of the ſcattered forces, he became their captain; and now towards the end of Solomon's reign, when his wickedneſs made him weak, ſeizing Damaſcus, he fixed there the ſeat of his kingdom. The remembrance of his former ſufferings ſharpened his reſentment: he abhorred Solomon and Iſrael, and in concert with Hadad, continued to harraſs and diſturb them. Note, When God reſolves to chaſtize, he will not want a rod.

26. ¶ And [q] Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's ſervant (whoſe mother's name was Zeruah, a widow-woman) even [r] he lift up his hand againſt the king. 27. And this was the cauſe that he lift up his hand againſt the king: Solomon built Millo, and repaired the breaches of the city of David his father. 28. And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon ſeeing the young man, that [s] he was induſtrious, he made him ruler over all the † charge of the houſe of Joſeph. 29. And it came to paſs at that time, when Jeroboam went out of Jeruſalem, that the prophet Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way: and he had clad himſelf with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field. 30. And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and [t] rent it in twelve pieces. 31. And he ſaid to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus ſaith the LORD the God of Iſrael, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee: 32. (But he ſhall have one tribe for my ſervant David's ſake, and for Jeruſalem's ſake, the city which I have choſen out of all the tribes of Iſrael) 33. Becauſe that they have forſaken me, and have worſhipped Aſhtoreth the goddeſs of the Zidonians, Chemoſh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and [u] have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my ſtatutes and my judgments, as did David his father. 34. Howbeit, I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life, for David my ſervant's ſake, whom I choſe, becauſe he kept my commandments and my ſtatutes: 35. But I will take the kingdom out of his ſon's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes. 36. And unto his ſon will I give one tribe, that David my ſervant may have a ‡ light [x] alway before me in Jeruſalem, the city which I have choſen me to put my name there. 37. And I will take thee, and thou ſhalt reign according to all that thy ſoul deſireth,

And I will for this afflict the ſeed of David, but not for ever. 40. [a] Solomon ſought therefore to kill Jeroboam: and Jeroboam aroſe, and fled into Egypt, unto Shiſhak king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

v. 26—40. We have here,

1. The worſt and laſt of Solomon's enemies, whoſe name we ſhall often find hereafter ſtamped with infamy, Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat; an Ephraimite by birth, his mother a widow, advanced by Solomon, for his diligence and induſtry, to the preſidence over the whole houſe of Joſeph: his advancement had fired his ambition, and Ahijah's prophecy raiſed his expectations to aſpire even to the crown. Note, (1.) Diligence is the way to advancement. (2.) Domeſtic foes are more dangerous than foreign enemies. (3). Ambition is never ſatisfied; one ſummit of honour attained preſents a greater height, to which the aſpiring wiſhes climb.

2. The appointment of Jeroboam to the crown of Iſrael. Ahijah met him on his return from court, and taking him aſide into a field for privacy, by a ſignificant ſign, intimated his meſſage, ſeizing Jeroboam's new garment, or his own, the words bearing either ſenſe, he rent it in twelve pieces, and bid him take up ten, aſſuring him from God, that the tribes of Iſrael ſhould be given him as a puniſhment on Solomon and his people, for their foul idolatry, (and a greater curſe could not be laid on them, than ſuch a king as he afterwards proved) yet he is not put into immediate poſſeſſion, but limited to Solomon's demiſe; and then alſo he muſt not aſpire to the univerſal dominion, but leave the tribe of Judah, which, with Benjamin, were continued to David's ſeed, undiſturbed, that the lamp of David, his royal houſe, be not quite extinguiſhed. On condition of his fidelity to walk in God's ways, Ahijah promiſes him the ſure poſſeſſion of the kingdom to his poſterity; but if he apoſtatized from God, he muſt be aſſured, from what he ſaw in Solomon's caſe, that he would not be unpuniſhed. Note, (1.) Others ſufferings ſhould warn us againſt their ſins. (2.) Amidſt all our provocations God ſtill remembers his promiſes to his people, for the ſon of David's ſake, and though he will not let us go unpuniſhed, in his wrath he ſtill remembers mercy.

3. Solomon having information of what had paſſed, by Ahijah's public declaration of it, or Jeroboam's vanity, fooliſhly and wickedly attempts to diſappoint God's word by the death of his rival; on which Jeroboam flies into Egypt, as an aſylum, to wait 'till the death of Solomon ſhould open his way to the throne. Note, We muſt, as ſtrangers in a ſtrange land, be content for a while to wait till death ſhall open a way for us to our kingdom in glory.

[b] 2 Chron. ix. 29.
[c] Chap. ii.

41. ¶ And the reſt of the acts of Solomon, and all that he did, and his wiſdom, are they not written in [b] the book of the acts of Solomon? 42. And the time that Solomon reigned in Jeruſalem, over all Iſrael, was forty years. 43. And Solomon [c] ſlept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

v. 41—43. Solomon's reign now draws to an end: we have heard ſome of the moſt material of his deeds, but a greater part are loſt in oblivion, though written in a book of annals, extant when this hiſtory was compiled. Forty years he reigned; at laſt death, that pays no reſpect to crowned heads, took him from the throne to the tomb. He ſlept in his father's ſepulchre, and left his kingdom to his ſon Rehoboam, whoſe inauſpicious reign we next enter upon.

And it came to paſs, when Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who was yet in Egypt, heard of it ([b] for he was fled from the preſence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt) 3. That they ſent and called him: and Jeroboam, and all the congregation of Iſrael came, and ſpake unto Rehoboam, ſaying, 4. [c] Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore make thou the grievous ſervice of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will ſerve thee. 5. And he ſaid unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed. 6. And king Rehoboam conſulted with [d] the old men that ſtood before Solomon his father, while he yet lived, and ſaid, How do you adviſe, that I may anſwer this people? 7. And they ſpake unto him, ſaying, If thou wilt be [e] a ſervant unto this people this day, and wilt ſerve them, and anſwer them, [f] and ſpeak good words to them, then they will be thy ſervants for ever. 8. And he ſaid unto them, What counſel give ye, that we may anſwer this people, who have ſpoken to me, ſaying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us, lighter? 10. And the young men that were grown up with him, ſpake unto him, ſaying, Thus ſhalt thou ſpeak unto this people that ſpake unto thee, ſaying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us: thus ſhalt thou ſay unto them, My little finger ſhall be thicker than my father's loins. 11. Wherefore the king hearkned not unto the people: [h] for the cauſe was from the LORD, that he might perform his ſaying, which the LORD ſpake [i] by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat.

v. 1—15. The ſucceſſion devolved on Rehoboam without diſpute, and none ſeemed to conteſt his title; but we are not moſt ſafe when moſt ſecure.

1. The people of Iſrael deſired the king to come to Shechem, in the tribe of Ephraim, as if they would there recognize his title; but in fact with a view either to redreſs their grievances, or revolt from his government, and probably already gained by Jeroboam's emiſſaries. Note, Many a vile deſign lurks under the moſt ſpecious appearances.

2. On Rehoboam's coming thither, they had privately ſent for Jeroboam out of Egypt, and at his inſtigation probably preſented a petition for the redreſs of their grievances, which, whether real or not, would give him a handle to perform the ſtroke he meditated. They complain not of his father's ſins, but of the heavineſs of their taxes, and beg they may be lightened; nor is it at all unlikely, that though Solomon's reign at firſt was ſo gentle, and their circumſtances ſo affluent, yet when a thouſand women had him in their power, they would, like ſo many harpies, fleece the poor people. Note, (1.) The beſt government will not be without factious ſpirits, ready to blow the coals of ſedition among the populace. (2.) The avarice of a kept miſtreſs is inſatiable. (3.) Moſt men are more concerned how to ſave their money than their ſouls.

3. Rehoboam's folly ruins him. Deſiring three days to anſwer their petition, he conſulted firſt the old men who had been trained up in the ſchool of wiſdom before Solomon. They prudently adviſe him to comply with the people's requeſt; either the demand was reaſonable, or at leaſt, in their preſent diſpoſition, it were politic to appear gracious, and by one conceſſion ſecure for ever their fidelity. Rehoboam reliſhed not this advice, therefore he conſults his younger companions, who, having grown up with him in his pleaſures, knew how to flatter his pride, and to adviſe thoſe harſh meaſures they ſaw moſt agreeable to his temper, as if he had nothing to fear, but might, by rigour and threatnings, over-awe the people to obedience. Advice ſo ſuited to his own diſpoſition, he failed not to purſue, and, on the third day, roughly received the deputies of the people; far from condeſcending to their requeſt, or vindicating his father's government from oppreſſion, he threatens to make their yoke heavier, and, if they refuſed to draw in it, to chaſtiſe them with greater ſeverity than his father had ever done; if they dared diſpute his will, he will make them feel his power, which he boaſts to be much ſuperior to Solomon's, ſo that his little finger ſhould be thicker than his father's loins. This bad advice was God's juſt judgment on him, and, in order to the fulfilment of the prophecy of Ahijah. Note, (1.) That government which ſubſiſts only by ſeverity, is in a tottering condition; no throne is ſure, where a king reigns not in the hearts of his ſubjects. (2.) They are our beſt friends who diſſuade us from our raſh deſigns, and they are our greateſt enemies who ſooth our folly and flatter our pride. (3.) At court, too commonly, not the profit of the kingdom, but the pleaſing the king, is the object moſt in view.

16. ¶ So when all Iſrael ſaw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people anſwered the king, ſaying, What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in [k] the ſon of Jeſſe: [l] to your tents, O Iſrael: now ſee to thine own houſe, David. So Iſrael departed unto their tents. 17. [m] But as for the children of Iſrael which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them. 18. Then king Rehoboam ſent [n] Adoram, who was over the tribute; and all Iſrael ſtoned him with ſtones, that he died: therefore king Rehoboam † made ſpeed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jeruſalem. 19. So Iſrael rebelled againſt the houſe of David unto this day. 20. And it came to paſs when all Iſrael heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they ſent and called him unto the congregation, and [o] made him king over all Iſrael: there was none that followed the houſe of David, but the tribe of Judah only. 21. ¶ [p] And when Rehoboam was come to Jeruſalem, he aſſembled all the houſe of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourſcore thouſand choſen men, which were warriors, to fight againſt the houſe of Iſrael, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon. 22. But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, ſaying, 23. Speak unto Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon king of Judah, and unto all the houſe of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, ſaying, 24. Thus ſaith the LORD, Ye ſhall not go up, nor fight againſt your brethren the children of Iſrael: return every man to his houſe, for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

v. 16—24. An anſwer ſo impolitic and ſevere juſtly exaſperated the people, and gave Jeroboam and the malecontents the very opportunity they wanted.

1. They openly revolt from Rehoboam, and renounce their allegiance to the poſterity of David, whom in contempt they called the ſon of Jeſſe; and defying Rehoboam's threatnings, bid him look to himſelf and his houſe the tribe of Judah, who cleaved unto him, which would make but a poor figure thus deſerted. Note, (1.) They who by oppreſſion drive the people into rebellion, muſt blame themſelves for the miſchief which enſues. (2.) They who know the great ſin of rebellion, will ſuffer much, rather than riſe to vindicate their liberty, by ſo dangerous a meaſure.

2. Rehoboam now too late perceived his folly, yet takes as wrong a method to appeaſe the ſedition, as he had done to excite it. Willing to ſoften the people, he ſends Adoram to them, the moſt odious inſtrument he could have fixed upon, as being the collector of thoſe taxes of which they ſo heavily complained. His very preſence ſo enraged the populace, that they inſtantly ſtoned him to death; at which in a fright Rehoboam flies to Jeruſalem, fearing his own perſon no longer ſafe in Shechem. Note, We often ſee the miſchiefs our folly occaſions, when it is too late to remedy them.

3. Rehoboam being fled, the people aſſembled and choſe Jeroboam king of Iſrael: Judah, with Benjamin only, approved their loyalty to David's ſucceſſor: thus was that diviſion made, which never after was healed. Note, A haſty word produces endleſs miſchief.

4. Rehoboam could not however think of quitting tamely to his rival the kingdom he had uſurped, but by his faithful friends in Judah and Benjamin, levies a moſt formidable army of one hundred and eighty thouſand men of war; and now Jeroboam ſeemed ready to be hurled from the throne he had ſcarce aſcended: but God interpoſes. By his prophet Shemaiah, he forbids them to fight againſt their brethren; the thing was his doing, in juſt judgment againſt their ſins, therefore they muſt ſubmit to it. Hereupon Rehoboam deſiſts, and the army is diſbanded. Note, (1.) When God's will contradicts our deſigns, we muſt ſubmit without delay. (2.) Love to our brethren ſhould make us put up with many injuries, rather than ſeek a redreſs which may be ruinous to both. (3.) If we fight againſt God, there can be no hope of ſucceſs; therefore it is wiſe to leave off meddling betimes.

25. ¶ Then Jeroboam built Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein, and went out from thence, and built Penuel. 26. And Jeroboam [q] ſaid in his heart, Now ſhall the kingdom return to the houſe of David: 27. If this people go up [r] to do ſacrifice in the houſe of the LORD at Jeruſalem, then ſhall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and [s] they ſhall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah. 28. Whereupon the king [t] took counſel, and made two [u] calves of gold, and ſaid unto them, [x] It is too much for you to go up to Jeruſalem: behold thy gods, O Iſrael, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. 29. And he ſet the one in Beth-el, and the other put he in [y] Dan. 30. And [z] this thing became a ſin: for the people went to worſhip before the one, even unto Dan. 31. And he made an houſe of high places, and made prieſts † of the loweſt of the people, [a] which were not of the ſons of Levi. 32. And Jeroboam ordained a feaſt in [b] the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, [c] like unto the feaſt that is in Judah, and [d] he offered upon the altar (ſo did he in Beth-el) ſacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el the prieſts of the high places which he had made. 33. So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el, the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which [e] he had deviſed of his own heart: and ordained a feaſt unto the children of Iſrael, and he offered upon the altar, and burnt incenſe.

v. 25—33. Jeroboam's concern is now to ſecure and ſtrengthen himſelf in the throne to which he was advanced; for which purpoſe,

1. He fortified and repaired Shechem, where he was elected, and rebuilt Penuel, in the tribe of Gad, as a fortreſs for the protection of his dominions on the other ſide Jordan.

2. He wickedly contrived to keep the people from returning to Rehoboam, as he feared they would do, if they went up to the temple, by erecting a new form of worſhip, in his own territories. He dared not truſt God's promiſe, chap. xi. 38. but rather depended on his own craft; and having faſhioned two golden calves, in imitation of Aaron's, he placed them at the extremities of his own kingdom, the one in Dan, where Micah's images had paved a way for its reception, and the other in Bethel, near Jeruſalem, to invite the idolaters of Judah to join him; and pretending that attendance at Jeruſalem was too burdenſome, as being ſo diſtant, or unneceſſary, ſince the whole land was equally holy, he ſaid as Aaron, theſe are thy Gods, O Iſrael, the repreſentatives of the true Jehovah, who brought thee out of Egypt. Ever prone to idolatry, and ſeeking ſome ſenſible object, as the medium of their worſhip, the people readily complied, and in their zeal grudged not a journey to Dan, to the calf, though twice as far as they need have gone to the temple. Thus began the apoſtacy of Iſrael from God, which iſſued in their final ruin. Note, (1.) Image worſhip, however vindicated or palliated by the papiſts, is abominable idolatry. (2.) They who think to ſecure their ſafety by ſin, only haſten the ruin they would avoid.

3. To compleat his ſcheme he erected a temple at Dan, with many altars for ſacrifice, and conſtituted prieſts, not as we render it, out of the meaneſt of the people, which would have diſcredited his worſhip, but indiſcriminately out of all the people, not confining himſelf to the tribe of Levi; and as he dared thus change the prieſthood, he changed alſo the feſtivals, and kept the feaſt of tabernacles on the fifteenth of the eighth month inſtead of the ſeventh: he himſelf alſo officiated as prieſt at his altar, whether to give ſanction to his new-fangled worſhip, or to appear zealous for religion; and the king's example readily ſwayed the multitude to follow him: thus Jeroboam, the ſon of Nebat, cauſed Iſrael to ſin. Note, (1.) Great men's ill examples are grievouſly infectious. (2.) All pretences to religious zeal, contrary to God's revealed will, are but the depths of Satan more fatally to delude men's ſouls.

And [c] he cried againſt the altar in the word of the LORD, and ſaid, [d] O altar, altar, thus ſaith the LORD, Behold a child ſhall be born unto the houſe of David, [e] Joſiah by name, and upon thee ſhall he offer the prieſts of the high places that burn incenſe upon thee, and men's bones ſhall be burnt upon thee. 3. And he gave a ſign the ſame day, ſaying, This is the ſign which the LORD hath ſpoken: Behold, the altar ſhall be rent, and the aſhes that are upon it ſhall be poured out. 4. And it came to paſs when king Jeroboam heard the ſaying of the man of God, which had cried againſt the altar in Beth-el, [f] that he put forth his hand from the altar, ſaying, Lay hold on him. And his hand which he put forth againſt him, [g] dried up, ſo that he could not pull it in again to him. 5. v. 1—10. Jeroboam, in the heighth of his impious offering, ſeemed to glory in his ſhame; his courtiers around him joined his idolatrous ſervice, and none dare remonſtrate againſt the horrid crime: but God will not ſuffer theſe doings to paſs without a ſevere rebuke.

1. God ſends a prophet from Judah to Beth-el, and in the midſt of the crowd, near the altar where the king ſtood, he boldly delivered his meſſage, and proclaimed aloud the Divine judgment upon the altar, and its worſhippers; that it ſhould be defiled with dead men's bones, and that a king ſhould ariſe, Joſiah by name, who would offer up the idolatrous prieſts upon it; and to confirm the truth of his meſſage, he gives a ſign, v. 3. which immediately came to paſs, an evidence of God's preſent diſpleaſure, and an earneſt of the threatned deſtruction, which came to paſs as foretold, about three hundred and fifty years after, 2 Kings xxiii. 17—20. Note, (1.) Before God ſtrikes, he warns; he willeth not that any ſhould periſh, but rather that they ſhould come to repentance. (2.) God's prophets muſt not fear the faces of men, but openly and faithfully, even to the greateſt, declare their meſſage, however unwelcome or dangerous. (3.) No events, however contingent to us, are ſo to God; our names, abode, and ſtate, preſent and eternal, are all foreſeen, and fixed by his unalterable decree.

2. Jeroboam, enraged at what he termed ſuch inſolence, ſtretches out his hand, and commands to ſeize the prophet, when inſtantly ſtruck of God, it grew ſtiff, and withered; a warning to him, how dangerous it was to fight againſt God. Note, (1.) Faithful rebukes often provoke proud wrath. (2.) The preachers of God's word are the eſpecial butt of malice, but God will protect them; he that toucheth them, toucheth the apple of his eye. (3.) In the way of duty, we need fear no danger. (4.) The hearts of ſinners, like the arm of Jeroboam, are, by rejecting God's warnings, given up to judicial hardneſs and impenitence.

3. Such a ſtroke, though it turned not his heart, for the time altered his tone: for miracles cannot, unleſs Divine Grace works with them, convert men's ſouls. He begs now the prophet, whom he had threatned, to be his advocate, hoping for more ſucceſs from his prayers, than his own: not that he ſought forgiveneſs of his ſin, but deliverance from his affliction. The prophet charitably conſents to pray for him, and at his requeſt God reſtores the withered arm. Note, (1.) They who in their proſperity reject the warnings of God's miniſters, in their diſtreſs will have recourſe to their prayers. (2.) An impenitent heart ever betrays itſelf, in a greater concern for its ſufferings than its ſins. (3.) To pray for thoſe who deſpitefully uſe and perſecute us, is the way to obtain the promiſed beatitude, Mat. v. 10, 44. (4.) Mercies nor judgments make any laſting impreſſion upon the reprobate.

4. Jeroboam now would reward the prophet for his prayers, but he is forbid to eat or drink in Beth-el, and therefore refuſes the king's invitation, and returns, as ordered, by another way, v. 9. Note, (1.) We muſt teſtify againſt the workers of iniquity, by refuſing to have any fellowſhip with them. (2.) Neither offers nor threatnings muſt prevail with us, to ſwerve a ſtep from the path of duty.

11. ¶ Now there dwelt an old [r] prophet in Beth-el, and his † ſons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el; the words which he had ſpoken unto the king, them they told alſo to their father. 12. And their father ſaid unto them, What way went he? For his ſons had ſeen what way the man of God went, which came from Judah. 13. And he ſaid unto his ſons, Saddle me the aſs. So they ſaddled him the aſs, and he rode thereon. 14. And went after the man of God, and found him ſitting under an oak; and he ſaid unto him, Art thou the man of God that cameſt from Judah? And he ſaid, I am. 15. Then he ſaid unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread. 16. And he ſaid, I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread, nor drink water with thee in this place. 17. For it was ſaid to me by the word of the LORD, Thou ſhalt eat no bread, nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou cameſt. 18. He ſaid unto him, I am a prophet alſo as thou art, and [s] an angel ſpake unto me by the word of the LORD, ſaying, Bring him back with thee into thine houſe, that he may eat bread, and drink water. But he lied unto him. 19. [t] So he went back with him, and did eat bread in his houſe, and drank water. 20. ¶ And it came to paſs as they ſat at the table, that [u] the word of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back: 21. And [x] he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, ſaying, Thus ſaith the LORD, Foraſmuch as thou haſt diſobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and haſt not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, 22. But cameſt back, and haſt eaten bread, and drunk water in the place of which the LORD did ſay to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; [y] thy carcaſe ſhall not come unto the ſepulchre of thy fathers.

v. 11—22. Nothing could be more noble than the prophet's behaviour before the king, and one cannot but grieve to ſee him afterwards thus deluded and ſlain.

1. The inſtrument of his fall is called an old prophet, originally of Samaria, but now of Beth-el; whoſe dubious character makes it difficult to determine, whether he were a good or bad man. He is called a prophet; was favoured with revelations; did not attend the idolatrous worſhip; believed and confirmed the word of God againſt the altar at Beth-el; buries the prophet in his tomb; and deſires to lie by his ſide. On the other hand, his abode in Beth-el; his permitting his ſons to attend the altar; and eſpecially the baſe deceit here put upon ſo good a man, would rather induce one to think, that, like Baalam, tho' ſpeaking ſome truth, he was falſe and faithleſs. Having heard by his ſons what had paſſed, v. 11. he follows the prophet, and invites him to take ſome refreſhment. The prophet pleads his expreſs prohibition, but this he pretends to over-rule by a later revelation made to him, who boaſts himſelf a prophet alſo, enjoining him to bring his brother back. Deceived by this pretence, the good prophet complies, and ſuffers for it. Note, (1.) Falſe prophets are the moſt fatal enemies of God's people. (2.) They who ſeek to draw us aſide from God's revealed will, however plauſible their pretexts, are the emiſſaries of hell. (3.) We may be ſeduced to do evil by appearances of piety, when we ſhould not be driven into it by any fears of ſuffering.

2. The doom denounced on the diſobedient prophet. The inſtrument of his deluſion is made the meſſenger of his deſtruction. He upbraids him with his tranſgreſſion, in returning contrary to his orders, and foretells his ſudden and approaching death, before he returned to the place of his abode in Judah, v. 22. If we enquire into ſo ſtrange a tranſaction, we are loſt. We know only God is juſt in all his ways; the deceived and the deceiver are his; we muſt wait till a judgment-day ſhall clear up every myſterious providence, and make his righteouſneſs clear as the noon day.

23. ¶ And it came to paſs after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he ſaddled for him the aſs, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back. 24. And when he was gone, [z] a lion met him by the way, and ſlew him: and his carcaſe was caſt in the way, and the aſs ſtood by it, the lion alſo ſtood by the carcaſe. 25. And behold, men paſſed by, and ſaw the carcaſe caſt in the way, and the lion ſtanding by the carcaſe: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt. 26. And when the prophet that brought him back from the way, heard thereof, he ſaid, It is the man of God, who was diſobedient unto the word of the LORD: therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath † torn him and ſlain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he ſpake unto him. 27. And he ſpake to his ſons, ſaying, Saddle me the aſs. And they ſaddled him. 28. And he went and found his carcaſe caſt in the way, and the aſs and the lion ſtanding by the carcaſe: the lion had not eaten the carcaſe, nor torn the aſs. 29. And the prophet took up the carcaſe of the man of God, and laid it upon the aſs, and brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, [a] to mourn, and to bury him. 30. And he laid his carcaſe in his own grave, and they mourned over him, ſaying, Alas, my brother. 31. And it came to paſs, after he had buried him, that he ſpake to his ſons, ſaying, When I am dead, then [b] bury me in the ſepulchre wherein the man of God is buried, and [c] lay my bones beſide his bones. 32. For the ſaying which he cried by the word of the LORD againſt the altar in Beth-el, and [d] againſt all the houſes of the high places which are in the cities of Samaria, [e] ſhall ſurely come to paſs. 33. ¶ After this thing, Jeroboam [f] returned not from his evil way, but ‡ made again of the loweſt of the people prieſts of the high places: [g] whoſoever would, he conſecrated him, and he became one of the prieſts of the high places. 34. And this thing became ſin unto the houſe of Jeroboam, [h] even to cut it off, and deſtroy it from off the face of the earth.

v. 23—34. The meſſage, though terrible, did not drive him away till he had finiſhed his meal; and then the old prophet, for his better accommodation, lent him his beaſt to carry him: but now God's threatning overtakes him.

1. Before he had gone far from Bethel, a lion met him, and ſlew him for his ſin. It was wilful diſobedience to an evident command; and not the leaſt reaſon was there for him to believe a pretended prophet, who lived in ſo idolatrous a place without teſtifying againſt their abominations. Note, (1.) The wages of every ſin is death. (2.) They who are moſt diſtinguiſhed by ſacredneſs of character, or have been moſt favoured with divine manifeſtations, may juſtly fear, that as their unfaithfulneſs is more criminal and ungrateful, it ſhall meet with more evident marks of God's diſpleaſure.

2. Tidings are quickly brought of this calamity to the old prophet, by travellers who came that way, and obſerved the lion guarding the carcaſe, without tearing it, and the aſs feeding harmleſs by. He inſtantly concludes it was the man of God, and readily reflects on his diſobedience, without a word of lamentation over his own vile conduct, which had occaſioned both his ſin and death. So ready are we to ſee the mote in our brother's eye, and to be blind to the beam which is in our own. He orders his aſs immediately to be ſaddled, and, unmoleſted by the lion, who, though God's executioner to kill, was bound up from further injury to the corpſe, lays it on his beaſt, conveys it home, and with tears depoſiting the dead body in his own ſepulchre, enjoins his ſons to bury his corpſe by this good man's ſide, confirming the prophecy he had uttered againſt the cities of Samaria, ſo called by anticipation, or the writer ſpeaks of them by the name they then bore; and by the epitaph on his tomb, See 2 Kings xxiii. 17. perpetuates the remembrance of his prediction. Note, (1.) The greateſt ſinners are not always in this world the greateſt ſufferers. God makes his deareſt children ſmart for their good, whilſt he leaves the wicked as a fat ox in his paſture preparing for the ſlaughter. (2.) Many now claim kindred with the people of God, whoſe relation by and by will be diſowned by their Father in heaven. (3.) Many deſire in death to be joined with the faithful, who in life refuſed to follow their examples. (4.) God will never want witneſſes to his truth; he can make even a wicked Balaam, and a lying prophet, bear teſtimony for him.

3. Jeroboam perſiſted in his idolatry, unmoved by threatnings, unſhaken by judgments, uninfluenced by mercies. His altar is repaired, and his once withered hand, with hardened impiety ſtretched out again to miniſter there. He continues his unhallowed prieſthood, and, without any regard to divine inſtitutions, conſecrates any man who offered his ſervice. Thus his ſin became entailed on his family, and brought that curſe upon them, which ended in their utter extirpation. Note, (1.) When, after repeated warnings, corrections, and mercies, impenitence continues, it is to be feared the caſe is deſperate. (2.) Sooner or later vengeance will overtake the ſinner, and he ſhall periſh in his own deceivings.

CHAP. XIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. The ſickneſs and death of Jeroboam's ſon, as an earneſt of the ruin of his houſe, according to the prophecy of Abijah, ver. 1—18. 2. Jeroboam's death, ver. 19—20. 3. The declenſion of Rehoboam's houſe and kingdom, ver. 21—28. 4. The concluſion of his reign, ver. 29—31.

1. AT that time [a] Abijah the ſon of Jeroboam fell ſick. 2. And Jeroboam ſaid to his wife, Ariſe, I pray thee, and [b] diſguiſe thyſelf, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam: and get thee to Shiloh; behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, [c] which told me that I ſhould be king over this people. 3. And [d] take with thee ten loaves and † cracknels, and a cruiſe of honey, and go to him: he ſhall tell thee what ſhall become of the child. 4. And Jeroboam's wife did ſo, and aroſe, and went to Shiloh, and came to the houſe of Ahijah: but Ahijah could not ſee, for his eyes were ſet by reaſon of his age. 5. ¶ And the LORD ſaid unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to aſk a thing of thee for her ſon, for he is ſick; thus and thus ſhalt thou ſay unto her, for it ſhall be when ſhe cometh in, that ſhe ſhall feign herſelf to be another woman. 6. And it was ſo, when Ahijah heard the ſound of her feet, as ſhe came in at the door, that he ſaid, Come in, [e] thou wife of Jeroboam, why feigneſt thou thyſelf to be another? for I am ſent to thee with [f] heavy tidings.

v. 1—6. God now begins to puniſh the ſin of Jeroboam in the afflictions of his family.

1. His ſon Abijah falls ſick, and, ſollicitous to know the iſſue, he ſends his wife to the prophet in Shiloh, who had predicted his riſing to the throne, to enquire: but fearing leſt his wickedneſs might provoke a rebuke, inſtead of an anſwer of peace, he made her diſguiſe herſelf, that ſhe might not be known, and take a preſent of country proviſions, as if ſhe came from thence; hoping thereby undiſcovered to obtain an anſwer, as the prophet's eyes were now fixed, and dark through age. Note, (1.) Viſitations on our family ſhould awaken enquiry into the cauſe, whether it be not for ſome ſin entertained there. (2.) Sickneſs and death are alike the lot of young and old: let us expect and prepare for it in every age, and not thoughtleſsly put far off the evil day. (3.) It is the heighth of folly for thoſe who do ill to expect from God's miniſters an anſwer of peace.

2. The cheat was diſcovered before the deceiver arrived. God informed Ahijah of his viſitant, and, to her aſtoniſhment, he accoſts her by name before ſhe entered the room, and anſwers her enquiry, before ſhe had propoſed the queſtion, ſending her back with ſad tidings to her idolatrous huſband. Note, (1.) The miniſters of God muſt not be courtiers, but deliver their meſſage to the great, however diſagreeable, with boldneſs and freedom. (2.) Diſguiſes may paſs upon men, whoſe dim ſight cannot ſee through the vail; but no covering can hide the hypocrite from the eye of God. (3.) They who hope to recommend themſelves to God by their formal duties and ſervices, like Jeroboam's wife with her preſent, will find a terrible diſappointment, when, among hypocrites, their portion ſhall be allotted in the outer darkneſs.

7. Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, [g] Foraſmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee a prince over my people Iſrael, 8. And [h] rent the kingdom away from the houſe of David, and gave it thee; and yet thou haſt not been as my ſervant David, who kept my commandments, and [i] who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes; 9. But haſt done evil above all that were before thee; for thou haſt gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and [k] haſt caſt me behind thy back. 10. Therefore, behold, [l] I will bring evil upon the houſe of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam him that piſſeth againſt the wall, and him that is ſhut up and left in Iſrael, and [m] will take away the remnant of the houſe of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone.

11. Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city, [n] ſhall the dogs eat: and him that dieth in the field, ſhall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath ſpoken it. 12. Ariſe thou therefore, get thee to thine own houſe: and when thy feet enter into the city, the child ſhall die. 13. And all Iſrael ſhall mourn for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam ſhall come to the grave, becauſe [o] in him there is found ſome good thing toward the LORD God of Iſrael in the houſe of Jeroboam. 14. Moreover the LORD ſhall raiſe him up a king over Iſrael, who ſhall cut off the houſe of Jeroboam that day: but what? [p] even now. 15. For [q] the LORD ſhall ſmite Iſrael, as a reed is ſhaken in the water, and [r] he ſhall root up Iſrael out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and [s] ſhall ſcatter them beyond the river, becauſe [t] they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger. 16. And [u] he ſhall give Iſrael up, becauſe of the ſins of Jeroboam, [x] who did ſin, and [y] who made Iſrael to ſin. 17. ¶ And Jeroboam's wife aroſe, and departed, and came to [z] Tirzah: and when ſhe came to the threſhold of the door, the child died. 18. And they buried him, and all Iſrael mourned for him, according to the word of the LORD, which he ſpake by the hand of his ſervant Ahijah the prophet. 19. And the reſt of the acts of Jeroboam, [a] how he warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael. 20. And the days which Jeroboam reigned, were two and twenty years: and he ſlept with his fathers, and Nadab his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

v. 7—20. Jeroboam's wife is bid carry to her huſband tidings of bitter woe. The God of Iſrael, whom he had ſo diſhonoured, and whoſe people he had ſo injured, will avenge their quarrel upon him.

1. He upbraids him with his baſe ingratitude, and impious apoſtacy. God, who had ſo highly diſtinguiſhed him, might juſtly expect a return of fidelity; but lo! he had exceeded all that went before him in wickedneſs. David had ſins, great ones; but he never turned to idols. Solomon for a time was unfaithful, but repented: even Saul added not this to his iniquities. But Jeroboam had opened the flood-gates of idolatry, and not only ſinned himſelf, but involved the people in this mortal ſin. Note, (1.) The greater the mercies we have received, the greater the guilt of unfaithfulneſs to God. (2.) They who cauſe others to ſin, heap up the meaſure of vengeance againſt themſelves.

2. He denounces the approaching ruin on Jeroboam's houſe, chap, xv. 29. His family ſhould be utterly extirpated, v. 14. and their dead bodies lie unburied, as dung on the earth. Nor was the day diſtant, when God would raiſe up another king to the throne, who ſhould execute his vengeance: even now the judgment was at their door. Note, (1.) Sudden deſtruction often overtakes ſinners in the midſt of their career. (2.) Their carcaſes in the day of God ſhall be thus caſt out, as an abhorring to all fleſh, Iſa. lxvi. 24.

3. The death of the heir of his throne, who was ſick, as ſoon as ſhe reached the city, ſhould be the prelude and earneſt of the judgments which approached. In one thing he ſhall be diſtinguiſhed from his ungodly family; he ſhall go to his grave with honour; and this, becauſe in him alone ſome good thing was found towards the Lord God of Iſrael. When all the reſt apoſtatized, he ſhewed the gracious ſymptoms of a heart inclined to God, and which cleaved to his worſhip. Note, (1.) Every gracious deſire God implants, he will take notice of. (2.) Youthful piety is peculiarly amiable. (3.) A little grace in bad times, and in kings courts, ſhines bright. The light is heightened by the dark ſhades around it. (4.) God in mercy removes the righteous from the evil to come. (5.) The darling child is often ſnatched away for a warning to the family. (6.) The ſoul that is early ripe for glory, God gathers, like a ſweet flower, into his boſom.

4. Though the king ſhall bear the heavieſt burden, his apoſtate ſubjects, who followed his wicked ways, ſhall not be unpuniſhed. The prophet foretels their tumultuous, unſettled ſtate, torn with faction, and changing frequently their kings; till, weakened by inteſtine diviſion, they would become an eaſier prey to foreign enemies, and be carried away captive beyond the river Euphrates, or Gozen, as was the caſe, 2 Kings xvii. 6. Note, (1.) Though we may have never ſo great examples to plead for our ſin, it will not ſcreen us from puniſhment. (2.) Ruin is not far from a kingdom, when righteouſneſs is expelled, and iniquity triumphant.

5. The prophecy begins to receive an immediate accompliſhment in the death of Abijah, who, according to the word of the prophet, died as ſoon as Jeroboam's wife entered the palace at Tirzah. His amiable diſpoſitions, as well as his dignity, made him much lamented, and occaſioned, no doubt, dire forebodings of the approaching evil. Note, Death pays no more reſpect to palaces, than to the clay-built hut.

6. Jeroboam himſelf, after a reign of twenty-two years, finiſhed a wicked life by a miſerable death, See 2 Chron. xiii. 20. ſtruck with ſome dire diſeaſe, which brought him to his grave, and leaving his tottering crown to his unhappy ſon Nadab, who following his father's wicked ways, ſoon filled up the meaſure of the iniquity of his family. Reference is here made to a book of annals, for farther particulars of Jeroboam's reign; but theſe not being inſpired writings, like thoſe of many other nations, are loſt.

21. ¶ And Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon reigned in Judah: Rehoboam was forty and one years old, when he began to reign, and he reigned ſeventeen years in Jeruſalem, the city which the LORD did chooſe out of all the tribes of Iſrael, to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah, an Ammoniteſs. 22. And [b] Judah did evil in the ſight of the LORD, and [c] they provoked him to jealouſy with their ſins which they had committed, above all that their fathers had done. 23. For [d] they alſo built them high places, and images, and groves on every high hill, and under every green tree. 24. And [e] there were alſo ſodomites in the land, and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD caſt out before the children of Iſrael. 25. ¶ And it came to paſs [f] in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that Shiſhak king of Egypt came up againſt Jeruſalem: 26. And he took away the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD, and [g] the treaſures of the king's houſe, he even took away all; and he took away [h] all the ſhields of gold which Solomon had made. 27. And king Rehoboam made in their ſtead braſen ſhields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of the guard, which kept the door of the king's houſe. 28. And it was ſo, when the king went into the houſe of the LORD, that the † guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard-chamber. 29. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 30. And [i] there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days. 31. And Rehoboam ſlept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David, and his mother's name was Naamah an Ammoniteſs. And [k] Abijam his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

v. 21—31. The hiſtories of the kingdom of Judah and Iſrael are throughout this book intermixed. Jeroboam's reign was near five years longer than Rehoboam's; but, to finiſh his hiſtory, his death is firſt recorded.

1. The account of Rehoboam contains nothing either great or good, but gives juſt ſuſpicion, that his government was as weak and wicked, as the opening of it was raſh and impolitic. He began his reign when, if ever, he might have been wiſe, at the age of forty-one, having enjoyed all the advantages of the beſt inſtruction; but he imitated his father's aged folly, rather than his early wiſdom. He reigned not half ſo long as his predeceſſors, but ſeventeen years, and theſe alſo diſturbed by perpetual wars or bickerings with his rival Jeroboam. His mother was an Ammoniteſs, a bad wife for a king of Iſrael; and her ſon partook more of the temper of Ammon, than the ſpirit of Abraham. Note, Ungodly connections entail miſeries often on the lateſt poſterity. He died at Jeruſalem, where he reigned, and left the crown to Abijam, a bad ſon of a bad father.

2. The account of his ſubjects is bad, very bad. Led by his ill example, or not reſtrained by his negligence, far from being ſhocked at their neighbour's idolatry, they quickly imitated them, and committed abominations even beyond their father's worſt days; provoking God to jealouſy by their images and hill altars, and forſaking the houſe of his glory; giving up their bodies to abominable and unnatural luſts, as well as their ſouls to ſpiritual adultery, v. 24. imitating all the profane rites, and following all the deteſtable lewdneſs of the accurſed Canaanites, whom God had caſt out before them. Note, (1.) They grow moſt abandoned, who fall from the profeſſion of religion they once made. (2.) When men provoke God by their ſins, he in juſt judgment gives them up to their own hearts luſts. (3.) If Canaan for ſuch things ſuffered, ſhall Iſrael eſcape? no, in no wiſe.

3. God begins his viſitations for their ſins, by giving them up to Shiſhak king of Egypt, who, in the fifth year of Rehoboam, after plundering the country, beſieged Jeruſalem, and was only to be bought off by the ſurrender of all the treaſures which David and Solomon had amaſſed; ſuch paſſing vanities are this world's riches! Among the reſt, he carried away the golden

Before Chriſt 955. golden ſhields Solomon had made, v. 26. and in their ſtead Rehoboam ſubſtituted others of braſs, to be carried before him when he went to the houſe of the Lord. Probably he had neglected this too often, when he might have gone there in greater ſtate, and now is forced in his affliction to go thither as he can. It is a mercy, whatever we loſe, when our loſſes drive us nearer to God.

and they buried him in the city of David : and Aſa his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

v. 1—8. Abijam's reign was evil and ſhort. Little is related of him here, except his following his father's bad example. We ſhall hear more of his wars and greatneſs, 2 Chron. xiii. He reigned ſcarce three years. His mother's name was Maachah, probably the daughter of Abſalom, or grand-daughter. The wars which had continued during his father's reign, he ſtill maintained with ſucceſs againſt Jeroboam, See 2 Chron. xiii. 20. but his heart was not right with God as David's, whoſe character the ſacred hiſtorian here highly honours, whilſt with juſt condemnation he brands his unhappy fall in the matter of Uriah. For his ſake, notwithſtanding the ſins of Rehoboam and Abijam, God preſerved the throne for his poſterity, and raiſed up Aſa to ſucceed his father, and copy after his pious and noble anceſtors. Note, (1.) Parents ill examples are ſadly pernicious to their children. (2.) It is a double reproach on thoſe who degenerate from the piety of their anceſtors. (3.) Sin ſhortens men's days, and haſtens them to an untimely end.

9. ¶ And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Iſrael, reigned Aſa over Judah. 10. And forty and one years reigned he in Jeruſalem : and his mother's

v. 9—24. Aſa ſucceeded to the throne of Iſrael in the twentieth year of Jeroboam, and reigned long and ſucceſsfully over Judah.

1. His piety is recorded to his honour. He copied after the illuſtrious David in all that was excellent ; was conſtantly and zealouſly attached to the worſhip of God all his days. His heart was right with God, and therefore he laboured to ſuppreſs all wickedneſs, and to reform his deluded ſubjects. The ſodomites were removed : either they were put to death, or they fled out of the land for fear. Such abominations a good prince will never ſuffer among his ſubjects. The idols which his father made, he deſtroyed ; and becauſe his grandmother Maachah was the great patroneſs of idolatry, he ſpared not to put her and her idol to public ſhame. He burnt it, and caſt the duſt into the brook Kidron, and degraded her from her dignity, removed her from court, leſt her bad example ſhould corrupt it, and that by ſuch an inſtance none might hope to be connived at. He enriched alſo God's houſe with the treaſures he had dedicated from the ſpoil of the Ethiopians, See 2 Chron. xiv. 13, 14. as well as thoſe which his father had dedicated out of the ſpoils of Jeroboam, 2 Chron. xiii. 21. Note, (1.) A good king, who would promote religion among his ſubjects, muſt begin with diſcountenancing all wickedneſs at court. (2.) Their hearts are ſaid in ſcripture to be perfect with God, not who are without faults, for Aſa was not blameleſs, but who were free from idolatry, and, in the main, upright in their walk.

2. His faults are faithfully tranſmitted. The moſt perfect man on earth cannot plead ſinleſs perfection. The high places, ſuch of them at leaſt as had been reſorted to before the temple was built, were left : either he thought them lawful, or he feared it might be dangerous to attempt rooting out what long cuſtom had conſecrated. His war with Baaſha put him on a ſinful project, to cauſe a diverſion in his favour, and recover Ramah, which Baaſha had fortified in the ſixteenth year of Aſa, and the 36th ſince the diviſion of the kingdoms, to prevent the communication of his ſubjects with Jeruſalem, who choſe ſtill to go there to worſhip. He robbed the treaſury of God's houſe of the dedicated things, and ſent them to Ben-hadad, in order to engage him to a wicked violation of his league with Baaſha. The contrivance was ſucceſsful ; Ben-hadad conſented ; and whilſt, to oppoſe his invaſion, the king of Iſrael drew off his forces, Aſa by proclamation ſummoned all his ſubjects, who went up, and brought away all the ſtones and timber of Ramah, and utterly demoliſhed the place. But God rebuked him for his ſin, 2 Chron. xvi. 7, 8, 9. and he ſuffered for it by the continual wars in which he was involved. Note, Though a ſinful project ſucceed, the ſucceſs will be imbittered.

3. He ſtrengthened his kingdom by new cities which he built ; two with materials brought from Ramah, and others beſides, v. 23. Probably to him the more pious Iſraelites returned, and choſe their abode under his rule, rather than to dwell in the tents of ungodlineſs. But his greatneſs or goodneſs prevented not the infirmities of old age coming upon him, v. 23, till death, after a glorious reign of forty-one years, removed him to a better kingdom, whilſt his pious ſon Jehoſhaphat, who ſucceeded him, made his loſs in Judah leſs ſenſibly felt.

Iſrael? 32. And there was war between Aſa and Baaſha king of Iſrael all their days. 33. In the third year of Aſa king of Judah began Baaſha the ſon of Ahijah to reign over all Iſrael in Tirzah, twenty and four years.

v. 25—33. We are here called to turn our eyes from the flouriſhing ſtate of Judah to the diſtractions of Iſrael. Nadab, the heir of his father's crimes, as well as his crown, walked in the eſtabliſhed idolatry; and God's patience with the houſe of Jeroboam being ended, he raiſed up Baaſha, to conſpire againſt him. He was probably an officer in his army, and whilſt Nadab beſieged Gibbethon, which the Philiſtines had ſeized, he ſlew him in the camp, and was proclaimed by the army king in his ſtead. His firſt care was to extirpate the family of Jeroboam, with an intention only to ſecure the kingdom to himſelf, though made herein God's inſtrument to execute the threatned judgment on that ungodly houſe. But though he removed his rivals, he took no care to depart from their ſins, and ſo inherited the ſame curſe he had executed upon them. Note, (1.) God's patience has its bounds: he will ſay to the ſinner, My ſpirit ſhall no longer ſtrive. (2.) The path of ſin leads down to death and hell.

book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? [n] 2 Kings xvii. 15. Iſa. xli. 29. 1 Cor. x. 19, 20.

v. 1—14. Let not Baaſha expect peace in his ſin, nor hope to ſecure that kingdom to his poſterity, of which his idolatry rendered him ſo unworthy.

1. God ſends a prophet to reprove and threaten him. Greatly had God exalted him; for though his ambition plotted the conſpiracy, it was God's over-ruling providence that gave it ſucceſs. He had been raiſed to reign over God's people, who were not yet utterly abandoned by him; but inſtead of being warned by the judgments on his predeceſſors, he had made their images his own by his adherence to them; had, like them, led the people into idolatry, and ſtood chargeable with the blood of the houſe of Jeroboam, whoſe deſtruction, though juſt, reſpecting God, exculpated him not from the treaſon and murder. Therefore, the judgments of which he had been the executioner, ſhould for the like ſins return on his own houſe. Note, (1.) God warns before he ſtrikes. (2.) They who harden their hearts, their blood is on their own heads.

2. The ſentence pronounced is executed; not during Baaſha's reign: like Jeroboam, though in continual wars, and unſucceſsful too, yet he came to his grave by a natural death: but the iniquity is laid up for his children. His ſon Elah is ſcarce well ſettled on his throne, before one of his own officers, as Baaſhah had done, formed a conſpiracy; and whilſt the king was drunk, carouſing at the houſe of Arza his ſteward, Zimri ſlew him; and, to pave the way to the throne, cut off not only all his family, but his friends, who might attempt to avenge his murder. Thus was the prophecy of Jehu fulfilled. Note, (1.) A drunkard lays himſelf open to the ſtroke of death by a thouſand accidents; and how terrible thus to be hurried drunk to the tribunal of God! (2.) God's word never falls to the ground; his threatnings are no bugbears.

15. ¶ In the twenty and ſeventh year of Aſa king 929.
of Judah, did Zimri reign [o] ſeven days in Tirzah: and [o] Job xx. 5.
[p] the people were encamped againſt Gibbethon, which be- [p] Chap. xv. 27.
longed to the Philiſtines. 16. And the people that were encamped heard ſay, Zimri hath conſpired, and hath alſo ſlain the king: wherefore all Iſrael made Omri the cap- 927.
tain of the hoſt, king over Iſrael that day in the camp.
17. And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Iſ-rael with him, and they beſieged Tirzah. 18. And it it came to paſs when Zimri ſaw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's houſe, and [q] burnt the king's houſe over him with fire, and died; [q] 1 Sam. xxxi. 4.

ſight of the LORD, [r] in walking in the way of Jero- [r] Chap. xiv. 16.
boam, and in his ſin which he did, to make Iſrael ſin.
20. Now the reſt of the acts of Zimri, and his treaſon that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? 21. ¶ [s] Then were [s] Judg. v. 8. Prov. xxviii. 2.
the people of Iſrael divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the ſon of Ginath, to make him king; and half followed Omri. 22. But the people that followed Omri, prevailed againſt the people that followed Tibni the ſon of Ginath; ſo Tibni died, and Omri reigned. 23. ¶ In the thirty and one year of 925.
Aſa king of Judah, began Omri to reign over Iſrael twelve years: ſix years reigned he in Tirzah. 24. And he bought the hill Samaria, of Shemer, for two talents of ſilver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, Samaria. 25. ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and [t] did worſe than all that [t] Mic. vi. 16. were before him. 26. For he walked in all the ways of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, and [u] in his ſin wherewith [u] Chap. xv. 26.
he made Iſrael to ſin, to provoke the LORD God of Iſrael to anger with their vanities. 27. Now the reſt of the acts of Omri, which he did, and his might that he ſhewed, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? 28. So Omri ſlept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria, and Ahab his ſon 918.
reigned in his ſtead.

v. 15—28. The conſpirators executed their plot, whilſt the army was abſent beſieging Gibbethon, the ſiege of which had been raiſed on the death of Nadab, and immediately proclaimed Zimri at Tirzah. But ſhort was the continuance of his ill-gotten dignity. The army, incenſed againſt the traitor, ſet up in oppoſition Omri as king, and raiſing the ſiege of Gibbethon, marched inſtantly back to Tirzah, where we find,

1. The fall of Zimri. Though ſeven days terminated his reign, yet in them he ſhewed his diſpoſition to Jeroboam's ſins. Unable to defend himſelf againſt the forces under Omri, he rather choſe to periſh in the flames of his palace, than fall with it into the hands of his envied rival. Note, (1.) The end of ambitious projectors is frequently to periſh in the flames they have kindled. (2.) Envy and revenge, even in death, forſake not the wicked.

2. The civil war which enſued between Omri and Tibni. The people were divided between theſe competitors for the crown, and four years the ſtruggle laſted, when Tibni ſeems to have fallen in battle, and Omri reigned without a rival, in the thirty-firſt year of Aſa, though his firſt election was in the twenty-ſeventh, from whence the years of his reign are to be dated. Note, Of all viſitations on a nation, none are more terrible than civil wars.

3. Omri, far from taking warning by his predeceſſor's ſufferings, did worſe than all that went before him; and, not ſatisfied with encouraging idolatry, compelled the people to it by penal ſtatutes, Mic. vi. 16.

4. He removed the royal reſidence from Tirzah to Samaria, having bought the hill of Shemer, the owner, for two talents of ſilver, about ſeven hundred and fifty pounds, and erected a ſpacious city, which ever afterwards continued the metropolis of Iſrael. There, after a reign of twelve years, he died, and was buried, and left his crown to a ſon more abandoned to wickedneſs than his father. Thus, when a people forſake God, they go from worſe to worſe, till deſtruction comes upon them to the uttermoſt.

29. ¶ And in the thirty and eighth year of Aſa king of Judah, began Ahab the ſon of Omri to reign over Iſrael; and Ahab the ſon of Omri reigned over Iſrael in Samaria, twenty and two years. 30. And Ahab the ſon of Omri did evil in the ſight of the LORD, [x] above all that were before him. 31. And it came to paſs, as if it had been a light thing for him to walk in the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat; that he took to wife [y] Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, and went and ſerved Baal, and worſhipped him. 32. And he reared up an altar for Baal, in the houſe of Baal, which he had built in Samaria. 33. And Ahab made [z] a grove; and [a] Ahab did more to provoke the LORD God of Iſrael to anger, than all the kings of Iſrael that were before him. 34. ¶ In his days did Hiel the Beth-elite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his firſt-born, and ſet up the gates thereof in his youngeſt ſon Segub, [b] according to the word of the LORD, which he ſpake by Joſhua the ſon of Nun.

v. 29—34. Ahab, that monſter of iniquity, ſucceeds his father Omri in the 38th year of Aſa. We have,

1. A general account of his wicked reign, the particulars of which follow. He out-did all the worſt of his predeceſſors; even Jeroboam's ſins were light to his. He began with marrying a Zidonian wife, if poſſible, worſe than himſelf; idolatrous, proud, imperious, lewd, malicious, the adviſer and encourager of every abomination. Her gods pleaſed him better than his own; and he went probably at firſt to Tyre to worſhip; and then, that he might have his idol nearer home, he reared a magnificent temple in Samaria, ſet up an altar before the image of Baal, and planted a grove around it, to perform the ſhocking rites the day bluſhed to behold. Note, (1.) Of all earthly plagues that can light upon miſerable man, there is not a greater, than to be joined to a wicked and abandoned woman. (2.) The idolater grudges no expence to ſerve his abominations; and ſhall we be niggards at the altar of God? (3.) Deeds of lewdneſs hate the light; but what thick grove can exclude the piercing eye of God?

2. Hiel's preſumption and puniſhment is recorded. Jericho, under the curſe of Joſhua, had lain waſte more than five hundred years; but his impiety defied the anathema, and probably on purpoſe, encouraged by the king and queen, he reſolves to rebuild it: but God will make him know whoſe word ſhall ſtand. The foundation, according to the prediction, Joſh. vi. 26. was laid with the death of his eldeſt ſon; and when the gates were ſet up, the laſt and youngeſt of his family expired. Note, They who deſpiſe God's curſe, ſhall feel its weight.

CHAP. XVII.

Elijah in theſe evil days now firſt appears, than whom, next to Moſes, a greater prophet aroſe not under the Old Teſtament. 1. He predicts a famine in Iſrael, for want of rain, ver. 1. 2. God provides for him in the famine, (1.) By the ravens at the brook Cherith, ver. 2—7. (2.) By a widow at Zarephath. 3. He multiplies her meal and her oil, ver. 8—16. 4. He raiſes her dead ſon to life, ver. 17—24.

1. AND † Elijah the Tiſhbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead, ſaid unto Ahab, [a] As the LORD God of Iſrael liveth, before whom I ſtand, [b] there ſhall not be dew nor rain [c] theſe years, [d] but according to my word. 2. And the word of the LORD came unto him, ſaying, 3. Get thee hence, and turn thee eaſtward, and [e] hide thyſelf by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan. 4. And it ſhall be, that thou ſhalt drink of the brook, and [f] I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there, 5. So he went, and [g] did according unto the word of the LORD: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan. 6. And [h] the ravens brought him bread and fleſh in the morning, and bread and fleſh in the evening; and he drank of the brook. 7. And it came to paſs after a while, that [i] the brook dried up, becauſe there had been no rain in the land.

v. 1—7. Elijah, the Tiſhbite, ſo called probably from the place of his nativity in Gilead, is raiſed up to warn the idolatrous king, and in theſe days of apoſtacy, with fervent zeal to teſtify againſt the wickedneſs of Iſrael. Note, God will have his witneſſes in the worſt times, and will endue them with proportionable gifts and graces for the difficulties they are called to ſtruggle with. We have,

1. Elijah's ſolemn denunciation on Ahab, v. 1. Probably he had before in vain warned him of his wickedneſs, and finding him incorrigible, declares the famine, which in zeal for God, he had prayed might come as a juſt judgment upon Iſrael, See Jam. v. 17. and, to affect the king with a ſenſe of the hand from whence it came, informs him, that the Lord Jehovah, the God of Iſrael, whom he had diſhonoured, the living God, whom he had rejected for dumb idols, had commiſſioned him for this meſſage; and that neither dew nor rain ſhould fall, but according to his word.

2. As he might well expect his boldneſs would offend ſuch impudent ſinners as Ahab and Jezebel, God bids him hide himſelf by the brook Cherith, and Elijah without heſitation obeys. There, during the approaching famine, God promiſes to take care for his proviſion, and by a wonderful means ſupplies him; for whilſt the brook afforded him water to drink, ravens brought him morning and evening bread and fleſh to eat. They were creatures voracious and unclean; but their touch defiled not when ſent on God's errand, and their mouth was ſealed up, when employed to feed his holy prophet. There, unknown, unnoticed, he abode, till the water of the brook failing, God opened a new ſupply. Note, (1.) They who dare be bold for God, may truſt him ſafely for protection. (2.) It is a bad ſign for a people, when God's prophets are driven into corners. (3.) Obſcurity becomes duty, when God calls us to it. (4.) God will take care, however precarious their apparent ſubſiſtence, his faithful miniſters ſhall not want; though often, like Elijah, he is pleaſed to feed them but from hand to mouth, to exerciſe their faith and patience. (5.) When God will work, he will never want means. (6.) They who give good advice, and live in bad practices, like theſe ravens, bring others wholeſome food, and feed on carrion themſelves. (7.) Every ſource of earthly comfort may in time run dry; but they who live upon an all-ſufficient God, will find living waters of conſolations that never fail.

8. ¶ And [k] the word of the LORD came unto him, ſaying, 9. Ariſe, [l] get thee to Zarephath, which belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to ſuſtain thee. 10. So he aroſe, and went to Zarephath: and when he came to the gate of the city, behold, [m] the widow woman was there gathering of ſticks: and he called to her, and ſaid, Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a veſſel, that I may drink. 11. And as [n] ſhe was going to fetch it, he called to her, and ſaid, Bring me, I pray thee, a morſel of bread in thine hand. 12. v. 8—16. The brook being dry, Elijah is commanded to remove. We ſee he waited to the laſt drop without ſollicitude, and even then removes not without an order. He that believeth will not make haſte, but wait the Lord's leiſure.

1. Zerephath, a city of Sidon, is the place fixed for his abode. where God had provided a reception for him in the houſe of a widow, a gentile, and poor withal, and in the very country where Jezebel might ſeize him. But they who have God's warrant to go, have no queſtions to aſk.

2. Though he knew not the perſon who ſhould be his hoſteſs, he went, not doubting to find her; and lo! at the gate providence brings them together. A woman met him, one very unlikely to ſupply his wants, who appeared ready to famiſh herſelf. To her he addreſſed himſelf for a little water; and when ſhe turned to fetch it, he deſired a morſel of bread along with it. This led her to inform him of her diſtreſſed circumſtances; a handful of meal, and a little oil in a cruiſe, were all ſhe poſſeſſed; and ſhe was now come to gather a few ſticks, to dreſs it for herſelf and her ſon, as the laſt morſel they ever expected to eat. Elijah bids her do ſo, but firſt make him a cake, nor fear to want, ſince from God he aſſured her, the meal ſhould not fail, nor the oil be exhauſted, till the days of famine were over. Behold a prodigy of faith! without heſitation, though ſo difficult the command, againſt which reaſon, ſelf-love, and natural affection might raiſe ſtrong objections, ſhe ſtaggered not at the prophet's aſſurance, but did as ſhe was deſired, and truſted on the word of promiſe. Note, (1.) In our deepeſt diſtreſſes, God is nearer to relieve us than we are aware. (2.) God hath ever choſen the poor in this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. (3.) Faith ſilences all objections; a word of promiſe is inſtead of a thouſand arguments. (4.) They who can truſt God with their all, will find themſelves no loſers by him.

3. The firſt eſſay confirmed the prophet's declaration, and the daily miracle continued for two years and upwards, during which Elijah, herſelf, and ſon, even in theſe days of dearth, had enough. It was plain fare, but no doubt they were abundantly thankful for it, and coming thus from the Lord's hand, was doubly ſweet. Note, (1.) The prophets and miniſters of God muſt learn of Elijah to be content with hard fare. (2.) There is that ſcattereth, and yet increaſeth. Works of piety and charity bring us again our own with uſury. (3.) If our hearts be open to receive the great prophet, the greater than Elijah, we ſhall then never want any manner of thing that is good.

17. ¶ And it came to paſs after theſe things, that the ſon of the woman, the miſtreſs of the houſe, fell ſick, and [r] his ſickneſs was ſo ſore, that there was no breath left in him. 18. And ſhe ſaid unto Elijah, [s] What have I to do with thee, O [t] thou man of God? art thou come unto me to [u] call my ſin to remembrance, and to ſlay my ſon? 19. And he ſaid unto her, Give me thy ſon. And he took him out of her boſom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed. 20. And [x] he cried unto the LORD, and ſaid, O LORD [y] my God, haſt thou alſo brought [z] evil upon the widow, with whom I ſojourn, [a] by ſlaying her ſon? 21. And [b] he ſtretched himſelf upon the child [c] three times, and cried unto the LORD, and ſaid, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's ſoul come into him again. 22. And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah, and the ſoul of the child came into him again, and [d] he revived. 23. And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the houſe, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah ſaid, See, thy ſon liveth. 24. ¶ And the woman ſaid to Elijah, Now [e] by this I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

1. She had but one ſon, and he dies. Though fed by a miracle, he was not beyond the arm of death.

2. Diſtreſs and anguiſh weigh down the afflicted widow; and though ſhe cannot but own her ſin provoked the viſitation, ſhe perverſely reflects upon Elijah, as if his prayers, which had brought the famine on the land, had for her ſin brought death into her family. Note, (1.) The more unexpected the ſtroke falls, the more difficult it is at firſt to be compoſed. (2.) In our troubles we are apt to quarrel with our beſt friends. (3.) We ſpeak that in haſte, which, in our cooler hours, we cannot but condemn. (4.) When God viſits our families, we ſhould humbly confeſs and acknowledge our ſins, which are the cauſe of our troubles.

3. Elijah exceedingly intereſts himſelf in her affliction, and taking the dead child from her boſom, retires to ſpread the ſad caſe before a compaſſionate God. He cries with importunity, pleads his intereſt with God, humbly reaſons with him on the poor widow's afflictions, whoſe kindneſs had been ſo great to him, and whoſe circumſtances were ſo pitiable; and ſtretching himſelf on the child, as if longing to re-kindle the vital heat in the lifeleſs clay, he fervently intreats that God who can awake the dead, to reſtore again the ſoul, which ſuppoſes its ſeparate exiſtence, to the deſerted corpſe. Note, (1.) If we have chriſtian hearts, we ſhall not behold the ſorrows of the afflicted without tender ſympathy, and deſire to relieve their diſtreſſes. (2.) Is Elijah ſo earneſt to reſtore a dead body, and ought not Chriſt's miniſters to be as importunate with him to quicken poor ſouls dead in treſpaſſes and ſins? (3.) It is not all our prayers and labours, but God's power alone, that can effect this ſpiritual reſurrection.

4. God hears, and graciouſly anſwers him. The child, tho' dead, revived, and with joy he brought him down to the tranſported mother. Her faith had before wavered: after all ſhe had ſeen and known, ſhe almoſt doubted whether he were a man of God; ſo apt are ſore temptations to bring us under the power of unbelief. But now ſhe is aſſured of it to demonſtration, and without doubt profeſſes her full confidence in all he had told her, whether concerning the God of Iſrael, or the prophecies yet to be fulfilled. Note, As the oak grows more rooted by tempeſtuous winds, ſo faith grows ſtronger after the blaſts of temptation.

Elijah is commanded to emerge from his obſcurity, ver. 1. And hereupon, 1. By Obadiah he acquaints Ahab of his coming, ver. 2—16. 2. He meets Ahab, and reproves him, ver. 17—20. 3. Summons a general aſſembly of Iſrael, where the famous trial between God and Baal is decided, ver. 21—39. 4. The prophets of Baal ſlain, ver. 40. 5. The return of rain at Elijah's word, ver. 41—46.

1. AND it came to paſs [a] after many days, that the word of the LORD came to Elijah in the third year, ſaying, Go ſhew thyſelf unto Ahab; and [b] I will ſend rain upon the earth. 2. And Elijah went to ſhew himſel unto Ahab, : and there was a ſore famine in [c] Samaria. 3. And Ahab called Obadiah, which was [d] the governor of his houſe: (now Obadiah [e] feared the LORD greatly: 4. For it was ſo, when Jezebel [f] cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.) 5. And Ahab ſaid unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find graſs to ſave the horſes and mules alive, that we loſe not all the beaſts. 6. So they divided the land between them to paſs throughout it: Ahab went one way by himſelf, and Obadiah went another way by himſelf. 7 ¶ And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him, : and [g] he knew him, and [h] fell on his face, and ſaid, Art thou that [i] my lord Elijah? 8. And he anſwered him, I am: go tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here. 9. And he ſaid, [k] What have I ſinned, that thou wouldeſt deliver thy ſervant into the hand of Ahab to ſlay me? 10. As the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not ſent [l] to ſeek thee: and when they ſaid, He is not there; he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not. 11. And now thou ſayeſt, Go tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here. 12. And it ſhall come to paſs, as ſoon as I am gone from thee, that [m] the Spirit of the LORD ſhall carry thee whither I know not; and [n] Ver. 3, &c.

v. 1—16. When Iſrael ſeemed on the verge of ruin, God graciouſly interpoſes, and ſends his prophet back to ſave them. We have,

1. The diſtreſs to which they were reduced. Famine now ſtalked through the land, the parched ground yielded no food, and the lowing herds ſunk down at the dry brook for want of water. To ſave, if poſſible, the few beaſts that were left, Ahab with Obadiah goes on a progreſs through the land, if peradventure ſome graſs might be found. But whilſt the country groaned under drought, a worſe famine afflicted it than of bread or water, even of the word of the Lord. The cruel Jezebel, mad on her idols, and more enraged inſtead of humbled under this judgment, ſince Elijah is not found, wreaks her vengeance on his brethren, ſlaying all the prophets that yet were trained up in the antient ſchools, and cleaved to the true religion. Nor had any eſcaped, but for the piety of Obadiah, a great good man, even from his youth, in the worſt of days, and amidſt the abominations of ſuch a court. To ſcreen them from her fury, he hid one hundred in two caves, and fed them with bread and water; dangerous as the attempt might have proved to himſelf, if diſcovered, and expenſive in ſuch a ſeaſon as even this proviſion muſt have been. Note, (1.) A fruitful land God maketh barren, for the iniquity of thoſe who dwell therein. (2.) Judgments enrage inſtead of humbling the heart of the impenitent. (3.) The greateſt miſery a land can groan under, is the expulſion of God's prophets. (4.) The few faithful have ever been, and ever will be, more or leſs, a perſecuted people. (5.) Few great men are good men; and in a corrupted court piety is leaſt to be expected: yet God hath his choſen veſſels in the worſt times, and moſt dangerous places. Nero's houſe and Ahab's court could not exclude the calls of ſovereign grace. (6.) No danger muſt deter, nor expence be ſpared, where God's ſuffering cauſe demands our help, and claims our protection. (7.) When matters ſeem moſt deſperate, God can, and often doth, raiſe up for his ſuffering miniſters and people powerful and faithful friends.

2. God now enjoins Elijah to return to Samaria. Eagerly had Ahab ſought him through all the tribes and neighbouring people, and by an oath engaged them to ſend him back, if he were found among them. But God had hid him, and Ahab ſought in vain. Three years and ſix months the famine had laſted; but the time is come when God will give rain, and Elijah is bid ſhew himſelf to Ahab.

3. Elijah on his return meets Obadiah, now in ſearch of graſs to preſerve the cattle; and he with deepeſt reverence accoſts the prophet of the Moſt High, v. 7. Elijah bids him acquaint Ahab with his coming. Obadiah heſitates at the meſſage, ſuggeſting his fears leſt Elijah might be caught away by the Spirit of the Lord, as perhaps before had happened; and Ahab's rage at the diſappointment might coſt the meſſenger his life; a life that had been ſo valuably employed, and deſerved ſo well to be preſerved, v. 13. Elijah ſilences his fear by an oath, to aſſure him he would that day appear to Ahab; whereupon Obadiah departs to acquaint his maſter, and Ahab haſtens to meet the prophet. Note, (1.) Titles of diſtinction, even to God's miniſters, may be lawfully uſed. (2.) They who are the ſlaves of their paſſions, will often vent the fury of their diſappointments on their boſom-friends.

17. ¶ And it came to paſs when Ahab ſaw Elijah, that Ahab ſaid unto him, Art thou [p] he that troubleth Iſrael? 18. And he anſwered, [q] I have not troubled Iſrael, but [r] thou and [s] thy father's houſe, in that ye have forſaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou haſt followed Baalim. 19. Now therefore ſend, and gather to me all Iſrael unto mount Carmel, and [t] the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, [u] which eat at Jezebel's table. 20. So Ahab ſent unto all the children of Iſrael, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel.

v. 17—20. We have here the interview between the wicked king and the holy prophet, where each appears in character.

1. Ahab with inſolent pride and abuſe accoſts him as the troubler of Iſrael. Note, (1.) It is no unuſual thing to miſrepreſent God's zealous miniſters as enemies to the ſtate. (2.) They who are the meſſengers of the beſt tidings, the impenitent brand as their troublers.

2. Elijah boldly retorts the accuſation, and bids him ſee the troubler of Iſrael in the worſhipper of Baalim. He deſigned their peace, even in his warnings, whilſt Ahab provoked the judgment by his ſins. To evidence this, he deſires a convention of the people to Carmel, with the prophets of Baal, and there it ſhall appear to what cauſe the want of rain is to be aſcribed. Note, (1.) When duty calls, we may not fear the faces of kings. (2.) They are troublers of a land, whoſe ſins provoke God's anger againſt it.

3. Ahab conſents, curious perhaps to know the iſſue of this controverſy between Elijah and the prophets of Baal; at leaſt, deſirous of rain on any terms, which he deſpaired of, but from Elijah's word.

21. And Elijah came unto all the people, and ſaid, [x] How long halt ye between two opinions? [y] if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people anſwered him not a word. 22. Then ſaid Elijah unto the people, [z] I, even I only remain a prophet of the LORD; but Baal's prophets are [a] four hundred and fifty men. 23. Let them therefore give us two bullocks, and let them chooſe one bullock for themſelves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dreſs the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: 24. And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD: and [b] the God that anſwereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people anſwered and ſaid, It is well ſpoken. 25. And Elijah ſaid unto the prophets of Baal, Chooſe you one bullock for yourſelves, and dreſs it firſt: for ye are many: and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under. 26. And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dreſſed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, ſaying, O Baal, † hear us. But [c] there was no voice, nor any that anſwered. And they ‡ leapt upon the altar which was made. 27. And it came to paſs at noon, that Elijah [d] mocked them, and ſaid, Cry aloud, for he is a god, either he is talking, or he is purſuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he ſleepeth, and muſt be awaked. 28. And [e] they cried aloud, and [f] cut themſelves after their manner with knives and lancets, [g] till the blood guſhed out upon them. 29. And it came to paſs, when mid-day was paſt, that they propheſied until the time of the offering of the evening ſacrifice; that there was neither voice, nor any to anſwer, [h] nor any that regarded. 30. And Elijah ſaid unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him: and he repaired the altar of the LORD that was broken down. 31. And Elijah [i] took twelve ſtones, according to the number of the tribes of the ſons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, ſaying, [k] Iſrael ſhall be thy name. 32. And with the ſtones he built an altar [l] in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two meaſures of ſeed. 33. And [m] he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and ſaid, Fill four barrels with water, and [n] pour it on the burnt-ſacrifice, and on the wood. 34. And he ſaid, Do it the ſecond time: And they did it the ſecond time. And he ſaid, Do it the third time: And they did it the third time. 35. And the water ran round about the altar, and he filled the trench alſo with water. 36. And it came to paſs at the time of the offering of the evening ſacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and ſaid, LORD [o] God of Abraham, Iſaac, and of Iſrael, [p] let it be known this day, that thou art God in Iſrael, and that I am thy ſervant, and that I have done all theſe things at thy word. 37. Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that [q] thou haſt turned their heart back again. 38. Then [r] the fire of the LORD fell, and conſumed the burnt-ſacrifice, and the wood, and the ſtones, and the duſt, and licked up the water that was in the trench. 39. And when all the people ſaw it, they fell on their faces: and they ſaid, The LORD he is the God; the LORD he is the God. 40. And Elijah ſaid unto them, § Take the prophets of Baal,

v. 21—40. How great does Elijah appear, alone ſupporting the cauſe of God againſt an idolatrous king, a wicked people, and the multitude of falſe prophets!

1. With zeal he reproves their inconſtancy and infidelity, v. 21. As there can be but one ſelf-exiſtent, infinite, eternal Being, their halting between God and Baal proved their wavering minds, and the attempt to reconcile their incompatible ſervices evidenced their folly. Note, (1.) Unſettled notions in religion have a direct tendency to lead us to unſound practices. (2.) There is no reconciling Chriſt and Belial, the love of God, and the love of the world: the very attempt is a proof of an apoſtate heart.

2. As conviction ſealed up their lips, he condeſcends, (being authoriſed from God ſo to do) to make them a fair propoſal to try the merits of the cauſe. Though multitudes and authority, king, prieſts, and people, were againſt him, alone he offers to enter the liſts on God's behalf, and reſts the iſſue of the trial on an anſwer of fire from heaven, to conſume the ſacrifice he propoſed. Let him be acknowledged the true God, whoſe power thus appeared. Note, God's miniſters muſt not be diſcouraged at ſeeing all the world united againſt them. If God be on their ſide, that is enough to embolden them.

3. The people approved the propoſal, and Baal's prophets either dared not reject it, leſt they ſhould appear deceivers, or hoped in the iſſue, if not to prevail in the conteſt, yet to be on a level with their adverſary, and that the ſhame of the diſappointment would then fall heavieſt upon him. Note, God entangleth the wiſe in their own craftineſs, and the hope of the hypocrite periſheth.

4. Elijah, becauſe they were many, gives them the preference in the trial; let them begin their ſacrifice, but put no fire under it. They prepare their bullock, lay it on the altar, and with loud calls invoke the preſence of their deity till noon. Baal probably repreſented the ſun, and from his burning rays at noon, they hoped ſome beam would kindle up the flame: but when paſt the meridian, mad with vexation, they leaped on the altar, and with knives and lancets wounding themſelves, ſought by their blood to render their deity propitious to their prayers; whilſt Elijah, with high diſdain and ridicule, mocked at their folly in theſe mad geſtures and cries, as if their god was engaged in buſineſs, on a journey, or aſleep, and needed to be awaked. Baal, deaf as his image, paid no regard to their prayers, or praiſes, or prophetic fury, and left his votaries covered with confuſion and deſpair. Note, (1.) The corporal ſeverities of popery are like the wounds of Baal's prophets, not of any value in the ſight of God, but merely to the ſatisfying the pride of the fleſhly mind, on the mortification of the body, See Col. xi. 23. (2.) Nothing will undeceive thoſe whom God hath given over to ſtrong deluſion: they have no ſenſe to ſay, Is there not a lie in my right hand?

5. It is now Elijah's turn to make the eſſay; and the calmneſs and dignity of his procedure beſpeak his confidence of ſucceſs. An antient altar was there, on which ſacrifice had been offered before the temple was built, but now either decayed by time, or thrown down by the idolatrous worſhippers of Baal. This he repairs with twelve ſtones, according to the number of the ſons of Jacob, whoſe name God had altered into Iſrael, on his prevailing prayer; and he doubted not the ſame power with God would attend his own. He calls the people to draw near, and having prepared his ſacrifice, to prevent the ſuſpicion of deluſion, he bids them pour upon it four barrels of water three ſeveral times, till the trench he had dug around the altar was filled. Then, at the time when the evening ſacrifice at Jeruſalem was offering, he drew near the altar, and with holy awe, yet humble boldneſs, addreſſes his prayer to the covenant God of their fathers, intreating him to appear for the magnifying his own great name, for the conviction of the people, and their converſion from idolatry; as well as to vindicate his prophet's injured character, and prove his divine miſſion. Inſtant the devouring fire deſcends, to the aſtoniſhment of the beholding multitude, devours the ſacrifice and wood; yea, it burns the very waters dry, and conſumes the ſtones of the altar, even to the duſt. Note, (1.) Great is the power of effectual prayer: if it brings not the viſible fire from heaven, it will ſtill draw down the fire of love, and enable us to offer that beſt ſacrifice, a flaming heart, to God. (2.) The converſion of God's people is among the deepeſt concerns which lies on a faithful miniſter's heart. (3.) When the fire of God's wrath fell on Jeſus, the ſinner's ſacrifice, then was the iniquity of his Iſrael pardoned, and that covenant of peace eſtabliſhed, wherein God engaged to turn back their rebellious hearts again unto himſelf.

6. Vanquiſhed by ſuch evidence, the people in adoration fall on their faces, as confounded at their idolatry and confeſſing now the only true God: but alas! the change was of ſhort continuance. Note, Miracles may extort confeſſions, but cannot convert the ſoul.

7. Whilſt they are in this good mood, Elijah improves the conviction for the execution of juſt vengeance on the lying prophets of Baal; and therefore, according to the law, Deut. xiii. 1—11. orders them inſtantly to be ſeized and executed, which Ahab dared not object to, and the people, incenſed againſt them, eagerly perform at the brook Kiſhon; hoping by their blood, who had deceived them, to obtain that rain which their idolatry had with-held. Note, The moſt fearful vengeance, if not in time, yet certainly in eternity, will overtake every lying prophet.

41. ¶ And Elijah ſaid unto Ahab, Get thee up, eat and drink, for [u] there is a ſound of abundance of rain. [u] Joſh. vii. 6. 2 Sam. xxi. 14.
42. So Ahab went up to eat and to drink, and Elijah [x] went up to the top of Carmel, and [y] he caſt himſelf down [x] Acts x. 9.
upon the earth, and put his face between his knees, 43. [y] Jam. v. 18.
And ſaid to his ſervant, Go up now, look toward the ſea. And he went up, and looked, and ſaid, There is nothing. And he ſaid, [z] Go again ſeven times. 44. And [z] Gen. xxxii. 26. Hab. ii. 3. Luke xviii. 1.
it came to paſs at the ſeventh time, that he ſaid, Behold, there ariſeth [a] a little cloud out of the ſea, like a man's hand. And he ſaid, Go up, ſay unto Ahab, [a] Mat. xiii. 31, 32.
Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain ſtop thee not. 45. And it came to paſs in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and [b] there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to [b] Jam. v. 16.
Jezreel. 46. And the hand of the LORD was on Elijah; and [c] he girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab, [c] 1 Pet. i. 13. to the entrance of Jezreel.

v. 41—46. Execution being performed on the deceivers, and the people, to appearance, renouncing their idolatry, God returns in mercy to bleſs them.

1. Elijah foreſeeing the approaching rain, deſires Ahab to take ſome refreſhment, and haſten home. Probably the ſuſpenſe of that day's work had kept him faſting till evening. He himſelf retires to the top of the mount, in lowlieſt abaſement to pray for the mercy which he knew God would beſtow. Note, (1.) Secret retirement with God is eſpecially needful for thoſe who are called to much public exerciſes. (2.) The confidence that God will beſtow it, muſt not make us the leſs ſollicitous to aſk the bleſſing at his hands.

2. Whilſt Elijah prayed, his ſervant is ſent to look out and bring him tidings, whether any riſing clouds appeared from the ſea, which from the top of Carmel was full in his view. Six times he returned, and ſaw nothing. Elijah bids him go again, whilſt, perſevering in importunate prayer, he knew at laſt he ſhould prevail. A little cloud now appears, that quickly ſpread over the ſky, and portended the deſcending rain. Note, (1.) We muſt not faint, becauſe we do not inſtantly receive, but perſevere in prayer, and we ſhall not be diſappointed. (2.) Great events ariſe from ſmall beginnings: the work of grace in the heart at firſt is like this little cloud, begins perhaps by a caſual word dropped without deſign, but by and by overſpreads all the faculties of the body and ſoul.

3. Elijah haſtens Ahab to his chariot, leſt the rain overtake him, which now the louring clouds portended near; and tho' he deſerved the honour of a place in it, he is content, as the humbleſt ſervant of his prince, to run before it, God ſtrengthening him in his body, and giving him courage in his ſoul, for the work yet before him. Note, (1.) They who are moſt diſtinguiſhed of God, and with greateſt boldneſs are called to rebuke men's ſins, muſt ſhew their humility exemplary as their zeal, and pay every due reſpect to men's perſons. (2.) When God ſtrengthens us, then we ſhall run, and not be weary.

v. 1—8. Elijah entred Jezreel yeſterday as in triumph; today is driven from thence in diſgrace, and flies for his life: ſo changeable is this vain world!

1. Hardened Ahab relates to Jezebel the late tranſactions, and fails not to inform her of the death of her prophets: that though he dared not himſelf, for fear of the people, ſeize Elijah, he might incenſe her, whoſe furious paſſions would not fail to fire at the tidings. Note, (1.) The wickedneſs to which we inſtigate others, we are as chargeable with, as if ourſelves had committed it.

2. Jezebel enraged, denounces vengeance on Elijah, and ſwears by her gods his death by to-morrow at that time: either really intending it, and God's Providence over-ruling her, that he might have time to eſcape; or more probably ſhe threatned high, to frighten him from her court, where his preſence could not but be dreaded, from the late ſpecimen of his zeal. Note, (1.) Profaneneſs in a woman is doubly ſhocking. (2.) The preſence of a good man is a burdenſome reſtraint on the wicked, and they want ever to get him out of the way.

3. Elijah, who had not been intimidated by kings, prieſts, or people united, now trembles at the threats of a woman, and without waiting God's orders, ſeeks to ſave himſelf by flight; and as if he heard Jezebel's voice behind him, even at Beerſheba, though out of the territories of Ahab, cannot think himſelf ſafe, but hides himſelf a day's journey in the wilderneſs; deſerting thus his poſt, when moſt he was wanted to carry on that reformation which was begun. Note, (1.) The ſtrongeſt in faith, when left for a moment to themſelves, turn cowards. (2.) Good men at times may be unwilling and afraid to die. (3.) We ought never to deſert the path of duty, though it lead us through the valley of the ſhadow of death.

4. Fatigued with his journey, and impatient under his burdens, he grew weary of life, which he had fled ſo far to ſave: and though unwilling to die by the hand of Jezebel, prays to die there by the hand of the Lord. He preſumes his uſefulneſs at an end, as not better than his fathers, deſires his diſmiſſion, and thinks he has lived long enough. Note, (1.) Many impatiently wiſh for death that would wiſh their words unſaid, if God granted their requeſts. (2.) However dark Providences appear, we muſt not deſpair; we know not what farther work God may have to do by us. (3.) Though to deſire to be with Chriſt is laudable, to be weary of our warfare is ſinful.

5. Grieved and weary, ſleep ſtole upon his eyelids; and under a juniper-tree he lay down, careleſs whether ever he awoke again. But God, kinder to him than he deſerved, awakes him him by an angel; and there he ſees a table ſpread for his refreſhment, and a bright ſpirit his attendant. Having ſatisfied his hunger, and again compoſed himſelf to ſleep, he is again called upon to riſe and eat, becauſe the journey was great to which God called him, even to Horeb. Thither in the ſtrength of this repaſt he travels; and during forty days and nights, needed no other refreſhment. Note, (1.) How much is God better to his children than their frowardneſs deſerves! He ſupports them and feeds them, even in this wilderneſs; and when they are ready to deſpair, he is at hand to ſuccour and ſave them. (2.) They who are travelling to Horeb, the mount of God in glory, will find ſtrength miniſtred to them for their journey, and meat to eat which the world knoweth not of. (3.) The meaneſt child of God is more nobly attended than the kings of the earth; angelic ſpirits miniſter continually to theſe heirs of ſalvation.

9. ¶ And he came thither unto [l] a cave, and lodged there; and behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, and he ſaid unto him, What doſt thou here, Elijah? 10. And he ſaid, [m] I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hoſts: for [n] the children of Iſrael have forſaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and [o] ſlain thy prophets with the ſword; and [p] I, even I only am left, and they ſeek my life, to take it away. 11. And he ſaid, Go forth, and ſtand upon the mount, before the LORD. And behold, the LORD paſſed by, and [q] a great and ſtrong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the LORD: but the LORD was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake: but the LORD was not in the earthquake: 12. And after the earthquake a fire: but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire, a ſtill ſmall voice. 13. And it was ſo, when Elijah heard it, that [r] he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and ſtood at the entering in of the cave: and behold, there came a voice unto him, and ſaid, What doſt thou here, Elijah? 14. And he ſaid, I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hoſts: becauſe the children of Iſrael have forſaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and ſlain thy prophets with the ſword: and I, even I only am left, and they ſeek my life, to take it away. 15. And the LORD ſaid unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderneſs of Damaſcus: and when thou comeſt, [s] anoint Hazael to be king over Syria, 16. And [t] Jehu the ſon of Nimſhi ſhalt thou anoint to be king over Iſrael: and [u] Eliſha the ſon of Shaphat of Abel-meholah, ſhalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room. 17. And it ſhall come to paſs, that him that eſcapeth [x] the ſword of Hazael, [y] ſhall Jehu ſlay: and him that eſcapeth from the ſword of Jehu, [z] ſhall Eliſha ſlay. 18. Yet [a] I have left me ſeven thouſand in Iſrael, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and [b] every mouth which hath not kiſſed him.

v. 9—18. We have here Elijah lodged in a cave, at the foot of mount Sinai, or Horeb: either taking refuge there as a place of ſafety, or hoping there to meet God, where he had once ſo eminently manifeſted his glory.

1. God there appears to him, to reprove and to encourage him: What doſt thou here? is the Divine enquiry; where he was buried from uſefulneſs, and through coward fear, acted ſo unlike the zealous Elijah. Note, (1.) Whom God loves, he rebukes. (2.) When we ſtep out of the way of duty, we ſhould hear this voice of God addreſſing us, What doſt thou here? (3.) Wherever God's people are driven, no place can exclude his gracious manifeſtations.

2. He anſwers the enquiry, by intimating the cauſe of his flight. His zeal for God againſt the prophets of Baal, had exaſperated Jezebel to take away his life; and the hardned impenitence of the people, who had renounced God's covenant, deſerted his worſhip with inſult againſt his altars, and ſlain the few faithful which remained, made him deſpair of ſucceſs, whilſt he had reaſon to fear they would readily join their queen, in conſpiring his death, now left alone, without ſo much as one to ſupport or countenance him. Note, (1.) We are apt to be diſcouraged under want of ſucceſs, as if the ſufficiency of the power was of ourſelves, and not of God. (2.) Woe to that people, againſt whom their rejected miniſters turn accuſers of their obſtinacy. (3.) They who would be faithful to God in bad days, muſt put their lives in their hand; and as they dare ſpeak for God, be ready to die for him.

3. God bids him come forth from the cave, and he will meet him in the mount, and make his glory paſs before him. The prophet obeys, and God appears. Before him went the furious whirlwind, rending the rocks, and caſting down the mountains, the trembling earth ſhook with reverence at his approach, and the fierce devouring flames beſpoke his glorious preſence. A ſtill ſmall voice ſucceeded, and now the prophet perceives the preſent Deity. Wrapped in his mantle, his face is hid, aſhamed, afraid to look upon God, yet ſtanding in the mouth of the cave, attentive to the words of the eternal Jehovah. Note, (1.) Though God is terrible to his enemies as a conſuming fire, his voice is melody and love to the children of his grace; and to them he ſays, fury is not in me. (2.) When we appear before a holy God, ſhame may well cover our face. (3.) The law, like this tempeſt, breaks the ſtony heart of man; but it is the office of the bleſſed goſpel, in gentle accents, to ſooth the broken heart, and ſoftly, with kind words of peace and pardon, to bind up the wounded ſpirit.

4. God ſpeaks, and Elijah anſwers as before, v. 9—11. In reply to which, God informs him, 1. That Iſrael ſhall not go unpuniſhed, and commiſſions him to anoint Hazael king of Syria, that he might vex them without; and Jehu king of Iſrael, that he might revenge God's quarrel on Ahab's wicked houſe within; and not to leave him ſolitary, appoints him to anoint Eliſha for his ſucceſſor and companion; the ſword of whoſe mouth ſhould ſmite them deep as the ſword of Hazael and Jehu; and by him, as it appears, both theſe kings were appointed, and Jehu anointed; unleſs we ſuppoſe this was done twice: See 2 Kings ix. 1—3. Note, (1.) Though we may think God ſlack in returning his own and his ſervants quarrels, yet he will avenge them, and that ſpeedily. (2.) God will not want hands to do his work: we muſt not think the cauſe will die with us: if he ſpeak but the word, great ſhall be the company of the preachers. 2. God aſſures him he is miſtaken in his calculations, and lets him know for his comfort, that there were yet ſeven thouſand faithful men in Iſrael, who had not yet bowed the knee to Baal. Note, (1.) In times of the greateſt apoſtacy, apoſtacy, God hath yet a choſen remnant, who refuſe to conform to the wickedneſs around them. (2.) The faithful in every kingdom are but few. (3.) Whoever have a place in that diſtinguiſhed little flock, owe it to the ſovereign grace of God. (4.) Though the few choſen ſeem loſt amidſt the tares that cover them, God ſees and knows how at laſt to make the ſeparation. (5.) When he ſhall have collected his ſaints together, though few in any place or age, they will be a great multitude, whom no man can number. (6.) It becomes us to judge charitably, leaſt we exclude thoſe from heaven, whom God hath not excluded.

19. ¶ So he departed thence, and found Eliſha the ſon of Shaphat, [c] who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he with the twelfth: and Elijah paſſed by him, and caſt his mantle upon him. 20. And [d] he left the oxen, and ran after Elijah, and ſaid, [e] Let me, I pray thee, kiſs my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee. And he ſaid unto him, Go back again; for what have I done to thee? 21. And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and ſlew them, and boiled their fleſh with the inſtruments of the oxen: and [f] gave unto the people, and they did eat: then he aroſe, and went after Elijah, and miniſtred unto him.

v. 19—21. Elijah immediately proceeds to execute a part of his commiſſion, and comes to Abel-Meholah, where Eliſha dwelt. He found him in the field ploughing; and approaching him, threw the ſkirt of his mantle on him, in token of his taking him under his tuition: when inſtantly the Spirit of God ſo effectually touched his heart, that he left the oxen, and followed Elijah. He begged leave for a moment to take leave of his family; and Elijah bid him go back again, permitting that office of reſpect, or willing to try the ſteadineſs of his heart. Hereupon he returned, took leave of his friends, made a feaſt for joy, at the honour to which he was called; and chearfully leaving all behind, followed his maſter, to learn from his inſtructions, and miniſter to him as his ſervant, 2 Kings iii. 2. Note, (1.) The calls of Divine grace are like this of Eliſha. Sovereign without our deſire or deſert; unexpected when we were engaged in other purſuits; powerful, ſo that we could not reſiſt the mighty impulſe; pleaſing, making us happy in the preſent favour of God, and the hopes of future glory; permanent, enabling us with perſevering adherence to cleave to Jeſus our maſter, leaving all for his ſake, to live and die faithfully his, and his alone. Lord caſt thus thy ſkirt of love over my ſoul! (2.) When we are employed in honeſt induſtry in the way of our duty, we are in the way of God's bleſſing. (3.) They will moſt probably ſucceed them in zeal and uſefulneſs, who being brought up under aged and experienced miniſters, have drank in their ſpirit.

1. AND Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his hoſt together, and there were thirty and two kings with him, and horſes and chariots: and he went up and beſieged Samaria, and warred againſt it. 2. And [a] he ſent meſſengers to Ahab king of Iſrael into the city, and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith Ben-hadad, 3. [b] Thy ſilver and thy gold is mine, thy wives alſo and thy children, even the goodlieſt, are mine. 4. And the king of Iſrael anſwered and ſaid, My lord, O king, according to thy ſaying, I am thine, and all that I have. 5. And the meſſengers came again, and ſaid, Thus ſpeaketh Ben-hadad, ſaying, Although I have ſent unto thee, ſaying, Thou ſhalt deliver me thy ſilver and thy gold, and thy wives and thy children: 6. Yet I will ſend my ſervant unto thee, to-morrow about this time, and they ſhall ſearch thine houſe, and the houſes of thy ſervants; and it ſhall be, that whatſoever is † pleaſant in thine eyes, they ſhall put it in their hand, and take it away. 7. Then the king of Iſrael called all the elders of the land, and ſaid, [c] Mark, I pray you, and ſee how this man ſeeketh miſchief: for he ſent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my ſilver, and for my gold, and I ‡ denied him not. 8. And all the elders, and all the people ſaid unto him, Hearken not unto him, nor conſent. 9. Wherefore he ſaid unto the meſſengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didſt ſend for to thy ſervant at the firſt, I will do: but this thing I may not do. And the meſſengers departed, and brought him word again. 10. And Ben-hadad ſent unto him, and ſaid, [d] The gods do ſo unto me and more alſo, [e] if the duſt of Samaria ſhall ſuffice for handfuls for all the people that ‖ follow me. 11. And the king of Iſrael anſwered and ſaid, Tell him, [f] Let not him that girdeth on his harneſs boaſt himſelf, as he that putteth it off.

v. 1—11. We have here,

1. Samaria beſieged by Ben-hadad king of Syria, with thirty-two tributary or confederate kings under him: and ſin had ſo weakened Iſrael's hands, that they met with no reſiſtance in their way, even to the capital. Note, They who provoke God to leave them, are defenceleſs indeed.

2. As ambition and covetouſneſs dictated the invaſion, ſwoln with inſolence and pride on his ſucceſs, he ſends Ahab a haughty meſſage, as his vaſſal, and bids him ſubmit and ſurrender his all without reſerve. Note, Succeſs makes vain minds inſolent.

3. Ahab, whoſe coward heart dared not oppoſe the haughty conqueror, and whoſe guilt forbad him to hope for help in God, tamely ſubmits to purchaſe his peace at this ignominious price.

4. Ben-hadad grown more inſolent on his ſubmiſſion, and now concluding his affairs deſperate, riſes in his demands. Not content with his treaſures, or his vaſſalage, he requires that his ſervants may ſearch his houſe, the houſes of his great men, and plunder them of every thing that is valuable, and expects his anſwer by the morrow. Note, (1.) There is no ſatisfying a covetous mind. (2.) Mean ſpirits delight to tyrannize over thoſe they think dare not reſiſt them.

5. Rouſed by ſo unreaſonable a demand, Ahab ſummons his counſel, and expoſes to them the conceſſions he had offered, and the freſh demands impoſed on him. They encourage him to ſtand out, and promiſe to ſupport him; on which the meſſengers are diſmiſſed with a denial, yet couched in terms that might leaſt offend; and with a propoſal to ratify the former offer.

6. Enraged at this refuſal, Ben-hadad ſwears by his gods to beat Samaria into duſt; and to bring ſuch an hoſt into the field, that there ſhall not be enough for each to take a handful. Note, (1.) The greateſt talkers are not the greateſt doers. (2.) The threats of pride are often impotent and vain.

7. Ahab wiſely admoniſhes him of the uncertainty of war, and that the moſt confident are not the moſt ſucceſsful. Note, As long as we are in the fleſh, it becometh us with fear and trembling to work out our ſalvation, when we ſhall put off the body in the grave, then we may ſhout for victory.

12. And it came to paſs, when Ben-hadad heard this meſſage (as he was drinking, he and the kings in the pavilions) that he ſaid unto his ſervants, Set yourſelves in aray: And they ſet themſelves in aray againſt the city. 13. ¶ And [g] behold there came a prophet unto Ahab king of Iſrael, ſaying, Thus ſaith the LORD, Haſt thou ſeen [h] all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day, and [i] thou ſhalt know that I am the LORD. 14. And Ahab ſaid, By whom? And he ſaid, Thus ſaith the LORD, Even [k] by the young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he ſaid, Who ſhall order the battle? And he anſwered, Thou. 15. Then he numbred the † young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty two: and after them he numbred all the people, even all the children of Iſrael, being ſeven thouſand. 16. And they went out at noon: but Ben-hadad was [l] drinking himſelf drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him. 17. And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out firſt, and Ben-hadad ſent out, and they told him, ſaying, There are men come out of Samaria. 18. And he ſaid, [m] Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive. 19. So theſe young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them. 20. And [n] they ſlew every one his man: and the Syrians [o] fled, and Iſrael purſued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria eſcaped on an horſe, with the horſemen. 21. And the king of Iſrael went out, and ſmote the horſes and chariots, and ſlew the Syrians with a great ſlaughter.

v. 12—21. The treaty being broken off, each ſide prepares for war.

1. Ben-hadad commands the city to be inveſted, or preparation made for an aſſault; though himſelf took no care to ſuperintend the attack, but ſat at noon day drinking himſelf drunk with the kings in his pavilion, unapprehenſive of danger, and by his ill example, rendering them as negligent and debauched as himſelf. Note, (1.) A drunken general will be the ruin of his army. (2.) They who are moſt ſecure, are neareſt the precipice of ruin.

2. In Ahab's diſtreſs, unworthy as he is of ſuch a mercy, yet for Iſrael's ſake, God interpoſes, and ſends his prophet, ſuppoſed to be Micaiah, with encouragement to him, and aſſurance of victory that very day, that he may be convinced God is the Lord, the true Jehovah. On his enquiry how, or by whom this deliverance ſhould be wrought, he is commanded to draw out the young men of the princes of the provinces, the ſervants of his great men, the moſt unfit for war, and he muſt lead them. Ahab obeys, numbers the young men, no more than 232, and after them 7000, probably ſuch as offered to ſecond them; a moſt unequal force againſt ſuch an enemy: but God's promiſe is better than the moſt numerous hoſt; and theſe deſpicable forces beſt ſuited to abaſe the pride of the inſolent king. Note, (1.) God ſhews the wicked many mercies, either to work upon them to repent, or at leaſt leave them inexcuſable. (2.) We muſt obey God in the uſe of means, however inadequate they may appear, and truſt him for the event.

3. Ahab, according to the Divine command, ſallies forth at noon, with his little force, whilſt Ben-hadad was drunk in his tent; and on news brought him of the appearance of ſome troops, deſpiſing their numbers, he commands, whether they came for peace or war, to take them priſoners: but when the Syrians advanced to ſeize them, the Iſraelites caught each his man, and ſlew them, which wrought ſuch a panic on the hoſt, that they inſtantly fled; whilſt the reſt of the forces follow now under the king, and obtain a complete victory. Note, (1.) Thoſe who walk in pride, God is able to abaſe. (2.) The weakeſt inſtruments are effectual in God's hands.

22. ¶ And the prophet came to the king of Iſrael, and ſaid unto him, [p] Go ſtrengthen thyſelf, and mark and ſee what thou doſt: for [q] at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up againſt thee. 23. And the ſervants of the king of Syria ſaid unto him, [r] Their gods are gods of the hills, therefore they were ſtronger than we; [s] but let us fight againſt them in the plain, and ſurely we ſhall be ſtronger than they. 24. And do this thing, [t] Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms. 25. And number thee an army like the army that thou haſt loſt, horſe for horſe, and chariot for chariot: and we will fight againſt them in the plain, and ſurely we ſhall be ſtronger than they. 900. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did ſo. 26. And it came to paſs at the return of the year, that Ben-hadad numbred the Syrians, and went up to Aphek, to fight againſt Iſrael. 27. And the children of Iſrael were numbred, and were all preſent, and went againſt them: and the children of Iſrael pitched before them, like two little flocks of kids; but the Syrians [u] filled the country. 28. ¶ And [x] there came a man of God, and ſpake unto the king of Iſrael, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the LORD, [y] Becauſe the Syrians have ſaid, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys: therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye ſhall know that I am the LORD. 29. And they pitched one over againſt the other ſeven days; and ſo it was, that in the ſeventh day the battle was joined: and the children of Iſrael ſlew of the Syrians [z] an hundred thouſand footmen in one day. 30. But the reſt fled to Aphek, into the city; and [a] there a wall fell upon twenty and ſeven thouſand of the men that were left: and Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, into † an inner chamber.

v. 22—30. Ahab triumphant, little thought the ſtorm was gathering afreſh, and promiſed himſelf no farther diſturbance. But,

1. God warns him by a prophet, of the preparations making againſt him, and bids him prepare for another campaign; for though the victory was not before got by human ſtrength, he muſt not tempt God, by neglecting to uſe his beſt endeavours. Note, (1.) We are apt to flatter ourſelves the danger is over, when the preſent trial is overcome, and not to be aware how reſtleſs are our ſpiritual foes, and that earth and hell will not let us be quiet long. (2.) Though God can only enable us to overcome, we muſt labour as earneſtly as if the ſucceſs depended on ourſelves.

Before Chriſt 900.

2. Ben-hadad is encouraged by his ſervants to raiſe another army, to retrieve his loſt honour. They ſuggeſt to him, that Iſrael's God was only mighty in the hills, but in the valley they had nothing to fear from him, according to their falſe notions of topical deities. And inſtead of the kings, they adviſe him to appoint captains, more expert and warlike, and then they were confident of ſucceſs.

3. With unequal forces the two armies take the field. The Syrians, like locuſts, covered the country; whilſt the two little bands of Iſrael, not a man of whom was loſt in the laſt encounter, appeared as few and weak as two little flocks of kids. But one advantage they had which over-balanced all, God was for them. His prophet aſſures them of victory, though they deſerved it not; yet to make the Syrians know that the God of Iſrael is every where equally omnipotent and irreſiſtable, v. 20. Note, As unequally matched does the church of God and every believer in it appear, amidſt their ſpiritual foes; but God is with them, therefore the gates of hell cannot prevail.

4. The iſſue confirms the prophet's word. Seven days they encamped near each other: on the ſeventh, after this encouragement, they dared join in the unequal conflict, and prevailed. One hundred thouſand Syrians fell that day; and when the ſhatter'd remains of the army took refuge under the walls of Aphek, a city of Aſher, in Ben-hadad's poſſeſſion, an earthquake, or whirlwind, threw down the wall upon twenty-ſeven thouſand men, and ſlew, wounded, or diſperſed them; ſo that Ben-hadad giving up all for loſt, fled to an inner chamber to hide himſelf. Note, They who fight againſt God, will be covered at laſt with confuſion and deſpair.

31. ¶ And his ſervants ſaid unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the houſe of Iſrael are merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, put ſackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Iſrael; peradventure he will ſave thy life. 32. So they girded ſackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Iſrael, and ſaid, [b] Thy ſervant Ben-hadad ſaith, I pray thee, let me live. And he ſaid, Is he yet alive? he is my brother. 33. Now the men did diligently obſerve whether any thing would come from him, and did haſtily catch it: and they ſaid, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he ſaid, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he cauſed him to come up into the chariot. 34. And Ben-hadad ſaid unto him, The cities which my father took from thy father, I will reſtore, and thou ſhalt make ſtreets for thee in Damaſcus, as my father made in Samaria. Then ſaid Ahab, I will ſend thee away with this covenant. [c] So he made a covenant with him, and ſent him away. 35. ¶ And a certain man of the ſons of the prophets ſaid unto his neighbour in the word of the LORD, [d] Smite me, I pray thee. And the man refuſed to ſmite him. 36. Then he ſaid unto him, [e] Becauſe thou haſt not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as ſoon as thou art departed from me, a lion ſhall ſlay thee. And as ſoon as he was departed from him, [f] a lion found him, and ſlew him. 37. Then he found another man, and ſaid, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man ſmote him, ſo that in ſmiting he wounded him. 38. So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way, and diſguiſed himſelf with aſhes upon his face. 39. And as the king paſſed by, he cried unto the king: and he ſaid, [g] Thy ſervant went out into the midſt of the battle, and behold, a man turned aſide, and brought a man unto me, and ſaid, Keep this man: if by any means he be miſſing, then ſhall thy life be for his life, or elſe thou ſhalt pay a talent of ſilver. 40. And as thy ſervant was buſy here and there, he was gone. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto him, [h] So ſhall thy judgment be, thyſelf haſt decided it. 41. And he haſted, and took the aſhes away from his face, and the king of Iſrael diſcerned him that he was of the prophets. 42. And he ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, Becauſe thou haſt let go out of thy hand, a man whom † I appointed to utter deſtruction, [i] therefore thy life ſhall go for his life, and thy people for his people. 43. And the king of Iſrael went to his houſe, heavy and [k] diſpleaſed, and came to Samaria.

v. 31—43. See the proud boaſter reduced to the loweſt ſtep of abject wretchedneſs.

1. His ſervants propoſe, as the laſt and only reſource, to ſurrender themſelves priſoners at diſcretion, and caſt themſelves on the mercy of Iſrael's king, for they had been famed for lenity. They offer to go firſt; and to excite compaſſion, appear in ſackcloth, with halters about their necks, as thoſe who owned they deſerved to die; and with abject ſubmiſſion, as from their king, beg only for life, v. 32. Note, (1.) Iſrael's God is more famed for mercy than Iſrael's king; there is hope for the periſhing ſinner, when in duſt and aſhes he comes to ſurrender up his guilty ſoul. (2.) It is better to ſtoop and live, than periſh hardned in pride.

2. Ahab receives them unſpeakably beyond their expectations, expreſſes a joy that Ben-hadad is alive, and calls him brother; intimating his reſpect for him. At this word they eagerly catch, and return at his command to bring Ben-hadad forth. Ahab receives him with all imaginable reſpect, cauſes him to ſit with him in his chariot, and then in a fit of generoſity, offers to reſtore the cities of Syria, which Omri his father had taken, See chap. xvi. 27. and permits him to exerciſe every act of ſovereignty at Damaſcus, his royal reſidence, as much as Omri had done at Samaria. And having thus made peace, diſmiſſes him without ſo much as a reproof for his blaſphemy and inſolence. Our tranſlators, by inſerting Ben-hadad's name, aſcribe the conceſſions, v. 34. to him, but the former ſenſe is moſt agreeable to the original. Note, Lenity and generoſity may be ſinfully exerciſed towards ſuch, as we have reaſon to ſuſpect will abuſe them.

3. A prophet, probably Micaiah, See chap. xxii. 8. is ſent to rebuke this falſe clemency of Ahab: and in order to lead the king to condemn himſelf, he diſguiſes himſelf as a ſoldier, and bids a neighbour ſmite him, that he might appear bloody; but his neighbour refuſed, though the prophet told him the command was from God; and therefore is puniſhed for his diſobedience, a lion is commiſſioned to ſlay him. Another whom he met, fearing probably the conſequences of a refuſal, though unwillingly, ſmites and wounds the prophet. Thus bloody and diſguiſed, with aſhes on his head, he way-laid the king, and prefers his fictitious complaint. He had thro' careleſſneſs let a priſoner eſcape, that his captain, at the peril of his life, or on forfeiture of a talent of ſilver, had bid him guard, and he flies to the king's clemency to protect him from his officer's proſecution. But Ahab rejects his ſuit, and leaves him to the juſt puniſhment his careleſſneſs deſerved. The prophet then removes the diſguiſe, and retorts the king's ſentence upon him. For Ben-hadad's life which he had ſpared, when delivered of God into his hands, his own was forfeited, chap. xxii. 34. and Iſrael ſhall ſuffer for his lenity to the Syrians, 2 Kings x. 32. Note, (1.) Whatever ſeeming pleas we may have for diſobedience to God's word, none of them will be accepted as an arreſt of judgment at his bar, (2.) Out of his own mouth will the ſinner be condemned in the day of God.

4. Ahab's joy was now turned into heavineſs; he went to his houſe, vexed at his own folly, diſpleaſed at the prophet, and more enraged againſt the threatned puniſhment, than afflicted under the ſin which provoked it. Note, There is a ſorrow of the world which only worketh death.

1. AND it came to paſs [a] after theſe things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria. 2. And Ahab ſpake unto Naboth, ſaying, [b] Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, becauſe it is near unto my houſe, and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it: or if it ſeem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money. 3. And Naboth ſaid to Ahab, [c] The LORD forbid it me, that I ſhould give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee. 4. And Ahab came into his houſe [d] heavy and diſpleaſed, becauſe of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had ſpoken to him: for he had ſaid, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers: and he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

v. 1—4. Ahab now ſeemed to be quite at peace, and perhaps his late melancholy was blown over. But there is no long peace to the wicked, freſh ſin will produce freſh torment.

1. Naboth's vineyard, which lay contiguous to his palace, caught his eye, and determined him, if poſſible, to engage Naboth to part with it by ſale, or for an equivalent in ſome other place. A deſire not in itſelf unlawful, though becoming ſo by his inordinate eagerneſs. Note, (1.) Lawful things inordinately coveted, become a ſnare to us. (2.) Contiguity to a great man's eſtate, hath expoſed many a poor man to oppreſſion.

Before Chriſt 899.

2. Naboth rejected the propoſal as ſinful, eſteeming it unlawful, except in caſe of extreme poverty; See Lev. xxv. 23—28. to part with his family inheritance, and fearing leaſt if it ever became crown land, it would not in the year of jubilee revert to his heirs; he rather therefore hazarded the offending the the king, than the wounding his conſcience; and perhaps his being one of the ſeven thouſand who refuſed to bow to Baal, made the denial more diſpleaſing. Note, (1.) When we muſt offend God or man, there can be no heſitation to determine which. (2.) They who are marked as the godly, muſt expect the world will owe them a grudge.

3. Ahab vaſtly reſented the refuſal, grew ſullen, and would not eat through vexation. Note, Proud, fretful, and diſcontented ſpirits are their own tormentors. As the world is too full of the ſame diſpoſitions to give them their way, they will ſeldom want daily cauſe for vexation.

5. ¶ But [e] Jezebel his wife came to him, and ſaid unto him, Why is thy ſpirit ſo ſad, that thou eateſt no bread? 6. And he ſaid unto her, Becauſe I ſpake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and ſaid unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or elſe if it pleaſe thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he anſwered, I will not give thee my vineyard. 7. And Jezebel his wife ſaid unto him, Doſt thou now [f] govern the kingdom of Iſrael? ariſe and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite. 8. So ſhe [g] wrote letters in Ahab's name, and ſealed them with his ſeal, and ſent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his city dwelling with Naboth. 9. And ſhe wrote in the letters, ſaying, † Proclaim [h] a faſt, and ſet Naboth on high among the people: 10. And ſet two men, [i] ſons of Belial, before him, to bear witneſs againſt him, ſaying, Thou didſt ‡ blaſpheme God and the king: and then carry him out, and ſtone him [k] that he may die. 11. And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, [l] did as Jezebel had ſent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which ſhe had ſent unto them. 12. They proclaimed a faſt, and ſet Naboth on high among the people. 13. And there came in two men, children of Belial, and ſat before him: and the men of Belial [m] witneſſed againſt him, even againſt Naboth, in the preſence of the people, ſaying, Naboth did blaſpheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and [n] ſtoned him with ſtones, that he died. 14. Then they ſent to Jezebel, ſaying, [o] Naboth is ſtoned, and is dead. 15. ¶ And it came to paſs when Jezebel heard that Naboth was ſtoned, and was dead, that Jezebel ſaid to Ahab, Ariſe, take poſſeſſion of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refuſed to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead. 16. And it came to paſs when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab roſe up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take poſſeſſion of it.

v. 5—16. The very name of Jezebel portends miſchief. A worſe engine the devil can never employ for craft or cruelty, than a wicked woman.

1. Obſerving Ahab ſullen, ſhe conjectured ſome diſappointment; and having enquired the cauſe, rallies him on his weakneſs; bids him uſe his prerogative, for who dare oppoſe the king? at leaſt, leave the matter to her, and ſhe will give him Naboth's vineyard. Note, If the heart be ſet on wickedneſs, the devil will furniſh the means.

2. Her project is truly diabolical. Not ſatisfied to gratify her covetouſneſs by depriving him of his eſtate, ſhe deſigns to gratify her revenge by ſhedding his blood; and this too, under the ſpecious appearances of religion and juſtice. She orders them to proclaim a ſolemn faſt, (though the words proclaim a faſt may alſo be rendered, convene a court) as if dreading ſome impending calamity on the city, becauſe of ſin committed in the midſt of them: let Naboth, according to his rank, have an high place in the congregation, and during the ſolemnity, let them ſuborn two witneſſes to appear and accuſe Naboth of blaſphemy and treaſon: hereupon, without farther enquiry, they ſhould hurry him forth and ſtone him, that his life might appear forfeited to God, and his eſtate to the king. Theſe orders, to give them authority, are ſealed with the king's ſeal; whether he knew their contents or not, is uncertain, and diſpatched in haſte to the magiſtrates and elders of Jezreel. Note, (1.) Perjury is among the moſt deadly ſins, and moſt dangerous to ſociety; no man's life or property are ſafe againſt a lying tongue.

Before Chriſt 899. tongue. (2.) Injuſtice committed under the pretext of law, is the moſt inſupportable kind of oppreſſion.

3. Deteſtable and infamous as the command was, which every Iſraelite with holy indignation ſhould have rejected with abhorrence, the nobles of Jezreel ſcruple not to pay a ſervile complaiſance; and perhaps Naboth's religious principles made them glad of ſuch an opportunity to deſtroy him. The faſt is proclaimed, the accuſation is laid, and Naboth is ſtoned; and his ſons alſo, either ſecretly or publicly, made away with. See 2 Kings ix. 26. whether to this their orders extended, or to gratify their own enmity, and remove every proſecutor of ſuch an unjuſt and cruel murder. Note, (1.) No innocence can protect a man from the power of oppreſſors. (2.) There is a day, when the blood of innocence, and the tears of the oppreſſed, will come into remembrance; and then woe to the murderer and the oppreſſor.

4. No ſooner are theſe glad tidings arrived, than Jezebel with joy acquaints the king of Naboth's death, and bids him take poſſeſſion; whilſt he, far from expreſſing the leaſt diſſatisfaction at the horrid plot, goes down to the vineyard, amidſt his courtiers and captains, See 2 Kings ix. 25. as if it had been the moſt lawful as well as moſt welcome acquiſition. Note, When ſin hath hardened the heart, men glory in their wickedneſs, and are loſt to ſhame.

17. ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Elijah

Amorites, whom the LORD caſt out before the children

himſelf before me, I will not bring the evil in his [e] 2 Kings ix. 24. days: but [e] in his ſons days will I bring the evil upon his houſe.

v. 17—29. Ahab had now filled up the meaſure of his iniquities. Worſe than all his predeceſſors in wickedneſs, and more infamous in his idolatries, he had willingly ſold himſelf to commit every abomination: nor is it any exculpation of his guilt, that Jezebel ſtirred him up, whom he ſhould have reſtrained, rather than have obeyed.

1. Elijah, at God's command, met him in Naboth's vineyard, and his unwelcome preſence marred the maſter's joy. Ahab's guilty conſcience told him the prophet's coming boded no good, and therefore he accoſts him with his former unhumbled pride, as the enemy of his repoſe; yet expreſſing a dread, which majeſtic goodneſs impreſſed even on ſuch a hardened heart, v. 20. Note, (1.) The miniſters of God, who cannot bear to ſee ſinners periſhing in their iniquities without warning, are therefore often counted by them as their worſt enemies. (2.) The very preſence of a godly man ſtrikes an awe upon ſinners, and they ſhun them as the ghoſt which haunts their conſcience, and as the fiend come to torment them before their time.

2. Elijah denounces on him his deſerved doom: I have found thee, and am come from God to paſs ſentence on thee, v. 20. He charges him with Naboth's murder, and his unjuſt ſeizure of his inheritance, v. 19. and, with a terrible commination of approaching judgments, thunders God's wrath againſt him. His wicked houſe ſhall be utterly cut off, as the houſes of Jeroboam and Baaſha, whoſe uncommon wickedneſs he had exceeded: his accurſed wife ſhall be eaten of dogs, ſo low her pride ſhall fall; and in the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth, (awful and juſt retaliation!) dogs, ſaith he, ſhall lick thy blood, even thine; which was fulfilled in part, chap. xxii. 38. and more fully, 2 Kings ix. 26. Note, (1.) Let no ſinner think to be hid; ſooner or later, terrors like an armed man ſhall ſeize him; and woe then to the ſoul, that flying now from his convictions, treaſures up wrath againſt the day of wrath. (2.) No ſubterfuges in the day of judgment will be able to evade conviction. The approver, as well as the perpetrator, ſtand equally guilty before that God who ſearcheth the heart. (3.) God's juſtice in this world ſometimes appears moſt exemplary in ſuiting the ſinner's puniſhment to his crime.

Before Chriſt 899.

3. Shocked at the meſſage, his ſtubborn heart for a moment trembled, and driven to his knees in terror, with ſackcloth on his loins, he wore the garb of penitence, though his unhumbled heart continued as diſtant as ever from that godly ſorrow that worketh repentance unto ſalvation never to be repented of. Yet even thus God is pleaſed to grant him a ſhort reprieve, ver. 29. Note, (1.) Partial profeſſions of penitence legal terrors often produce; but a ſenſe of pardoning love can only convert the heart. (2.) Hypocrites in outward form and expreſſions of ſorrow cannot by us oftentimes be diſtinguiſhed from real penitents; but God trieth the heart. (3.) If even a hypocrite's tears obtained a reſpite, ſhall not the tears of real penitence be much more remembered of God, and the pardon bought with the blood of Jeſus be ſealed to every ſoul who truly turns to him?

v. 1—14. Three years of peace, like the calm which uſhers in the ſtorm, bring Ahab's reſpite to an end, and haſten on the fatal day.

1. Ramoth-gilead was now in the hands of the Syrians, which Ahab reſolves, with the aſſiſtance of his ally Jehoſhaphat, to reſcue from them ; repenting either his former lenity to Benhadad, or provoked at his perfidy, if we interpret the words, Chap. xx. 34. of a promiſe to reſtore the cities of Iſrael, which he afterwards refuſed to perform. Note, (1.) When by our neglect we loſe the opportunity God gives us, afterwards we ſtruggle but in vain to recover it. (2.) Treaties are ſlender bands to hold perfidious princes.

2. Ahab aſks, and Jehoſhaphat conſents, to accompany him in the expedition. He had made peace with Ahab, had confirmed it by marrying his ſon to Ahab's daughter, and now he has not the heart to deny him, though it brought him into a very dangerous and unſucceſsful quarrel. Note, The wicked are too worldly wiſe for God's children, and connections with them uſually end in their loſs and damage.

3. Though Jehoſhaphat conſents to go, he is firſt for aſking counſel of God : whereupon Ahab, who never thought of conſulting God in the matter, ſends for his court prophets, whoſe complaiſance he pretty well knew, to adviſe with. Very unanimous are their declarations ; Go, and proſper, is all the cry : nay, one of them, as imitating the ſigns of a real prophet, with horns of iron, emblems of majeſty and ſtrength, predicts ſuch ſhall be their power and ſucceſs, that the Syrians ſhall be utterly deſtroyed ; and, to engage Jehoſhaphat's credit, prefaces his declaration with the name not of Baal but Jehovah. Note, (1.) The falſe prophets in every age are a numerous body, and with the vaunt of God's name in their mouth, more fatally lie in wait to deceive. (2.) Unity and multitude are neither proofs of a true church, nor a good cauſe : the faithful were ever few.

4. Jehoſhaphat is little ſatisfied with theſe pretenders ; and, though unwilling to affront Ahab by ſuggeſting his real ſentiments, aſks if there was no other prophet of the Lord beſides theſe, to conſult with. Ahab mentions one more, Micaiah, a prophet indeed of God ; but he hated him for his ill-boding tongue, never propheſying good concerning him ; and it ſeems he was now in priſon, See ver. 26. probably for the meſſage delivered, chap. xx. 38. Jehoſhaphat gently reproves the wicked king, who merited a more ſevere rebuke ; and Ahab, not to diſoblige his ally, conſents Micaiah ſhall be brought, whilſt they, ſeated on thrones in their royal robes, ſurrounded with their courtiers and prophets, waited his arrival. Note, (1.) We muſt not believe every ſpirit, but try the ſpirits whether they are of God, and falſe prophets afford no difficult detection. (2.) They who do ill, muſt not expect to hear from God's prophets viſions of peace. (3.) There is no ſurer proof of a falſe teacher, than his propheſying ſmooth things, and ſuffering the careleſs and the hypocrite to ſleep in their ſins.

5. Ahab knew where Micaiah lay faſt bound, and therefore his officer ſoon finds him. By the way, he fails not to acquaint him with the unanimity of the other prophets, and to adviſe him to conform to them, as the king's pleaſure was well known, and his diſſent from them might bring him into ſtill greater trouble and ſuffering. But Micaiah with ſolemn indignation rejects ſuch puſillanimous and wretched counſel. He ſought not to pleaſe men ; he ſerved a greater maſter than theſe who ſat on tottering thrones ; and as he feared not their faces, whether it pleaſe or diſpleaſe, he muſt and will ſpeak as God commands. Note, (1.) No worldly fear or hope can intimidate the faithful miniſter : he will hazard the loſs of men's favour, rather than be falſe to their ſouls. (2.) When deluding teachers abound, we muſt be be ſingular, if we would be faithful.

15. ¶ So he came to the king, and the king ſaid unto him, Micaiah, ſhall we go againſt Ramoth-gilead to battle, or ſhall we forbear ? And he anſwered him, [q] Go, and proſper : for the LORD ſhall deliver it into the hand of the king. 16. And the king ſaid unto him, How many times ſhall I adjure thee, that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD ? 17. And he ſaid, [r] I ſaw all Iſrael ſcattered upon the hills, as ſheep that have not a ſhepherd : and the LORD ſaid, [s] Theſe have no maſter, let them return every man to his houſe in peace. 18. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto Jehoſhaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would propheſy no good concerning me, but evil ? 19. And he ſaid, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD : [t] I ſaw the LORD ſitting on his throne, and all the hoſt of heaven ſtanding by him, on his right hand, and on his left. 20. And the LORD ſaid, Who ſhall † perſuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead ? And one ſaid on this manner, and another ſaid on that manner. 21. And there came forth [u] a ſpirit, and ſtood before the LORD, and ſaid, I will perſuade him. 22. And the LORD ſaid unto him, Wherewith ? And he ſaid, I will go forth, and [x] I will be a lying ſpirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he ſaid, Thou ſhalt perſuade him, and prevail alſo : go forth and do ſo. 23. Now therefore behold, [y] the LORD hath put a lying ſpirit in the mouth of all theſe thy prophets, and the LORD hath ſpoken evil concerning thee. 24. But Zedekiah the ſon of Chenaanah went near, and [z] ſmote Micaiah on the cheek, and ſaid, Which way went the ſpirit of the LORD from me to ſpeak unto thee ? 25. And Micaiah ſaid, Behold, thou ſhalt ſee in that day, when [a] thou ſhalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyſelf. 26. And the king of Iſrael ſaid, [b] Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Ammon the governor of the city, and to Joaſh the king's ſon : 27. And ſay, Thus ſaith the king, [c] Put this fellow in the priſon, and [d] feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I come in peace. 28. And Micaiah ſaid, [e] If thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not ſpoken by me. And he ſaid, [f] Hearken, O people, every one of you.

v. 15—28. Micaiah now appears before the kings and courtiers, alone but not unſupported ; God was with him, therefore could he not be moved.

1. Ahab puts the ſame queſtion to him he had before put to his own prophets ; and Micaiah, who had heard their anſwer, and knew the king's mind, anſwered him in their very words, but with ſuch a tone and geſture, as evidently beſpoke contempt of his prophets, and the vanity of their prophecy. Note, It is folly, that deſerves to be ridiculed, to aſk advice of others, when you are determined to follow your own.

2. Ahab perceived the irony of his anſwer, and adjures him, without farther delay, to ſpeak his mind ; and this he doth freely and boldly. He ſaw the armies of Iſrael ſcattered on the hills near Ramoth-gilead, and their ſhepherd wanting ; intimating, that Ahab ſhould fall in the battle, and Iſrael be defeated. Note, Sinners cannot be too plainly warned of their danger.

3. Exaſperated at ſuch a declaration, which he interpreted only the prophet's malice and ill-will againſt him, he turns to the too credulous Jehoſhaphat, to divert him from attending to ſuch a prophecy. But Micaiah confirms his firſt viſion by a ſecond, wherein he deſcribes Ahab's determined ruin, and the means employed to deſtroy him, by a lying ſpirit in the mouth of his prophets, v. 19—23. We are not to ſuppoſe this a real conſultation, that God wanted means to accompliſh his deſigns, or was the author of a lie. No ; it is only deſigned to repreſent, after the manner of men, the fixed purpoſe of God reſpecting Ahab, and his juſt judgment in permitting the devil to deceive him. Since he will not hear God's truth, let him believe Satan's lie. Note, (1.) The greateſt kindneſs ſhewn in faithful rebuke to men's ſouls, is often perverſely miſinterpreted into ſelfiſh anger, or diſlike of their perſons. (2.) God ruleth over all : the greateſt are but worms of earth, and however men kick at it, his counſel muſt ſtand. (3.) No way doth the devil more fatally delude men's ſouls to their eternal ruin, than as a lying ſpirit in their mouths, who pretend a miſſion from God. (4.) God doth, without impeachment of his glory, permit Satan to tempt ſinners, and by withholding his grace from them, gives them up to be led captive by him at his will. (5.) The ſinner abandoned of God, ruſhes on his ruin, as the horſe ruſheth into the battle.

4. Zedekiah cannot bear ſuch an infamous reflection, and with inſolent effrontery, in the king's preſence, ſtrikes Micaiah over the face, and treats with contempt his prophecy, as if himſelf alone had the ſpirit, who could not contradict his own inſpirations, and therefore intimates, that Micaiah's was the lying ſpirit ; which abuſe Micaiah returns not with abuſe, but warning. His falſity ſhould be detected, when he ſhould fly to an inner chamber to hide himſelf, either through fear, if he went with Ahab, on ſeeing the battle go againſt them ; or, if he ſtayed at home, to eſcape the people incenſed at his falſe prophecy. Note, (1.) The bittereſt enemies of God's true prophets are the teachers of lies. Theſe, to ſupport their own credit with the people, ſeek, by every baſe ſuggeſtion and oppreſſion, to prevent the influence of the truth, leſt the ſhame of their nakedneſs ſhould appear. (2.) Confuſion will ſhortly cover the wicked, and thoſe who will not take God's warning, muſt feel his wrath.

5. Ahab ſeconds his prophet's abuſe, commits the innocent Micaiah to priſon, and bids him be hardly treated till his return in peace, which he ſpeaks of with confidence, then deſigning ſigning to execute him for a falſe prophet. Micaiah is very ready to reſt his life on this iſſue; and they part thus, never to meet again. Note, (1.) The career of perſecutors is often ſtopped ſhort. (2.) They have little reaſon to promiſe themſelves peace, who are declaring war againſt God in the perſon of his prophet.

29. So the king of Iſrael, and Jehoſhaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead. 30. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto Jehoſhaphat, [g] I will diſguiſe myſelf, and enter into the battle, but put thou on thy robes. And the king of Iſrael diſguiſed himſelf, and went into the battle. 31. But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, ſaying, Fight neither with ſmall nor great, ſave only with the king of Iſrael. 32. And it came to paſs, when the captains of the chariots ſaw Jehoſhaphat, that they ſaid, Surely it is the king of Iſrael. And [h] they turned aſide to fight againſt him: and Jehoſhaphat [i] cried out. 33. And it came to paſs, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Iſrael, that they turned back from purſuing him. 34. And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and [k] ſmote the king of Iſrael between the † joints of the harneſs: wherefore he ſaid unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the hoſt, for I am ‡ wounded. 35. And the battle increaſed that day: and the king was ſtayed up in his chariot againſt the Syrians, and died at even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the midſt of the chariot. 36. And there went a proclamation throughout the hoſt, about the going down of the ſun, ſaying, [l] Every man to his city, and every man to his own country. 37. ¶ So the king died, and was brought to Samaria, and they buried the king in Samaria. 38. And one waſhed the chariot in the pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked up his blood, and they waſhed his armour, [m] according unto the word of the LORD which he ſpake. 39. Now the reſt of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and [n] the ivory houſe which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? 40. So Ahab ſlept with his fathers, and Ahaziah his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

v. 29—40. Not deterred by theſe comminations, Ahab reſolves to proceed; and Jehoſhaphat, either deluded by the multitude of the falſe prophets, or unable to reſiſt Ahab's importunity, and recede from his word, goes with him.

1. To diſappoint Micaiah's prophecy, and to dupe the too eaſy Jehoſhaphat, Ahab diſguiſes himſelf, or, for ſecurity, changed his royal robes for a coat of mail; and, whilſt he pretends to honour his brother and ally, leaves him the poſt of honour, but at the ſame time expoſed to the greateſt danger. Note, (1.) They who are guileleſs themſelves, are unſuſpicious of others. (2.) Wicked men, to compaſs their own ends, ſtick not to betray their beſt friend.

2. Jehoſhaphat now is expoſed to the moſt imminent peril. Benhadad had given charge to direct their chief attack wherever the king of Iſrael was poſted, and Jehoſhaphat in his royal robes is eaſily miſtaken for him, and ready to periſh. On his crying out, either for help, his troops reſcued him, or the Syrians perceived their miſtake, and left him; or perhaps this cry was the voice of prayer to God, who interpoſed to ſave him. Note, (1.) When we are out of the way of duty, we muſt not wonder we get into miſchief. (2.) They who cry out to God, will ever find him a very preſent help in trouble.

3. Ahab's diſguiſe affords him no protection. Though eſcaping the formed deſign on his perſon, God has a deeper plan, which muſt ſucceed. An arrow, drawn at a venture, but aimed by an unerring hand, and driven with reſiſtleſs force, pierced the armour of Ahab where only it was vulnerable, and death entered at the wound. Note, (1.) When our hour is come, there is no avoiding our deſtiny. (2.) Events to us purely accidental, are the effects of wiſdom, which never errs in the execution of decrees that cannot be diſappointed.

4. Though mortally wounded, Ahab kept the field, and whilſt his heart's blood flowed out into his chariot, continued to encourage his ſoldiers. But his ſtrength began to fail; the king of terrors now had ſeized him, and at evening he died. Hereupon, according to Micaiah's prophecy, a proclamation was immediately iſſued for every man to retire to his home. Note, It is in vain to ſtruggle againſt God's decree.

5. The fulfilment of the prophecy of Elijah is remarked, v. 38. When his bloody armour and chariot were waſhed, the dogs lapped the water mingled with blood. Thus ended the wicked reign of Ahab, whoſe greatneſs and buildings, particularly the ivory houſe he made, are recorded more at large in the annals of Iſrael's kings, which are periſhed. His crown, with his ſins, and the curſe entailed on him, deſcended to his ungodly ſon Ahaziah.

Before Chriſt 897.

41. ¶ And [o] Jehoſhaphat the ſon of Aſa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Iſrael. 42. Jehoſhaphat was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. 43. And he walked in all the way of Aſa his father, he turned not aſide from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the LORD: [p] nevertheleſs, the high places were not taken away; for the people offered and burnt incenſe yet in the high places. 44. And Jehoſhaphat [q] made peace with the king of Iſrael. 45. Now the reſt of the acts of Jehoſhaphat, and his might that he ſhewed, and how he warred, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 46. And [r] the remnant of the Sodomites which remained in the days of his father Aſa, he took out of the land. 47. [s] There was then no king in Edom: a deputy was king. 48. [t] Jehoſhaphat made ſhips of Tharſhiſh to go to Ophir for gold; but they went not; for the ſhips were broken at Ezion-geber. 49. Then ſaid Ahaziah the ſon of Ahab unto Jehoſhaphat, Let my ſervants go with thy ſervants in the ſhips: but Jehoſhaphat would not. 50. ¶ And Jehoſhaphat [u] ſlept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Jehoram his ſon reigned in his ſtead.* 51. ¶ Ahaziah the ſon of Ahab began to reign over Iſrael in Samaria the ſeventeenth year of Jehoſhaphat king of Judah, and reigned two years over Iſrael. 52. And [x] he did evil in the ſight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in the way of his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. 53. For he ſerved Baal, and worſhipped him, and provoked to anger the LORD God of Iſrael, according to all that his father had done.

v. 41—53. We have here,

1. The happy reign of Jehoſhaphat. During twenty-five years, he governed Judah in great proſperity, and ſtands among the moſt eminent of the race of David for piety, and fidelity in adhering to God's worſhip and ways. The exceptionable part of his character was his affinity with Ahab and Amaziah, for which he ſmarted, in the danger he was expoſed to by the one, and the unſucceſsful event of the partnerſhip in trade with the other, v. 48. Being warned by a prophet, he corrected this error, v. 49. The high places alſo were permitted to remain, thoſe at leaſt that had been in a ſort conſecrated by ancient uſe, and the ſacrifices of great and good men; though now, when the temple was erected, theſe were forbidden, and ſhould have been removed with the reſt, 2 Chron. xvii. 6. Edom yet continued tributary, which in the next reign revolted, v. 47. At laſt he paid the common tribute to nature, and left his flouriſhing kingdom to a ſon, who grievouſly degenerated from the piety of his anceſtors. Note, (1.) No character is found beneath the ſun perfectly ſpotleſs. Optimus ille qui minimis urgetur. (2.) It is a mercy when our croſſes lead us to amend our errors. (3.) The beſt parent cannot entail his piety with his eſtate.

2. Ahaziah, following the example of his abandoned predeceſſors, and given up to the guidance of his moſt infamous mother, Jezebel, begins his inauſpicious reign with wickedneſs, and quickly ends it in miſery. Note, Wicked parents contribute to the ruin of their children, body and ſoul.

OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the SECOND BOOK of KINGS.

This ſecond book of Kings is a continuation of the former. That had an illuſtrious beginning in the glories of the kingdom of Iſrael, when it was entire; this has a melancholy concluſion, in the deſolations of the kingdoms of Iſrael firſt, and then of Judah, after they had been long broken into two; for a kingdom divided againſt itſelf cometh to deſtruction. But as Elijah's mighty works were very much the glory of the former book, ſo are Eliſha's the glory of this. Here is, 1. Elijah fetching fire from heaven, and aſcending in fire to heaven, chap. i, ii. 2. Eliſha working many miracles, both for prince and people, Iſraelites and foreigners, chap. iii--vii. 3. Hazael and Jehu anointed, the former for the correction of Iſrael, the latter for the deſtruction of the houſe of Ahab, and the worſhip of Baal, chap. viii--x. 4. The reigns of ſeveral of the kings, both of Judah and Iſrael, chap. xi--xvi. 5. The captivity of the ten tribes, chap. xvii. 6. The good and glorious reign of Hezekiah, chap. xviii--xx. 7. Manaſſeh's wicked reign, and Joſiah's good one, chap. xxi--xxiii. 8. The deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the king of Babylon, chap. xxiv, xxv. This hiſtory, in the ſeveral paſſages of it, confirms that obſervation of Solomon's, That righteouſneſs exalts a nation, but ſin is the reproach of any people.

And Ahaziah fell down through a latteſs in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was ſick: And he ſent meſſengers, and ſaid unto them, Go, enquire of † Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, whether I ſhall recover of this diſeaſe. 3. But the angel of the LORD ſaid to Elijah the Tiſhbite, Ariſe, go up to meet the meſſengers of the king of Samaria, and ſay unto them, Is it not becauſe there is not a God in Iſrael, that ye go to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? 4. Now therefore thus ſaith the LORD, Thou ſhalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but ſhalt ſurely die. And Elijah departed. 5. ¶ And when the meſſengers turned back unto him, he ſaid unto them, Why are ye now turned back? 6. And they ſaid unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and ſaid unto us, Go turn again unto the king that ſent you, and ſay unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, Is it not becauſe there is not a God in Iſrael, that thou ſendeſt to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou ſhalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but ſhalt ſurely die. 7. And he ſaid unto them, What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you theſe words? 8. And they anſwered him, [b] He was an hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he ſaid, It is Elijah the Tiſhbite.

† i. e. The maſter fly.

[b] Mat. iii. 4.

v. 1—8. Iſrael's declenſion begins with this book in the rebellion of Moab, to which Ahaziah's wickedneſs and weakneſs tempted them. And this was followed with a ſtroke that more nearly affected him: he fell down through a latteſs; either thro' a window on the top of his houſe, or perhaps the rails which ſurrounded it, and received a blow, which in its effects proved mortal. Note, Wherever we are, we are in danger: death often takes his ſtand, where we leaſt expected to meet him.

1. In his illneſs, more ſollicitous to know whether he ſhould recover or not, than careful to prepare for all events by a timely repentance, he fooliſhly and wickedly ſends to enquire of the Philiſtine idol at Ekron, Baalzebub, the maſter-fly, ſo called perhaps from ſome deliverance of the country from ſwarms of flies with which they were infeſted, which they imputed to him. Note, (1.) It is a vain curioſity to enquire when we ſhall die; but our wiſdom, to be always ready. (2.) If once we offer worſhip to any object below the glorious, ſelf-exiſtent Jehovah, a fly is as worthy a god as any other ſubordinate created being. The difference is inconſiderable between an Arian and an Ekronite.

2. Elijah, at God's command, meets and anſwers the meſſengers. With indignation at the contempt ſhewn to Iſrael's

God, v. 3. he bids them return; and reads Ahaziah's certain doom, v. 4. Note, (1.) They who will not ſeek to God for mercy, may expect to hear from him in judgment. (2.) Neglect of God, or ſetting the affections on any thing on earth more than on him, is practical atheiſm.

3. The meſſage being delivered, Ahaziah ſuſpects the author, and enquiring about him, concludes from their deſcription, v. 8. that it is Elijah.

9. Then the king [c] ſent unto him a captain of fifty, with his fifty: and he went up to him (and behold, he ſat on the top of an hill) and he ſpake unto him, Thou [d] man of God, the king hath ſaid, Come down. 10. And Elijah anſwered and ſaid to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, [e] then let fire come down from heaven, and conſume thee and thy fifty. And [f] there came down fire from heaven, and conſumed him and his fifty. 11. [g] Again alſo he ſent unto him another captain of fifty, with his fifty: and he anſwered and ſaid unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king ſaid, Come down quickly. 12. And Elijah anſwered and ſaid unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and conſume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and conſumed him and his fifty. 13. ¶ [h] And he ſent again a captain of the third fifty, with his fifty: and the third captain of fifty went up, and came and [i] fell on his knees before Elijah, and beſought him, and ſaid unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, [k] let my life, and the life of theſe fifty thy ſervants, be precious in thy ſight. 14. Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties, with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy ſight. 15. And the angel of the LORD ſaid unto Elijah, Go down with him, be not afraid of him. And he aroſe, and went down with him unto the king. 16. And he ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, Foraſmuch as thou haſt ſent meſſengers to enquire of Baalzebub the god of Ekron (is it not becauſe there is no God in Iſrael to enquire of his word?) therefore thou ſhalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but ſhalt ſurely die. 17. ¶ So he died, according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had ſpoken: and [l] Jehoram reigned in his ſtead, in the ſecond year of † Jehoram the ſon of Jehoſhaphat king of Judah; becauſe he had no ſon. 18. Now the reſt of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael?

v. 9—18. Enraged at the meſſage, Ahaziah reſolves to wreak his vengeance on the prophet. Rebukes only exaſperate hardened ſinners.

1. He ſends a captain and fifty men to ſeize him, who being come to Carmel, where Elijah was, bids him with authority come down, and intimates, that though he called himſelf a man of God, that would not be his protection. Elijah, in zeal for God's glory, and to vindicate his miſſion, terribly convinces him of the truth of that character he deſpiſed. He looked to God, and inſtantly a blaſt of lightning ſlew the captain and his band. Note, (1.) They who touch God's prophets to hurt them, touch the apple of his eye. (2.) Mockers of God's people are little aware of the fire they are kindling.

2. With hardened inſolence Ahaziah renews the attempt, and finds a captain ſo madly daring as to obey his orders, and command the man of God to inſtant ſubmiſſion. But the ſame judgment overtakes him and his men, and their dead corpſes lie monuments of divine vengeance.

3. With determined obſtinacy, a third time the furious king ſends an armed band; but their captain juſtly trembling at the judgment he beheld, attempts not by force, but by entreaty, to prevail. On his bended knees he falls before the man of God, and, inſtead of ſeizing him as his priſoner, begs for his life, and the life of his attendants. Note, (1.) It is the height of madneſs to harden the heart againſt God's terrors. (2.) Others ſufferings ſhould be our warnings. (3.) The way to prevail with God, is humbly to bow before him.

4. Elijah, at God's command, not only ſpares his life, but accompanies him to the king, and, with a dignity and authority that confounded his perſecutors, repeats the meſſage he had ſent in the ears of the king. Note, God can reſtrain the wrath of man, and, when moſt expoſed, keep us, that not a hair of our head ſhall fall to the ground.

5. The event quickly verified the prediction: he died childleſs, after a ſhort reign of leſs than two years, and is ſucceeded by Jehoram, his brother in iniquity as in blood, in whom ended the wicked houſe of Ahab.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter, 1. Elijah is tranſlated, after taking leave of his friends, and his miraculous paſſage over Jordan with Eliſha, ver. 1—12. 2. Eliſha appears as a prophet in his room, and divides Jordan, ver. 13, 14. 3. The ſons of the prophets acknowledge him ſuch, ver. 15—18. 4. He heals the unwholſome waters of Jericho, ver. 19—22. 5. He deſtroys the children of Bethel that mocked him, ver. 23—25.

1. AND it came to paſs, when [a] the LORD would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with Eliſha from Gilgal. 2. And Elijah ſaid unto Eliſha, [b] Tarry here, I pray thee: for the LORD hath ſent me to Beth-el. And Eliſha ſaid unto him, [c] As the LORD liveth, and as thy ſoul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Beth-el. 3. And the ſons of the prophets that were at Beth-el, came forth to Eliſha, and ſaid unto him, Knoweſt thou that the LORD will take away thy maſter from thy head to-day? And he ſaid, Yea, I know it, hold you your peace. 4. And Elijah ſaid unto him, Eliſha, tarry here, I pray thee: for the LORD hath ſent me to Jericho. And he ſaid, As the LORD liveth, and as thy ſoul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho. 5. And the ſons of the prophets that were at Jericho, came to Eliſha, and ſaid unto him, Knoweſt thou that the LORD will take away thy maſter from thy head to-day? And he anſwered, Yea, I know it, hold you your peace. 6. And Elijah ſaid unto him, [d] Tarry, I pray thee, here: for the LORD hath ſent me to Jordan. And he ſaid, As the LORD liveth, and as thy ſoul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on. 7. And fifty men of the ſons of the prophets went, and ſtood to view afar off: and they two ſtood by Jordan. 8. And Elijah took his mantle, and wrapt it together, and [e] ſmote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, ſo that they two [f] went over on dry ground.

v. 1—8. Elijah's bright ſun is now about to ſet, or rather to riſe brighter in another world of glory.

1. God gives him notice of his intended removal, not in the ordinary courſe of nature, but by a change ſudden and glorious, that, without the pangs of death, would prepare him for his abode in that world where fleſh and blood cannot enter. Note, Though we may not expect Elijah's tranſlation, yet, if like him, whilſt on earth, we maintain our converſation in heaven, our paſſage thither will be as ſafe and ſure through the grave, as if we were caught up thither in the whirlwind.

2. Before he is taken away, he goes to take a farewel of the ſchool of the prophets at Beth-el, the hopes of the riſing generation; and, to try Eliſha's affection and adherence to him, propoſes to him to ſtay at Gilgal; but he reſolves never to forſake him. He knew the time was ſhort he could enjoy his company, and therefore deſired to improve every moment that remained by his holy converſation, and receive at leaſt his parting benediction. Note, (1.) The riſing generation is the great concern of the departing prophets, and their laſt breath they would gladly employ in encouraging, by their experience and dying teſtimony, their younger brethren to follow thoſe happy paths that lead to life and never-ending glory. (2.) We ſhould make the moſt of the converſation of thoſe men of God, that now for a moment we enjoy; leſt, when they are taken from us, we ſhould have to lament not only their loſs, but our own negligence in not profiting by them as we might have done.

3. From Beth-el Elijah paſſes to Jericho on the ſame errand. In both places his intended tranſlation is known, either by revelation, or ſome intimation given by himſelf. The ſons of the prophets acquaint Eliſha with it; he is no ſtranger to it, and bids them be ſilent; for now his thoughts were too engaged to enter on any diſcourſe, or this mournful theme was grievous to him. Elijah there renews his requeſt that he would ſtay; but nothing can divert him from his attendance. Note, A perſevering attachment to the Prince of the prophets will be crowned at laſt.

4. Onward they paſs to Jordan, whilſt fifty of the ſons of the prophets ſtood afar off to wait the iſſue; and Elijah's mantle, like the rod of Moſes, there opens them a paſſage through the waters. Note, (1.) It is very deſirable to ſee the laſt of dying Chriſtians. (2.) Through the waters of death the redeemed will find a ſafe paſſage, whilſt the wicked will be hurried down the ſtream, into the gulph of eternal perdition.

9. ¶ And it came to paſs when they were gone over, that Elijah ſaid unto Eliſha, Aſk what I ſhall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Eliſha ſaid, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy ſpirit be upon me. 10. And he ſaid, Thou haſt aſked a hard thing: neverthele∫s, if thou [g] ſee me when I am taken from thee, it ſhall be ſo unto thee; but if not, it ſhall not be ſo. 11. And it came to paſs as they ſtill went on and talked, that behold there appeared [h] a chariot of fire, and horſes of fire, and parted them both aſunder, and [i] Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. 12. ¶ And Eliſha ſaw it, and he cried, [k] My father, my father, the chariot of Iſrael, and the horſemen thereof! And he ſaw him no more: And he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces.

v. 9—12. We have here,

1. Eliſha's parting requeſt to Elijah, in anſwer to his enquiry, what he ſhould do for him. He begs a double portion of his ſpirit, either twice as much as he himſelf poſſeſſed, or double what any other of the ſons of the prophets were favoured with. A hard requeſt, and much above human power to grant; but if he beheld him when caught up, Elijah bids him regard that as an aſſurance, that his requeſt was anſwered, and God would put a double portion of his ſpirit upon him. Note, (1.) They who are engaged in the work of the miniſtry, need beg eſpecial ſupplies of the Spirit, to enable them for their arduous taſk. (2.) We may confidently expect, that God will prepare us for the work he hath aſſigned us; and as our day is, ſo ſhall our ſtrength be. (3.) They who attend the beds of God's departing ſaints, may hope to catch a portion of their ſpirit, to be ſtrengthened by their faith, and comforted by their conſolations.

2. Suddenly, as they talked, a fiery chariot appears, and horſes of fire, probably ſome of the cherubic hoſts, employed by God in this miniſtry; and, in a moment, a whirlwind catches up Elijah into the chariot, and mounting through the ſkies, he drops his mantle and mortality together; and being changed in the twinkling of an eye, he is cloathed upon with a glorious body, fit for the place whither he is aſcending. Note, The ſame bright miniſters of flame, that thus caught up the favoured prophet, with like aſſiduous care attend the departing ſpirits of all the faithful, and tranſport them ſafe to the Paradiſe of God.

3. Parted from his deareſt friend, Eliſha with piercing eyes follows him to the ſkies, lamenting his own and the people's loſs. He rends his garments, and mourns over Iſrael, as if their hope and ſtrength was fled, v. 12. Note, (1.) A faithful miniſter departed, is a great loſs to the Iſrael of God. (2.) They are our fathers in the beſt ſenſe, who have begotten us in the goſpel of Chriſt. (3.) Death will ſeparate deareſt friends. (4.) When we have loſt our brethren in Jeſus, it ſhould quicken our eagerneſs to ſecure a portion with them, that we may meet again, never to part, in the eternal world.

13. He took up alſo the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and ſtood by the bank of Jordan; 14. And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and [l] ſmote the waters, and ſaid, Where is the LORD God of Elijah? and when he alſo had ſmitten the waters, they parted hither and thither: and Eliſha went over. 15. And when the ſons of the prophets which were to view at Jericho, ſaw him, they ſaid, The ſpirit of Elijah doth reſt on Eliſha. And they came to meet him, and [m] bowed themſelves to the ground before him: 16. ¶ And they ſaid unto him, Behold now, there be with thy ſervants fifty † ſtrong men, let them go, we pray thee, and ſeek thy maſter: leſt peradventure [n] the Spirit of the LORD hath taken him up, and caſt him upon ſome mountain, or into ſome valley. And he ſaid, Ye ſhall not ſend. 17. And when they urged him till he was aſhamed, he ſaid, Send. They ſent therefore fifty men; and they ſought three days, but found him not. 18. And when they came again to him (for he tarried at Jericho) he ſaid unto them, Did not I ſay unto you, Go not?

v. 13—18. Elijah is gone, but Eliſha remains. When God removes one light from his church, he can raiſe up another to ſupply his place.

1. Eliſha with delight gathers up the mantle which fell from his departed father: he loved it ſince the day it was firſt caſt over him, and not only for his ſake preſerved it, but as the earneſt of his petition being granted, received it with deepeſt thankfulneſs, and wore it as ſucceſſor in office to the great prophet, who had left it behind him. Note, (1.) That token given us by our departed friends, which ſtirs us up to imitate their virtues, is truly valuable. (2.) They who wear the livery of a prophet, ſhould read in their very cloaths the obligations lying on them to diſcharge with diligence their weighty office.

2. Cloathed now with Elijah's ſpirit, as well as mantle, he returns to the waters of Jordan, and there in faith invoking the Lord God of Elijah, ſmites the waters, and they divide. Where is he? he cries; Aph-hu follows in the original. Here he is, even he, as immediately anſwering to the call. Note, (1.) Even whilſt the prayer of faith is uttering, God will anſwer. (2.) They who walk in Elijah's ſpirit, will find with them the preſence and power of Elijah's God.

3. The ſons of the prophets, who beheld the miracle, received with deep reſpect the returning prophet, as Elijah's appointed ſucceſſor. Note, It is not material, whence a man came, or what hath been his education; if God endues him with eminent gifts, and eminent graces, even the ſons of prophets need think it no diſhonour to bow before him.

4. They requeſt Eliſha to make ſearch after Elijah, ſuggeſting he might be only caught away for a time; or, if his ſpirit was gone, that his body might be dropped unburied. Eliſha diſſuades them from the fruitleſs taſk, but their importunity extorts a reluctant permiſſion, leſt he ſhould ſeem not reſpectful to his maſter, or unwilling to reſign to him his office. At their return he gently reproves their folly, as a memorial to them afterwards to be more obſervant of his advice. Note, For others ſatisfaction, it is kind and charitable to yield ſometimes, even to what we know to be fruitleſs.

19. ¶ And the men of the city ſaid unto Eliſha, Behold, I pray thee, the ſituation of this city is pleaſant, as my lord ſeeth: but the water is nought, and the ground barren. 20. And he ſaid, Bring me a new cruſe, and put ſalt therein. And they brought it to him. 21. And he went forth unto the ſpring of the waters, and [o] caſt the ſalt in there, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the LORD, I have healed theſe waters; [p] there ſhall not be from thence any more death, or barren land. 22. So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the ſaying of Eliſha which he ſpake. 23. ¶ And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth [q] little children out of the city, and [r] mocked him, and ſaid unto him, Go up, thou bald-head, go up thou bald-head. 24. And he turned back and looked on them, and [s] curſed them in the name of the LORD: and there came forth two ſhe-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them. 25. And he went from thence to mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

v. 19—25. Eliſha, being returned in the ſpirit of Elijah, multiplied miracles to confirm his divine miſſion.

1. At the requeſt of the men of Jericho, he heals their waters. They were bitter, unwholſome, and made the ſoil barren. It was either ſo in general, or perhaps the caſe of a particular ſpot only, near the ſchool of the prophets. He calls for ſome ſalt and a new cruſe; not that there was any virtue in theſe, more than in the clay which our Lord put on the eyes of the blind, but to prove their obedience. With theſe he goes to the fountain-head, caſts in the ſalt, and in the name of the Lord commands the cure, which is inſtant as his word. Note, (1.) Opportunity muſt not be loſt; whilſt we have a prophet among us, let us employ him. (2.) Few people think how ill they could ſpare the moſt common neceſſaries: we could much better want every other liquor, than be without wholſome water. (3.) Nothing but the ſalt of divine grace can ſweeten the bitterneſs, or heal the barrenneſs, of the corrupted heart. (4.) It is every prophet's labour to caſt in this ſalt, and that not merely into the ſtreams, for preſent reformation, but into the ſpring, in order to abiding converſion. (5.) Though the prophet ſpeaks, it is God alone that works. (6.) They who have taſted of God's healing grace, will make it manifeſt in the fruitfulneſs of their lives.

2. Another miracle of a different kind marked his return to Carmel. As he paſſed through Beth-el, where another ſchool of prophets lay, ſome children, Nearim, young perſons, mocked him. The idol calf had there the general ſway, and they hated thoſe who were jealous to rebuke their ſins. They cried in deriſion, Go up, follow your maſter, and let us be rid of you both; and becauſe his head was bald, derided the deformity. With a look of indignation he turned upon them, not in anger for the perſonal affront, but in holy diſpleaſure at their contempt and diſhonour of God, and by a divine impulſe from him, denounced upon them the curſe they had provoked; the executioners of which are near, two bears ruſhing from a neighbouring wood, tore to pieces forty-two of theſe inſolent mockers, and changed their ſhouts into dying groans. Note, (1.) It is no new thing for prophets to be abuſed, even in the ſtreets, and the children taught of their ungodly parents to point at and hoot them. (2.) It is a high reflection upon God, to reproach any man with his natural defects or infirmities. (3.) Wicked children ſhould read and tremble at this judgment.

3. Having viſited Carmel, Elijah's late reſidence, and where might be another ſchool of prophets, he went to Samaria, the metropolis, to teſtify againſt their idolatry, where it was moſt confirmed under the royal ſanction. Note, Where iniquity moſt reigns, and the largeſt field is open to labour for God, there is the zealous prophet's call.

CHAP. III.

Here is, 1. The character of Jehoram king of Iſrael, ver. 1—3. 2. His war with Moab, ver. 4—8. 3. He and his allies reduced to great diſtreſs, conſult Eliſha, who promiſes them relief, ver. 9—19. 4. The glorious iſſue of this campaign, ver. 20—25. 5. The barbarous method the king of Moab took to oblige them to retire, ver. 26, 27.

896. 1. NOW Jehoram the ſon of Ahab began to reign over Iſrael in Samaria, the eighteenth year of Jehoſhaphat king of Judah, and reigned twelve years. 2. And he wrought evil in the ſight of the LORD, [a] but not like his father, and [b] like his mother; for he put away the image of Baal that his father had made. 3. Nevertheleſs, [c] he cleaved unto the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, which made Iſrael to ſin; he departed not therefrom. 4. ¶ And Meſha king of Moab was a ſheep-maſter, and rendred unto the king of Iſrael an hundred thouſand lambs, and an hundred thouſand rams with the wool. 5. But it came to paſs when Ahab was dead, that the king of Moab [d] rebelled againſt the king of Iſrael.

v. 1—5. Jehoram, the laſt of Ahab's poſterity, was the beſt, yet prevented not the deſcending judgments; for though not ſo vile as his predeceſſors, he ſtill trod in their ſteps.

1. He removed the image of Baal, deterred from the worſhip by the threatned judgments, and in hopes to avert them; or, perhaps, from his complaiſance with Jehoſhaphat, whoſe aſſiſtance he needed, and with whom he was allied. But he perſevered in the worſhip of the golden calves, a ſtate-engine, which he might think it dangerous to give up. Note, (1.) Partial reformation often is without real converſion. (2.) To leave the ſins we no longer love, whilſt we ſtill indulge thoſe that are pleaſing or profitable, ſhews the inſincerity of pretended repentance.

2. He attempts to recover Moab, which had rebelled againſt his brother, and by which a vaſt revenue was loſt to the crown, v. 4.

6. ¶ And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the ſame time, and numbred all Iſrael. 7. And he went and ſent to Jehoſhaphat the king of Judah, ſaying, The king of Moab hath rebelled againſt me: [e] wilt thou go with me againſt Moab to battle? And he ſaid, [f] I will go up; I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horſes as thy horſes. 8. And he ſaid, Which way ſhall we go up? And he anſwered, The way through the wilderneſs of Edom. 895. 9. So the king of Iſrael went, and the king of Judah, and the king of Edom: and they fetcht a compaſs of ſeven days journey: and there was no water for the hoſt, and for the cattle † that followed them. 10. And the king of Iſrael ſaid, [g] Alas, that the LORD hath called theſe three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab. 11. But Jehoſhaphat ſaid, Is there not here [h] a prophet of the LORD, that we may enquire of the LORD by him? And one of the king of Iſrael's ſervants anſwered and ſaid, Here is Eliſha the ſon of Shaphat, which poured water on the hands of Elijah. 12. And Jehoſhaphat ſaid, The word of the LORD is with him. So [i] the king of Iſrael, and Jehoſhaphat, and the king of Edom went down to him. 13. And Eliſha ſaid unto the king of Iſrael, [k] What have I to do with thee? [l] get thee to the prophets [m] of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto him, Nay: for the LORD hath called theſe three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab. 14. And Eliſha ſaid, [n] As the LORD of hoſts liveth, before whom I ſtand, ſurely, [o] were it not that I regard the preſence of Jehoſhaphat the king of Judah, † I would not look toward thee, nor ſee thee. 15. But now bring me [p] a minſtrel. And it came to paſs when the minſtrel played, that [q] the hand of the LORD came upon him. 16. And he ſaid, Thus ſaith the LORD, Make this valley full of ditches. 17. For thus ſaith the LORD, Ye ſhall not ſee wind, neither ſhall ye ſee rain; [r] yet that valley ſhall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beaſts. 18. And this is but a light thing in the ſight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites alſo into your hand. 19. And [s] ye ſhall ſmite every fenced city, and every choice city, and ſhall [t] fell every good tree, and ſtop all wells of water, and mar every good piece of land with ſtones.

v. 6—19. War being reſolved, Jehoram muſters his forces, and, to ſtrengthen himſelf the more,

1. Sollicits and obtains the aſſiſtance of Jehoſhaphat. On a council held, Jehoſhaphat adviſes to fall upon the Moabites, not by the neareſt way over Jordan, where they might be prepared, but through the wilderneſs of Edom, whoſe king, as his tributary, he took with him, in order to ſurprize them. Policy is as needful in war as power.

2. The advice was followed, but it had like to have proved fatal to their army; and no wonder, when they had not conſulted God about their way. The want of water parched them with thirſt; and Jehoram, with murmurs againſt Providence, is ready to deſpair, thro' fear of being attacked by the king of Moab in this diſpirited and weakened ſituation. Note, (1.) If we keep company with ſinners, we ſhall be in danger of ſmarting under their rod. (2.) They who will not conſult God to direct their way, will yet quarrel at his providence, when involved in difficulties, into which their own imprudence hath brought them.

3. Jehoſhaphat now reflects on his error, and, to amend it before it is too late, enquires after a prophet. In a camp he was little to be expected; but ſo God ordered it, who foreſaw theſe difficulties, that Eliſha ſhould attend the army; and tho' the kings knew not of him, a godly Iſraelite of their ſervants had been favoured with his company, and could give them information concerning him, v. 11. Hereupon, the kings immediately wait on him in his tent, to ſpread their deplorable caſe, and to beg his prayers and direction. Note, (1.) Afflictions drive thoſe to God, who in their proſperity neglected him. (2.) God's mercy towards us is not only beyond our deſert, but often prevents our deſires.

4. Eliſha, with juſt indignation at Jehoram's idolatry, ſends him to his father's prophets for direction: but theſe Jehoram knew were unable to help; therefore he humbles himſelf, and begs him, for the ſake at leaſt of the kings his confederates, to intercede for them. Hereunto Eliſha conſents; yet, teſtifying his high diſpleaſure againſt him, and that but for Jehoſhaphat's ſake he would not deign to look upon or anſwer him. A minſtrel is called for to ſooth his ruffled ſpirit, provoked with Jehoram's preſence, and to prepare his mind for prophetic inſpiration; and when with ſounds of heavenly melody the ſweet muſician ſung, ſtrait his enraptured ſpirit felt the preſent Deity. He bids them dig trenches, and without wind or rain God ſhould fill them with water, and their lives be not only thus preſerved, but victory ſucceed, and Moab be made deſolate by them, v. 18, 19. Note, (1.) The greateſt are not too high for rebuke. (2.) The wicked fare the better for their connections with God's people. (3.) God will not leave his people in diſtreſs, when they cry to him, tho' their own folly have brought them into it. (4.) When God gives, he gives like himſelf, more than we dare aſk or think.

20. And it came to paſs in the morning, [u] when the meat-offering was offered, that behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was [x] filled with water. 21. ¶ And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight againſt them, they gathered all that were able to put on armour, and upward, and ſtood in the border. 22. And they roſe up early in the morning, and the ſun ſhone upon the water, and the Moabites ſaw the water on the other ſide as red as blood: 23. And they ſaid, This is blood: the kings are ſurely ſlain, and they have ſmitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the ſpoil. 24. And when they came to the camp of Iſrael, the Iſraelites roſe up, and ſmote the Moabites, ſo that they fled before them: but † they went forward ſmiting the Moabites even in their country. 25. And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land caſt every man his ſtone, and filled it, and they ſtopped all the wells of water, and felled all the good trees: ‡ only in Kir-haraſeth left they the ſtones thereof: howbeit the ſlingers went about it, and ſmote it. 26. ¶ And when the king of Moab ſaw that the battle was too ſore for him, he took with him ſeven hundred men that drew ſwords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not. 27. Then [y] he took his eldeſt ſon that ſhould have reigned in his ſtead, and offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall: and there was great indignation againſt Iſrael: and they departed from him, and returned to their own land.

v. 20—27. The event anſwers the prediction.

1. The water came in a torrent by the way of Edom, at the time of the morning ſacrifice. Probably then Eliſha prayed openly, with his face towards the temple, that they might be aſſured from whence this relief was ſent. Note, (1.) Every mercy we receive is owing to the efficacy of the blood of the Lamb which was ſlain. (2.) Every prayer muſt proceed on that foundation.

2. The Moabites beholding the water as the morning ſun aroſe, and perſuaded there could be no water there, preſently conclude the confederates had quarrelled, and this was the blood of the ſlain: therefore they march as to certain victory, every man who was able to bear arms having been ſummoned to oppoſe the invaſion. But how terrible their diſappointment, when tumultuouſly ruſhing on the ſpoil, the confederate army fell upon them with terrible ſlaughter, routed them, waſted their country, ruined their cities, and left only the metropolis ſtanding, and that was ſoon beſieged, and the breaches ready to be ſtormed. Note, (1.) Whom God will deſtroy, he often firſt infatuates. (2.) Rebellion may not hope to proſper.

3. In this extremity, the king of Moab attempts, with a ſelected band, to break through the quarters of Edom, where he expected leaſt reſiſtance, but is repulſed, v. 26. When rendered deſperate by his danger, by the inhuman and moſt precious ſacrifice of his eldeſt ſon, as his laſt effort, he ſeeks to appeaſe his idol god Chemoſh; or by ſuch a ſhocking ſcene on the walls, would move the compaſſion of the beſiegers; or perhaps to intimate his determined reſolution, to die with all his family, rather than yield. To ſee their king reduced to ſuch diſtreſs, rouſed the indignation of the remainder of the Moabites; and when the Iſraelites ſaw them thus made reſolute by deſpair, they raiſed the ſiege, and retired. Note, (1.) Deſpair ſometimes does more than the moſt determined courage. (2.) Let us bleſs God for deliverance from idolatry. Our God delights not in the blood of the ſlain, but the living ſacrifices of the heart devoted to his will.

Eliſha retires from the camp to the college, not deſiring honour, but labouring to be uſeful. And here five miracles are wrought by him. 1. He multiplies the poor widow's oil, ver. 1—7. 2. He obtains for the good Shunammite the bleſſing of a ſon in her old age, ver. 8—17. 3. He raiſes her child to life when it was dead, ver. 18—37. 4. He heals the deadly pottage, ver. 38—41. 5. He feeds a hundred men with twenty ſmall loaves, ver. 42—44.

1. NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of [a] the ſons of the prophets, unto Eliſha, ſaying, Thy ſervant, my huſband, is dead, and thou knoweſt that thy ſervant did fear the LORD: and the creditor [b] is come to take unto him my two ſons to be bondmen. 2. And Eliſha ſaid unto her, [c] What ſhall I do for thee? tell me what haſt thou in the houſe? And ſhe ſaid, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the houſe, [d] ſave a pot of oil. 3. Then he ſaid, Go borrow thee [e] veſſels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty veſſels, borrow not a few. 4. And when thou art come in, [f] thou ſhalt ſhut the door upon thee, and upon thy ſons, and ſhalt pour out into all thoſe veſſels, and thou ſhalt ſet aſide that which is full. 5. [g] So ſhe went from him, and ſhut the door upon her, and upon her ſons, who brought the veſſels to her, and [h] ſhe poured out. 6. And it came to paſs when the veſſels were [i] full, that ſhe ſaid unto her ſon, Bring me yet a veſſel. And he ſaid unto her, There is not a veſſel more. And [k] the oil ſtayed. 7. Then [l] ſhe came and told the man of God: and he ſaid, Go, ſell the oil, and [m] pay thy debt, and [n] live thou and thy children of the reſt.

v. 1—7. Eliſha, wherever he goes, is found diſpenſing bleſſings around him.

1. A poor widow makes application to him in her diſtreſs: Her huſband, a prophet, whom Eliſha knew, a man who feared God, had died in debt, not contracted by his own extravagances, but by unforeſeen loſſes, or ruined under the perſecution of Jezebel. His cruel creditors now were urgent upon her, and her ſons are ready to be ſeized for bondmen, through her inability to anſwer their demands. Note, (1.) Unforeſeen providences may ruin an honeſt man, and leave him under debts he cannot pay; but he who contracts them without a probability of repaying, or by extravagance out-lives his income, is more diſhoneſt than he that robs or ſteals. (2.) When a good man is under providential afflictions, he may humbly expect as providential relief.

2. Eliſha, though ſilver and gold he had not, yet puts her in a method to pay her debts, and maintain her family. He enquires what ſhe had left; and when he finds ſhe has neither money nor goods of value, but one pot of oil only, that ſhall be a fountain of relief. He bids her borrow of her neighbours empty veſſels, and, to avoid interruption from her creditors, or not to boaſt of the miracle, ſhut her door, and, with her ſons aſſiſtance, fill every veſſel, for the oil ſhould not fail. Without heſitation ſhe complies with the prophet's injunctions, and the inexhauſted ſtream continued flowing till there were no more veſſels remaining. Note, (1.) An honeſt heart will part with the laſt utenſil, rather than not repay a juſt debt. (2.) When we are deſiring in faith on the word of promiſe to be found in the way of duty, God will take care we ſhall not want. (3.) Divine grace, like this fountain of oil, ceaſes not to flow, till every redeemed ſoul is filled with all the fulneſs of God.

3. The widow with joy having acquainted the prophet with the ſucceſs, he directs her to ſell this precious ſtore, firſt ſatisfy her creditors, then live on the reſidue, v. 7. Note, (1.) Before we pretend to enjoy what Providence beſtows, let every juſt debt be paid; for, till then, with what comfort can we eat the bread of injuſtice. (2.) Let the poor, the widow and the fatherleſs caſt their care on God, and he hath promiſed to care for them. (3.) A little, with God's bleſſing, will bring greater contentment, than the affluence of extravagance, and the wages of injuſtice.

8. ¶ And it fell on a day, that Eliſha paſſed to Shunem, where was [o] a great woman, and ſhe conſtrained him to eat bread. And ſo it was, that as oft as he paſſed by, he turned in thither to eat bread. 9. And [p] ſhe ſaid unto her huſband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which paſſeth by us continually. 10. [q] Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall, and let us ſet for him there a bed, and a table, and a ſtool, and a candleſtick: and it ſhall be when he cometh to us, that he ſhall turn in thither. 11. And it fell on a day that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there. 12. And he ſaid to Gehazi his ſervant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, ſhe ſtood before him. 13. And he ſaid unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, [r] thou haſt been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldſt thou be ſpoken for [s] to the king, or to the captain of the hoſt? And ſhe anſwered, I dwell among mine own people. 14. And he ſaid, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi anſwered, Verily [t] ſhe hath no child, and her huſband is old. 15. And he ſaid, Call her. And when he had called her, [u] ſhe ſtood in the door. 16. And he ſaid, About this ſeaſon, according to the time of life, thou ſhalt embrace a ſon. And ſhe ſaid, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie unto thine handmaid. 17. And the woman [x] conceived, and bare a ſon at that ſeaſon that Eliſha had ſaid unto her, according to the time of life.

v. 8—17. Eliſha, in his travels from Carmel to Samaria, often paſſed through Shunem; and we are told,

1. How kindly he was entertained by a good woman there. As God had bleſſed her with affluence, her hoſpitable doors were open to God's prophets; and though Eliſha modeſtly declined going thither, and took up with humbler accommodations, ſhe ſought him out, as a favour begged he would ever take her houſe in his way; and, to engage him to be more than a paſſing gueſt, ſo profitable had ſhe found his ſhort viſits, ſhe ſollicits her huſband to build him a little chamber on the wall, probably of their garden, near their houſe, the expence of which would be trivial, a prophet's chamber needing no elegance, and to appropriate this wholly for him; which being retired from noiſe, would engage him to ſpend more time with them; and to this her huſband gladly conſented. Note, (1.) Modeſt worth deſerves entreaty. (2.) That houſe is highly honoured that entertains a man of God. (3.) A good wife will do nothing without conſulting her huſband, and a good huſband will never give her cauſe to regret her dutiful obedience, by his delight to gratify her in every reaſonable deſire.

2. Eliſha, in gratitude for ſo hoſpitable an entertainment, is willing to make this good woman a grateful return. He ſends

Gehazi, with profeſſions of his ſenſe of her kindneſs, to call her to him, that he might enquire what ſervice would be agreeable to her: as he had intereſt in the court and camp, and would obtain for her huſband preferment in either. She readily obeys the prophet's call, but profeſſes her content in their preſent ſituation, and wants nothing more of worldly advantage than they enjoyed. Eliſha, at a loſs what to do for her, aſks his ſervant, who might be more converſant with the family, and know more of their affairs, who ſuggeſts that a ſon would be the moſt acceptable bleſſing, ſhe being childleſs, and her huſband old. Eliſha having called her back to his chamber-door, where ſhe reſpectfully waited the prophet's pleaſure, aſſures her of what ſhe can ſcarcely believe, and fears he only jeſted that ſhe ſhall have a ſon; but the event verifies the prediction. Note, (1.) A grateful heart will not only acknowledge the kindneſs ſhewn it, but ſeize the firſt occaſion to return it. (2.) They who have ſufficiency and content at home, may well prefer their lot: courts and palaces are ſeldom ſo bleſt. (3.) They who imitate this Shunammite's piety, if here they receive not their reward, may ſhortly expect a portion, better than that of ſons or of daughters.

18. ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers. 19. And he ſaid unto his father, My head, my head. And he ſaid to a lad, Carry him to his mother. 20. And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he ſat on her knees till noon, and then [y] died. 21. And ſhe went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and ſhut the door upon him, and went out. 22. And ſhe called unto her huſband, and ſaid, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the aſſes, that I may run to the man of God, and come again. 23. And he ſaid, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither new moon, nor ſabbath. And ſhe ſaid, It ſhall be † well. 24. Then ſhe ſaddled an aſs, and ſaid to her ſervant, Drive, and go forward; ſlack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee. 25. So ſhe went, and came unto the man of God to mount Carmel: and it came to paſs when the man of God ſaw her afar off, that he ſaid to Gehazi his ſervant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite: 26. Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and ſay unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy huſband? is it well with the child? And ſhe anſwered, It is well. 27. And when ſhe came to the man of God to the hill, ſhe caught him [z] by the feet: but Gehazi came near [a] to thruſt her away. And the man of God ſaid, Let her alone, for her ſoul is ‡ vexed within her: and [b] the LORD hath hid it from me, and hath not told me. 28. Then ſhe ſaid, Did I deſire a ſon of my lord? Did I not ſay, [c] Do not deceive me? 29. Then he ſaid to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and [d] take my ſtaff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, [e] ſalute him not; and if any ſalute thee, anſwer him not again: and lay my ſtaff upon the face of the child. 30. And the mother of the child ſaid, As the LORD liveth, and as thy ſoul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he aroſe, and followed her. 31. And Gehazi paſſed on before them, and laid the ſtaff upon the face of the child, [f] but there was neither voice nor hearing: wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, ſaying, The child is not awaked. 32. And when Eliſha was come into the houſe, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed. 33. He went in therefore, and ſhut the door upon them twain, and [g] prayed unto the LORD. 34. And he went up, and [h] lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands, and he ſtretched himſelf upon the child, and the fleſh of the child waxed warm. 35. Then he returned, and walked in the houſe to and fro, and went up, and ſtretched himſelf upon him: and the child neeſed ſeven times, and the child opened his eyes. 36. And he called Gehazi, and ſaid, Call this Shunammite. So he called her: and when ſhe was come in unto him, he ſaid, [i] Take up thy ſon. 37. Then ſhe went in, and [k] fell at his feet, and bowed herſelf to the ground, and took up her ſon, and went out.

v. 18—37. How precarious is every ſublunary bleſſing! how little dependance to be placed upon the comforts of a periſhing world. We ſee,

1. This darling boy, ſeized in the harveſt field with his father, complains, my head, my head; and is ſent home to the fond mother's boſom, and there death cloſes his eyes. Note, We need ſtand prepared for ſudden ſtrokes; death often ſeizes at ſhort warning.

2. With ſilent ſubmiſſion ſhe took the dear corpſe, and going to the prophet's chamber, laid it on his bed, that the death might not be known, and where it would lie unmoleſted, till her return: then ſhe haſtes to her huſband, and begs leave to go to the man of God. He wonders at her journey, as it was not one of the ſtated ſeaſons when ſhe uſed to join in worſhip with him, v. 23. ſhe ſaid, Well, let me go, or be eaſy till I return; and having his conſent, haſtes to Carmel. At a diſtance obſerving her, the prophet ſends to enquire the reaſon of her coming at this unuſual ſeaſon, and whether all at home were well? She anſwers well; her faith ſpeaks the language of reſignation. Then drawing near, ſhe falls at his feet, whilſt bitter anguiſh ſtops for a while her utterance. Gehazi is aſſiduous to raiſe her up, but the prophet reſtrains him: he ſaw ſome heavy grief oppreſſed her, though the Lord had not revealed to him the cauſe. At laſt, her interrupted words began to flow, and in her queſtions, v. 28. he perceived the cauſe of her diſtreſs. Note, (1.) In every affliction, the conſideration from whoſe hand it comes, ſhould ſilence every complaint. (2.) All is well, when however diſtreſſing the providence we are enabled to ſubmit to, and improve under the viſitation. (3.) If he who gives, takes away, we are called to be thankful for the length of the loan, and not to murmur that God reſumes his gift. (4.) The joys of earth ebb and flow, and when we think the cup of happineſs at our lips, diſappointment robs us of the draught; but we have a more abiding portion, which once ſecured, will never deceive us.

3. Eliſha was as ready to help as ſhe to aſk, and inſtantly diſpatches Gehazi with his ſtaff to lay on the child's face, whilſt he ſhould pray that God would reſtore him to life; but the Shunammite, earneſt that himſelf would go, will not quit him; and he conſents at her importunity, and follows his ſervant. Gehazi meets them on the road, having to no effect executed his commands; and Eliſha himſelf enters the chamber, ſhuts the door, and with earneſt cries to God, begs that the ſpirit of the child may return; then after waiting a while, with ſignificant geſtures, laying his mouth to the child's mouth, &c. in faith of the returning vital breath and heat, the fleſh began to wax warm, the channels of life to be again opened, and after ſneezing ſeven times, the child looked up, and with delight he reſtored him to the tender mother, overwhelmed with gratitude and joy, v. 37. Note, (1.) The word of God in the mouth of his ſervants, like the prophet's ſtaff, is ineffectual to quicken the dead in ſins, unleſs accompanied with the life-giving ſpirit. (2.) In the reſtoration of the ſpiritually dead, tho' the vital principle is infuſed at once, yet the exerciſe of the vital functions is gradually recovered. (3.) They who are ſent to awake the dead, have need to be men of prayer and patience. (4.) If a dead ſon reſtored to life is ſuch a joy to a mother's heart, how much greater comfort ought it to miniſter to ſee the bands of ſpiritual death looſed from our children?

38. ¶ And Eliſha came again to Gilgal, and there was a dearth in the land, and the ſons of the prophets [l] were ſitting before him: and he ſaid unto his ſervant, Set on the great pot, and ſeethe pottage for the ſons of the prophets. 39. And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap-full, and came and ſhred them into the pot of pottage: for [m] they knew them not. 40. So they poured out for the men to eat: and it came to paſs as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and ſaid, O thou man of God, there is death in the pot: and they could not eat thereof. 41. But he ſaid, Then bring meal: and [n] he caſt it into the pot; and he ſaid, Pour out for the people, that they may eat: and there was no † harm in the pot. 42. ¶ And there came a man from Baal-ſhaliſha, and [o] brought the man of God bread of the firſt-fruits, twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn in ‡ the huſk thereof: and he ſaid, Give unto the people, that they may eat. 43. And his ſervitor ſaid, [p] What, ſhould I ſet this before an hundred men? He ſaid again, Give the people, that they may eat: for thus ſaith the LORD, They ſhall eat, and ſhall leave thereof. 44. So he ſet it before them, and they did eat, and [q] left thereof, according to the word of the LORD.

v. 30—44. Eliſha's happy employment was in the prophetic ſchools, to inſtruct and encourage by his advice and experience thoſe who might ſucceed him in the riſing generation. Thus we find him employed at Gilgal; and by his miracles relieving their bodies, whilſt he fed their ſouls.

1. He commands his ſervant to provide a repaſt for his diſciples, ciples, after his inſtructions. They learned temperance in his ſchool, and now the dearth was in the land, ſubſiſtence became more difficult, and the plaineſt fare was welcome. The drought having made herbs ſcarce, the unſkilful ſervant employed to gather them in the fields, found a wild vine (thought to be the Coloquintida, bitter and ſtrongly purgative) and ſhred a quantity of the gourds into the pottage. The taſte quickly diſcovered the noxious quality of the proviſion, and ſuſpecting poiſon, they cried out to Eliſha. He calls for a handful of meal, and caſts it into the pot; the miraculous effect of which healed this bitter broth, as the ſalt the waters of Jericho. Note, (1.) They who preach mortification to others, muſt ſhew themſelves examples of the ſelf-denial they recommend. (2.) The delicacies of the luxurious, and the bowl of the intemperate, are more dangerous than the prophet's meſs; the one only threatned temporal death, the other brings eternal.

2. Eliſha, who before had prevented the poiſonous food from hurting, now makes a few loaves ſuffice for a full repaſt. As Iſrael was cut off from the temple, the few faithful made the prophets God's receivers, and employed their tythes for the ſupport of theſe ſchools of piety. A good man of Baal-ſhaliſha ſent his firſt-fruits of ſome ears of barley and twenty loaves, to Eliſha; poor fare indeed, but acceptable in theſe times of dearth. Theſe he commands to ſet before the people. His ſervant objects to the poſſibility of feeding an hundred men with ſuch ſcanty proviſion; but Eliſha bids him obey, and God will make it, as the event proved, enough and to ſpare. Note, (1.) A good man will not eat his morſel alone, but breaks his bread to the hungry. (2.) When God gives his bleſſing, a little will go far.

CHAP. V.

Two more of Eliſha's miracles are recorded in this chapter. 1. The cleanſing of Naaman, a Syrian, from his leproſy, ver. 1—14. 2. The grateful acknowledgments he made to Eliſha hereupon, ver. 15—19. 3. The ſmiting of Gehazi, his own ſervant, with that leproſy, v. 20—27.

1. NOW [a] Naaman captain of the hoſt of the king of Syria, was a great man with his maſter, and † honourable, becauſe by him the LORD had given deliverance unto Syria: he was alſo a mighty man in valour, [b] but he was a leper. 2. And the Syrians had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Iſrael a little maid, and ſhe waited on Naaman's wife. 3. And [c] ſhe ſaid unto her miſtreſs, Would God my lord were with the prophet that is in Samaria: for he would recover him of his leproſy. 4. And one went in, and told his lord, ſaying, Thus and thus ſaid the maid that is of the land of Iſrael. 5. And the king of Syria ſaid, Go to, go, and I will ſend a letter unto the king of Iſrael. And he departed, and [d] took ‡ with him ten talents of ſilver, and ſix thouſand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment. 6. And he brought the letter to the king of Iſrael, ſaying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith ſent Naaman my ſervant to thee, that thou mayſt recover him of his leproſy. 7. And it came to paſs when the king of Iſrael had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and ſaid, [e] Am I God, [f] to kill and to make alive, that this man doth ſend unto me to recover a man of his leproſy? wherefore conſider, I pray you, and ſee how he ſeeketh a quarrel againſt me. 8. ¶ And it was ſo, when Eliſha the man of God had heard that the king of Iſrael had rent his clothes, that he ſent to the king, ſaying, [g] Wherefore haſt thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he ſhall know that there is a prophet in Iſrael.

v. 1—8. Eliſha's greatneſs and glory continues ſtill the ſubject of the hiſtory. It is a pleaſing epiſode, and a relief from the uniform tenor of evil that was in Iſrael and her kings.

1. Naaman, by means of a captive girl, hears of the prophet's miracles. He was a great general, ſucceſsful in war, a vaſt favourite with his maſter, but a leper. The captive girl, though a child when taken, remembered the great prophet in Samaria, and as a good ſervant, tells her miſtreſs of him, and wiſhes her maſter could ſee him, he could do more for him, than all the phyſicians of Damaſcus. Note, (1.) A little child taught the knowledge of Jeſus the great prophet, may be a ſucceſsful preacher; and by the mouths of babes and ſucklings God can perfect his praiſe. (2.) Every good ſervant muſt ſeek the welfare of the family they are in. (3.) Greatneſs is no protection from the ſoreſt calamities incident to human life. Diſeaſe and death find as eaſy acceſs to the palace as the cottage. (4.) Say all you can of a man's worldly felicity, ſucceſs, honour, one but ſpoils the whole. If he hath the uncured leproſy of ſin upon him, all beſides is but ſplendid miſery.

2. Naaman is eager to improve the hint, though given by ſo mean a perſon, and inſtantly prepares to wait on this great prophet. Having mentioned the matter to the king of Syria, and received a ſtrong recommendation to Jehoram, preſuming his acquaintance and authority with the prophet would facilitate the application and cure. With a great retinue, and loaded with ſuitable preſents for the occaſion, he haſtens on his journey; and being arrived at Samaria, delivers the letter to the king of Iſrael. Note, How willing are men to try every expedient, and grudge no expence or trouble to obtain a cure of their bodily diſeaſes? Who ſhews ſuch eagerneſs to bring their diſeaſed ſouls to the great phyſician, though the cure there is infallible, and alſo without money, and without price.

3. Jehoram no ſooner read the letter, than he rent his cloaths, whether ſhocked at the blaſphemy he ſuppoſed it contained, enjoining him the cure of a leper, which was God's work alone, or terrified with the apprehenſion, that this was done with a deſign to quarrel with him, in order to invade his country. He had ſo little concern with God's prophets himſelf, that he had no idea of a Syrian's coming ſo far to court their aſſiſtance. Note, They who are conſcious of their own ill deſerts, are ready to terrify themſelves at every ſhadow, and put the worſt conſtructions on what hath not the leaſt ill deſign.

4. Eliſha heard the king's diſtreſs, and the cauſe of it, and though he had juſt reaſon to complain of being neglected, yet when the glory of Iſrael's God is concerned, unſought he proffers his ſervice, and will do for this Syrian what Iſrael's king cannot, that he may know there is a prophet in Iſrael. Note, Though wicked men have forfeited every mercy, yet God for his own glory will ſometimes help them beyond all they have reaſon to expect.

9. So Naaman came with his horſes, and with his chariot, and ſtood at the door of the houſe of Eliſha. 10. And Eliſha [h] ſent a meſſenger unto him, ſaying, [i] Go and waſh in Jordan ſeven times, and thy fleſh ſhall come again unto thee, and thou ſhalt be clean. 11. But Naaman was wroth, and [k] went away, and ſaid, Behold, [l] I thought, He will ſurely come out to me, and ſtand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and † ſtrike his hand over the place, and recover the leper. 12. Are not Abana and Pharphar, rivers of Damaſcus, better than all the waters of Iſrael? may I not waſh in them, and be clean? So he turned and went away in a rage. 13. And his ſervants came near, and ſpake unto him, and ſaid, My father, if the prophet had bid thee do ſome great thing, wouldeſt thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he ſaith to thee, Waſh and be clean? 14. Then went he down, and dipped himſelf ſeven times in Jordan, according to the ſaying of the man of God: and his fleſh came again like unto the fleſh of a little child, [m] and he was clean.

[m] 2 Chron. xx. 20.

v. 9—14. We have here,

1. Naaman, in all his pomp and ſplendor, a humble ſuitor at the prophet's door: and he receives an anſwer plain and ſatisfactory, which required only his obedience, and enſured his cure. Note, They who are found waiting upon God, may expect from him an anſwer of peace.

2. Naaman's pride could not bear either the reception he met with, or the preſcription ordered him; and in a rage he departs. He had promiſed himſelf deep reſpect, ſome immediate application to his diſeaſe, and prayer over him for his cure: and not to ſee the prophet, to have only a meſſage by a ſervant; and ſuch a meſſage, ſo fooliſh in his eyes, ſo uſeleſs: Were not the waters of Syria as good as Jordan; and need he have come ſo far to waſh, when he might have the nobler rivers of Abana and Pharphar at home? Note, (1.) A proud ſpirit interprets the leaſt ſuſpected ſlight into an heinous affront. (2.) The ſelf-righteous heart, like Naaman, wiſe in his own conceits, with pride refuſes to apply the ſimple balm of a Saviour's blood, and fancies ſomething beſide is neceſſary to his cure. (3.) They who turn away from God's methods of grace, reject their own mercies.

3. His ſervants, when his firſt rage was ſubſided, preſume, with ſubmiſſion, to reaſon with him on the caſe. If he would have ſubmitted to the moſt expenſive or moſt painful methods, which might have been preſcribed, how much more ought he to yield to one ſo cheap, and ſo eaſy? Note, (1.) Men in a paſſion are deaf to the plaineſt arguments; when they cool, reaſon will be heard. (2.) A good ſervant will rather hazard to diſpleaſe his maſter, than ſee him wound himſelf by his folly; but if he would ſucceed, he muſt wait the proper time, and add the reſpect and deference which may engage attention. (3.) None ought to be above being told of their faults; and there are none that are ſo high in grace, as not to have ſome to find in them. (4.) The plainneſs and freedom of the way of ſalvation, will render thoſe who reject it the more inexcuſable.

4. Naaman heard the wiſe advice, and convinced of the reaſonableneſs of the trial, deſcends to the river, where the experiment exceeds his expectation. His leproſy departed, and his fleſh became ſoft, fair and plump, as the fleſh of a little child. Can the waters of Jordan thus cleanſe the leprous Syrian, and ſhall not the fountain of a Saviour's blood much more cleanſe the leprous ſinner, that in faith deſcends to waſh his ſpotted ſoul in this all-purifying ſtream?

15. ¶ And he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came and ſtood before him: and he ſaid, Behold, now I know that [n] there is no God in all the earth, but in Iſrael: now therefore, I pray thee [o] take a bleſſing of thy ſervant. 16. But he ſaid, As the LORD liveth, before whom I ſtand, [p] I will receive none. And he urged him to take it, but he refuſed. 17. And Naaman ſaid, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy ſervant two mules burden of earth? for thy ſervant will henceforth offer neither burnt-offering, nor ſacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD. 18. In this thing the LORD pardon thy ſervant, that when my maſter † goeth into the houſe of Rimmon to worſhip there, and he leaneth on my hand, and I bow myſelf in the houſe of Rimmon: when I bow down myſelf in the houſe of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy ſervant in this thing. 19. And he ſaid unto him, Go in peace. So he departed from him a little way.

v. 15—19. He who turned away in a rage, convinced by experience, returns with humility and gratitude to acknowledge the mercy he had received.

1. He ſolemnly confeſſes his faith in Iſrael's God, as the alone Jehovah; and renouncing all his idols, reſolves henceforth to offer ſacrifice to no other God. Note, we then only truly know God, when, not by mere reaſoning, but by bleſſed experience we find his ſaving power exerciſed on our hearts.

2. He preſſes the prophet to accept a preſent from him, as the token of his gratitude; but this, though indigent, and able well to employ it for his poor pupils, he ſolemnly refuſes, not as unlawful, but as inexpedient: it would be more for the honour of his God to ſhew a contempt of this world's wealth. Note, (1.) Nothing ſo diſhonourable in a prophet, as the appearance of a mercenary ſpirit. (2.) Where the heart is fixed on a better portion, it can ſit looſe to gold as droſs.

3. He makes a two-fold requeſt, with which the prophet complies. (1.) He begs two mules burden of earth, to build an altar to Iſrael's God, and henceforth his own. He looked on the land of Syria as polluted with idols; and now is as attached to the very earth of Iſrael, as he ſeemed before to deſpiſe it. Note, When the heart is turned to God, how differently do we regard every thing which relates to him? that which was our contempt or averſion, has now our warmeſt affections. (2.) He begs Eliſha's prayers for him, as it was his own; that his paſt idolatry might be pardoned: not that he might be permitted ſtill, as our tranſlation intimates, to bow in the houſe of Rimmon, in complaiſance to his maſter: the words may be rendered, When my maſter went into the houſe of Rimmon, and leaned on my hand, and I bowed myſelf: when I bowed myſelf, the Lord pardon thy ſervant in this thing; which intimates, that theſe acts of idolatry were paſt, and that henceforward he would do ſo no more. To ſuch a gracious appearance the prophet cannot but give his approbation, and diſmiſſes him in peace, as one accepted of God. Note, (1.) Paſt tranſgreſſions ſhould be ever remembered and lamented. (2.) They are to be encouraged, who give gracious ſymptoms of real converſion to God.

20. ¶ But Gehazi the ſervant of Eliſha the man of God ſaid, Behold, my maſter hath ſpared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought: but as the LORD liveth, [q] I will run after him, and take ſomewhat of him. 21. So Gehazi followed after Naaman: and when Naaman ſaw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and ſaid, Is all well? 22. And he ſaid, All is well: my maſter hath ſent me, ſaying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the ſons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of ſilver, and two changes of garments. 23. And Naaman ſaid, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of ſilver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his ſervants, and they bare them before him. 24. And when he came to † the tower, he took them from their hand, and beſtowed them in the houſe; and he let the men go, and they departed. 25. But he went in, and ſtood before his maſter: and Eliſha ſaid unto him, Whence comeſt thou, Gehazi? And he ſaid, Thy ſervant went no whither. 26. And he ſaid unto him, Went not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee [r]? is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and olive-yards, and vine-yards, and ſheep, and oxen, and men-ſervants and maid-ſervants? 27. The leproſy therefore of Naaman ſhall cleave unto thee, and [s] unto thy ſeed for ever. And he went out from his preſence [t] a leper as white as ſnow.

v. 20—27. Of all men in Iſrael, there was not one from whom we might expect more exemplary piety, than from the favoured Gehazi, the companion almoſt rather than ſervant of the prophet, bleſſed with his daily converſation, and beholding continually his bright example; and yet we find him as vile and hardened as the moſt idolatrous Iſraelite. Note, The beſt of men and miniſters cannot change even thoſe under their own roof. Nay, to their grief they behold them ſometimes more inſenſible and ſtupid than any others.

1. Gehazi's ſin was great. A lover of filthy lucre, v. 20. he could not ſee the gifts without hankering for them, and blaming his maſter's refuſal. A liar and robber, v. 22, 23. careleſs what diſhonour he brought on the prophet, or what diſguſt Naaman might take againſt God from ſuch a proceedure. Crafty and diſſembling, v. 24. and as if he could deceive the ſpirit of God in his maſter, ſeeking to cover one lye by a worſe. Note, (1.) The love of money is the root of all evil. They who reſolve to be rich, reſolve to be damned, 1 Tim. vi. 9. (2.) Covetouſneſs and lying are near allied. (3.) When the heart is hardened by one ſin, it is more eaſily diſpoſed to a greater. (4.) Hope of concealment and impunity is the great encouragement to do evil.

2. His puniſhment was exemplary. Eliſha ſilences his lying tongue. His ſpirit followed him to the chariot, and to the place where the robbery was depoſited, and clearly foreſaw how he deſigned to lay out theſe wages of unrighteouſneſs, v. 26. but ſhort enjoyment ſhall his wickedneſs afford him. The curſe of God is denounced upon him, the ſilver of Naaman is turned into his leproſy to eat up his fleſh, and the diſeaſe entailed upon his lateſt poſterity. Eliſha's doors are immediately ſhut againſt him, and he departs a leper, loathſome as incurable. Note, (1.) The joy of proſperous wickedneſs is ſhort-lived, tranſitory, and terminates in ſorrows bitter as endleſs. (2.) Thus ſhall God at laſt lay open men's folly, ſin, and ſhame; and ſpeechleſs before him, they ſhall be driven from his preſence, to ſuffer the juſt reward of their deeds.

And one ſaid, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy ſervants. And he anſwered, I will go. 4. So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood. 5. But as one was felling a beam, the ‡ ax-head fell into the water: and he cried, and ſaid, Alas maſter, for it was borrowed. 6. And the man of God ſaid, Where fell it? And he ſhewed him the place. And [a] he cut down a ſtick, and caſt it in thither, and the iron did ſwim. 7. Therefore ſaid he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

v. 1—7. Under Eliſha's care, the ſchool of the prophets at Gilgal flouriſhed; and ſuch a reſort was there to attend him, that the place was too ſmall to contain them. Note, It is a good ſymptom both of a true prophet and a gracious people, when diligence to preach, and attention to hear, enlarges the auditory.

1. They propoſe building another ſeminary near the banks of Jordan; and with Eliſha's conſent, and under his eye, they would, without delay, begin the work. As they were poor, they muſt be their own builders; and though prophets ſons, diſdain-diſdained not the mean employment to which their poverty reduced them. Note, (1.) The greateſt of heaven's bleſſings are uſually beſtowed on thoſe who eat bread with the ſweat of their brow. (2.) A miniſter of God muſt be content, if need be to miniſter to his neceſſities by the labour of his own hands.

2. An accident happened to one of them, as they felled the timber, v. 5. which gave him the greater uneaſineſs, becauſe the ax was borrowed, and perhaps he was unable to repay the loſs, though ſmall. Note, (1.) What is kindly lent us, we ſhould be doubly careful of. (2.) They who are affluent, conceive not how great an affliction an inconſiderable loſs is to thoſe who are indigent.

3. Eliſha pitied and relieved him, at the expence of a miracle. On throwing in a piece of wood at the place where it fell, he cauſed the iron to ſwim, and reſtored it to the thankful owner. Note, (1.) When we can make the poor mourner rejoice by a ſmall relief, ſhall we refuſe him the joy that coſts us ſo little? (2.) The heart moſt irrecoverably ſunk to human view in the floods of ungodlineſs, and of earthly cares or pleaſures, is not beyond the power of divine grace.

8. Then the king of Syria warred againſt Iſrael, and [b] took counſel with his ſervants, ſaying, In ſuch and ſuch a place ſhall be my camp. 9. And the man of God ſent unto the king of Iſrael, ſaying, Beware that thou paſs not ſuch a place; for thither the Syrians are come down. 10. And the king of Iſrael [c] ſent to the place which the man of God told him, and warned him of, and ſaved himſelf there, not once nor twice. 11. Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was † ſore troubled for this thing, and he called his ſervants and ſaid unto them, Will ye not ſhew me which of us is for the king of Iſrael? 12. And one of his ſervants ſaid, None, my lord O king: but Eliſha the prophet, that is in Iſrael, telleth the king of Iſrael the words [d] that thou ſpeakeſt in thy bed-chamber.

v. 8—12. We have here,

1. A new invaſion of Iſrael. On what occaſion is not ſaid. Note, The enemies of God's Iſrael will not ſuffer them long to reſt in peace.

2. Eliſha by his prophetic ſpirit, acquainted the king of Iſrael with all the ambuſcades and motions of the Syrians, by which they were conſtantly diſappointed in their deſigns. Note, (1.) God knows how to fruſtrate the wiſeſt counſels of the crafty againſt his church and people. (2.) When God by his prophets gives us warning, it is our wiſdom to hear and prepare for the day of evil, leaſt if we continue ſecure in our ſins, death ſhould ſurprize us, and we periſh through our folly.

3. The king of Syria ſuſpected a traitor in his council, but one of his ſervants wiſely appriſes him of the diſcoverer of his ſecrets, Eliſha's ſpirit viſited his moſt retired chamber. Note, There is no place hid from the ſearching eye of God; even the ſecrets of all hearts to him are naked and open.

And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man, and he ſaw: and behold, the mountain was [k] full of horſes, and chariots of fire round about Eliſha. 18. And when they came down to him, Eliſha prayed unto the LORD, and ſaid, [l] Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindneſs. And he ſmote them with blindneſs, according to the word of Eliſha. 19. ¶ And Eliſha ſaid unto them, This is not the way, neither is this the city: follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye ſeek. But he led them to Samaria. 20. And it came to paſs when they were come into Samaria, that Eliſha ſaid, LORD, open the eyes of theſe men that they may ſee. And the LORD opened their eyes, and they ſaw, and behold, they were in the mids of Samaria. 21. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto Eliſha, when he ſaw them, My father, ſhall I ſmite them? ſhall I ſmite them? 22. Before Chriſt 893.
[m] Prov. xxv. 21. Rom. xii. 20.

v. 13—23. Till Eliſha was ſecured, the king of Syria deſpairs of ſucceſs; and therefore to effect this,

1. He ſends an armed force to ſurround Dothan by night, where he underſtood the prophet was: a fooliſh attempt! Could he who revealed his deſigns againſt the king, be ignorant of this upon himſelf?

2. Eliſha's ſervant in the morning runs to his maſter in a terrible fright, to acquaint him with the danger, as if now they were all undone and loſt. Note, Weak believers are intimidated with the approach of danger, and becauſe they feel their own impotence, are ready to deſpair of God's power and grace.

3. Eliſha quickly ſilences his fears. One comfortable word of encouragement points him to a ſafe protector, and that his weak faith might be helped by ſight, at Eliſha's prayer, the ſervants eyes are opened, and he beheld the angelic hoſt, appearing like chariots and horſes of fire round the city. Note, (1.) Whoever are our foes, if God be for us, we have ſtrength and numbers on our ſide. To encourage the fearful, to ſupport the weak, and comfort the feeble-minded, is the office of every faithful miniſter. (3.) They who have the eye of faith opened, behold cherubic legions as their guard, and the King of Glory at their head, ſaying, none ſhall pluck them out of my hand. (4.) We have need pray continually for ourſelves and others, that the eyes of our minds may be daily more enlightened.

4. He that prayed for the opening the eyes of his ſervants, ſucceeds as effectually for the cloſing the eyes of his enemies. Bewilder'd in their apprehenſions, they no longer knew either the place or the prophet, but gave themſelves up to him as their guide; promiſing to conduct them to the man they ſought: and when he had brought them into Samaria, as men awakened from a dream, they beheld their danger when there was no poſſibility of their eſcape. Note, (1.) It is juſt in God to give thoſe up to the blindneſs of their own hearts, who chuſe not the knowledge of the truth, that they might be ſaved. (2.) How terrible will be the ſinner's diſappointment, when led captive by the devil at his will; buoyed up with fooliſh hopes of heaven, he marches confidently on, till death awakens him from his lethargy, and he is aſtoniſhed to find himſelf in hell.

5. Eliſha merciful as mighty, diſmiſſes them in peace, after the moſt hoſpitable entertainment. The king of Iſrael is eager to improve the advantage by deſtroying his enemies, but Eliſha reſtrains him. Had they been priſoners of war, they were entitled to mercy; how much more when not his arm, but God's providence had brought them into his power? rather let him conquer them again by his clemency and generoſity; and as they were now laid at his feet for mercy, entertain them nobly, and diſmiſs them peaceably. The king readily complies, and they return as much aſtoniſhed at their generous treatment, as convinced of the impoſſibility of cruſhing thoſe whom God ſo protected. Returning, they made no more attempts to ſeize the prophet; or perhaps theſe bands, when a new attack was meditated, refuſe to ſerve any more againſt the people of Iſrael. Note, (1.) To forgive our enemies is not only enjoined us, but to do good to thoſe who hate us. Hard the taſk, but what cannot Almighty Grace effect? (2.) They who will not be overcome with kindneſs and love, are deſperately hardened indeed.

v. 24—33. Soon was the grateful remembrance of the late kindneſs worn out of the memory of the king of Syria. For,

1. We find him here beſieging Samaria; and either through the unexpected attack, or the dearth which was in the land, the famine quickly rages in the city, ſo that an aſſes head ſold for nine or ten pounds; and half a pint of vetches (ſo in general interpreters underſtand what is tranſlated dove's dung) for twelve ſhillings. Not, (1.) War is a dreadful ſcourge. (2.) By the miſeries we hear of famine, we ſhould learn to value the plenty we enjoy.

2. A moſt melancholy caſe is brought to the king. As he went round the walls, a woman cried to him, as he ſuppoſed for relief, which he with bitterneſs declares is not in his power to give, v. 27. but willing to know her caſe, he aſked; and ſhe relates a ſtory, v. 28, 29. which we ſhudder but to read, and fulfilled the threatning, Deut. xxviii. 53—57. Struck with horror and grief, the king rent his clothes, and under them appeared the ſackcloth, that he wore in token of their deep diſtreſs and humiliation. Note, (1.) In our ſoul-diſtreſſes, if God be not our friend, vain is the help of man. (2.) None know the miſeries that await them before they die, we need pray that God would prepare us, for what he hath prepared for us. (3.) Raging hunger may overcome the ſtrongeſt natural affections.

3. Jehoram vents his rage at their diſtreſs on the innocent Eliſha, and impiouſly and profanely threatens to murder him, as if by adviſing them to hold out, by foretelling the famine, or not obtaining deliverance from it, he had been the author of their calamities. Note, (1.) An unhumbled heart kicks againſt the pricks, and turns that revenge on the innocent, which ſhould be employed againſt his ſinful ſelf. (2.) They who are the only ſuſpenders of Divine judgments, have often been accuſed as the cauſe of them.

4. Eliſha knew in his houſe the wicked purpoſes of the king, and juſtly complains of this ſon of a murderer to thoſe who are around him: bids them ſtay the meſſenger at the door, till his maſter, who was cloſe at his heels, ſhould enter, who abandoned to deſpair, ſeems determined to ſurrender at diſcretion, no proſpect of relief appearing. Note, (1.) They who work wickedneſs, muſt thank themſelves for the brand God puts upon them. (2.) God is the primary author of all our ſufferings; and it is by looking above the inſtruments to him, that we ought to learn ſubmiſſion. (3.) The greateſt ſin, and the greateſt miſery we can be given up to, is deſpair.

2. He denounces the doom of the unbelieving lord, that refuſed to credit his prediction, v. 2. [g] If we ſay, We will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we ſhall die there: and if we ſit ſtill here, we die alſo. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the hoſt of the Syrians: if they ſave us alive, we ſhall live; and if they kill us, we ſhall but die. 5. And they roſe up in the twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermoſt part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there. 6. For the LORD had made the hoſt of the Syrians to [h] hear a noiſe of chariots, and a noiſe of horſes, even the noiſe of a great hoſt: and they ſaid one to another, Lo, the king of Iſrael hath hired againſt us the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians to come upon us. 7. Wherefore they aroſe and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horſes, and their aſſes, even the camp as it was, and [i] fled for their life. 8. And when theſe lepers came to the uttermoſt part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence ſilver and gold, and raiment, and went and [k] hid it; and came again, and entred into another tent, and carried thence alſo, and went and hid it. 9. Then they ſaid one to another, We do not well: [l] this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, † ſome miſchief will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's houſhold. 10. So they came, and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, ſaying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horſes tied, and aſſes tied, and the tents as they were. 11. And he called the porters, and they told it to the king's houſe within.

v. 3—11. God will be found true, and all who diſtruſt him be proved liars.

1. According to his word the ſiege is raiſed, and by his own power a dreadful panic is ſent among the hoſts of Syria. A terrible ſound of horſes and chariots is heard, and fear magnifying their danger, they conclude the Egyptians and Hittites are hired to fall on them, and that nothing but inſtant flight can ſecure their lives. They immediately quit the camp, and each man with the utmoſt precipitation runs for his life. Note, (1.) God's terrors can make the ſtouteſt tremble. (2.) The wicked fleeth when no man purſueth.

2. The diſcovery of the flight is made by four lepers, who carry tidings of it into the city. Famiſhing in their ſecluded hut without the gate, neither daring to enter the city, nor hoping for any relief thence; ſince die they muſt, if they abode where they were, they reſolve to go to the Syrian camp, hoping that compaſſion might engage them to relieve them: at worſt, they can but die. They immediately go, and how great their aſtoniſhment to find the camp deſerted, and all the tents and every thing in them remaining. Hunger firſt called for relief, and when that was ſatisfied, they began to load themſelves with the richeſt plunder, till by and by recollecting how unkind this was to their brethren, to neglect acquainting them with the good news, and how dangerous it might be to themſelves, if they ſhould be found to have concealed the glad tidings, merely to enrich themſelves, they haſte back to the city, and acquaint the centinel with the ſtate of the Syrian camp, v. 10. and inſtantly the news is carried to the king. Note, (1.) Every ſinner is in theſe lepers caſe; where they are if they continue, they muſt periſh. There is but one door of hope; the compaſſion of that God they have made their enemy, and happy is it, when ſelf-deſpair drives us to him. (2.) The mercies we ourſelves have experienced, we muſt publiſh for the comfort and edification of our brethren.

12. ¶ And the king aroſe in the night, and ſaid unto his [m] ſervants, I will now ſhew you what the Syrians have done to us: they know that we be hungry, therefore are they gone out of the camp, to hide themſelves in the field, ſaying, When they come out of the city, we ſhall catch them alive, and get into the city. 13. And one of his ſervants anſwered and ſaid, Let ſome take, I pray thee, five of the horſes that remain, which are left in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Iſrael that are left in it: behold, I ſay, they are even as all the multitude of the Iſraelites that are conſumed) and let us ſend and ſee. 14. They took therefore two † chariot-horſes, and the king ſent after the hoſt of the Syrians, ſaying, Go and ſee. 15. And they went after them unto Jordan, and which the Syrians had caſt away in their haſte: and the [o] Ver. 1. [o] a meaſure of fine flour was ſold for a ſhekel, and two meaſures of barley for a ſhekel, according to the word of the LORD. 17. ¶ And the king appointed the lord on whoſe hand he leaned, to have the charge of the gate:

and the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had ſaid, who ſpake when the king came down to him. 18. And it came to paſs as the man of God had ſpoken to the king, ſaying, Two meaſures of barley for a ſhekel, and a meaſure of fine flour for a ſhekel, ſhall be to-morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria: 19. And that lord anſwered the man of God, [p] Pſ. lxxviii. 19—21. and ſaid, Now behold, [p] if the LORD ſhould make windows in heaven, might ſuch a thing be? And he ſaid, Behold, thou ſhalt ſee it with thine eyes, but ſhalt

[r] Numb. xx. 12. Iſa. xli. 25. Jer. xvii. 6. the people [r] trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

v. 12—20. Rouzed by theſe tidings the king aroſe; and, conſcious how little reaſon he had to expect Divine interpoſition, his guilty conſcience darkened with ſuſpicion, fears that this is but a ſtratagem laid to enſnare him, v. 12. However, for greater certainty,

1. One of his ſervants propoſes to ſend five horſemen, the laſt of all their multitude, the reſt of the horſes being dead with hunger, or eaten through the famine. Two are immediately diſpatched, perhaps no more being found fit for ſervice: and ſoon they brought back the confirmation of the real flight, and that in their confuſion the roads were covered with their garments, or armour, which they had caſt off for greater expedition.

2. The people now flew to the camp, where, among other ſpoil, ſuch vaſt quantities of proviſion were found, that, according to the prophet's word, that very day a meaſure of fine flour was ſold in the gate for a ſhekel. Note, (1.) Not a tittle of God's word ſhall ever fail. O that we had but faith to truſt him! (2.) Supported by paſt experience, let us never deſpair, but patiently wait the ſalvation of God.

3. The unbelieving lord ſuffers the doom denounced upon him. He was appointed to command at the gate which led to the camp, in order to prevent tumults; but the people were ſo eager to get to the ſpoil, and ſatiſfy their hunger, that they paid no regard to authority; but each man preſſing forward, the crowd was ſo great, that whilſt he interpoſed to keep order, he was trodden to death in the gate. Note, (1.) The wicked favourites of kings have often fallen the victims of popular rage. (2.) God's threatnings ſhall be as aſſuredly fulfilled as his promiſes. He who hath ſaid, He that believeth ſhall be ſaved, hath as unalterably determined, that Whoſo believeth not, ſhall be damned. (3.) Human greatneſs or glory is no protection from the arm of the holy God. The greateſt men are worms of duſt before him: he treads on princes as mortar, and brings contempt on all the honourable of the earth.

that Eliſha hath done. 5. And it came to paſs as he was telling the king how he had reſtored a dead body to life, that behold, the woman whoſe ſon he had reſtored to life, cried to the king for her houſe, and for her land.
And Gehazi ſaid, My lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her ſon, whom Eliſha reſtored to life. 6. And Before Christ 885.

king appointed unto her a certain † officer, ſaying, Re- † Or, eunuch.
ſtore all that was her's, and all the fruits of the field,

v. 1—6. We have here,

1. The advice of Eliſha to his kind hoſteſs at Shunem. He warned her to remove betimes to ſome neighbouring country, becauſe of the approaching famine; and Philiſtia being near, ſhe there fixed her abode. Note, (1.) Men's ſins provoke God's judgments, and his own unfaithful Iſrael ſhall feel the ſcourge heavier than even their idolatrous neighbours. (2.) The prudent man foreſeeth the evil and hideth himſelf.

2. As ſoon as the famine was over, ſhe haſted home, and to her grief found her land either ſeized by the officers for the crown, as forfeited for her leaving the kingdom; or the perſon entruſted with it, refuſed to give up poſſeſſion. For want of a friend with the king, which once ſhe thought ſhe ſhould never need, See chap. iv. 13. ſhe is conſtrained to apply to him herſelf for redreſs; and ſo providence graciouſly ordered it, that at this very inſtant he was diſcourſing with Gehazi, Eliſha's ſervant, about his miracles, and this very woman and her ſon were the ſubject, who now opportunely appear to confirm his narrative. Gehazi being ſtill Eliſha's ſervant, ſhews that this event preceded the cure of Naaman, and the ſiege of Samaria. Note, (1.) The world is ſo full of knavery, that it is hard finding a man in whom confidence is to be repoſed. (2.) A ſtrange coincidence of events, exactly ſuited to accompliſh our deſires, proves often to a demonſtration the finger of an over-ruling Governor. (3.) God can raiſe us up friends in our difficulties, where we leaſt expected them.

3. The king having heard from the woman herſelf the confirmation of Gehazi's report, orders an officer to put her in poſſeſſion of her eſtate, and ſee that every farthing of the profits of it, from the day ſhe left it, be faithfully accounted for. Note, (1.) If the ears of kings are open to the cries of the oppreſſed, how much more will the King of kings hear their prayers and help them. (2.) The glory of a government is the righteous and impartial adminiſtration of juſtice.

7. ¶ And Eliſha came to Damaſcus; and Ben-hadad About 885.

And Hazael ſaid, But what, [h] is thy ſervant a dog, [i] that [h] Pſ. xxii. 16, 20.
he ſhould do this great thing? And Eliſha anſwered, [i] Jer. xvii. 9. Mat. xxvi. 33, 35.

to his maſter, who ſaid to him, What ſaid Eliſha to [k] 1 Kings xix. 15.

[l] ſpread it on his face, ſo that he died: and Hazael reign- [l] Jer. xlii. 1, 2. Mat. xxvi. 49.

v. 7—15. What brought Eliſha to Damaſcus is uncertain; what he did there, we are informed.

1. He is conſulted by Ben-hadad concerning the event of his ſickneſs. The king of Syria no ſooner was apprized of his being there, than the report of his former miracles weighed more with him than all his idol gods, and he places greater confidence in the prophet of the Lord, than in all the prieſts of Damaſcus. With great reſpect he addreſſes him, ſends his prime miniſter to be his meſſenger, and orders a magnificent preſent, as a token of his regard. Note, (1.) Sickneſs and death pay no compliments to crowned heads. (2.) Many on their death-beds ſend to God's miniſters, that, all their lives long, paid little or no regard to them. (3.) The ſinner that lieth ſick is uſually more ſollicitous to know, Shall I recover? than to enquire, What ſhall I do to be ſaved?

2. Eliſha anſwers his enquiry. His ſickneſs was not mortal, yet his death was determined by the hand of the meſſenger he had ſent. On him Eliſha fixes his eyes with ſuch earneſtneſs, that Hazael, quite confounded, aſks the reaſon of the tears that burſt from the prophet's eyes. With aſtoniſhment he hears the reaſon aſſigned, v. 12. and expreſſes his indignation at the ſuſpicions of his barbarity the prophet entertains; or his inſufficiency, as a dog, for the execution of ſuch a ſcene of deſolations. But Eliſha declares his approaching advancement, and whilſt power armed his hand, change of ſtation would beget change of temper; and what now he ſtartled at, would then no longer ſhock him. Note, (1.) Death often enters not by the diſeaſe we moſt feared, but on the ſide we thought ourſelves moſt ſecure. (2.) A good man cannot ſee miſery, without dropping a tear of compaſſion over it. (3.) That ſin, which at firſt ſhocked with the mention of it, by degrees men commit without horror. (4.) They who are ignorant of the deſperate wickedneſs of the fallen heart, will not believe that poſſible, which is uſually but the natural fruit of the corrupted root. (5.) Self-confidence is a ſad ſymptom of a ſure fall. They who think themſelves above the power of temptation, are the eaſieſt prey to the tempter. (6.) Honours change men's manners: few ever grew better by advancement; many, very many, have been undone by it.

3. Hazael quickly ſhows how deceitful was his heart. He begins with a lie, and after that we need wonder at nothing that follows. Concealing the fatal part of his meſſage, he aſſures the king he would recover: the prophet ſaid might; but he perverted his words, to lull the king into ſecurity, and, the very next day, ſtifled him with a wet cloth; and, having an intereſt in the army, ſucceeded him in the throne. Note, (1.) They are our moſt dangerous enemies, that by flattering us with life, divert us from ſerious preparation for death. (2.) The word of God is not to be blamed for the wickedneſs of men, who abuſe it to their encouragement in iniquity.

16. ¶ And in the fifth year of Joram the ſon of Ahab king of Iſrael, Jehoſhaphat being then king of Judah, Jehoram the ſon of Jehoſhaphat king of Judah began † to reign. 17. Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jeruſalem. 18. v. 16—24. We have here,

1. An account of the wicked reign of Jehoram king of Judah, who, during his father's life, was aſſociated with him to govern. Utterly unlike the good Jehoſhaphat, he cleaved to the ſins of the houſe of Ahab; and having taken his daughter to wife, ſhe poiſoned his heart with her idolatries. Note, (1.) Good men, to their grief, have very wicked children. (2.) A wicked wife is among the greateſt of God's plagues. (3.) Nothing ſo dangerous to young men as bad connections. Much more eaſily will they imbibe the principles and practices of a wicked Ahab, than of a pious Jehoſhaphat.

2. His wickedneſs received ſevere rebukes. Though God would not, for David's ſake, and for the ſake of the Meſſiah, the light of his Iſrael, utterly cut them off, yet he began to cut them ſhort. (1.) In the revolt of the Edomites their tributaries; and though Jehoram in battle vanquiſhed them, yet he could not ſubdue them, See Gen. xxvii. 40. being diverted, (2.) By the revolt of Libnah, a city of Levites, in the tribe of Judah, who, rather than be compelled to idolatry, 2 Chron. xxi. 10, 11. reſolved to maintain their liberty. Thus on a tottering throne Jehoram ſat a few years, and then God put a period to his wicked life by a miſerable death, See 2 Chron. xxi. 19. Note, Tyrants, who abuſe the power with which God hath entruſted them, will often meet here the puniſhment of their cruelty and oppreſſion, and certainly hereafter an avenging God.

And king Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him at Ramoth, when he fought againſt Hazael king of Syria, and [y] Ahaziah the ſon of Jehoram king of Judah, went down to ſee Joram the ſon of Ahab in Jezreel, becauſe he was † ſick.

What could elſe be expected from the ſon of Jezebel's daughter, and the example of a father ſo abandoned. At the requeſt of Joram his uncle, he went to battle with him to Ramoth-gilead, where Joram was wounded, and, having taken the place, was carried to Jezreel to be healed. Thither Ahaziah went to viſit him, and met, as we ſhall find, the death he deſerved. Note, (1.) When the ſinner's body is wounded, how ſollicitous is he to be healed, whilſt the more dangerous wounds of his ſoul neglected, ſtink and are corrupt through his fooliſhneſs. (2.) then flee immediately. Note, (1.) When we are employed in God's work, zeal and diligence are neceſſary. (2.) We muſt not expoſe ourſelves to needleſs danger; whilſt in the way of duty we ſhould be ever fearleſs. (3.) They who are ſent of God, muſt be faithful in delivering their meſſage as they have received it of the Lord, whether it be good or bad.

2. The commiſſion is executed with all diſpatch and fidelity. He comes to Ramoth-gilead, goes to the place where they were aſſembled, either at an entertainment, or in counſel; addreſſes himſelf to Jehu, and on repeating it, at his queſtion, that his buſineſs was with him, Jehu takes the prophet aſide. Hereupon he inveſts him with the regal power over God's people, and charges him to execute God's utter vengeance in the extirpation of the houſe of Ahab, the meaſure of whoſe iniquities the blood of God's prophets had filled up. His buſineſs finiſhed, he inſtantly departed, to acquaint Eliſha with what he had done. Note, (1.) Though God's people are unfaithful, he doth not utterly caſt them off, but ſtill remembers his covenant relation to them. (2.) They who rule, muſt remember whence all power is derived, and be humble; and for what end it is given, that they may employ it to God's glory. (3.) Perſecutors of God's people are among the moſt heinous offenders: againſt all ſuch his bow is bent, and his arrows ready on the ſtring. (4.) They who perſiſt in impenitence, will be rooted out at the laſt.

11. ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the ſervants of his lord, and one ſaid unto him, Is all well? wherefore came [m] this mad fellow to thee? And he ſaid unto them, Ye know the man and his communication. 12. And they ſaid, It is falſe, tell us now. And he ſaid, Thus and thus ſpake he to me, ſaying, Thus ſaith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Iſrael. 13. Then they haſted, and took every man his garment, and [n] put it under him on the top of the ſtairs, and blew with trumpets, ſaying, Jehu † is king. 14. So Jehu the ſon of Jehoſhaphat the ſon of Nimſhi conſpired againſt Joram: (Now Joram had kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Iſrael, becauſe of Hazael king of Syria: 15. But king ‡ Joram [o] was returned to be healed in Jezreel, of the wounds which the Syrians had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria.) And Jehu ſaid, If it be your minds, then let none go forth nor eſcape out of the city, to go to tell it in Jezreel.

v. 11—15. Jehu returned, no doubt, with concern upon his countenance, reſolving to wait till a favourable opportunity offered, and this was quickly given him.

1. The captains enquire of him what meſſage this mad fellow brought; ſo did theſe great men regard the holy prophets of God, whoſe lives of ſelf-denial and deadneſs to the world, appeared to them real madneſs. Jehu heſitates at firſt, and would put them off with an evaſive anſwer, as if they might eaſily gueſs what meſſage ſuch a kind of man brought, ſome religious reproof, or warning, no doubt. But they ſuſpected there was more in the matter than he ſpoke, as perhaps the confuſion and ſtruggle in which he appeared, indicated. At laſt, when he ſaw them eager to know, he told them plainly, and reſolved immediately to try, truſting on the Divine promiſe, what effect it would produce. Note, (1.) It is not the laſt time God's zealous ſervants have been called madmen. Thus Paul was branded, and even the bleſſed Jeſus; let none of his followers therefore marvel, if a carnal world ſtill thus judge of them. (2.) If worldly men expect from God's prophets reproof and religious converſation, let them not be diſappointed by an endeavour to ſecure their regard at the expence of ſilence, or any ſinful compliance with them.

2. They no ſooner hear, than with unanimous voice they ſalute him king, God ſo inclining their hearts; and in public, ſetting him on an eminent ſeat, with carpets or tapeſtry ſpread under him, they blew with trumpets, and tender him their allegiance. Jehu reſolves, with their advice, to prevent intelligence being carried to Joram, and inſtantly to ſurprize him in Jezreel, unprepared to make any reſiſtance. Note, (1.) Wicked kings are on a tottering throne. A ſpark will eaſily kindle general diſcontent into a flame. (2.) A terrible deſtruction hangs over the ſinner's head; and death, whenever it comes, will ſurprize him unprepared.

16. So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel, (for Joram lay there) and [p] Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to ſee Joram. 17. And there ſtood a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he ſpied the company of Jehu as he came, and he ſaid, I ſee a company. And Joram ſaid, Take an horſeman, and ſend to meet them, and let him ſay, Is it peace? 18. So there went one on horſeback to meet him, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu ſaid, † What haſt thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, ſaying, The meſſenger came to them, but he cometh not again. 19. Then he ſent out a ſecond on horſeback, which came to them, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu anſwered, What haſt thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. 20. And the watchman told, ſaying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the driving is like the driving of Jehu the ſon of Nimſhi; for he driveth ‡ furiouſly. 21. And Joram ſaid, Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Iſrael, and Ahaziah king of Judah went out, each in his chariot, and they went out againſt Jehu, and met him in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite. 22. And it came to paſs when Joram ſaw Jehu, that he ſaid, Is it peace, Jehu? And he anſwered, [q] What peace, ſo long as [r] the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel, and [s] her witchcrafts are ſo many? 23. And Joram turned his hands, and [t] fled, and ſaid to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah. 24. And Jehu § drew a bow with his full ſtrength, and ſmote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he ſunk down in his chariot. 25. Then ſaid Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and caſt him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, [u] the LORD laid this burden upon him. 26. Surely, I have ſeen yeſterday the ‖ blood of Naboth, and the blood [x] of his ſons, ſaith the LORD, and I will requite thee in this plat, ſaith the LORD. Now therefore take and caſt him into the plat of ground according to the word of the LORD. 27. ¶ But when Ahaziah the king of Judah ſaw this, he fled by the way of the garden-houſe: and Jehu followed after him, and ſaid, [y] Smite him alſo in the chariot: And they did ſo, at the going up to Gur, which is by Ibleam: and he fled to Megiddo, and died there. 28. And his ſervants carried him in a chariot to Jeruſalem, and buried him in his ſepulchre with his fathers in the city of David. 29. And in the eleventh year of Joram the ſon of Ahab, † began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

v. 16—29. As ſucceſs depended upon the ſwiftneſs of their march, we have them, chariots and horſemen, with eager haſte preſſing toward Jezreel.

1. The watchman on the tower deſcries at a diſtance the approaching company, and Joram, deſirous to know the cauſe, ſends out repeated meſſengers, whom Jehu detains. As he drew nearer, the watchman, by his furious driving, concludes it was Jehu, and the hoſt from Ramoth-gilead. Note, It is too late to enquire, Is it peace? when the ſword is unſheathed, and Jeſus with his hoſt appears, coming in the clouds of heaven to judge.

2. Unable through impatience to wait, or rather through divine infatuation hurried to his ruin, Joram orders his chariot, and haſtes to meet Jehu, and Ahaziah accompanies him; and where ſhould they meet but in the very ſpot of Naboth's vineyard. Joram, unſuſpicious of danger, ſeems only concerned to know, whether they came victors over the Syrians in triumph, or in flight as vanquiſhed; till Jehu's anſwer undeceived him, and the charge of his mother's idolatry and whoredoms, which he encouraged and copied, bid him deſpair of peace, and expect the ſword of an avenging God. Note, (1.) Providence, in many inſtances, by ſtrange events makes God's juſtice appear glorious in the eyes of men. (2.) Peace is ſtill the ſinner's cry, when ruin is at his very heels. (3.) The whoredoms that now are the ſinner's pleaſure, will ſhortly produce his everlaſting pain.

3. Too late the treachery is diſcovered, and Joram attempts to eſcape; but the arrow from Jehu's bow ſtops his flight, and, as the executioner of the divine vengeance, Jehu commands his captain to throw his dead corpſe in the vineyard of Naboth, according to the prophecy, 1 Kings xxi. 19. Nor muſt Ahaziah be ſpared: ſince he is found in ſuch bad company, he muſt fall with them. Note, (1.) When judgment overtakes the ſinner, it is then too late to fly. (2.) They who are found companions of fools, will be deſtroyed with them.

30. ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it, and [z] ſhe † painted her face, and tired her head, and looked out at a window. 31. And as Jehu entred in at the gate, ſhe ſaid, [a] Had Zimri peace, who ſlew his maſter? 32. And he lift up his face to the window, dow, and ſaid, [b] Who is on my ſide? who? And there looked out to him two or three eunuchs. 33. And he ſaid, Throw her down. So they threw her down; and ſome of her blood was ſprinkled on the wall, and on the horſes: [c] and he trode her under foot. 34. And when he was come in, he did eat and drink, and ſaid, Go, ſee now [d] this curſed woman, [e] and bury her: for [f] ſhe is a king's daughter. 35. And they went to bury her, but they found no more of her than the ſkull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands. 36. Wherefore they came again, and told him: and he ſaid, [g] This is the word of the LORD, which he ſpake by his ſervant Elijah the Tiſhbite, ſaying, In the portion of Jezreel [h] ſhall dogs eat the fleſh of Jezebel: 37. And the carcaſe of Jezebel [i] ſhall be as dung upon the face of the field, in the portion of Jezreel, ſo that they ſhall not ſay, This is Jezebel.

v. 30—37. Long had this hateful monſter of a woman, big with miſchief, diſpenſed her baleful influence around, defying God, and tempted by long impunity to think ſhe ſhould ever reign as a queen, and ſee no ſorrow. But vengeance, though ſlow, is ſure.

1. Her pride and inſolence endured to the laſt. Unhumbled under the ſcourge now fallen upon her houſe, ſhe neither fled nor changed her countenance. Decked with paint and jewels, ſhe would ſtill act the queen, and from her window dares inſult and threaten the conquering Jehu. Note, (1.) When God in juſt judgment gives up the ſinner to his hardned heart, then he ruſhes on ruin as the horſe into the battle. (2.) A painted face is the devil's maſk. Like Jezebel, whom ſuch imitate, their pride will have a fall. (3.) They who would act with zeal for God, will be often inſulted and threatned; but like Jehu, they will not be intimidated.

2. Jehu mocking her impotent rage, calls out haſtily, Who is on my ſide? Who? and ſome eunuchs appearing at the ſummons, he bids them throw her down, which out of hatred of her pride, or fear of Jehu, they inſtantly complied with, and her blood beſmeared the walls of the palace, and was ſprinkled on Jehu's horſes, as he drove over her corps. Note, (1.) There is no ſtanding neuter between Chriſt and Belial. If we are on the Lord's ſide, we muſt appear for him. (2.) Wickedneſs and wretchedneſs are inſeparable. Though for a time the ſinner lifts his head high, it will be laid ſhortly low in the duſt, and ſtill lower in hell.

3. Having taken poſſeſſion of the palace, and refreſhed himſelf after his march, in reſpect for her royal deſcent, Jehu deſigns Jezebel a grave, forgetting the denunciation pronounced upon her, but God had fulfilled his own word. The dogs had devoured her carcaſe, and only a few ſcattered fragments remained; of which when Jehu was informed, he reflected on the word of Elijah, and admired its awful accompliſhment. She that alive was ſo imperious, cruel, and arrogant, is devoured as a carrion, and denied even a grave. Note, (1.) Whether we intend it or no, the word of the Lord will have its exact accompliſhment. (2.) Not only the corpſe, but the very memory of the wicked ſhall rot. (3.) Let Jezebel's fate be a warning againſt her ſins.

1. AND Ahab had ſeventy ſons in Samaria: and Jehu wrote letters, and ſent to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel, to the elders, and to them that brought up Ahab's children, ſaying, 2. Now aſſoon as this letter cometh to you, ſeeing your maſter's ſons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horſes, a fenced city alſo, and armour: 3. [a] Look even out the beſt and meeteſt of your maſter's ſons and ſet him on his father's throne, and fight for your maſter's houſe. 4. But they were exceedingly afraid, and ſaid, Behold, [b] two kings ſtood not before him: how then ſhall we ſtand? 5. And he that was over the houſe, and he that was over the city, the elders alſo and the bringers up of the children ſent to Jehu, ſaying, We are thy ſervants, and will do all that thou ſhalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes. 6. Then he wrote a letter the ſecond time to them, ſaying, If ye be † mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, [c] take ye the heads of the men your maſter's ſons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time: (now the king's ſons being ſeventy perſons, were with the great men of the city, which ‡ brought them up). 7. And it came to paſs when the letter came to them, that they took the king's ſons, and [d] ſlew ſeventy perſons, and put their heads in baſkets, and ſent them to Jezreel. 8. ¶ And there came a meſſenger, and told him, ſaying, They have brought the heads of the king's ſons. And he ſaid, Lay ye them in two heaps at the entring in of the gate, until the morning. 9. And it came to paſs in the morning, that he went out, and ſtood, and ſaid to all the people, Ye be righteous: behold, [e] I conſpired againſt my maſter, and ſlew him: but who ſlew all theſe? 10. Know now, [f] that there ſhall fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD ſpake concerning the houſe of Ahab: for the LORD hath done that which he ſpake by his ſervant Elijah. 11. So Jehu ſlew all that remained of the houſe of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his § kinsfolks, and his prieſts, until he left him none remaining. 12. ¶ And he aroſe and departed, and came to Samaria. And as he was at the ‖ ſhearing-houſe in the way, 13. Jehu met with [g] the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah, and ſaid, Who are ye? And they anſwered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah, and we go down † to ſalute the children of the king, and the children of the queen. 14. And he ſaid, Take them alive. And they took them alive, and ſlew them at the pit of the ſhearing-houſe, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.

v. 1—14. With fidelity Jehu proceeds in the execution of his commiſſion.

1. He ſends an officer to Samaria, where Ahab's ſons and grandſons were educated under the great men of his court, and bids them, if they dare, ſet up the nobleſt of them to diſpute the crown with him; not as adviſing the meaſure, but to intimidate them from the attempt.

2. Their coward hearts fainted; and, though they wanted nothing which could enable them to make a gallant reſiſtance, tamely ſubmit, and plead the death of the two kings, as a reaſon for their puſillanimity, though the argument was moſt abſurd, as they fell unarmed, and unable to reſiſt. Note, (1.) Guilt makes men cowards. (2.) When men want an excuſe to cover their ſhame, any ſhadow of argument will paſs. (3.) They who by their ſins reſiſt God, may reaſonably argue, How ſhall we ſtand?

3. To prove their ſubmiſſion, he orders them immediately to execute all their maſter's ſons, and ſend them by the morrow to Jezreel; and they, without heſitation at the perfidy and cruelty, inſtantly comply. They who had been Jezebel's wicked executioners upon Naboth and his ſons, now dye thoſe very hands in the blood of her children. Note, They who debauch mens conſciences, will find the effects of their wickedneſs often return upon their own heads.

4. Jehu in the morning appearing in the gate, where he had ordered the heads of the king's ſons to be caſt, acquits the people, and vindicates himſelf, by laying the load of guilt upon thoſe perfidious murderers, who ſo baſely betrayed their truſt, and reminds the people of God's hand in all this, as a judgment denounced on Ahab, thereby to reconcile them to his government, from which ſuch a bloody beginning might elſe have alienated them. Note, (1.) It is common for men to leſſen their own guilt, by compariſon with others; and to hope well of themſelves, merely becauſe others are worſe than they. (2.) God's judgments are righteous, though they who execute them act wickedly.

5. Jehu proceeded in his bloody work, and, without ſparing, ſlew all Ahab's relations, domeſtic prieſts, and great men, who had ſerved him, and probably, among them, the baſe murderers of his children. He reſolves not to do the work of the Lord deceitfully, or to keep back his ſword from blood, Jer. xlviii. 10. Note, They who have been inſtruments to wicked men in their ſins, will ſhortly ſuffer with them.

6. Ahaziah's brethren, or rather his brother's ſons, (See 2 Chron, xxii. 1.) ſhare the fate of Ahab's houſe. Unadviſed of what had paſſed, they are met going to pay their reſpects to Jezebel and Joram; and their avowed relation to them, and friendſhip for them, expoſe them to ruin.

15. ¶ And when he was departed thence, he † lighted on [h] Jehonadab the ſon of Rechab, coming to meet him, and he ‡ ſaluted him, and ſaid to him, Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thine heart? And Jehonadab anſwered, anſwered, || It is. If it be, [i] give me thy hand: and he gave him his hand, and he took him up to him into the chariot. 16. And he ſaid, Come with me, and ſee [k] my zeal for the LORD: So they made him ride in his chariot. 17. And when he came to Samaria, [l] he ſlew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had deſtroyed him, according to the ſaying of the LORD, which he ſpake to Elijah. 18. ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and ſaid unto them, [m] Ahab ſerved Baal a little, [n] but Jehu ſhall ſerve him much. 19. Now therefore call unto me all the prophets of Baal, all his ſervants, and all his prieſts, let none be wanting: for I have a great ſacrifice to do to Baal; whoſoever ſhall be wanting, he ſhall not live. But Jehu did it in ſubtilty, to the intent that he might deſtroy the worſhippers of Baal. 20. And Jehu ſaid, § Proclaim a ſolemn aſſembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it. 21. And Jehu [o] ſent through all Iſrael, and all the worſhippers of Baal came, ſo that there was not a man left that came not: and they came into the houſe of Baal, and the houſe of Baal was full † from one end to another. 22. And he ſaid unto him that was over the veſtry, Bring forth veſtments for all the worſhippers of Baal. And he brought them forth [p] veſtments. 23. And Jehu went and Jehonadab the ſon of Rechab, into the houſe of Baal, and ſaid unto the worſhippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the ſervants of the LORD, but the worſhippers of Baal only. 24. And when they went in to offer ſacrifices and burnt-offerings, Jehu appointed fourſcore men without, and ſaid, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands, eſcape, he that letteth him go, [q] his life ſhall be for the life of him. 25. And it came to paſs as ſoon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, that Jehu ſaid to the guard, and to the captains, Go in, and ſlay them, [r] let none come forth. And they ſmote them with the ‡ edge of the ſword, and the guard and the captains caſt them out, and went to the city of the houſe of Baal. 26. And they brought forth the images out of the houſe of Baal, and burnt them. 27. And [s] they brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the houſe of Baal, and made it [t] a draught-houſe unto this day. 28. Thus Jehu [u] deſtroyed Baal out of Iſrael.

v. 15—28. Jehu with indefatigable diligence purſues his blow; and as he drives to Samaria,

1. He meets Jehonadab the ſon of Rechab, a man of eminent piety, coming to congratulate him on his acceſſion, and to encourage him to perfect what he had begun. Jehu with all reſpect ſalutes him, and enquires if Jehonadab as heartily eſpouſed his cauſe, as he reverenced and reſpected him. On receiving the warmeſt aſſurances of his good wiſhes, Jehu invites him into his chariot, that he may be convinced of his zeal in the Lord's cauſe; and by the preſence of ſo good a man, no doubt to gain the greater reputation to himſelf. Note, (1.) It is a queſtion we need often put to ourſelves and each other, Is thine heart right? upright and ſincere in God's ſervice. All profeſſion of zeal without that, is but hypocriſy and deſign. (2.) When good men's countenance to their cauſe is needful, great men will careſs them; but their kiſſes are uſually deceitful. (3.) Whenever there appears an outward fair profeſſion of zeal for God, a good man cannot but charitably wiſh ſucceſs, and countenance the work. Hearts muſt be left to God's ſearching. (4.) They who boaſt of their zeal, give cauſe to ſuſpect their ſincerity. (5.) Many will appear to ſerve God, as long as their own intereſt is advanced thereby, whoſe zeal quickly cools when they can no longer ſerve themſelves.

2. Having deſtroyed at Samaria all Ahab's friends and family, as he had done at Jezreel, he contrives how at a ſtroke to cut off the worſhippers of Baal from the land. The deſign was good, but the lie which paved the way was evil; profeſſing an uncommon zeal for the worſhip of Baal, which during Joram's reign, who had removed the image of Baal, might have been leſs public and ſolemn, he convokes all the prieſts and zealous worſhippers of Baal to Samaria, to partake of a great ſacrifice he intends to their God, threatning death to the man who ſhould be found wanting. This collected a vaſt concourſe, the gates of Baal's temple are open, the houſe thronged, and all the worſhippers dreſſed for the ſolemn ſervice; and now pretending zeal for the purity of the ſacrifice, leaſt any ſervants of Jehovah ſhould have mingled with them, he orders ſtrict ſearch to be made. All things being ready, guards are placed at the avenues, that not a man may eſcape: every ſoul is maſſacred in the temple, the building laid in ruins, the images burnt, and the worſhip of Baal for the time utterly exterminated. Note, (1.) The wiſdom of the ſerpent may be lawfully uſed in the cauſe of God, provided none of the poiſon of the ſerpent mingles therewith. (2.) The executioners of God's vengeance, more terrible than Jehu's guards, will ſhortly without mercy, execute their commiſſion on every ſervant of iniquity. (3.) God's cauſe, though long oppreſſed, will riſe victorious at the laſt; and when Jeſus ſhall have caſt the wicked into hell, then ſhall he reign over his ſaints glorioſly.

v. 29—36. What a pity that ſuch promiſing appearances ſhould ſtop ſhort! Many come to be almoſt, who are not altogether chriſtians.

1. God declares his approbation of Jehu's conduct in general. Though his heart was far from right, and the methods he took unjuſtifiable, yet the execution of God's judgments upon the idolaters was agreeable to God's will, and therefore a preſent reward is given him. The throne is aſſured to his poſterity, to the fourth generation. Note, If a hypocrite's ſervices have a temporal reward, how much more may the faithful expect, the eternal and never-fading crown of glory.

2. Jehu's end anſwered not his beginnings. He was, with with all his zeal, irreligious in temper; took no heed to walk in God's ways or worſhip; careleſs about pleaſing him, when he was ſafe fixed on the throne: and though he had put away the worſhip of Baal, he ſtill ſtuck to the calves of Jeroboam, for the ſame political reaſons as his predeceſſors. Note, (1.) They who are real converts, put away ſin without reſerve; not merely leaving thoſe ſins they grew tired of, or which hurted them, but thoſe that are moſt gainful and ſeemingly neceſſary. If a hoof of the calves be allowedly left behind, we may not hope to pleaſe a jealous God. (2.) Negligence in the concerns of God's ſervice is fatally ruinous. (3.) A man may be the inſtrument of much good to other men's ſouls, and yet after all loſe his own.

3. The puniſhment of his unfaithful conduct, which it is to be feared his people imitated, God ſoon made him feel in the loſs of all that part of his kingdom beyond Jordan, where the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and Manaſſeh lay. They eagerly ſought their ſettlement firſt, and now they are the firſt to ſuffer, maſſacred no doubt; See chap. viii. 12. and led captive by Hazael, king of Syria. Note, They who chuſe for themſelves, without conſulting God, will uſually ſmart for it.

4. Jehu's reign concludes after twenty-eight years; a longer ſpace than moſt of his predeceſſors enjoyed, yet the events of it are buried for the moſt part in oblivion. Nothing farther good and gracious appeared in him to deſerve mention, and all he did beſide may better be buried with him. They are only truly great, and their memory to be had in honour, whoſe goodneſs marks them for examples to ſucceeding generations.

v. 1—3. Never was royal blood ſo profuſely ſpilt. Jehoram had ſlain his own brothers, 2 Chron. xxi. 4. The Arabians, all his ſons, except Ahaziah, 2 Chron. xxii. 1. Jehu his brother's children, chap. x. 14. and now Athaliah ſeeks to exterminate the whole race, and but for the promiſe made to David, chap. viii. 19. had ſucceeded. Ambition to reign, ſteeled her hard heart againſt her own offſpring; and that ſhe might have no rival to grow up to conteſt the crown, ſhe murders all her grandchildren. What devils incarnate would the human race appear, and what an aceldama, a field of blood, would the earth be, but for the reſtraining grace of God!

Joram's daughter, by another wife, who was married to the high-prieſt, ſnatched one babe of Ahaziah's children from the bloody knife; and with his nurſe, hid him in one of the bed-chambers belonging to the prieſts which attended the temple, whilſt Athaliah peaceably for ſix years poſſeſſed the bloody crown, and ſeemed fearleſs of a competitor. Note, (1.) The ſeed of David's ſon, like the ſeed royal here, ſometimes are ſo reduced, that their place ſeems no where found; but God in the worſt times will not ſuffer the lamp of his church utterly to be extinguiſhed. (2.) Every believer who comes to his throne, may regard himſelf like Joaſh, a brand plucked from the burning. (3.) Tho' ſinners appear ſecure in triumphant wickedneſs, their judgment lingreth not.

4. ¶ [f] And the ſeventh year Jehoiada ſent and ſet the rulers over hundreds, with the captains, and the guard, and brought them to him into the houſe of the LORD, and [g] made a covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the houſe of the LORD, and ſhewed them the king's ſon. 5. And he commanded them, ſaying, This is the thing that ye ſhall do; [h] A third part of you that enter in on the ſabbath, ſhall even be keepers of the watch of the king's houſe: 6. [h] And a third part ſhall be at the gate of Sur: and [h] a third part at the gate behind the guard: ſo ſhall ye keep the watch of the houſe, that it be not broken down. 7. And two parts of all you, that go forth on the ſabbath, even they ſhall keep the watch of the houſe of the LORD about the king. 8. And ye ſhall compaſs the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand: and he that cometh within the ranges, [i] let him be ſlain; and be ye with the king, as he goeth out, and as he cometh in. 9. And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the prieſt commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the ſabbath, with them that ſhould go out on the ſabbath, and came to Jehoiada the prieſt. 10. And to the captains over hundreds did the prieſts give king David's ſpears, and ſhields that were in the temple of the LORD. 11. And the guard ſtood, every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right corner of the temple, to the left corner of the temple, along by the altar and the temple. 12. v. 4—12. When Athaliah by her idolatry and murders had now rendered herſelf juſtly odious, Jehoiada begins to prepare for the reſtoration of the rightful heir to the crown of Judah.

1. He concerts the plan of operations with his brethren the Levites, and their chief rulers; and having exacted from them an oath of ſecrecy, ſhewed them the king. The ſabbath was choſen for the execution of their deſign, when a new courſe coming in to relieve the other, would greatly ſtrengthen their hands, without giving ſuſpicion. Theſe were ordered to the ſeveral poſts, part to guard the temple from profane intruders, or to prevent the entrance of Athaliah's partiſans, part to ſurround the king for ſtate and ſecurity.

2. When all were fixed at their poſts, the king is brought forth, crowned and anointed with great ſolemnity, and the book of the law put into his hand, intimating that this muſt be the rule of his future conduct. Immediately they who were preſent, rend the air with joyful acclamations, and wiſh the king long to live; which the people now aſſembled in the court, joyfully echo back. Note, (1.) Kings muſt know they are not above law, but muſt be accountable to the King of kings. (2.) When Satan, the uſurper, is caſt down from the throne of the heart, and Jeſus exalted there, with exultation well may we cry, Hoſanna to the Son of David.

13. ¶ And when Athaliah heard the noiſe of the guard, and of the people, ſhe came to the people into the temple of the LORD. 14. And when ſhe looked, behold, the king ſtood [m] by a pillar, as the manner was, and the princes, and the trumpeters by the king, and all the people of the land rejoiced, and blew with trumpets: and Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, [n] Treaſon, treaſon. 15. But Jehoiada the prieſt commanded the captains of the hundreds, the officers of the hoſt, and ſaid unto them, Have her forth without the ranges; and him that followeth her [o] kill with the ſword. For the prieſt had ſaid, Let her not be ſlain in the houſe of the LORD. 16. v. 13—16. Quickly theſe ſounds of unwelcome joy reached Athaliah's ears; and though ſhe ſeldom, it is to be feared, frequented the temple of the Lord, now ſhe haſtens thither, to enquire into the cauſe.

1. With ſurprize and conſternation ſhe beholds the infant king ſtanding ſurrounded with his guards, and receiving the homage of his people; and tranſported with fury, cries out, Treaſon. Vain cry! Who would eſpouſe her wicked cauſe, or help a bloody traitor againſt their rightful ſovereign? Note, (1.) When uſurpers rule, loyalty will be called rebellion. (2.) They who are moſt criminal, are often the firſt to reproach the innocent.

2. Jehoiada orders her to be ſlain, as an idolater, murderer, and uſurper, and all who ſhould offer to aſſiſt her; but to take her out, that they might not defile the temple with her blood. She is accordingly ſeized as ſhe fled to the palace, and ſlain without reſiſtance. Note, They who by iniquity riſe to honour, though during their power they may ſeem to be adored; no ſooner begin to fall, than they will ſee themſelves deſerted.

17. ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD, and [q] the king and the people, that they ſhould be the LORD's people; between the king alſo and [r] the people. 18. And all the people of the land [s] went into the houſe of Baal, and brake it down, his altars and his images brake they in pieces throughly, and ſlew Mattan the prieſt of Baal before the altars: and the prieſt appointed officers over the houſe of the LORD. 19. And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land, and they brought down the king from the houſe of the LORD, and came by the way of the gate of the guard to the king's houſe, and he ſat on the throne of the kings. 20. v. 17—21. The way to the throne being opened, Jehoiada, amidſt the ſucceſs of his politicks, forgets not the greater intereſts of religion.

1. A ſolemn covenant is made between God, and the king and people. The high-prieſt in God's name declaring his promiſes, and they pledging their fidelity: then followed the mutual engagement between the prince and his ſubjects: he engaged to rule according to God's word; and they in return, according to the ſame word, promiſing all dutiful allegiance. Note, (1.) They who firſt give themſelves to God, may comfortably hope for his bleſſing upon their undertakings. (2.) That kingdom will be truly happy, where God's word is made the rule of the monarch's government, and of the people's obedience.

2. The people encouraged by this good example, teſtify their zeal againſt Baal's hated worſhip, break down his temple, images, altars, and ſlay Mattan, the idol-prieſt, at the altar. And as Athaliah ſeems to have neglected the temple ſervice, order is there reſtored. Note, (1.) When religion comes in faſhion, every man will appear zealous. (2.) Order in the houſe of God is beautiful; but holineſs in the worſhippers, the greateſt ornament of the ſervice.

3. The ſtate is now comfortably ſettled, the king goes to his palace, to ſit on the throne of his anceſtors, and the people rejoice in his reſtoration; promiſing themſelves peace under the government of a prince, who had ſo good a man as Jehoiada for his guardian and inſtructor.

CHAP. XII.

Joaſh's reign ends not as it begins (See 2 Chron. xxiv.) 1. He did well while Jehoiada lived, ver. 1—3. 2. He was careful and active to repair the temple, ver. 4—16. 3. But made a mean compoſition with Hazael, ver. 17, 18. And died ingloriouſly, ver. 19—21.

1. IN the ſeventh year of Jehu, Jehoaſh began to reign; and [a] forty years reigned he in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-ſheba. 2. And Jehoaſh did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD all his days, wherein Jehoiada the prieſt inſtructed him. 3. [b] But the high places were not taken away: [c] the people ſtill ſacrificed and burnt incenſe in the high places.

v. 1—3. Very promiſing were the beginnings of this minority. Under Jehoiada's inſtructions, Jehoaſh cleaved to the true worſhip of God, and continued ſteadfaſt as long as Jehoiada lived. Howbeit, cuſtom had ſo eſtabliſhed the high places, which were uſed for ſacrifices before the temple was built, that Jehoiada either could not, or dared not attempt this reformation. Note, (1.) The greateſt mercy that a child can be bleſt with, is a pious tutor; but whilſt the great are ſo ſollicitous to have their ſons educated in every human accompliſhment, how few concern themſelves about their being taught what is right in the ſight of the Lord? (2.) Old and evil cuſtoms are hard to be eradicated.

4. ¶ And Jehoaſh ſaid to the prieſts, [d] All the money of the † dedicated things that is brought into the houſe of the LORD, even [e] the money of every one that paſſeth the account, the money [f] that every man is ſet at, and all the money [g] that cometh into any man's heart to bring into the houſe of the LORD, 5. Let the prieſts take it to them, every man of his acquaintance, and let them repair the breaches of the houſe, whereſoever any breach ſhall be found. 6. But it was ſo, that in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoaſh, the prieſts had not repaired the breaches of the houſe. 7. Then king Jehoaſh called for Jehoiada the prieſt, and the other prieſts, and ſaid unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the houſe? now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the houſe. 8. And the prieſts conſented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the houſe. 9. But Jehoiada the prieſt took [h] a cheſt, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and ſet it beſide the altar on the right ſide, as one cometh into the houſe of the LORD: and the prieſts that kept the ‡ door, put therein all the money that was brought into the houſe of the LORD. 10. And it was ſo, when they ſaw that there was much money in the cheſt, that [i] the king's ſcribe, and the high prieſt came up, and they put up in bags, and told the money that was found in the houſe of the LORD. 11. And [k] they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the overſight of the houſe of the LORD: and they ‖ laid it out to the carpenters and builders, that wrought upon the houſe of the LORD. 12. And to maſons, and hewers of ſtone, and to buy timber, and hewed ſtone to repair the breaches of the houſe of the LORD, and for all that was laid out for the houſe to repair it. 13. Howbeit, [l] there were not made for the houſe of the LORD, [m] bowls of ſilver, ſnuffers, baſons, [n] trumpets, any veſſels of gold, or veſſels of ſilver, of the money that was brought into the houſe of the LORD. 14. But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the houſe of the LORD. 15. Moreover, [o] they reckoned not with the men, into whoſe hand they delivered the money to be beſtowed on workmen: for they dealt § faithfully. 16. [p] The treſpaſs-money, and ſin-money was not brought into the houſe of the LORD: it was the prieſts.

v. 4—16. The temple of the Lord was gone out of repair, not ſo much by natural decay, as by the violence offered it by Athaliah, and her ungodly ſons, 2 Chron. xxiv. 7. and the prieſts it ſhould ſeem were not careful to repair it, perhaps unable, the defection of the ten tribes having greatly leſſened their proviſion.

1. The king therefore, whether for God's glory, or in gratitude for his preſervation there, ſollicitous to ſee it repaired and beautified, orders a collection to be made through the cities, and the redemption-money, Exod. xxx. 13. to be applied to repair the breaches. Note, (1.) Before Chriſt 856.

2. The expedient did not anſwer; either the people were backward, or the prieſts negligent or unfaithful. In the 23d year the breaches remained, and the king juſtly reproves them for it. The prieſts therefore conſented to give up the matter into the king's hand, and Jehoiada, at his command, made a cheſt, into which the redemption-money and freewill-offerings were to be put. Thither, on proclamation made, (ſee 2 Chron. xxiv. 9.) the people liberally brought their contributions; and when there was much money in it, to avoid all ſuſpicion of diſhoneſty, the high-prieſt and ſecretary of ſtate counted the ſum, and laid it up in bags, till enough was collected. Note, (1.) They who profeſs great zeal for religion, are often backward enough to part from their money for the ſupport of it. (2.) When prieſts give ſuſpicion of their love of filthy lucre, no wonder the people with-hold their hand. (3.) Approved fidelity in the diſtribution, will encourage liberal contribution.

3. The money being ready, the preparations go forward; and ſo faithful were the overſeers, that their accounts needed no examination. What they laid out at firſt was only for uſe, not ornament; but afterwards, (ſee 2 Chron. xxiv. 14.) when they found enough left, they added veſſels of gold and ſilver, inſtead of thoſe Athaliah had taken away, 2 Chron. xxiv. 7. Note, Church work is generally ill done, and long in hand; for to rob the church or the public is ſeldom thought criminal: but an honeſt man fears God, and therefore acts uprightly.

4. The maintenance of the prieſts was not neglected amidſt the repairs of the temple, v. 16. They who are to ſerve at the altar, muſt live by the altar.

17. ¶ Then [q] Hazael king of Syria [r] went up, and fought againſt Gath, and took it: and Hazael ſet his face to go up to Jeruſalem. 18. And Jehoaſh king of Judah [s] took all the hallowed things that Jehoſhaphat, and Jehoram, and Ahaziah his fathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own hallowed things, and all the gold that was found in the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD, and in the king's houſe, and ſent it to Hazael king of Syria, and he † went away from Jeruſalem. 19. ¶ And the reſt of the acts of Joaſh, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 20. 2. His wickedneſs and cruelty exaſperated his ſubjects, and two of his ſervants conſpired againſt him, and ſlew him. v. 1—9. Amidſt the various revolutions of Iſrael, the worſhip of the calves blackened every reign. Jehoahaz in this followed his predeceſſors, and during his ſeventeen years, neither mercies nor judgments wrought a reformation. We have here,

1. The miſerable eſtate to which Iſrael was reduced. Of all their multitude of brave warriors, ſcarce a handful remained, v. 7. and Jehoahaz, always unſucceſsful, expected daily the final ruin of his kingdom. Note, When men make themſelves wicked, God will often make them vile.

2. In his diſtreſs, Jehoahaz had recourſe to that God he had ſo diſhonoured, and found compaſſion in his merciful boſom. Though not in his own days, yet in his ſon's, God interpoſed to ſave his people from the Syrians; but their ingratitude notwithſtanding remained, till the meaſure of their ſins being full, ruin overtook them. Note, (1.) God will hear the prayer of diſtreſs, and they who cry to him, however vile they may have been, ſhall find there is in him, grace abounding to the chief of ſinners. (2.) They who continue to ſin againſt their mercies, provoke God to give them up to the judgments they deſerve.

10. ¶ In the thirty and ſeventh year of Joaſh king of Judah, began Jehoaſh the ſon of Jehoahaz † to reign over Iſrael in Samaria, and reigned ſixteen years. 11. v. 10—13. Joaſh copied after his father, and followed his calves; but for his people's ſake, God ſtrengthened him to break off the yoke of the Syrians, and to oppoſe the unprovoked invaſion of Amaziah. Little is recorded of his ſixteen years reign, becauſe little good was found in them; and great as he was in battle, death brought him to his grave, for there is no diſcharge in this war.

14. ¶ Now Eliſha was fallen ſick, of his ſickneſs whereof [i] he died, and Joaſh the king of Iſrael came down unto him, and wept over his face, and ſaid, [k] O my father, my father, [l] the chariot of Iſrael, and the horſemen thereof. 15. And Eliſha ſaid unto him, Take bow and arrows: and he took unto him bow and arrows. 16. And he ſaid to the king of Iſrael, ‡ Put thine hand upon the bow: and he put his hand upon it: and [m] Eliſha put his hands upon the king's hands. 17. And he ſaid, Open the window eaſtward: and he opened it. Then Eliſha ſaid, Shoot: and he ſhot. And he ſaid, The arrow of the LORD's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou ſhalt ſmite the Syrians in Aphek, till thou have conſumed them. 18. And he ſaid, Take the arrows: and he took them. And he ſaid unto the king of Iſrael, [n] Smite upon the ground: and he ſmote thrice, and ſtayed. 19. And the man of God was wroth with him, and ſaid, Thou ſhouldſt have ſmitten five or ſix times, then hadſt thou ſmitten Syria, till thou hadſt conſumed it: [o] whereas now thou ſhalt ſmite Syria but thrice.

v. 14—19. The beſt action of Joaſh ſeems to be the concern here teſtified for the prophet; though it is to be feared he lamented more his loſs, as the ſafeguard of his crown, than as the ſupporter of the true religion.

1. Eliſha, after a long and uſeful life, draws to the grave. the beſt of men are dying worms. Joaſh in great reſpect, no ſooner hears of his ſickneſs, than he haſtes to viſit him, that he might receive his parting advice and benediction. He grieves to think of loſing him; and though he appears little affected with his preaching, yet he conſidered him as a greater guard to Iſrael, than the chariots or horſemen. Note, (1.) Dying beds of great miniſters are uſeful ſchools of inſtruction. (2.) The removal of the few faithful, is a great weakening to every nation's defence. (3.) Their loſs will be felt at death, who when alive were neglected.

2. Eliſha comforts him with aſſurances of ſucceſs; though he was removing, God was ſtill the ſame, and by two ſignificant ſigns, he would confirm his faith in the promiſe. He bids him ſhoot an arrow towards Syria, and when he was ready to draw the bow, Eliſha lays his hands upon the king's, in token of the power with which God would ſtrengthen him. The arrow he calls the Lord's deliverance from Syria, becauſe God hereby ſignified his victory over his enemies, whoſe forces, collected at Aphek, ſhould be utterly routed by him. He farther bid him ſmite with the arrows againſt the ground. Thrice the king in obedience ſmote, but either not underſtanding the meaning, or becauſe it ſeemed a ſilly action, he ſtayed; and the prophet, grieved at his folly, rebukes him for not ſmiting oftener, as every ſtroke ſignified a victory: and now only in three battles would he prevail. Note, (1.) When God's everlaſting arms are under us, then ſhall we be ſtrengthened againſt our ſpiritual enemies. (2.) They who improve not their advantages, have only themſelves to blame. (3.) It is a grief to a godly miniſter to ſee thoſe cold and negligent, from whom he might expect the livelieſt zeal.

20. ¶ And Eliſha died, and they buried him: and the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year. 21. And it came to paſs as they were burying a man, that behold, they ſpied a band of men, and they caſt the man into the ſepulchre of Eliſha: and when the man † was let down, and touched the bones of Eliſha, he revived, and ſtood up on his feet. 22. ¶ But Hazael king of Syria [p] oppreſſed Iſrael all the days of Jehoahaz. 23. And the LORD was gracious unto them, and had compaſſion on them, and had reſpect unto them, [q] becauſe of his covenant with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and would not deſtroy them, neither caſt he them from his preſence as yet. 24. So Hazael king of Syria died, and Ben-hadad his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 25. And Jehoaſh the ſon of Jehoahaz took again out of the hand of Ben-hadad the ſon of Hazael, the cities which he had taken out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father by war: [r] three times did Joaſh beat him, and recovered the cities of Iſrael.

v. 20—25. He who was great when alive, even in his grave appears with diſtinguiſhed glory. We have,

1. The miracle wrought by Eliſha's bones. A band of the Moabites making a ſudden irruption into Iſrael, were perceived by a company who were carrying a corpſe to the grave. In haſte to eſcape, they threw it into a ſepulchre at hand, which happened to be Eliſha's; and no ſooner had the dead body touched the prophet's bones, than it revived. Note, (1.) If the bones of a prophet have ſuch power to raiſe the dead, how much more ſhall the grave of Jeſus open to us the gates of life and immortality? (2.) When dying believers lay their bodies in the duſt, it is in ſure and certain hope of a glorious reſurrection.

2. God in compaſſion to Iſrael, and for his promiſe ſake to Abraham, enabled Joaſh, according to the prophet's words, three times to vanquiſh the Syrians, and recover the cities of Iſrael from them. Note, God waits long, and is gracious, if by any means his goodneſs might lead ſinners to repentance.

1. IN the ſecond year of Joaſh ſon of Jehoahaz king of Iſrael, reigned [a] Amaziah the ſon of Joaſh king of Judah. 2. He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jeruſalem. 3. And [b] he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, yet not like David his father: he did according to all things as Joaſh his father did. 4. [c] Howbeit, the high places were not taken away: as yet the people did ſacrifice, and burnt incenſe on the high places. 5. ¶ And it came to paſs as ſoon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, that [d] he ſlew his ſervants which had [e] ſlain the king his father. 6. But the children of the murderers he ſlew not; according unto that which is written in the book of the law of Moſes, wherein the LORD commanded, ſaying, [f] The fathers ſhall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers: but every man ſhall be put to death for his own ſin. 7. He ſlew of [g] Edom in [h] the valley of ſalt, ten thouſand, and took † Selah by war, and called the name of it ‡ Joktheel, unto this day.

v. 1—7. Amaziah ſucceeded his father Joaſh in Judah, and followed his ways; began well, but ended ill.

1. He externally kept up the worſhip of God, but his heart was not right with him, as David's. The high places alſo he ſuffered to remain. Note, Outward formality may paſs upon men, but God requires the heart.

2. He juſtly puniſhed the conſpirators againſt his father, as ſoon as he was well fixed on the throne. Their children, however, he ſlew not, according to the law, Deut. xxiv. 16. Note, Though blood ſleeps for a while, vengeance will at laſt overtake the murderer.

3. In his war againſt Edom, which had revolted, he was ſucceſsful, vanquiſhed them in battle, and took Selah, which he called Joktheel.

8. ¶ Then Amaziah ſent meſſengers to Jehoaſh the ſon of Jehoahaz, ſon of Jehu king of Iſrael, ſaying, [i] Come, let us look one another in the face. 9. And Jehoaſh the king of Iſrael ſent to Amaziah king of Judah, ſaying, [k] The thiſtle that was in Lebanon, ſent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, ſaying, Give thy daughter to my ſon to wife: and there paſſed by a wild beaſt that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thiſtle. 10. Thou haſt indeed ſmitten Edom, and [l] thine heart hath lifted thee up: glory of this, and tarry at home: for [m] why ſhouldſt thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou ſhouldſt fall, even thou, and Judah with thee? 11. But Amaziah [n] would not hear: therefore Jehoaſh king of Iſrael went up, and he, and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at Beth-ſhemeſh, which belongeth to Judah. 12. And Judah was put to the worſe before Iſrael, and they fled every man to their tents. 13. And Jehoaſh king of Iſrael [o] took Amaziah king of Judah, the ſon of Jehoaſh the ſon of Ahaziah at Beth-ſhemeſh, and came to Jeruſalem, and brake down the wall of Jeruſalem, from [p] the gate of Ephraim, unto [q] the corner gate, four hundred cubits. 14. And he took all the gold and ſilver, and [r] all the veſſels that were found in the houſe of the LORD, and in the treaſures of the king's houſe, and hoſtages, and returned to Samaria.

v. 8—14. Vain on his victory over Edom, or perhaps to revenge the ſlaughter made by the Iſraelites, whom he had diſmiſſed from his army, 2 Chron. xxv. 13. Amaziah,

1. Sends a challenge to Joaſh king of Iſrael to meet him in the field, little ſuſpecting the conſequence of his fooliſh bravado. Note, They who begin a quarrel, deſerve to ſuffer for it.

2. Joaſh treats his meſſage with great contempt, compares himſelf to a cedar, and Amaziah to a thiſtle; intimates that he would have thought any alliance with him diſgraceful, and could tread him under foot, as eaſily as a wild beaſt does the thiſtle; therefore adviſes him to repreſs the vanity of his heart on his late trivial ſucceſs, and not meddle to his harm. Note, (1.) They who are proud, will meet with thoſe who take a pleaſure to mortify them. (2.) Vain minds ſwell with ſucceſs, and uſually deſtroy themſelves by attempting things to which they are unequal. (3.) It is folly to deſpiſe good advice, though from an enemy.

3. Amaziah was too obſtinate to be adviſed, and therefore ruſhes on his ruin, is routed, taken priſoner, led in triumph to his own capital, which the victor entered; and, after plundering the city and temple of every thing valuable, and breaking down a great part of the wall, left the place defenceleſs, and took hoſtages of Amaziah to keep him in ſubjection. Thus, whilſt Ephraim vexed Judah, and Judah Ephraim, they opened an eaſier door of conqueſt for their common foes. Note, The quarrels and diviſions of God's people give the greateſt advantage to their enemies.

15. ¶ [s] Now the reſt of the acts of Jehoaſh which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? 16. Now [u] they made a conſpiracy againſt him in Jeruſalem: and he fled to Lachiſh, but they ſent after him to Lachiſh, and ſlew him there. 20. And they brought him [x] on horſes; and he was buried at Jeruſalem with his fathers in the city of David. 21. ¶ And all the people of Judah took † Azariah (which was ſixteen years old) and made him king inſtead of his father Amaziah. 22. v. 15—22. Jehoaſh's death and burial was mentioned, chap. xiii. 12. after his conqueſts above recorded, it is again repeated. Amaziah, his late priſoner, ſurvived him fifteen years, whoſe ill conduct and ill ſucceſs provoked his ſubjects to conſpire againſt him. He flew to Lachiſh for refuge, but they purſued and ſlew him there. His ſon, who was a minor of ſixteen, ſucceeded him, and built Elath, a city on the Red Sea, which his father had recovered from the Edomites, annexing it to the crown of Judah. Note, (1.) They who govern ill, muſt blame themſelves for the diſcontent their conduct produces. (2.) Every refuge a ſinner flies to will be vain to protect him from the ſword of judgment.

23. ¶ In the fifteenth year of Amaziah, the ſon of Joaſh king of Judah, Jeroboam the ſon of Joaſh king of Iſrael began † to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years. 24. And [z] he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD: he departed not from all the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. 25. For [c] the LORD ſaw the affliction of Iſrael, that it was very bitter: for [d] there was not any ſhut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Iſrael. 27. And the LORD ‡ ſaid not that he would blot out the name of Iſrael from under heaven: but he ſaved them by the hand of Jeroboam the ſon of Joaſh. 28. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he warred, and how he recovered Damaſcus, and Hamath, which belonged to Judah, for Iſrael, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? 29. v. 23—29. Jeroboam, the ſon of Joaſh, reigned longer than any king of Iſrael before him; yet his character bears a brand of infamy. He followed the ſins of his predeceſſor, whoſe name he bore, and the calves were his gods; yet God, in mercy to his people, of Jordan. Not that the cry of penitence from Iſrael engaged God's notice; no; but he heard their groaning, oppreſſed, plundered, deſolate, helpleſs; and as his decree was not yet gone forth, he gave them one ſhort reſpite more, to prove them, whether they would return to him, or to leave them inexcuſable in their impenitence.

1. Raiſed up a prophet in the room of Eliſha; Jonah, a Galilean, See John vii. 52. The events recorded in his prophecy are ſuppoſed to have happened in his younger days, and now he more willingly executed the ſervice of his function. Note, Even prophets are ſinful men: if God rejected not them for their faults, let us not be too ſevere one on another.

3. Jeroboam's warlike exploits appeared farther in the recovery of Damaſcus and Hamath, which had been tributary to Judah formerly, and now became ſubject to Iſrael. Death, however, after a long and proſperous reign, laid his honour in the duſt; and he left his throne to his ſon, who loſt it quickly, according to the notice given to Jehu, Chap. x. 30.

Under Jeroboam and his cotemporary kings of Judah, Hoſea, Jonah, Amos, and Micah propheſied and wrote. When matters were haſting to ruin, then did God multiply the warnings of his word; and though Iſrael and Judah deſpiſed their prophets, we have reaſon to bleſs God for their writings that are preſerved for our admonition.
